PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

SENATE

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1939

(Legislative day of Tuesday, July 25, 1939)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Reverend Duncan Fraser, assistant rector, Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, whose loving hand hath given us all that we possess: Grant us grace that we may honor Thee with our substance, and, remembering the account which we must one day give, be faithful stewards of Thy bounty; and support us all the day long of this mortal life, till the shadows lengthen and the evening comes, the busy world is hushed, the fever of life is over, and our work is done. Then, in Thy mercy, grant us a safe lodging, a quiet rest, and peace at the last. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Barkley, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, July 26, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

PAYMENT FOR LANDS CEDED BY SAN CARLOS APACHE INDIANS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 18) authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for the lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1936, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896, and reopening such lands to mineral entry, which were, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "at the rate of $1.25 per acre"; on page 2, line 2, to strike out "$277,966.37" and insert "$33,725"; on page 2, line 5, to strike out all after "Provided," down to and including "act" in line 9 and insert "That no part of the amounts authorized in this act shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services heretofore or hereafter rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000"; on page 2, line 10, to strike out "The" and insert "Upon appropriation and deposit to the credit of the San Carlos Apache Indians of the amount herein authorized the"; and on page 2, line 11, to strike out "are hereby" and insert "shall be."

Mr. HAYDEN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Assembly Joint Resolution 29

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to limit the broad authority vested in the President to enter into foreign-trade agreements

Whereas in June of 1934 the Congress of the United States passed an act to amend the tariff act of 1930, thereby delegating to the President of the United States, among other things, the power to enter into foreign-trade agreements with foreign governments, without the advice and consent of the Senate, which power was extended by joint resolution of the Seventy-fifth Congress to June 12, 1940; and

Whereas this act was one of the bitter fruits of the congressional subservience to the New Deal, during which the representatives of the people surrendered so many constitutional functions to the Executive, and bureaucracy became so firmly functions to the Executive, and bureaucracy became so firmly entrenched in government; and

Whereas pursuant to such authority the United States has entered into reciprocal-trade agreements with a score of foreign countries, the last and most far-reaching having been concluded with the Dominion of Canada and Great Britain on November 17, 1938, providing, among other things, for reduction of import duties and increasing import quotas on certain agricultural products; and

Whereas Wisconsin ranks second among the States of the Union in the production of dairy products and stands among the leaders

Whereas Wisconsin ranks second among the States of the Union in the production of dairy products and stands among the leaders in barley raising; and

Whereas Wisconsin dairy farmers and barley growers have in recent years been hard pressed because prices of these products have been below the cost of production; and

Whereas notwithstanding these facts the trade agreement with Canada of November 17, 1938, provided for reduction of the import duty on cream from 35 cents to 28 cents per gallon; on whole milk, not exceeding 3,000,000 gallons, from 6½ cents to 3¼ cents per gallon; and on barley from 20 cents to 15 cents per bushel; and Whereas such modified import duties became effective as of January 1, 1939, and will continue in effect for not less than 3 years under the provisions of said trade agreement; and Whereas farmers of this State are vigorously protesting against such modified tariff rates and consequent further dropping in prices on barley and dairy products; and

Whereas the historic principle of a protective tariff by which American standards have always been maintained above pauper foreign standards, was thus undermined: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That is legislature respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to enact legislation repealing the act of June 12, 1934, entitled "An eart to amond the Tariff Act of 1920" or restriction.

States to enact legislation repealing the act of June 12, 1934, entitled "An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930" or restricting the President of the United States to reduce the import duty or increase the import quota on only such farm and dairy products on which the current market price is equal to or above the cost of production: Be it further Resolved, That duly attested copies of this resolution be sent to both Houses of the Congress of the United States and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of the State of California praying for relief from various conditions affecting American citizens relative to hours, wages, working conditions, and so forth, under the operations of the W. P. A., which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of the Sheepshead Bay Property Owners Association, Brooklyn, N. Y., praying that an extension of time be granted to those who hold mortgages with the H. O. L. C. to at least 25 years and that the interest rate be reduced to 3 percent, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Young People's Religious Union, of Boston, Mass., protesting against the enactment of the so-called Dempsey bill, relative to the deportation of aliens, and also the so-called Hobbs bill, setting up a place of detention for aliens ordered to be deported who for various reasons cannot be returned to the country of their allegiance, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a memorial from Ralph H. Harris, of San Angelo, Tex., remonstrating against the construction of the Upper Colorado Dam for flood purposes in Coke County, Tex., which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BYRNES:

S. 2904. A bill to provide for the sale under certain conditions of agricultural commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation; to the Committee on Banking and Cur-

By Mr. CAPPER:

S. 2905. A bill granting an increase of pension to Tina Newlon (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WALSH:

S. 2906. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Allen Pope against the United States; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2907. A bill to permit certain aliens whose childhood was spent in the United States, if eligible to citizenship, to become naturalized without filing declaration of intention; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. JOHNSON of California:

S. 2908. A bill amending section 6 of the act entitled "An act granting to the city and county of San Francisco certain rights-of-way in, over, and through certain public lands, the Yosemite National Park, and Stanislaus National Forest, and certain lands in the Yosemite National Park, the Stanislaus National Forest, and the public lands in the State of California, and for other purposes," approved December 19, 1913 (38 Stat. 242); to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

NATURALIZATION OF CERTAIN ALIENS

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask consent to introduce for appropriate reference a bill which is a companion bill to H. R. 6443, entitled "A bill to permit certain aliens whose childhood was spent in the United States, if eligible to citizenship, to become naturalized without filing declaration of intention." I ask that the letter of the Secretary of Labor to Congressman Clason, who introduced the bill in the House, recommending favorable action on this bill, be made a part of the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received and appropriately referred, and the letter presented by the Senator from Massachusetts will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

Hon. Charles R. Clason,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN CLASON: I have your letter of May 3, 1939, asking my attitude with respect to proposed legislation providing that the foreign-born children who have resided in this country for many years could file a final petition for naturalization upon reaching the age of 21, without the necessity of filing a declaration of intention.

This Department would have no objection to legislation of this character. There is already legislative precedent for it in a closely analogous field, since the Citizenship Act of 1934 permits the spouses of American citizens to apply for naturalization after a certain period of residence without the necessity of filing a declaration of intention (first papers).

Sincerely yours,

FRANCES PERKINS.

(See Senate bill 2907, introduced by Mr. Walsh, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration, and appears under the appropriate heading.)

FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES-PROGRAM AMENDMENT

Mr. MEAD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

WORKS ON RIVERS AND HARBORS-AMENDMENT

Mr. WALSH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2892) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY-AMENDMENTS

Mr. BYRD submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2626) to amend the act of June 30, 1936 (49 Stat. 2041), providing for the administration and maintenance of the Blue Ridge Parkway, in the States of Virginia and North Carolina, by the Secretary of the Interior, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

CLAIMS FOR LOSSES SUFFERED BY FLOOD AT BEAN LAKE AND SUGAR LAKE, MO.—AMENDMENTS

Mr. TRUMAN submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 1693) to confer jurisdiction on the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of certain claimants who suffered loss by flood at or near Bean Lake in Platte County, and Sugar Lake in Buchanan County, in the State of Missouri, during the month of March 1934, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

CONTINUATION OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON THE TAXATION OF GOVERNMENTAL SECURITIES AND SALARIES

Mr. BROWN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 172), which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Resolved, That Senate Resolution 303, Seventy-fifth Congress, third session, establishing a Special Committee on the Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries, agreed to June 16, 1938, is hereby continued in full force and effect until the expiration of the Seventy-sixth Congress, and the time for making the report required by such resolution is hereby extended to such date of expiration.

AIDS FOR EDUCATION-ADDRESS BY SENATOR LA FOLLETTE

[Mr. LA FOLLETTE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a radio address by himself, broadcast by transcription over station WHA, Madison, Wis., on June 1, 1939, on the subject Aids for Education, which appears in the Appendix.]

PROFESSIONAL WOMEN-SPEECH BY MISS EARLENE WHITE

[Mr. Harrison asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a speech on the subject of Professional Women, made by Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., at Kansas City, Mo., July 9, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

ISSUANCE OF BONDS TO COVER EXCESS SPENDING—STATEMENT BY WADSWORTH W. MOUNT

GOVERNMENTAL PXEENDITURES, TAXATION, AND BUREAUCRACY—EDITORIALS FROM NATION'S BUSINESS

[Mr. White asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record three editorials from the Nation's Business, which appear in the Appendix.]

RAILROAD REORGANIZATION ACT OF 1939

[Mr. Wheeler asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an editorial note in the June 1939 issue of the Columbia Law Review entitled "The Railroad Reorganization Act of 1939," which appears in the Appendix.]

OPERATIONS OF POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, at this time, when the press of the country is very assiduously trying to call attention to the political activities of the Postmaster General, I think it might be well to consider for a minute the ability and the accomplishments of the Postmaster General in his task as such.

At the conclusion of the past fiscal year the books of the Post Office Department showed that for the fifth out of the 6 years in which Mr. Farley has been in charge of the Post Office Department there was an actual surplus in the operation of that Department so far as actual postal affairs were concerned. For the past year it showed a surplus of $10,-164,750.36. I appreciate the fact that the press of the country in the past has attempted to depreciate the successful efforts of the Post Office Department by saying that, in estimating the financial condition of the Post Office Department, there should not be considered the services which are rendered to the Government, Members of Congress, and other agencies for which no postal charge is made. If one will look back through the reports of Postmasters General through the years, he will see that on all occasions a separation of the two functions was made. The difference is that other Postmasters General, after deducting the expenses which were involved for which the post office received no revenue, still had a deficit. Under Mr. Farley, during 5 of the 6 years, there has been an actual surplus.

I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record the operating statement of the Post Office Department for the past fiscal year, and also a statement in explanation of the operating statement.

A net operating postal surplus of $10,000,000

A net operating postal surplus of $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending on June 30, 1939, was announced last night by Postmaster General James A. Farley, who also reported that postal revenues for this period of $745,098,350 were the highest in the history of the Postal Service.

This revenue figure for the 1939 fiscal year represents a gain of $17,000,000 over the same period a year ago, which in turn, represents the previous all-time high in the matter of postal receipts.

The $10,000,000 surplus announced by the Postmaster General is the fifth in the 6 full years of Postmaster General Farley's administration of the Postal Service.

Mr. Farley pointed out that postal expenditures were still far below what they had been during the previous administration, this despite increased volume and receipts, and the additional cost of the 40-hour-week law for postal employees and the public-building program. This, the Postmaster General stated, reflected outstanding credit on the efficiency of the entire postal personnel, and was a source of great satisfaction to him.

In making public these figures the Postmaster General revealed that the gains in postal earnings started during the last Christmas season, and that each month since that time had been well ahead of the corresponding month a year ago. These gains came from all over the country and were evenly distributed among the metropolitan and rural areas of every section in the Nation.

The large increase of mailings under permit postage, which ob-

The large increase of mailings under permit postage, which obviates the use of postage stamps, accounted for most of the gains, and the Postmaster General said that this was almost wholly due to increased use of the mails by business and industry. As a sensitive barometer of business conditions, he said, the postal establishment was again seen as indicating a sharp upward trend in general prosperity.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I was advised this morning that some Members on both the Republican and the Democratic sides would like to discuss the general purposes and philosophy of the pending bill. Personally I have no objection to taking a vote now on some of the amendments which are to be considered. One which I have in mind was referred to in the colloquy yesterday with the very able Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the majority leader; namely, an amendment to be proposed to the highway provision.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Oregon that that amendment was offered to be printed and lie on the table. I have just been advised that the Government Printing Office has not yet printed it. The amendment will be here during the next 10 or 15 minutes. We cannot very well discuss it without having copies before the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate that fact. I wanted to occupy a little time in the discussion of the highway problem. That was my purpose yesterday. I was informed by the able leader that he was to offer an amendment after consulting some of the Members on his side, particularly the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], who is conversant with highway legislation.

Mr. BARKLEY. And also the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran].

Mr. McCARRAN rose.

Mr. McNARY. In view of that situation, I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to present to the Senate. By gentlemen's agreement I was to follow, with my amendment, the amendment which was to be offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Maloney]. I do not see the Senator from Connecticut in the Chamber. I am very sorry. I should like to carry out my agreement with him. At the same time. I do not want to hold up the Senate.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in the absence of activity, I have had a difference, though not very serious, with the provisions of the bill in reference to the question of interest which appear on page 15 of the bill. I wish to submit a word or two and an amendment in reference to that subject.

As was developed in the discussion on yesterday, the provisions of the bill in reference to interest practically mean that the Government will furnish money to certain private industries at considerably less than the money actually costs the Government. I have in mind particularly the railroad companies, which under the bill are to be furnished with money at a rate less than actual cost. If we are to seek out industries which could use money, and could use it at less than cost, we can find many such industries in the country. I do not believe, however, it is the business of the Government to do that. I therefore offer an amendment, to strike out from line 19 on page 15 down to and including the words "maturity thereof" in the first line of page 16.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. McNARY. What words does the Senator start with on line 16?

Mr. ADAMS. I propose to strike out the last six lines on page 15, down to the period in the first line of page 16.

Mr. McNARY. But what words does the Senator start with?

Mr. ADAMS. I start with the words "but not to exceed" at the beginning of line 19 on page 15. As a necessary part of the same amendment, I wish to add at the end of line 18 on page 15 the words "plus one-half percent per annum." The effect of the amendment is to provide that money shall be furnished to the various agencies for the purposes of the bill at a rate of interest which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Corporation for the cost to it of the capital required for expenditures under the act, plus one-half of 1 percent.

The one-half of 1 percent will not cover the cost. I inquired yesterday of the majority leader whether or not the word "cost" which was included in the bill, when it spoke of the return of the actual cost, meant anything in addition to the actual interest rate; and the majority leader said it did not.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not mean to convey the impression that the language in the bill would not avail to recoup the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for its outlay in obtaining the money. Of course, that would mean the principal and the interest. I did not think it covered any administrative costs necessary by reason of the new activities in the way of increased personnel. We have taken care of that in another way, by authorizing appropriations for administrative costs for most of these agencies.

Mr. ADAMS. That is taken care of out of the Treasury. Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADAMS. It seemed to me that if we were to make these loans we should reimburse the lending agencies or the Government for the actual cost. The actual cost includes the interest which the R. F. C. must pay. Then there is the cost of printing the bonds; there are the legal costs: there are a multitude of costs. These loans cannot be made at a cost of one-half of 1 percent. So, if the rate is made onehalf of 1 percent it will not be sufficient to recover the costs for the R. F. C.

The other section I am seeking to have stricken out is a limitation on these provisions. It provides that the rate shall be expected to reimburse the Corporation for the costs to it. Then the limitation is "not to exceed the highest yield to maturity on the longest term outstanding issue of obligations of the United States."

The question of yield has nothing to do with the Government. The question of yield has to do with what the holder of the security receives and what he pays for it. What we are concerned with is what the Government has to pay for its money. If the Government pays 3 percent for its money it pays it to maturity, at each interest period, and it does not matter if the purchaser of the bonds or the assignee of the bonds buys the bonds on a basis that pays him only 2 percent, because the Government will be paying the full rate. So there is a limit under the bill, that the interest rate shall be such as to reimburse the costs, but shall not exceed the yield, which is the yield to the owner of the bond.

I am asking to have that stricken out so that the bill will merely provide that the Government will lend the money at its actual cost—that is, its interest cost plus one-half of 1 percent.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. MILLER. The words suggested by the Senator to be eliminated are the words suggested to the committee by Mr. Jones, I believe, as language which should be stricken out, after he had considered this section. Is not that true?

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator will recall that in the original bill which was before us there was a very intricate provision, and we asked Mr. Jones if he understood what it meant, and he said he did not. Then there was some discussion of that.

Mr. MILLER. That is true; but does the Senator remember, or does he not, that Mr. Jones placed in parentheses the very words the Senator is seeking to have stricken out, and suggested that they be eliminated?

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct. My suggestion really conforms to that. I will read the section. It provides that the loan shall be "at a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Corporation for the cost to it of the capital required for its operations under this act." Mr. Jones said that if we would stop at that point we would meet the requirements. The original bill added this language:

Having due regard to the yield on obligations of the United States of comparable maturity or maturities to that of such loans and the rate and period of amortization of the cost of such works, projects, or undertakings, but not to exceed the multiple of one-eighth of percent next higher than the yield to maturity based on market prices on the longest term outstanding issue of obligations of the United States, direct or indirect.

Mr. Jones said he did not know what that meant,

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I read the bill with as much interest as I could command—being opposed to it, I will say—and it was so confusing with respect to who should bear the cost of administration as the administration proceeded that in the final result it seemed to me there was an attempt to evade a clear statement that the burden rested upon the organizations which were to receive the loans, and that they must pay out of any loans made to them, and that they could not pass on to the Government of the United States, to be paid out of the Treasury, the expenses of administration and the costs of the various organizations as they took over the obligations of the organizations that were formed.

Let me ask the Senator whether it is clear that the Government is to be free from the administrative costs, or are such costs to come out of the organizations which are to be the beneficiaries of these lcans?

Mr. ADAMS. The bill as it now stands before the Senate would impose upon the Government all administrative expenses of getting the money, all expenses other than the actual interest paid. What I am seeking to do is to add a provision for one-half of 1 percent in order to carry the Government's administrative costs, its engraving costs, and its personnel cost, because I do not think that a railroad, for instance, in buying equipment—and we are lending them 100 percent of the cost of it—should get the money at the rate the Government pays less the cost to the Government of all administrative expenses. Personally, I think the rate should be higher than that, and I am suggesting merely that the Government lend the money at actual cost.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator will recall that this formula originally provided that the rate of interest should not exceed the yield on the longest term outstanding Government obligations plus one-eighth of 1 percent, which was thought to be sufficient difference to take care of any possible losses or any costs to the Government in obtaining the money.

Mr. ADAMS. Under the provisions of the new bill the Government would have gotten less for its money than under the original bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. By one-eighth of 1 percent.

Mr. ADAMS. I think that is it. It speaks of a multiple of one-eighth of 1 percent, and some of us had a little difficulty in knowing what that meant.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me make a suggestion to the Senator; we may be able to get together on the question. What we are anxious to do, and what I think we all desire, is that, based on the theory of the bill, that we are getting away from grants, are making loans, we want to make them at a rate of interest sufficiently low to induce those who want the money and can use it to make the loans; but we do not feel that the R. F. C. should make an overhead profit out of the transactions by being able to sell its bonds bearing 1½ or 2 percent and then lend the money at 3 or 4 percent interest. All I am anxious to do is to see that the R. F. C., in the rate it charges for these various activities, shall have returned to it the cost of obtaining the money without a profit.

If the Senator would agree to the suggestion to provide in line 17 "at a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the corporation for not more than the cost to it of the capital required plus one-fourth of 1 percent," instead of one-half, I would accept the suggestion. I think one-fourth will be ample. The bill provided one-eighth originally, which might have been a little low.

Mr. ADAMS. Why does not the Senator say "any more than the cost"? Why not say that we will reimburse it for the cost plus that?

Mr. BARKLEY. Under such a provision there would be no ceiling. They could require interest at a rate which would not only reimburse them for the cost of the money but give them more. They might be able to make a profit out of the transaction. What we are trying to do is to provide that these rates of interest shall not be more than sufficient to pay the costs.

Mr. ADAMS. I may say to the Senator that between the two crimes, the crime of making a little profit and the crime of making a loss, I should prefer to have them commit the crime of making a profit.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know that we could call it a crime, but I believe this would do what both the Senator and I want to see done—that the R. F. C. would recoup the cost and no more; but in order to take care of its losses, whatever they may be, I think one-fourth of 1 percent would be sufficient.

Mr. ADAMS. Is not the Senator drawing a very close line? Mr. BARKLEY. No; one-half of 1 percent on the large transactions which may be involved would produce a considerable amount of money, and I cannot imagine how the increase in the personnel necessary would entail much expense. It may not be necessary for them to have any increase; very likely the R. F. C., with its present organization, can conduct all these activities without any additional personnel, and therefore there would be no additional cost involved. It may be that there would be some cost for the printing of bonds, but that would not be great.

Mr. ADAMS. I may say to the Senator that in the ordinary banking experience of those who are experienced in it, it costs them practically 1 percent to handle money. I do not believe that the R. F. C. can handle its money at a cost of one-half of 1 percent and meet the incidental expenses in addition to the interest costs. I think the Senator and I agree as to what we are trying to accomplish, but I think the Senator is underfiguring the incidental costs.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, no one can be absolutely accurate about what the cost will be; it is all speculative.

Mr. ADAMS. I want to give the benefit of whatever doubt there is to the R. F. C.

Mr. BARKLEY. We have fixed one-fourth of 1 percent in other laws—

Mr. ADAMS. In what law?

Mr. BARKLEY. As the spread between the cost of the money and the rate at which it will be loaned to the borrower. We have even gone further than that in the farmloan situation by providing a rate which has resulted in an actual loss.

Mr. ADAMS. Is the Senator willing to accept my amendment with the mere change from one-half to one-fourth?

Mr. BARKLEY. I would be if I were certain that the R. F. C. under that language could not charge more than the actual cost to it plus the one-fourth of 1 percent. That is why I wanted to put in "not more than the cost, plus one-fourth of 1 percent."

Mr. ADAMS. I think the Senator's statement can be relied upon. The R. F. C. will be familiar with what the Senator from Kentucky has said on the floor, and the language of the bill is that they are to make an interest rate sufficient to reimburse them. That does not mean they are to go beyond that rate. Then when we say "the cost, plus one-fourth of 1 percent" or "one-half of 1 percent," it seems to me we have definitely fixed the ceiling.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would pay a great deal more attention to language written in the bill than to what I would say on the floor.

Mr. ADAMS. I do not think so. I could not grant that. Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Does the Senator think that even one-half of 1 percent would reimburse the Government for the losses involved in this general program, taking the program as a whole?

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator that I have no idea that that is going to cover the losses. I am merely proposing to insert it so that the Government will not be a loser, assuming it gets back 100 percent of the principal and the interest.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator will notice the language of the preamble to section 2:

In order to provide a sound method of financing which, without burdening the national taxing power, will make it possible to increase employment-

And so forth. Could not the Senator at least make it 1 percent higher instead of one-half of 1 percent?

Mr. ADAMS. Many years ago I heard the word "euphemistic." It seems to me the preamble would have to be liberally construed.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator does not believe, does he, that the purpose of the bill can be carried out without burdening the national taxing power, even if his amendment shall be

Mr. ADAMS. No: I do not.

Mr. TAFT. Has the Senator called attention to Mr. Jones' testimony on page 218 of the hearings before the committee, when he was asked, with regard to the interest provision?-

The CHARMAN. Mr. Jones, then you would not fix a maximum?

Mr. Jones. No; why should you?
The Chairman. I am asking you.
Mr. Jones. I certainly would not. I would not fix a maximum, o-or a minimum, either.

The people administering this law are going to do it largely under the direction of the President, and he is going to know what money is costing, through his Secretary of the Treasury; and they should be free to fix the rate without regard to a strait jacket imposed in

Does the Senator remember that testimony of Mr. Jones? Mr. ADAMS. I do.

Mr. TAFT. And does the Senator remember that Mr. Jones was in favor of eliminating everything-that is, all that the Senator was striking out-without putting in any limitation, as the Senator has proposed to do?

Mr. ADAMS. I am one of the humble followers of the majority leader here, and I naturally yield to him as far as my mathematical sense will permit me. Does the Senator from Kentucky think my amendment is all right?

Mr. BARKLEY. Not as originally offered. Mr. ADAMS. If we change it from one-half to onequarter, can we bargain with the Senator?

Mr. BARKLEY. And put in "not more." I think there ought to be a ceiling.

Mr. ADAMS. No.

Mr. BARKLEY. Because nobody wants the R. F. C. to make a profit.

Mr. ADAMS. I think that is an exaggeration.

Mr. BARKLEY. It may be able to borrow this money at 1 percent on short-term obligations, and refund them, and reissue them from time to time; and even under the bill as it is it could loan the money at 2% percent. If the program is to work, certainly no Government agency ought to make a profit out of interest. There ought to be a ceiling. And the suggestion I make would result in the Corporation being reimbursed for all that it costs it to get the money, plus onequarter of 1 percent, which, in my judgment, would take care of even administrative costs, such as the printing of bonds, and so forth.

Mr. ADAMS. Of course, the Senator and I approach it from different angles. I do not want the Government to lose, and, as between the railroad company which is buying equipment with Government money and the Government, I would rather they paid a shade more interest than that the Government should stand a loss. The Government is going to stand a loss anyway, I will say to the Senator, on its principal.

Mr. BARKLEY. Responding to the Senator from Ohio, I will say there is no way to put in the bill a spread in interest rates which might in a speculative way take care of any losses that might be sustained on the loans. The Senator from Colorado is not attempting to do that in his amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. I felt that would be useless, in view of the opposition of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; it is not that. There is no way to estimate it. There may not be any losses. But if there should be any losses, we cannot tell what they may be. It might be years before they would develop. And we cannot fix any possible spread in interest rates that would compensate the R. F. C. for any individual losses which might occur in 10 or 15 years from now on loans it may make.

Mr. ADAMS. No; but sound financing would make some provision for that. Every banking institution in the land, every insurance company, everyone who handles money, would make some allowance in the matter of interest rates. If there were an absolute assurance that every loan would be paid back 100 percent, interest rates would be lower. But by the amendment which I have offered, we would fix an absolute minimum, based on the expectation of 100-percent interest and principal being paid.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In connection with the problem of interest rates, I wish to submit a question to the Senator, and I should also like to have the views of the Senator from Kentucky. My understanding is that these loans may be made for a period of 40 years. What I want to know is whether, when the loan is made for 40 years, this low interest rate contracted with the borrower is to remain effective for 40 years, regardless of whether during the intervening period the cost of money to the Government increases.

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct. Of course, if, as I assume it will do, the Government makes a 40-year loan, it will issue 40-year bonds so as to take care of the loan, so as to escape the hazard of increased interest costs.

Mr. BARKLEY. We could not afford to make a change in a 40-year obligation, simply because in the intervening period interest rates to the borrower may go up, because the period of the obligation is fixed, and the rate of interest is fixed at the time the loan is made. If 20 years later the Government should be obliged to pay more interest on money which it then borrows, it could not make a change in the previous obligation, because the money involved in the original transaction would have no relationship to the cost of money in the later transaction.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator from Michigan that if the R. F. C. in making the loans proceeds on the theory that it will make 40-year loans, and then will borrow at 5-year periods or 10-year periods to get the money, it will be confronted with a loss, if we succeed in the efforts we are making to restore business activity and prosperity, because if we do succeed, interest rates will go up.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Precisely. And I was struck by the fact that the Senator from Kentucky a moment ago referred to the fact that the Government could borrow some of this money on short-term paper.

Mr. BARKLEY. I said the R. F. C. could do it. But they do not borrow any money now for longer than 5-year periods. Under the bill, however, they can issue their obligations for as long as 30 years I think. So that when they issue their obligations for practically 30 years they fix a rate of interest in the loans they make. When they distribute that money among the various agencies they fix the rate of interest based on what they have to pay for the money over

Mr. VANDENBERG. If the R. F. C. borrows the money on short-time paper at a low rate of interest, and thereupon gives the benefit of that low rate of interest to the borrower in a 40-year contract, in the course of the 40 years the Government undoubtedly would lose a substantial amount of money on the interest alone, would it not?

Mr. ADAMS. I am quite sure it would. And, of course, there could be no change in the rate of interest charged the borrower as a matter of contract and as a matter of specific provision of the statute, because at the top of page 16 it is provided:

Nothing herein shall be construed to require the alteration or readjustment of any rate once the interest has been fixed for any

Mr. VANDENBERG. I submit to the Senator that this is another factor of doubt which justifies his very modest suggestion that a one-half of 1 percent element of safety be injected into the rate as between the Government and the borrower.

Mr. ADAMS. I think one-half of 1 percent is an inadequate amount, I will say to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, with particular reference to the P. W. A. activities, under which we have been making grants of 45 percent and loans of 55 percent, in order that public bodies may feel that they can afford to forego the grants, and make the loans provided for in the measure, they have to feel that they are getting something in the way of a reduced interest rate which, over the period, will absorb at least a part of what they would have gotten as a grant.

It has been figured out by the Treasury that on a 20-year maturity the amount of the grant at the rate of interest provided for in the bill would be 22 percent, for a 15-year obligation it would be 19 percent, and so on, depending on the length of the obligation. Now, if the rate of interest is raised so as to absorb these benefits which are offered as a substitute for grants, then we destroy the inducement to the public bodies, State, county, or municipal, to borrow the money, because they do not get anything, or get very little, as a substitute for the grants which they have been accustomed to receive.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator from Kentucky speaks of foregoing the grant. When did railway companies ever have a right to a grant? They are not foregoing anything.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not talking about that.

Mr. ADAMS. I am talking about making loans to private corporations at less than the cost of money to the United States Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator had been listening he would know that I specified P. W. A. projects. The railroads have gotten no grants. The R. E. A. has gotten no grants.

Mr. ADAMS. That is the reason why I say the Senator's argument has no bearing in this instance.

Mr. BARKLEY. But the P. W. A. situation has a bearing. In this measure we cannot fix a different rate for different activities. They should be uniform.

Mr. ADAMS. But we ought not to give the railroads what is equivalent to a 45-percent grant. It sems to me the Senator is arguing that we should give a rate to the railroads which is equivalent to a grant of 45 percent.

Mr. BARKLEY. No. The most they would get over a period of years would be approximately 20 or 22 percent.

Mr. ADAMS. They would receive the benefit of the difference between what we would have to pay for money on our own borrowings and the rate which the Government would give them. There is no element of grant. We are seeking to give to the railroads and the corporations which want to put in rural electrification money at a rate of interest lower than the cost to the Government of the United Sates, which has the finest credit rating of any government, corporation, or individual in the world.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, the pending bill, Senate bill 2864, entitled "The Works Financing Act of 1939," is perhaps the most tempting piece of bait, and partly for that very reason the most dangerous piece of legislation, that has come before the Congress for some time.

Frankly, I am afraid of the bill. I am afraid not merely because of its loose fiscal policy but also because of its temptations and its implications.

It promises something for nothing to almost everyone and every group in the country. There are hundreds of millions in it for the construction industry, for farmers, for the railroads, for communities thirsting for public works, for all the people and businesses that want more highway construction, for the small-business man, for those who see foreign trade as a big factor in recovery, and even $90,000,000 for reclamation. All these hundreds of millions and billions are without appropriations, without costing the Government anythingwithout costing anybody anything.

Mr. President, some of the claims made for the bill, including the claim that the projects are to be self-liquidating, are just too good to be true.

As I understand, the amended bill which we have before us authorizes the lending of some two and one-half billion dollars for projects described as self-liquidating.

As I understand the term "self-liquidating," it means that the projects will ultimately pay for themselves out of earnings of one kind or another.

As I read the measure and interpret the report of the Banking and Currency Committee, it provides that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall issue bonds to raise the money to make loans. The money so raised will be lent to Government-owned corporations for use or for relending, and ultimately the corporations will recover the money from the operation of the projects and return it to the Government.

The program looks very much like a spending program under the name of a lending program. It seems to me that the Federal Government would go further into debt without the additional debt being shown on the books at the present time. It is just as much a lend-and-spend program as those which have preceded it. I am not criticizing all the lendings and spendings which have occurred in the past. Some of the expenditures were absolutely necessary. Some of the lendings were in the public interest. Many of the R. F. C. loans will be repaid. However, I venture to suggest that not nearly as large a percentage of the funds lent under the new program will be repaid as was the case with the previous R. F. C. loans. I do not see how it can be.

What is really proposed under the program is that the Government shall use its credit to borrow more money. money will be spent through Government-owned corporations or other agencies. Perhaps some of it will be repaid.

However, the basic fact is that the two and one-half billion dollars-or however much of it is used-will be a burden upon the credit of the Federal Government. Actually, it will be added to the public debt, although through a bookkeeping fiction it will not be listed as part of the national debt for the present.

Mr. President, this session of Congress already has appropriated something like $13,000,000,000, with another deficiency bill coming before we adjourn.

The public debt is more than $40,000,000,000. Anticipated revenues for the curent fiscal year are little more than five and one-half billions. Figure it out for yourself.

Moreover, Congress already has authorized borrowings of some $14,000,000,000 by and through various agencies, and these billions are a contingent liabilty of the Federal Government. I do not say that all of this amount ultimately will be added to the public debt, but part of it will be.

Mr. President, I say the time has come for Congress to call a halt to this endless borrow-and-spend, borrow-and-lend, lend-and-spend program. The fact that this one has a new name, coined for it outside of Congress-I believe the term is "splending"—does not change its inherent character. It is still borrow and lend and spend. That this program has a new designation does not change the fact.

I find myself to a certain extent in agreement with the statement issued by the Republican special committee on debt, though my opposition to this measure and the policy it carries out is not at all based on partisan considerations.

The committee declares that-

The whole premise is fallacious. The arguments for the bill e specious. The policy is utterly dangerous to the welfare of the are specious. Nation. Both the proposal and the underlying principles should be denounced and rejected by Congress.

Mr. President, this proposal is not advanced as an emergency measure. It is proposed that the Government go into the dangerous program of continuing to borrow and lend and spend as a permanent program.

Every one of such measures enacted by Congress catches us more certainly and more hopelessly in the vicious circle of borrow more and spend more. The more we borrow, the more we spend. The more we spend, the more we must borrow to keep up the spending. The more we spend, the more we must borrow, because when the artificial stimulant of Government spending is removed, or even lessened, an economic crisis is threatened; and more borrowing to make possible more spending to make necessary more borrowing will have to be carried on at an ever-increasing tempo and in ever-increasing volume.

I do not intend to go into the very apparent situation in which the additional two and one-half billion dollars, plus the other billions of dollars appropriated for spending during the coming year, can be used to influence votes in the coming 1940 campaign.

I voted for the Hatch bill, a fine piece of legislation, to prohibit pernicious political activities by those charged with dispensing relief funds and by Federal employees generally. But what is the use of doing that and almost in the same breath providing another two and one-half billion dollars in addition to the already created slush fund of billions and billions of dollars of Government spending for communities and for Government payments to individuals?

Mr. President, I am more than disturbed; I am alarmed as I look down the road on which we are traveling. It was bad enough when the Federal Government was spending from one and one-half to two dollars for every dollar it collected in revenue. It was bad enough to face a tenth year of deficit spending on that basis. But now, through the spurious device of calling two and one-half billion dollars or so lending instead of spending, we are proposing to make it possible in the coming year for the Federal Government to spend between two and one-half and three dollars for every dollar of revenue.

If those figures are questioned, I suggest that you figure it out yourself. More than $13,000,000,000 will have been appropriated. Add to this two and one-half billion dollars. Then divide the total by the $5,500,000,000 of anticipated revenues, and see what the result is. Unless my arithmetic is at fault, the result is nearly three times as much lent and spent as the revenue receipts amount to.

Mr. President, if the bill honestly stated what it is proposed to do, I should be gravely concerned. But coming to us under a disguise, even though that disguise is almost transparent, I am seriously alarmed over where its passage will lead us. I feel constrained to vote against the bill, much as I favor some of the announced objectives proposed to be attained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Bilbo in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS].

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in lieu of the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado, I think we have arrived at a compromise of language. I suggest that the Senator modify his amendment, in addition to striking out the words which he strikes out, by striking out, in line 17, on page 15, after the word "for", the words "the cost to it of the capital required for any expenditure under this act" and inserting "not more than the cost of the capital to it, plus three-eighths of 1 percent per annum."

Mr. ADAMS. I thought we said one-half. Mr. BARKLEY. Not more than one-half.

Mr. ADAMS. Not more than one-half.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well; "plus not more than one-half of 1 percent."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado accept the modification?

Mr. ADAMS. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams], as modified.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, let us have the amendment stated. I am a little in doubt as to how it reads.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado, as modified, will be stated.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, perhaps I can state it. The amendment as modified proposes, on page 15, line 17, after the word "for", to strike out down to and including the words "the maturity thereof" in line 1 on page 16, and to insert in lieu thereof "not more than the cost to it of the capital required for any expenditure under this act, plus not more than one-half of 1 percent per annum", so that the language, beginning in line 16, would read:

At a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Corporation for not more than the cost to it of the capital required for any expenditure under this act, plus not more than one-half of 1 percent per annum.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. Capper] has just delivered an address which should call for most serious consideration not only upon the part of Senators but of the country. He has condemned in forcible terms the spending policy of the Government and has indicated that this policy is a menace to our economic system as well as to the integrity of the Government. He would have been more accurate, in my opinion, if he had called the pending bill a waste bill as well as a spending bill. I recall a few days ago, when there was some floundering for a word descriptive of the measure, that I suggested that it should be denominated a "waste" bill rather than a measure for the "construction and financing of self-liquidating projects" or indeed the more recent name which has been given to the child-that of a "program for financing recoverable expenditures." Perhaps the new cognomen which has been attached to the bill has been adopted because there is not only doubts but a growing conviction that the projects to be carried out under the terms of the bill are not, and will not be, selfliquidating; and I am convinced that if the bill should be enacted into law the $3,300,000,000 for which the Government will be liable will not provide "recoverable expenditures." In other words, the Treasury of the United States will be called upon to meet demands resulting from losses incurred under the bill.

Again referring to the Senator from Kansas, may I state that he is always very careful in his statements and approaches public questions in a manner that is commendable in a public servant. I believe that he was entirely justified in expressing apprehension because of the policies which are being pursued by the Government.

Mr. President, it is not a pleasant task for me to criticize measures and policies to which support has been given by the leading members of my party. However, I cannot accept the view that it is the duty of members of political parties to always support policies which their respective parties submit. There is much to commend in the British parliamentary system where, as we know, party lines are not always followed, and Liberals not infrequently vote for measures of the Labor or the Conservative Parties, and members of those parties give their support to policies of the Liberal Party. I should add, however, that in party government it is not always easy to determine to which political party a measure or policy belongs.

A number of years ago perhaps the most important political issue was connected with the question of tariff. It is apparent that both political parties have modified their views with respect to the tariff, and it may be further stated that persons who formerly were advocates of tariff for revenue only have moved to a different position.

I was a member of the committee which drafted the Democratic platform in 1932 and subscribed then, as I subscribe now, to the principles therein enunciated. As I have stated, political parties in a democratic government are not only important but necessary. There always will be many thoughtful and patriotic people with differences of opinion in regard to economic, political, and governmental questions. These differences result in the formation of political parties organized and maintained for the purpose of carrying into effect the views and policies of the parties to which the citizens respectively belong. Political parties do not always adhere to their platforms, or policies which they have been pledged to support, and in this changing world with its confusion, political issues are sometimes forgotten. Allegiance to a political party does not demand blind support, or compel the renunciation of honest and sincere convictions.

As stated, parties come and go and political platforms are not infrequently departed from, if not abandoned. It is more important to be right than to blindly subscribe to any political dogma or political platform. There are certain fundamental principles in government as there are in the realms of philosophy and in the sphere of morals. I have always been a Democrat and helped to organize the party in my own State. I have been the recipient of honors at the hands of the Democratic Party, and I hope that it will adhere to the principles upon which it was founded and those fundamental precepts will lie at the basis of free government—of democratic institutions and of this Republic.

It is not expected that a political party will be right upon every question or that it will never deviate from platforms promulgated by it. This fact leads to the conclusion that if political parties depart from sound principles enunciated in their platforms and pursue policies inimical to the interests of the people and harmful to the Government, there is no requirement that such policies shall be regarded as commands that must be obeyed.

Important as political parties are and desirable, they are not impeccable and may often attempt to carry out policies at variance with their platforms and in opposition to the views of many who desire to adhere to sound fundamental principles. To maintain genuine democratic government is a difficult task. It will be beset by many dangers, and efforts will be made to convert it into a socialistic state or into a powerful centralized and oppressive government. This Republic in its brief period of existence has encountered forces which menace its existence. The important task devolving upon all American citizens is to preserve this Republic and to keep it in the paths designed by the fathers.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. May I suggest to the Senator that there is some very excellent democratic authority for the position which he now takes? I should like to read the following sentences:

The credit of the family depends chiefly upon whether that family is living within its income. And that is equally true of the Nation. If the Nation is living within its income, its credit is good.

If, in some crises, it lives beyond its income for a year or two, it can usually borrow temporarily at reasonable rates. But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds and is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending; if it extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, then it is on the road to bankruptcy.

I am quoting Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaking at Pittsburgh, Pa., on October 19, 1932, and I think the Senator from Utah finds himself entirely in tune with his distinguished Democratic leader of yesterday.

Mr. KING. The doctrine announced by President Roosevelt in the statement just read is sound, and it should be followed by this Republic. However, during the past few years we have departed from that doctrine and have engaged in spending policies that in my opinion have had injurious effects upon our economy as well as upon our political institutions; and there are evidences that the spending policies will be continued and, of course, this will result in continued unbalanced Budgets, and the stupendous national indebtedness will be magnified as time goes on. The bill before us, as I have indicated, is in line with the spending policies which have given us a public debt of approximately $45,000,000,000 and contingent obligations to the extent of from five to ten billions of dollars additional.

The Democratic Party from the days of Jefferson has proclaimed its devotion to economy and efficiency in governmental affairs, and in various State platforms it has pledged itself to the support of a government which should be economically administered. And in national conventions it has declared for the maintenance of the States against all centralizing tendencies. It has pledged itself to constitutional doctrines and traditions of the party as illustrated by the teachings and examples of Democratic statesmen and patriots. It has expressed opposition to centralization and to that dangerous spirit of encroachment which tends to consolidate the various departments of the Government into one and to thus create out of the form of government a real despotism. Democracy is the antithesis of policies which project the Federal Government into the States, and which seek to convert a republican form of government into a socialistic government. In my opinion, there are some in the Democratic Party who are abandoning many of the principles upon which it was founded, and advocating policies which, if triumphant, will undermine the republican form of government and impose upon the people a socialistic state.

There are today socialistic governments, and also people living under communistic and dictatorial governments. They should be an admonition to the American people to maintain and defend this Republic. We have the best form of government the world has ever produced, and any departure from its philosophy and spirit will inevitably bring to the American people some of the sorrows and evils found in other countries. I have, upon a number of occasions, challenged attention to the encroachments by the Federal Government upon the States and its intrusion into avenues leading to state socialism. The Federal Government is becoming a powerful national government. It is expanding its authority and engaging in many forms of private endeavor. Its intrusion into many of these fields has been most injurious to our economic, industrial, and political system. Capitalism and socialism may not go hand in hand, and as the Federal Government is moving into fields which under our form of government belong exclusively to private endeavor, our capitalistic system is being weakened and measurably undermined. There are evidences of movements to undermine our economy and to force upon the people a socialistic system. Demands are made for enormous expenditures upon the part of the Federal Government for activities that are clearly outside of the domain within which the Federal Government should operate.

It is contended by some persons that there must be further pump priming and a continuation of huge Government expenditures, notwithstanding the fact that the limitation upon bonded indebtedness has been reached and that obligations have been incurred by the Government which will incur additional appropriations in order to discharge the same.

Unfortunately we follow the unsound philosophy of Mr. Keynes, that public spending would aid in recovery. Efforts were made in Great Britain and some other countries to induce their people to embark upon a policy of public spending; but we know that those countries, refusing to accept such a program, more rapidly reached the highway of sound fiscal policies.

I recall that in the Ottawa Conference it was decided that the nations of the British Commonwealth should take all steps that lie in their power to increase public confidence, especially in the field of business enterprise. In other words, they repudiated the view that in order to recover from the depression governmental borrowing and spending were necessary. They took the view that to use the tax-payers' money by the government to compete with private enterprise would retard development and be a deterrent to public confidence. We pursued a different course, and the more the Government has expanded its activities into private fields, the more unsatisfactory has become our economic and industrial condition.

There are today perhaps 12,000,000 men out of employment, and public and national and State indebtedness has reached unprecedented heights. These enormous public expenditures have, in my opinion, been a deterrent to a revival in industry and, of course, will constitute a menace to the solvency of the Republic. The spending policy of the Government and its persistent intrusion into fields that under our system of Government should be occupied by private enterprise, have prevented private enterprise from going forward. The savings of the people are not utilized, because of the uncertainty of the policies of the Government. In other words the spending program—the thrusting of the Federal Government into fields of private endeavor-arrests the flow of capital into channels of productivity. There are those who insist that the Government shall take over many activities that belong to the capitalistic system and to lead the way to wider socialistic activities.

The Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Berle, recently stated in substance that there are cases in which the Government picked up a job, and itself issued its own bonds, thereby securing capital, more often bank credit than savings, and putting that capital into constructive work. And he further added:

That that presents a situation with which, I believe, we now have to deal, for if that process goes on indefinitely, obviously you are in for a very large expansion of the Government function.

He added also this sentence:

Whoever pays the piper eventually calls the tune over a period of Obviously, this is true. Undoubtedly the Government has "picked up a job" and has issued its bonds and obtained bank credit and has "invested capital in constructive work."

It may be inferred from these statements that there will be a very large expansion of the Government function, which means a very large projection of the Government into state

I have been inclined to believe from some of the testimony which was presented before the so-called Temporary National Economic Committee that the hearings were to be used as a springboard to promote the cause of more Federal spending.

Mr. President, as I have indicated, I disapprove of the bill under consideration. In my opinion, there is no justification

It seems to me that it is a confession that we are about to abandon, if we have not already abandoned, those safe and sane democratic principles upon which this Republic was founded and that we are traveling more and more in the direction of state socialism.

The Senator from Kansas has just stated that during the present Congress more than $13,000,000,000 have been appropriated. The authorizations and commitments made call for several billions of dollars additional. This bill, disguise it as we may, calls for Federal expenditures of several billions of dollars. It may be alleged that we are inaugurating an "investment plan," not a spending plan; but I make the prediction that this measure will greatly add to the liabilities of the Federal Government, and in the end will call for larger appropriations which must be met by imposing additional taxes upon the people. A day may come, if this spending mania continues, when inflation, with all its deadly consequencies, will result.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] as

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT-APPROVAL OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 522. An act to provide pensions to members of the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard who become disabled by reason of their service therein, equivalent to 75 percent of the compensation payable to war veterans for similar service-connected disabilities, and for other purposes; and

S. 2482. An Act authorizing the President to present a Distinguished Service Medal to Rear Admiral Harry Ervin Yarnell, United States Navy.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2009) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act. as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation, and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

REGULATION OF MODES OF TRANSPORTATION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2009) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended. by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes.

Danaher

Mr. WHEELER. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House, ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Truman, Mr. Donahey, Mr. WHITE, and Mr. REED conferees on the part of the Senate.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I offer some technical, textual amendments to correct certain language in the bill, to which there will be no opposition.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be stated.

The legislative clerk read the amendments, as follows:

On page 2, line 3, after "Agriculture", to insert "the Department of the Interior."

On page 5, lines 6 and 7, to strike out "as miscellaneous receipts" and insert in lieu thereof "and carried to the surplus fund."

On page 6, line 4, to strike out "as miscellaneous receipts" and insert in lieu thereof "and carried to the surplus fund."

On page 9, line 21, after "contracts", to insert "for, or."

On page 12, line 17, to strike out "secton" and insert in lieu thereof "section."

On page 17, line 20, strike out "constucted" and insert in lieu thereof "constructed."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendments will be considered en bloc, and, without objection, they are agreed to.

The question is on the third reading and engrossment of the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Davis La Follette Schwartz Schwellenbach Andrews Downey Ellender Lodge Sheppard Ashurst Shipstead Austin Bailey Bankhead Lucas Frazier George Lundeen McCarran Smathers Smith Gerry Gibson McKellar Stewart Barbour Gillette McNary Barkley Green Guffey Thomas, Okla. Bilbo Maloney Mead Thomas, Utah Bone Miller Tobey Borah Gurney Hale Harrison Townsend Truman Minton Brown Murray Bulow Hatch Hayden Neely Norris Tydings Vandenberg Burke Byrd Herring Hill Nye O'Mahoney Van Nuvs Wagner Walsh Capper Chavez Clark, Idaho Holman Pepper Pittman Radcliffe Hughes Wheeler Johnson, Calif. Clark, Mo. Reed Russell Johnson, Colo.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

King

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, during the consideration of this bill I intend to offer an amendment which I trust will be understood by the membership of the Senate, and which I trust will receive the approval of this body.

From time to time there necessarily occur vast changes in the financial, business, and social order which necessitate the expansion of the authority of government, and which require the diligent application of the legislator in initiating and perfecting the needed changes. Governments which have failed to keep pace with the changes occurring in a changing world have been destroyed, and the same fate has fallen to the lot of an administration in this country in recent years. We have witnessed the demise of an administration which stubbornly resisted change, and we have likewise witnessed the rise of an administration which has accommodated itself to the changes necessary for the public good.

The changes which have taken place in this country in its financial, its industrial, and its social order, have been initiated by both political parties. Once conceived and approved and administered, they have, in most cases, remained permanent fixtures of government. The Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Securities and Exchange Commission, are apt illustrations of the changes which have occurred in our financial set-up. The anti-trust laws, the regulation of holding companies, the Federal Trade Commission, are evidences of the changes which have been necessitated as a result of evolution in our business world. The coming of social security with its pensions, its unemployment insurance, and its retirement benefits, is an evidence of the changes that occur in our social

Mr. President, as a result of changes in the industrial and in the financial world, smaller enterprise, little business, the individual owner of store or shop or factory, have been isolated—quarantined, if you will—on an island from which they must be rescued by an interested government, by a legislative body concerned with their well being; and it is to that subject that I desire to address myself today.

Little business grew up with America. It is the backbone of our business life. Its heroic initiative, its courageous leadership, made possible the wealth and standing of America today. The coming of monopoly, however-a natural development in the competitive order-the coming of chain stores in the field of merchandising, the evolution in the banking world with the chain bank, the investment banker, the stock exchange and its activities, have all resulted in handicapping the little-business man in his desire for credit and capital in order that he might accommodate himself to the keen competition of the new order. Government regulation, necessary in the protection of society, witnessed in the administration of our banking laws, necessary in the conduct of the Federal Reserve System, required in the administration of our Federal Deposit Insurance Corporationall these regulations and necessary requirements have had a tendency to retard the progress of little business in its need for credit and capital to compete with its bigger brethren.

Mr. President, little business is still the backbone of the Nation. Little business represents 400,000 of our enterprises. Little business furnishes to thousands of communities in America their only hope for prosperity, for stability, and security. Little business today, quarantined on this island of credit isolation, can hope to secure only short-term credit for its current expenditures.

Congress recognized the plight of little business when it created the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Congress recognized the destructive handicap of the new order on little business when it liberalized the Federal Reserve Act. and gave to that system the right to make direct loans to smaller enterprise. That capital is not available to little enterprise is easily ascertainable when once we realize the tremendous hoard of idle money bulging forth in the banks and depositories of the Nation. It has been said by reliable authority that we have $25,000,000,000 of idle credit in the banks of America, and $65,000,000,000 of idle credit in the aggregate in all the depositories of America. We are reaching the all-time limit and record in the accumulation of idle money, and, incidental to the establishment of that record, we have reached the all-time record in the number of our idle men and in the number of our idle machines.

Today, by reason of the idleness in the money market, our bankers, whose duty it is to protect the depositors of the country and to see to it that they are given a fair return on their deposits, are cutting interest rates, until only a few days ago the rate of interest on savings accounts in the State of New Jersey was cut to 1 percent. Bankers all over the United States are effecting economies, because they are operating on a very narrow and slender margin, are reducing salaries, increasing unemployment, and effecting mergers and consolidations in order to meet the situation which con-fronts them today. Bankers are in need of profits and profitable investments in order to rehabilitate all enterprise, in order to give the bankers an opportunity to pay their depositors fair and reasonable interest rates, which is a problem to my mind squaring with the important problems of today.

In those banks of the United States which are associated with and are members of the Federal Reserve System there are reserves which permit of a credit expansion of approximately $30,000,000.000. When we consider that huge amount and realize that all of the loans made to business in the United States aggregate only $21,000,000,000, we must of necessity realize that business is severely handicapped in its demand for credit and capital and that at the same time the financial system of the United States is impoverished because the banks are unable under existing circumstances to meet this profitable demand which would be beneficial to the banks, to the unemployed, to small enterprise, and to the national economy generally.

Mr. President, in the course of the debate, observations have been made as to the losses sustained by the lending agencies created by the Congress in order to meet what was apparent to them-a very essential, a very necessary, a very paramount need. Emphasis was laid on a statement recently made by the former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, when it was said that he intimated that he would be ashamed to confess the losses which would be sustained by the R. F. C. In order that I might bring to the Senate the exact language quoted in the press with regard to that observation by the former head of the R. F. C., let me read from the Washington Evening Star of July 22 last:

"We think we have," Mr. Jones answered, "met the requirements of the law. We are not infallible. We make plenty of mistakes and plenty of bad loans."

"The liberality of the policy is going to show up in the losses you take?" interjected Senator Adams. "Yes," Mr. Jones responded, "we are going to have plenty of losses."

Senator Adams then asked whether the losses would "run as high as 10 or 20 percent," and Mr. Jones replied, "I am ashamed to tell you what I think it will be. It will be plenty."

Mr. President, one may deduct from that statement that the losses would be 1 percent or 99 percent, whatever in the estimate of the critic would be "plenty," insofar as his standard of measure was concerned. But I have here a letter of recent vintage, addressed to the President of the United States by the former Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in which Mr. Jones makes a statement which I take it, by reason of the fact that it is not a newspaper item, that it is not testimony offered before a committee, that it is not a casual observation, reflects the mature judgment of the man who affixes his signature to a statement which he has had opportunity to study. In the statement Mr. Jones said, in reporting to his Chief of the profits of the R. F. C .:

Mr. President, the Corporation is solvent, it has sound assets sufficient to pay all of its debts and return to the Trentire capital invested in it and something in addition. Treasury the

Mr. President, that statement indicates that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation actually has made money on its loans. Only the other day I learned through the medium of the press that the R. F. C. obtained a profit of a million and a half in the sale of securities as a result of a loan repaid by one of the southern railroad companies.

Recently two committees of the Senate, in the conduct of hearings, brought forth what, in my judgment, is the unanswerable demand that the country and its lawmakers take cognizance of the condition of small enterprise and of the inadequacy of its capital and credit requirements. Before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, presided over by the able senior Senator from my own State [Mr. WAGNER], came a representative from the Moody Investors' Service, and I assume that every Senator is cognizant of the importance and the reliability of that great service. That representative came before the Committee on Banking and Currency and in cold, hard, statistical studies which he submitted showed the contemporary trend, and that trend indicates that little business is rapidly losing its credit standing, and unless something is done to remedy the situation the condition of little business will grow progressively and rapidly worse, until a high state of demoralization and disintegration will set in. It was demonstrated with respect to small business that the ratio of their current assets to their current liabilities had shown a distinct and progressive tendency to decline since 1930.

With respect to big business, the ratio of their current assets to their current liabilities has shown a distinct tendency to rise. In fact, the working capital ratio of the larger companies is nearly twice as favorable as that of the smaller companies of the United States.

It was shown that from the year 1929 to 1932 the volume of working capital of the larger companies declined about 25 percent, while the volume of working capital of the smaller companies declined 40 percent.

Even more significant is the fact that since 1932 the larger companies have worked themselves back to a condition where they have now over 91 percent of the working capital they had in 1929, while the smaller companies, little business, if you will, have less than 70 percent of the working capital they had in 1929.

The same statistics show that the percentage of profit of the smaller companies on their gross sales is substantially less than half the percentage of profit of the larger companies on their gross sales. Since no such wide discrepancy existed between the profit ratios of the larger and the smaller companies in the twenties, it is fairly clear that the business and profits of the smaller concerns have been adversely affected as a result of inadequate working capital.

Mr. President, what does all this mean? It means that the average small-business man in the United States is facing a serious situation, a situation which, if allowed to develop normally, is going to mean the closing of many factories and plants, the impoverishment of hundreds of small communities, and the gradual impairment of our national economic health.

Little business is in trouble, and its difficulty is principally due to its rapidly diminishing credit standing. These people need credit. It is their lifeblood. Without it they cannot purchase equipment, expand their operations, solicit business, replenish inventories, or properly carry out their normal business operations. There is no use talking about business recovery if we are not going to predicate our activity on the proper premise. If, as abundant evidence would convince us, a very substantial element of this Nation's business is suffering through credit strangulation, then it should be our business to see what is wrong with our existing creditproviding agencies.

Mr. President, I take no joy in criticizing the bankers, and I hope a fair construction will be placed upon what I have to say about them. I really believe that the banks had a great deal to do with the building of this Nation. It is impossible to estimate the vast contributions that have been made to our national growth through the bankers, large and small. The banker loaned money for the creation, operation, and expansion of new business. He pumped the breath of life into small and struggling concerns because he had faith in his particular community and strong convictions respecting the future of that community. He was in the business of providing credit and capital and to provide a safe, profitable depository for his neighbor's savings. He had no other excuse for existence. That was his job, and he did it splendidly. He ran the banking business in a creditable manner. He made money for himself, and he earned respect for his profession. Now where is he today when we find small enterprise cramped for credit? Is he doing his job, or are the laws and rules and regulations, both of the Government and of his profession, impeding him in his natural inclination to extend credit and capital? Frankly, I do not know whether the banks are unwilling or whether they are unable to extend adequate credit and capital. But I do know this, and I think Senators will agree with me, that small business is still a sound risk. If it is not a sound risk, then no loan is sound.

Before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearings on my loan-insurance bill have appeared representatives of the banks and representatives of small business. They have not been in agreement with respect to the volume of unsatisfied credit demand on the part of small business.

Representatives of the Nation's bankers have appeared before the Senate committee and, without exception, asserted that private banks are today meeting every legitimate credit demand of legitimate business. These spokesmen for the banking profession denied that any sound small-business loans were being rejected. They declared that banking policies were being steadily liberalized, that adequate long-term loans at low interest rates were abundantly available and, indeed, that the banks were soliciting borrowers in an endeavor to extend loans to little business.

I pointed out to the committee at the time these gentlemen testified that, in my opinion, this evidence did not square with the fact that thousands of bank-rejected loan applications were being filed with existing lending institutions of the Federal Government.

I cited the exact up-to-date figures on the number of loan applications received by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Reserve banks, and the Farm Credit Administration.

I explained that these loans were considered unsound by private banks but that a large proportion of them were considered sound by the Government and that they are being repaid. In other words, these borrowers have turned out to be good risks, the judgment of the banks notwithstanding. This is concrete evidence—irrefutable evidence—that the banks, at present, cannot or are not taking care of all capital and credit demands of business and agriculture.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has recently completed a series of clinical studies of credit needs in various sections of the United States. These studies have offered convincing and conclusive proof that there is a real and growing need for easier credit. Mr. Jerome Frank, Chairman of the S. E. C., appeared before the Senate committee and publicly substantiated this conclusion and urged the enactment of legislation along the lines I am proposing.

The Department of Commerce and its Business Advisory Council have found similar conditions to exist. Four years ago that Department made a careful investigation of credit conditions throughout the Nation and submitted its findings in a report entitled "A Survey of Credit and Capital Difficulties Submitted by Small Manufacturers." The Department, in this report, revealed, through actual cases, the difficulties of small business concerns rated by Dun & Bradstreet as "good", and even as "high" in obtaining adequate credit and capital through local commercial banks.

The so-called Monopoly Committee, under the chairmanship of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], is currently conducting an investigation of big and little business problems. Before this committe have come a number of the Nation's leading experts and time and again evidence of the credit needs of small business has been emphasized.

Mr. President, in this connection let me explain to the Senate some of the salient points that were brought out by the committee headed by the Senator from Wyoming with regard to the credit needs of business and enterprise, and particularly the credit needs of small business.

The following is a brief summary of testimony adduced at the public hearings before the Temporary National Economic Committee on May 25 and May 26, 1939.

The first witness was Mr. Arthur D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, New York, N. Y. His testimony was a general coverage of small business, and begins on page 561. He said:

There are 1,680,000 business concerns with net worths of less than $100,000; 280,000 are between $10,000 and $100,000; 90,000 are between $100,000 are in excess of $500,000. The figures relate to commercial concerns only.

Mr. Whiteside said that 30 percent of all commercial units have an investment of $500 or less. Thirty-nine percent have between $500 and $10,000. Twenty-two percent have more than $10,000, and that group was stressed by the witness. Six and two-thirds percent have more than $75,000 and 2.5 percent more than $500,000.

He said that in 1934 there were 12,091 failures. In 1935 there were 12,244 failures, in 1936 there were 9,607, and in 1937, 9,490. The ratio of voluntary liquidation—without loss to creditors—to failures is 30 to 1, and of those that fail, not more than 10 percent swindle the creditors.

He further said that on a cross-sectional test, 25 percent of small concerns go out of business at or prior to the end of the second year. Forty-two percent have discontinued within 5 years. Sixty-three percent have discontinued within 10 years, 75 percent within 15 years, and 90 percent within 25 years. Five percent are left at the end of 50 years. The basic data for the foregoing are derived from a study of 6,026 concerns, half urban and half rural or semirural.

The worst years for failures according to available records was 1932.

The witness adverted to the lack of training or business qualifications on the part of many retailers, and to the inevitability of failures under certain conditions.

Mr. Whiteside further stated that moderate-sized concerns—between $25,000 and $750,000—are the stabilizers and the backbone of business. They are flexible and capable of rapid adjustment to changing conditions. On the "long swing" they will out-earn the larger units. They can operate on a smaller mark-up than big units. That condition does not prevail, however, where patents exist. The transition from small to moderate size is a matter of common sense and very hard work.

Seventy-five percent of the moderate-sized businesses, says Mr. Whiteside, are the outgrowth of the efforts of men who start with nothing to speak of. It is utterly impossible to expect to have a sound economy unless an individual can go into business with very little money, says Mr. Whiteside. On the other hand, it should not be made too easy to go into business, or too easy to stay in business. To do so handicaps the able and the efficient.

One example is the temptation to sell goods below cost for no reason other than the desire to buy goodwill. The result is demoralization in the trade affected, and unjustified destruction of the price structure. Such selling below cost is often the result of insufficient initial capital.

The witness suggested liberalization of restrictions on public offerings of securities so as to permit an offering up to $250,000 with perhaps a simple questionnaire return in place of a formal registration statement. He also suggested the advisability of permitting commercial banks to originate small security issues for ultimate resale to strangers, to the banks.

In conclusion, Mr. Whiteside emphasized the character factor or moral risk in bank loans, almost unheard of in our modern-day banking as it applies to little business.

We have the testimony of Mr. Norman E. Gallagher, a businessman from Detroit, Mich. This testimony, like the testimony of Mr. Whiteside, was given before the so-called Monopoly Committee. Mr. Gallagher says that the Detroit Waste Works, of Detroit, Mich., established in 1893, a manufacturer and renter of industrial shop towels, with 70 employees and assets of $142,000, reported the need of $15,000 to $20,000 additional working capital. The company has followed sound accounting practices, and during 1936 earned $12,000. In 1937 it earned $25,000. In 1938, after charging off $9,200 for depreciation, it showed a loss of $6,500. The profit for the 6 months ending March 31, 1939, was $6,100.

This very successful company, a small enterprise, was unable to obtain the money which it required after applying at five different banks, including the Federal Reserve bank, because in the opinion of the banks the company was not liquid enough in its quick assets. The company obtained a line of credit amounting to $6,000 from a local bank some years ago, which it ultimately repaid; but when an additional loan of $5,000 was requested, the bank agreed provided the following collateral was furnished—and this is commonplace in negotiating loans today:

Five thousand dollars of accounts receivable were to be pledged. A mortgage on clear property worth $15,000 was to be secured, and the personal note of the witness was to be given in the amount of $5,000.

Mr. President, the company needed only $6,000; and yet it was to be hamstrung in order that it might obtain the needed working capital. It would have found itself in worse condition after it obtained the capital than before the loan was approved. In other words, the company had to prove that it did not need any money before the loan application met with the approval of the banking authorities.

We have the testimony of Mr. Ernest J. Hopkins, an investigator for the Securities and Exchange Commission. In a survey of Fall River, Mass., he found that lack of buying power of consumers dominated everything in that area. That city was at one time one of the foremost centers of the cotton textile industry, but the industry has shrunk to a fraction of what it once was. The remaining fraction is somewhat stable, but wages are low, and as a result of the dislocation there is widespread unemployment. Local authorities and interests have made a determined campaign to bring in new industries, and to some extent have been successful, although most of the new businesses imported are small garment shops, and the wages are somewhat small. As a consequence the retail services and distribution businesses in the town are in bad shape.

A summary of 40 small concerns shows the following; and this, I think, is very suggestive of the need of long-term capital if we are to rehabilitate the devastated industrial areas:

They have cash amounting to $110,000; inventories amounting to $979,000; receivables amounting to $1,003,000; payables amounting to $1,382,000; loans from banks amounting to $149,000; and other loans—no doubt at higher rates—amounting to $322,000.

The relatively small size of the bank loans is due to the ultraconservative banking policy prevalent in the city of Fall River, Mass. The investigator explains that the majority of the liabilities are in payables. Sixty-five percent of the payables are credit advances from supply houses, which today have become the real bankers of small business. The disadvantages in this system are many. A measure of control detrimental to free enterprise is often exercised by these suppliers. On the other hand, lacking bank credit, the only other resort of the small-business man is to a high-interest lender—or loan shark, if you will—many of whom exist in and around Fall River, Mass.

Mr. President, we have the testimony of Mr. S. V. P. Quackenbush, given before the same committee. Mr. Quackenbush is a businessman from Scranton, Pa. His testimony is most convincing, because he represents and is, at the present time, the president of the Scranton Chamber of Commerce, a conservative organization, always hesitant to criticize the banking world and its activities in the field of credit.

Mr. Quackenbush says that his business is warehousing and leasing industrial space. He manages several business properties in Scranton and Philadelphia, and comes in contact with a great number of small-business men. As I said, at the present time he is the president of the Scranton Chamber of Commerce, and in this connection has many contacts with small business. He has been able to solve all his own economic problems, but has observed many others who are not so successful. In his opinion, credit needs as such are amply taken care of; and what is needed is capital, or venture money. However, as regards credit, it is his opinion that organized banking has eliminated local competition, and that money rates for local borrowers are too high, inasmuch as out-of-town borrowers-and this, Mr. President, is significant—may obtain money from the same banks at lower rates of interest. This cutthroat competition for adequate capital is strangling little business and destroying industrial

The concluding statement of this representative of the chamber of commerce with regard to venture money is that there is great difficulty in his neighborhood in raising sums from $10,000 to $25,000 or $100,000 in order to establish commercial and industrial developments which seem to have all the elements of a successful operation. As a specific example, he cited the case of a project to manufacture shaker chutes, which are extensively used in mining anthracite coal. These shaker chutes formerly came altogether from Germany, and are not available at the present time. Consequently, there would be not only a ready market but an insured future for an industry of that kind, especially if it were established in or near the city of Scranton.

Mr. Quackenbush says about $25,000 would be required to adapt an existing set-up to manufacture shaker chutes; but the witness—mind you, Mr. President, he is the president of the chamber of commerce—has been unable to find any one willing to advance the money.

Mr. President, in my judgment, that is a very serious indictment, reflecting its consequences not only on the banking world but on society's agent, the Government. We ought to pride ourselves on the fact that we believe there is opportunity in America for the development of an industrial system which will meet the recognized demands of every community, and permit the manufacture in our country of articles without which we know we cannot get along.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator of

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. MEAD. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. HILL. The Senator has spoken of the banking world. There was a most interesting editorial on July 13 last in the Birmingham (Ala.) News, which, among other things, had the following to say:

There is another extremely significant circumstance which must be borne in mind. It is that our pool of idle money has been growing rapidly. This fact can perhaps best be realized by reflecting on a few statistics. The banks, for example, are glutted with $4,300,000,000 of excess reserves. This in itself is a staggering fact. It becomes more staggering when we know that these excess reserves are 56 percent higher than they were a year ago. The significance of this increase in idle money becomes still more pointed when we know that it has taken place notwithstanding the fact that general business conditions are 33 percent better than they were a year ago, according to Business Week's index of business conditions, one of the most reliable of all indexes.

I invite the Senator's attention to that statement from the Birmingham News. We have the money, and there should be some way to get the money into the hands of men who have the vision and the courage and the ability to go forward with the development of our economic life and to provide employment for the thousands and millions of people who cannot today find work to do. Is not that true?

Mr. MEAD. That is exactly the situation, and I thank the able Senator from Alabama for his contribution. I will say to him that the excess cash reserves, the amount of which he correctly stated, would make possible a credit expansion of approximately $30,000,000,000, which is $9,000,000,000 more than the total of all the loans made by all the banks to business enterprises in America today.

In my judgment, the Senator has put his finger on the difficulty which business in America is experiencing. If that situation could be remedied, I believe that we would make a salutary contribution to the solution of the unemployment problem that afflicts the Nation today.

Mr. President, in support of the contention advanced by the able Senator from Alabama, let me say that an investigator of the Tennessee Valley Authority, investigating the credit needs in that section of the country, makes an observation which I will quote. The testimony is that offered by Mr. John P. Ferris, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, stationed at Knoxville, Tenn. In commenting on the industrial situation of the South he makes this statement:

On the debit side, however, there is to be noted that capital facilities are almost entirely lacking. The region has no direct access to a stock exchange. Furthermore, the fact that a great majority of the industries are absentee owned tends to hamper the region.

I have the testimony of another man, who represents a chamber of commerce, a very conservative organization, which is located in the city of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He goes on to relate before the so-called monopoly committee the difficulty experienced in that community by small enterprises eager to engage in manufacture and anxious to employ the unemployed.

Mr. Hicks testified that he is employed by the Wyoming Valley Chamber of Commerce at Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He is their industrial commissioner and is in charge of the industrial development fund.

Mr. President, strange as it may seem, this community, in a desire to attract industry, found it necessary to create an agency which would step in and augment the activities of the banks in order that there might be made available credit and capital for the industries seeking to initiate operations in that section of the country. Mr. Hicks explained that this is a fund subscribed locally and used in varying ways to bring new business enterprises into the community. Mr. Hicks has been actively engaged in this work and has been intimately associated with many established businesses there. He has had much experience with the capital problems of these small businesses and divides these problems into three types.

The first type is the problem of financing industrial real estate. It is becoming increasingly difficult, he says—in fact, it is virtually impossible—to raise money by mortgage on industrial real estate at the present time. He was able to cite several examples of this difficulty.

The second type, Mr. Hicks goes on to say, is the problem of financing machinery and equipment in the case of plants that wish to expand. Here the manufacturer is unable to borrow money with the machinery as collateral; the only way he can purchase new machinery is on the lease-purchase plan. The costs of this plan are high and tend to become prohibitive in highly competitive industries.

The third type, Mr. Hicks goes on to relate, of problem commonly met involves working capital. In many businesses it has been necessary to put all available funds into such assets as real estate, supplies, and machinery, and when they reach the stage that they need more working capital for working operations they are unable to get it at all or must get it by various methods, which involve very excessive costs. Then he goes on to relate that a business with fine possibilities for success, a business that recommended itself as one of the vital enterprises of the community, searched everywhere for money and found that ultimately the only recourse it had was to have the industrial fund, organized by this chamber of commerce, endorse its note in order that it might initiate operations and employ some of the community's unemployed.

Mr. President, we have the testimony of investigators for the Securities Exchange Commission, manufacturers from Detroit, Mich., businessmen from Seattle, Wash., executive officers from organizations in New York City and elsewhere, all relating, in indisputable language, the inadequacy of present credit facilities.

To prove, Mr. President, that I am not the only one who realizes the immensity of this problem, let me say that the Senate Banking and Currency Committee only recently approved a resolution providing for a quiz of its own into banking and financing practices. The committee, without particular reference to my bill, has determined, on its own volition, that something is wrong when bank deposits have reached an all-time high and idle money is flooding our banks, yet reasonable credit for long terms at fair interest rates is not available.

Let me point out to the Senate that no less an authority than Dr. Jacob Viner—and I quote from a new book entitled "The New Wall Street," by Rudolph L. Weissman—makes this observation:

The seventh Federal Reserve district-

And that district embraces the city of Chicago-

The seventh Federal Reserve district, selected as a sample area because it embraces a wide variety of industrial and business conditions, containing a large industrial and a large commercial city, was studied. The situation was thoroughly examined as to availability of bank credit to small and moderate-sized business concerns.

Among the important findings of that careful survey were:

1. That there existed a genuine unsatisfied demand for credit on the part of solvent borrowers, many of whom could have made economically sound use of working capital. 2. That the total amount of this unsatisfied demand for credit was considerably smaller than is popularly believed but—was large enough to be a significant factor in retarding business recovery.

There is the finding of an unbiased expert who came to the conclusion that lack of adequate credit is sufficiently serious, Mr. President, "to be a significant factor in the retarding of business recovery."

Now, as proof that there is a widespread demand for credit, and that banks today are not satisfying every legitimate demand of small business, I have just brought to the attention of the Senate the testimony before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, the resolution independently approved by that committee providing for its own investigation of banking practices, the findings of the clinical studies of the Securities Exchange Commission, the evidence brought before the Monopoly Committee, the studies of the Department of Commerce, and the findings of Dr. Viner, an expert on the subject. In addition to that, I may mention the fact that the Brookings Institution and the Junior Chamber of Commerce are also completing studies along the same lines.

Mr. President, I have introduced a bill which I believe will, at least in some degree, meet the credit demands of smaller enterprise; and I should like briefly to explain what the bill does. I desire to say, however, that it is not my intention to offer the bill as an amendment to the pending measure, because the bill authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to administer it, and for the reason that the former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in his recent observations before the Banking and Currency Committeeobservations which were in opposition to observations made as the result of a White House conference only a few days prior to that time-did not express enthusiasm for the bill. Therefore, in view of the fact that these continuing studies are being made and because we shall have more information on the subject in the next session, I shall forego pressing for the passage of my bill at this time, and shall urge its approval early in the next session of the Congress. In the meantime, however, I intend to offer a very minor amendment to the present Federal Reserve Act which will authorize the Federal Reserve banks to negotiate loans to smaller enterprises, and in doing so I have the approval of the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. I had the cooperation of members of the Board and officials of that body in drafting the amendment; and, in my judgment, its administration will give to the Senate ample opportunity to study the needs for further legislation of this character.

I should like, however, to state very briefly for the RECORD what my bill aims to do.

It proposes that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with its wide experience in the field of finance, shall be authorized to insure business loans made by private banks, provided the private banks bear the first losses on such loans up to not less than 10 percent of the amount of the loans outstanding at the time of their default. For such insurance the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to exact moderate premium charges, flexibly adjusted according to the nature of the loans and the character of the risks involved. To be eligible for insurance, the loans to one borrower must not aggregate more than $1,000,000, since the larger capital loans should be capable of placement privately, or through public issues distributed through the customary investment banking channels. To be qualified for insurance, the loans must bear interest at a rate not in excess of 4 percent per annum, exclusive of the insurance premium and a moderate service charge. Although the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is given some discretion in adjusting the maximum interest rate upward or downward on stated conditions, insured loans are made eligible for rediscount with the Federal Reserve banks for the full amount of the insurance, and the Reserve banks are empowered to buy and sell the notes and other obligations evidencing the insured loans. The lending banks should also be in a position to find a ready market for the insured notes from private investors. In short, my bill seeks to make intermediate and long-term loans available to small-business men at 4-percent interest, exclusive of a modest insurance premium and a moderate service charge.

Mr. President, a great deal of talk has taken place on this floor with regard to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its activities. Very little has been said about the Federal Reserve Board and its activities in like circumstances, but we find from a review of the record that while we have every reason to be proud of the achievements of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, its mighty contribution to the banks and the railroads and other giant activities in America, its help—somewhat inadequate—to sound and solvent small enterprise, we likewise have reason to be proud of the activities of the Federal Reserve banks, and I desire to pay tribute to the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], whose vision and foresight and leadership aided immensely in bringing into being this modern system of regulation and of finance.

I desire to say in that connection, Mr. President, that my amendment to the Federal Reserve Act follows the philosophy contained in the amendment which permitted the Federal Reserve banks to make loans to enterprise, and I know, therefore, that able Senators, realizing that the amendment I offer squares with the amendment originally sponsored by the senior Senator from Virginia, will take time to give it their study and their consideration.

In comparing the record of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with the record of the Federal Reserve banks, we find that in its 7 or so years of existence the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has actually disbursed in cash only $168,000,000. Of this amount, $52,000,000 has already been repaid, so that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation now has $116,000,000 in loans outstanding. Of this amount, the former Chairman of the Board states that $12,000,000 of loans are now under active foreclosure, and he states, as I quoted a while ago, "I would hate to state what the losses are going to be," although in a letter to the President of the United States he took considerable pride in explaining to the President that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would show a profit on its gross enterprises.

Now let us look at the record so far as the Federal Reserve banks are concerned.

The Federal Reserve banks, under the restricted authority given to them through the amendment sponsored by the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], have since 1934 actually disbursed $125,000,000. Of this amount, only $25,000,000 are now outstanding. Losses actually written off have amounted to only $160,000—an almost incredibly small amount. Of course, they have had to take some collateral in cases where loans went bad, but the losses have been very small. This shows that the R. F. C. has actually disbursed a relatively small amount of money, in spite of the contention often made that the R. F. C. is making every good loan that has been requested. It also shows that the R. F. C. is having losses in some considerable amounts, especially when compared with the activities of the Federal Reserve banks. On the other hand, the Federal Reserve banks have loaned a considerable amount of money, in view of their limited authority, and have shown fine earnings and relatively light losses. This shows that the Federal Reserve banks are efficient, and that the handling of loans through the local Federal Reserve member banks is a preferable medium. Not only is it preferable but it is highly efficient, and it does not necessitate a long-distance handling from a Government agency in Washington.

Mr. President, I believe that we could accept an amendment to the pending measure which would expand the authority of the Federal Reserve Board and which would actually permit them not only to lend money as they have been doing in the past, under section 13B, adopted in 1934, for working capital loans to enterprise, but which would permit them, if necessary, to extend long-term credit to smaller as well as to larger enterprise, and to make commitments to member banks on such type of loans. My amendment would permit of the use of the balance of the money earmarked in the Treasury to the Federal Reserve bank, a sum originally approximating a hundred and thirty-nine million dollars, which was put up by the Federal Reserve System to meet their contribution in initiating the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. That money is their money, only about $27,000,000 of it has been used, and if we would, by the adoption of the amendment which I will offer-an amendment approved by the Chairman of the Board, an amendment which would not entail the appropriation of an additional dollar-if we would by the adoption of this amendment make possible short-term or long-term loans to smaller as well as to larger enterprise, we would, as a result of its operation and administration, be in a better position to determine not only the volume of the demand but the possibilities of effecting a permanent system which would meet the conditions which arise in this developing industrial and financial world, where little business has been left quarantined on an island where credit and capital are unavailable.

Mr. President, some observations have been published to the effect that the bill which I introduced, and which is pending before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, is opposed by the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. That is not true. I have here a release given to the press at the White House a few days ago by the former Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in which this thought is expressed:

The President expressed the hope that the R. F. C. under existing law might take steps to put into effect the substance of the Mead scheme for the insurance of bank loans to small business. Mr. Schram (present chairman of the R. F. C.) agreed that this should be possible with the aid of a few clarifying amendments to section 5 (d) of the R. F. C. Act.

That is what my amendment to the R. F. C. Act proposes to do.

Mr. Schram agreed that this should be possible with the aid of a few clarifying amendments to section 5 (d) of the R. F. C. Act, which both Senator Wagner and Senator Mean thought could be enacted at this session without much controversy.

So I say that the Chairman of the R. F. C. is in favor of the amendment which I have offered, which, if enacted, would give the Reconstruction Finance Corporation opportunity to initiate a system of insured loans, but which I will not press, because of the confusion which resulted from a statement made before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee by the former Chairman of the R. F. C.

I will, however, press for the adoption of an amendment which will give the Federal Reserve Board authority to initiate this system of insured loans. I will press for its adoption because it carries with it the approval and support of the Chairman of that agency, and for the further reason that it was prepared to a great degree by that agency, and because it follows the philosophy of the present law, which in itself is an amendment offered by the distinguished senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass].

Mr. President, before the debate is over, before the conclusion of the consideration of the pending bill, I shall offer that amendment for the consideration of the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Chavez in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. MEAD. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. In keeping with some remarks the Senator has just made, and in keeping with the letter read from the head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, did the able Senator from New York receive any encouragement from the head of the Federal Reserve Board regarding his proposal as to loans to small business?

Mr. MEAD. The head of the Federal Reserve Board expressed his approval of an amendment which will permit loans to small business through the Federal Reserve System. That amendment is at the desk, and it will be pressed a little later in the debate on the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Is the Senator entirely correct that it was a letter, or was it a statement from the head of the Federal Reserve as distinguished from the head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. MEAD. It was an oral statement to me by the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board that he favored the amendment which I have at the desk authorizing the Federal Reserve System to initiate this plan of loans and commitments to banks on loans to small as well as to large enterprises. The Chairman of the Federal Reserve System did not recommend the amendment which I have offered, which would authorize the R. F. C. to initiate a system of insured loans to little business. However, the present Chairman of the R. F. C. endorsed that amendment, but the former Chairman left the impression before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that he did not, although I maintain, as a result of the news release given out after our conference at the White House a few days ago, that it is in keeping with his general ideas in the matter.

Mr. McCARRAN. If I may interrupt the Senator a little further, I have no doubt, as the result of my acquaintance with the present head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. Schram, that he is very sympathetic with the Senator's move, sympathetic with loans to small business, but I have grave doubt, based on my reading and experience and investigation, as to the present head of the Federal Reserve Board having any sympathy whatever with the movement sponsored by the able Senator from New York.

Mr. MEAD. From my experience, it is my opinion that the present head of the Federal Reserve Board is anxious to see the Senate Banking and Currency Committee consider a plan for the creation of a corporation within the system which will handle industrial loans of the character contemplated by the legislation which I am presenting.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I trust that the Senator from New York realizes that we have now in the R. F. C. a corporation capable entirely of handling such loans, if they are only given permission by the Congress, which, in my judgment, they have been given in the past; but I do not believe, based on my experience, that the Federal Reserve organization, and especially the present head of it, has any sympathy whatever with loans to small business.

Mr. MEAD. I believe that the head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is an able, sincere, energetic public official, and that the present Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board is likewise intensely concerned with the effective and efficient operation of the System over which he presides, and it is my hope that both these leaders of executive agencies will devote a great deal of their time and give freely of their sympathetic support to the legislative objective contained in the bill, as well as contained in the amendment which I am sponsoring.

Mr. President, I have here a report from one of our banks which is indicative of the condition of all the banks in the country. It is not an extraordinary or extreme illustration of the point I wish to make, but it is a conservative statement of the situation to be found in many banks throughout the country.

I have here a statement of conditions at the close of business on December 31, 1938, and I shall withhold the name of the bank for obvious reasons. That bank has loans of $5,000,000 and has deposits of $11,000,000. It has approximately $3,500,000 in idle cash on hand, cash which is not working, cash which belongs to the depositors, cash which ought to be making at least 4 percent.

I have here, Mr. President, one of thousands of letters which I have received from all over the United States—from every State in the Union, from thousands of communities in the United States. I have not only one letter, but here I have the entire file of a businessman, setting forth his plight, showing his inability to secure adequate capital in order to conduct his business. He is a man of excellent reputation. His industry has an honorable earning record. After exhausting all his efforts, visting many banks, he received this trite comment concluding his negotiations, telling him not to bother to pursue them any further; that loans of the character in which he is interested are impossible. This letter is signed by the assistant to the president of an oldestablished bank in my State. This is the last of a long series of letters received by a company, as I said, which has a good earning record, a company which is long established, which years ago had no trouble in negotiating loans of this character. Here is the answer which stopped them in their tracks:

We refer to your letter of June the 29th, and wish to advise that we are not interested in making any long-term loans.

Very truly yours.

Mr. President, I have a trunkful of similar letters.

I have here a chart prepared by Dun & Bradstreet which I exhibit in order to fortify the statements I have made. The chart and the statistics contained in it prove conclusively that small business in the United States is not only blighted so far as its present situation is concerned, but it has a black future before it, unless something is done to remedy and rectify present conditions.

The chart gives a list of the failures in May 1939, as compared with the failures in May 1938. Of concerns whose assets are under $5,000 there were 514 failures in May of 1939 and only 418 in May of 1938. So, as I said before, failures are growing more acute as business recovery increases.

The failures of concerns having from $25,000 to $100,000 capital were 111 in 1939. They were 135 in 1938.

The failure of those enterprises whose capital ranged from $100,000 to a million dollars were 35 in May 1938 and only 20 in May 1939.

The failures of those companies listed as having assets of a million dollars and over were 3 in 1939, and there were none in 1938.

So, as we see by the chart, the capital and credit facilities of little business are rapidly approaching the vanishing point. The day is not far distant when utter and complete demoralization will encompass little business everywhere and communities, endless in number, having only little business on which to rely for their stability, security, and employment, will become ghost towns in America unless we act.

Mr. President, the modern system of judging as to whether or not a loan is sound runs something like this. The individual appears at the bank for an interview with the president. He desires a long-term loan in order that he might expand his facilities, in order that he might modernize his plant, in order that he might install machinery, in order that he might be able to operate efficiently instead of operating as he has to today, on a hand-to-mouth system. The banker will invariably look over his balance sheet. He will then determine that after the loan is negotiated this man, the spark plug of this small industry, might die the next day. The worst possible eventualities are considered; and if death takes place, and we may assume that it will, the loan may never be paid. After that, Mr. President, the plant is theoretically junked to determine what its resale, under those unfavorable conditions, might bring. Then, Mr. President, if the applicant is willing to tie up every conceivable asset, and more, his loan may or may not-if it is for intermediate or long-term credit-receive approval.

Mr. President, whether it is because of the regulations of Federal and State agencies, or the fact that America is mature and the possibilities of expanding communities have given way to the realities of blighted areas—whether it is the coming of industrial monopoly or the menace of the chain store—whatever is the reason, the banker is very careful, exceedingly so, when it comes to the approval of a long-term loan. Fortunately or otherwise, the same orthodox methods have been adopted by agencies of the Government, and therefore I believe that I can say that, almost without exception, small local enterprises, with no connection with the larger banking institutions of the courty, are devoid of the capital and credit requirements necessary nection with the larger banking institutions of the country, tition.

My bill, in my judgment, approaches the answer to this problem. It will encourage the proper sort of business loan the banks must make if little business is to survive.

The philosophy contained in my proposed legislation will work, because by spreading the risk of loss as will result in the establishment of this insured-loan policy, limiting the banker's risk of loss, and that should be done, by limiting the banker's risk of loss it will make possible more liberal lending for business purposes at reasonable interest rates, and by limiting the banker's risk of loss it will make possible the rediscounting of business loans with the Federal Reserve, thereby insuring the banker of a high degree of liquidity to make possible the need for his business requirements.

Mr. President, the amendment I have sent to the desk is an amendment requested, if I may say so, by the head of the agency which will administer it. It is an amendment which will not require or authorize the expenditure of an additional dollar. It is an amendment which will give opportunity to the Congress and to the committees of the Congress to observe and study in its administration the needs of business. The amendment extends the authority of the Federal Reserve Board, authorizing that Board under the limitations of the amendment, to negotiate business and industrial loans within the limitations of the small sum of money earmarked to them in the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. President, I trust that this amendment will receive the approval of the Senate, that it will become part of the lending bill, and that through it small business located all over America, in rural America and in urban America, in our growing communities and in our blighted areas, will be given the consideration and the opportunity which little business, in my judgment, merits from the lawmakers of the

Mr. ASUTIN obtained the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. AUSTIN. Is the Senator about to address the Senate?

Mr. McCARRAN. I merely wish to make one expression pertinent to the able speech which has just been delivered by the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I am very grateful to the Senator from Vermont.

I wish to say that to the principle of the amendment offered by the Senator from New York I adhere. I shall support his amendment to the extent of my power. However, I believe that the whole machinery of his amendment should be transferred to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, because I do not believe there is any response to the pulse beat of humanity in the Federal Reserve organization as it is now set up. However, if the Senator from New York thinks his amendment will afford relief to the lowly and the humble in this country who are trying to conduct honest and legitimate business, and who should have the support and encouragement of their Government, I am entirely content to go along with the able junior Senator from New York, and I shall support his amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his suggestion for a moment?

Mr. AUSTIN. Certainly.

Mr. MEAD. I am informed by the clerk that my amendment is not at the desk, so I offer the amendment, which I have just discussed, send it to the desk, and ask that it remain there for consideration later in the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New York will lie on the table.

Mr. MEAD. Agreeably to the observation made by the able Senator who has just relinquished the floor [Mr. McCarran], I shall offer for the consideration of the Senate an amendment which would authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to small business.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am very happy that the junior Senator from New York has acceded to my suggestion. I think his action will result in very much wider latitude and more sympathetic consideration for small business.

Mr. MEAD. The appeal of the Senator prompted my presentation of the amendment, which I had not originally intended to offer.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] to the request which I am about to make. The Banking and Currency Committee has ordered reported two nominations, one of Mr. Leo T. Crowley for reappointment as a member of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the other of Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, a former Senator, for reappointment as a member of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Both these nominations have on a prior occasion been unanimously reported and unanimously confirmed by the Senate. I am about to present the report from the Committee on Banking and Currency, as in executive session, and ask unanimous consent that the nominations be considered at

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAVEZ in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may I inquire of the Senator from New York if there is some special emergency?

Mr. WAGNER. There is no emergency. However, in view of the fact that heretofore the nominations of these gentlemen have been considered and confirmed by the Senate, and in view of the fact that they are well known, I thought perhaps we could dispose of the nominations today. If the Senator desires that they go on the Executive Calendar, I shall withdraw my request.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the Senator from New York must know how willing I would be personally to have the nominations confirmed immediately. However, we experienced a little difficulty not long ago by allowing unanimous consent to take up executive business out of order. I think it is better practice to let such matters go until executive session.

Mr. WAGNER. Very well. I submit the reports.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports of the committee will be received, and the nominations will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 5407. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory and supplementary thereto; and

H. R. 6984. An act to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to make some remarks. I do not care for the calling of a quorum.

I hope what I shall have to say will have some bearing on the pending bill. However, it will be devoted very largely to one phase of the bill. Let me say at the outset that I am not so much concerned with losses or gains by Federal corporations which have been created or used by the Government during a period of emergency for the purpose of providing relief or work relief, or in an effort to stimulate the recovery of business. I do not think it is a matter of very great consequence whether the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other corporation has made money or has some losses. I would anticipate losses, of course. In the course of events it would be but natural to anticipate losses through a Federal agency set up for any one of the purposes or all the purposes to which I have referred.

I cannot say that I am not disturbed by the size of the national debt, because I think any sane man must be disturbed by the size of the national debt. However, in my way of looking at it, Mr. President, the matter of utmost importance is not the loss or gain by the Federal agencies, resulting from Federal activities for the purpose of relieving the unemployed, stimulating industry and private enterprise, or the distressing and disturbing size of the national debt.

The real point of importance is whether we are going in the right direction or whether we are deliberately headed in the wrong direction. Since 1933, at least, we have been traveling in one direction. We entered upon our course before 1933, but in a limited way; and we have constantly kept the course since 1933.

What has happened? Has unemployment been reduced? Let us say that it has been reduced. It has not been materially or substantially reduced; but let us concede that there there has been a reduction in unemployment. Let us concede that great relief has been given to suffering and distressed persons. Let us concede that during the period of actual emergency the present course of the Government resulted in much good. I think that is about all anyone can claim. I do not think any one can claim that the course which has been pursued has solved our problems. I do not think anyone can for a moment contend that we have solved the problem of unemployment, the problem of agriculture, or the problem of general business. In fact, Mr. President, I know that those problems remain unsolved.

Yet we are now invited to follow the same course. We are not at all dismayed because the national debt has increased to more than $40,000,000,000. We are not at all dismayed because the carrying charges, the interest upon the national debt, will next year amount to more than $1,000,000,-000. We are not at all disturbed because, through the various corporations and lending agencies of the Government, we now have outstanding a secondary debt of more than five and a half billion dollars in addition to the fixed national debt of which the Treasury itself takes cognizance. These things make no impression on us. We are now asked to proceed along the same line, to follow identically the same course, and to increase our national obligation. Not only that, Mr. President, but we have come to the sorry plight of concealing the true character of the national obligation by taking a circuitous route around the Treasury itself in order that the obligation may not show as a national liability!

The bill before the Senate is a fraud, a palpable fraud, on its face, because it must result in an increase in the national debt without letting it show that an increased burden is to be imposed on the Treasury of the United States. To my way of thinking, Mr. President, it not only is a legal fraud but it is a moral fraud; it is a moral fraud on the American people; it has in it every element of moral fraud. We are to issue bonds and we are to sell those bonds. We are to take the money and place the money in various spending agencies of the Government, just as we would an appropriation if the appropriation had been authorized by Congress.

Oh, but we are going to "make loans." Granted that we are going to "make loans," granted that the loans will be repaid in large part—it is a very credulous person who believes that they will be repaid in large part, but concede that they will be repaid in large part—what are we doing? We are adding to the five and a half billion dollars-plus of money already borrowed, back of which stands the credit of the Government of the United States, some $3,000,000,-000—and probably before the bill gets through the amount may be $4,000,000,000; no one can tell as to that—but some $3,000,000,000 more of secondary debt, secondary liability of the Government, on top of the more than $40,000,000,000 of direct obligations, on top of the national debt, which by the end of the next fiscal year will be $45,000,000,000.

Let us assume that these are loans and that they will be repaid; let us assume that they will do some good; let us assume that they will take up some of the unemployment; let us assume that they will furnish some work for those who need work and that they will temporarily, at least, stimulate business and industry and enterprise; let us assume all those things, Mr. President, and then where are we getting; what are we accomplishing?

Has this course led us anywhere as yet? Has it solved any problems? Have the problems of the farmer been solved?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. GEORGE. No; Mr. President, I do not want a quorum.

Mr. ADAMS. I really think the Senator should have a quorum called.

Mr. GEORGE. I beg the Senator not to ask me to yield for that purpose.

Mr. ADAMS. Very well.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, have the problems of the miner been solved? Have the problems of the little-business man been solved? Not if the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. Mead] is even partially correct in the address which he has just delivered to the Senate. Have business conditions greatly improved? Is there substantial improvement due to the policy of the Government in spending money, whether it be spent out of the Treasury or whether it be borrowed and then spent?

I have conceded that the expenditure of Federal money has produced much good; it has met many pressing problems; but has it solved the problems facing the country? That is the real question. I think we might as well dismiss from our minds whether governmental lending agencies have lost money in the past or will lose money in the future, whether or not the debt, staggering as it now is, will grow into more staggering proportions, as it will, and consider the question whether we are going in the right direction.

I know there are strange new doctrines in this country, Mr. President, and one of them is that a deficit is a blessing. That doctrine is contrary to all past teaching. It does not square with good morals. It does not have a single element of common sense in it. But I understand that we live in a new day, and, therefore, a deficit is a blessing; that if we borrowed sufficient money, we would increase the national income, and, ultimately and without altering the tax structure, the revenues, would be so increased that we would be able to take care of the deficit. That is one of the most consoling doctrines that was ever devised-I was about to say, Mr. President, in the empty heads of visionaries and dreamers. Certainly there is nothing practical in the judgment of any man who reaches any such conclusion as that, for if that conclusion be sound, all the problems of this Nation and every other would be solved simply by following it.

Then we are told that we are not spending but we are investing. Investing in what? Investing in nonrealizable assets; investing in things that will not pay the debt. Can a post-office building, can highways, the superhighways which it is proposed to construct under this bill, liquidate the debt? Every businessman knows, every man with common experience knows, that an asset is something that is in form to meet obligations outstanding against it or that may be converted into such form as to take care of those obligations. We are not lending; oh, no; we are "investing." It is not, however, an investment according to any rule of reason; it is not an investment according to any criterion that has been devised. It is a nonrealizable asset, if it is an asset at all. It cannot be drawn on to help pay the national debt. Let no taxpayer be deceived by such a contention. The national debt, if it shall ever be paid; the public obligations, if they shall ever be met, will be met out of the pockets of the tax-payers, and not out of these assets in which it is now proposed that we invest.

Then there is another new, strange doctrine—that we owe this money to ourselves! At the base of that doctrine is the suggestion that we may repudiate the debt. Mr. President, when the Nation reaches that point, it is doomed. "Owe it to ourselves"!

Then the distinguished leader, for whom I have great respect, in offering this bill, which is the epitome of all these false and utterly unsound theories, said that the aggregate of the debt in the United States was not greater now or not out of proportion to the aggregate of debt, public and private, in 1932. Is that relevant at all as an argument? Is there any merit whatsoever in the suggestion? Oh, I know very well that it comes from high places; but suppose the public debt and private debts do aggregate today something like the aggregate in 1932—what is the situation? What is the business situation? So greatly increased has been the national debt, so greatly has the national income been circumscribed, that whereas 12 percent of the national income in 1932 took care of the carrying charges on the debt, now it takes more than 23 percent to do it. Is that leading us out of the woods? On the contrary, it is leading us down into the abyss.

Nations, Mr. President, in this post-war period have escaped from their difficulties through some sort of receivership; they have liquidated. We may continue on our present course; but if we do, while we may not liquidate immediately, eventually we will have to do it.

Granted that all the expenditures of money have served some useful human purpose, granted that all the borrowing and spending have promoted some private enterprise, temporarily at least, granted all that has been claimed for the program, are we out of the woods or are we moving out? How many unemployed have we? What is the farm income from produce made on the farm? I do not mean income coming out of the Treasury to the farmers. That is not the answer. Anybody could have answered the problem in that way. What is the condition of the miners, the merchants, the bankers, the businessmen? What is the condition in every line of industry in the United States? I do not mean what are they getting out of the Government by way of subsidies, by way of grants, by way of gifts, but I mean what are they getting out in the way of assets that mean an increase of the national income and of the national wealth?

Mr. President, taxes themselves are but an indirect method of spending. Every dollar levied for tax purposes, every dollar raised as revenue through taxation in any form is spent. It is not capitalized; it does not come back; it is not the basis of any future transaction.

Mr. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, devised the comforting theory that what we borrow and spend might be capitalized; and now, Mr. President, I am coming to that.

Last night the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend] read into the Record a statement by Mr. Berle, a high official of the Government, definitely saying that the United States Government had taken over many of the productive enterprises in whole or in part, and that ultimately it would take them all over. It will if we capitalize our Federal spending. There we are. On the one hand, payment of taxes, expenditure of moneys raised from taxation, the expenditure of Federal money for current expenses, is not capitalized. It cannot be used over again. It is true that it goes back into the channels of trade and commerce, but so far as the Government is concerned it is a one-way street. It is a one-time transaction. Very well. On the other hand, if the money we borrow is to be capitalized, what are we doing? We are establishing state socialism. When we establish state socialism, what is the answer? Private enterprise must die

What have we already done in this Nation? Build a ship, Mr. President. Go into any shipyard in the country and build a ship. Not a single ship of substantial tonnage can be constructed today in any American yard unless it is done entirely by Government money, or largely by Government loans.

Go into the insurance field and see how far Government has taken charge of the insurance field, not only under the social-security system—which, of course, has its strong points, its great advantages—but in various other ways the Government is entering and controlling all activities within this field. The Secretary of Agriculture, to whom we propose to give $600,000,000, is setting up his own insurance, not on crops, not insurance on the wheat crop or the coton crop, but setting it up on stored commodities. What does that mean? It means that the private insurance companies, the private enterprises, the capital system, are doomed in that field.

Agriculture, the production of the soil, is justly admitted by all real economists to be the basis of our wealth. What has happened to agriculture in the United States? On the one hand we have restricted the production of real wealth, cut down the quantity of corn and of cotton and of all the products of the farm, and have enabled the farmer to live by giving him subsidies and grants out of the Federal Treasury. Today, when Mr. Wallace speaks anywhere in the Cotton Belt—and, so far as I know, in the Corn or the Wheat Belt—he will have a large audience of men who are under Mr. Wallace. I do not say that they are drawing a per diem while they are listening to Mr. Wallace's speeches, but I am inclined to think it is worth a per diem for them to go and listen to his speeches. [Laughter.]

What else has happened? Mr. Wallace has his own pet theories about a normal granary. He has his own pet theories about getting rid of a surplus of wheat and getting rid of a surplus of cotton and getting rid of a surplus of this, that, and the other product of the farm. Too much money in the hands of Federal agencies has been a curse to America, not a blessing. What have we done? On the one hand we have spent immense sums of money out of the Federal Treasury to restrict the actual production of wealth in wheat and in cotton, and on the other hand the Secretary of Agriculture now is spending immense sums of money to export our surplus of wheat and of cotton and of other products; and what is he doing? I do not care anything about his theories. I do not care anything about anybody's theories. What is he doing? When he pays a subsidy to export cotton to the world market, he drives down the world price of cotton. He drives it down until it practically offsets the subsidy he pays the American farmer out of the Treasury of the United States.

I am not complaining about the sudsidy. I am not complaining at all about any legitimate means and method of meeting the necessities of the farmer. He has to receive a subsidy. He cannot live on what he is making. There is perhaps not a wheat farmer anywhere who can live on what he is making out of his wheat. There are but few, if any, cotton farmers who can live on what they are getting out of their cotton produced and sold. They are living on the subsidy. They are living on what we must pay them. They cannot be blamed at all about it. We have asked them to restrict; we have compelled them to reduce; we have controlled them and regulated them; and, of course, we must see that they do not suffer. We must save them from bank-ruptcy if we can; but are we solving the problem? Are we solving it?

Why, today, at 1 minute past 12 a. m., Mr. Wallace's cotton subsidy went into effect. What does he propose to do? He proposes to pay to the foreign purchaser of cotton 1½ cents per pound for every pound of American cotton he will buy. That means \$7.50 per bale. Mr. Wallace has said that he hopes to export 6,000,000 bales. That means \$45,000,000 out of the Federal Treasury, paid to whom? Paid to the foreign purchaser of the cotton; paid to the foreign spinner, who, in turn, may spin the cotton into textiles, into cloth, and furnish it to foreign buyers. I am not complaining about that. But what is Mr. Wallace doing? He is driving down the world price of cotton. Cotton is a world commodity, and the world price practically controls when we abandon artificial efforts to control it. He is driving down the world price of cotton a cent and a half. We may reason about it as we please, but that is where it will end. If the subsidy is a cent and a half per pound, and we are going to sell cotton all over the world at $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound below the world price, paying the difference in cash to the buyer, naturally we are going to drive down the world market. This year the subsidy that we will pay the Georgia and the Texas cotton farmer is 1.6, \$8.06 per bale, \$7.50 per bale paid to the spinner in Manchester, England, about offsets the subsidy to our farmers by the lower world price.

But it is said, "We have put on a loan. We are going to stop the American market from going down." That is a beautiful device to deceive unthinking persons; but, after all, the cotton farmer is interested in a price for his cotton. His industry is not in a sound condition when his price is not a living price, is not a profitable price.

We are going to fix a loan on American cotton and hold it above the world price. Then what happens? Let us inquire a moment as to what is going to happen in the case of jute. In the cotton-growing areas of the country we talk about jute. We have justly complained and repeatedly complained about the competition from jute, competition which the cotton producers suffered. What is the situation? If a loan of 8.6 cents, a little above 81/2 cents, is put on cotton for this year, the world market will be driven down a cent and a half by the subsidy to the foreign buyer, and the disparity between the world price and the American price will be widened and substitutes will flow into the domestic market. What is to be done about it? Can substitutes be embargoed? Not at all. Can tariffs be put on them? Not at all. Some tariffs can be put on cotton, an embargo may be put on cotton, we can prevent the reimportation of cotton and cotton goods, and can raise an embargo against a friendly South American Republic like Brazil. All that can be done, but under existing law the tariff on jute cannot be increased.

Not only that, Mr. President, but under the trade agreement between the United States and the British Empire, the United Kingdom, jute cannot be taxed except as now taxed for 3 years; the tariff cannot be increased; we cannot get any protection. We stand helpless while the importations and production of rayon increase and the importations of jute increase, jute cloths come into the country in a constantly increasing stream. The higher we peg artificially the home price for cotton, the more importations of every known substitute, natural and synthetic, will increase; and what will be the result? The result will be the destruction of the Ameri-

Mr. Wallace says that he proposes to increase our exports of cotton possibly to 6,000,000 bales for 1939 and 1940. Suppose he does. What has been the average export of cotton? For 10 years, including 5 years of Mr. Wallace's administration, the average export of American cotton has been seven and a half million bales. For the 10-year period up to the fiscal year which has just closed, averaging them all, the exports have run seven and a half million bales. Even if Mr. Wallace gets the exports back to 6,000,000, they will still be a million and a half bales under what they were on the average.

He says we have helped the price. Helped it? Helped it based upon the intrinsic value of the product, the only basis upon which agriculture can ever survive in this or any other country, or helped it by getting money out of the Treasury, helped it by drawing money out of the Treasury and assisting those of us who grow cotton to live, to subsist, to pay our taxes; actually, Mr. President, to go along somehow.

We have exported more than eight and three-quarter million bales of cotton in 1 year. For 10 years, up until the beginning of the last fiscal year, the average export was seven and a half million bales. Mr. Wallace hopes to export 6,000,000 bales, at a cost of $45,000,000 out of the Treasury of the United States.

What nonsense! The whole program is one based upon economic illiteracy. He is going to recover that much of our lost ground; but how? By still restricting our production in the United States, still cutting down our acres. We passed a bill a few days ago allowing him to cut the acres to ten million. He could not cut the acreage below twelve million until a few days ago. But he wants to cut still deeper.

Never, never can we regain our foreign markets by any manner of device unless we do it through increased production of our product at a decreased cost in producing it, if other countries and other producers are producing at a lower cost. We can cut down our acreage and restrict our production as much as we please, but we will not get back our markets.

Of course, we can pay the foreign purchaser to take the American cotton, and if we pay him enough he will take what we offer him up to the limit of his capacity. I dare say that the Secretary's program will not result, during the fiscal year beginning July 31, in any substantial or material increase in exports of raw cotton over what would have been exported in any event.

It is true that we exported only 3,400,000 bales last year, considerably less than half of the 10-year average. That was the lowest figure for exports of cotton from America in some 60 years. Naturally the exports will be increased barring the complete stoppage of international trade and commerce by war; naturally they will be increased. They will also be increased, because American stocks of cotton in Europe, in the great spinning countries, have been very largely depleted. So we would export the present crop, in any event, if we let that crop go on to the market at the world price, without the expenditure of seven and a half dollars a bale out of the Federal Treasury to make it move. In all human probability we will export from five to six million bales of cotton during the present crop year; that is, until August 1940. We would do so without any export subsidy.

Mr. President, let us take a practical look at the situation from the other side for just a moment. A few weeks ago we engaged in a barter transaction with Great Britain. Most of our trades nowadays are inspired somehow or other by our English brethren. And I am of English extraction. My natural sympathies are with the English. But we engaged just a little while ago in a barter arrangement with Great Britain. We had as an excuse for that bartering arrangement only one possible fact; we had a great deal of cotton which we had accumulated under a loan which was above the world market and which artificially pegged the price, and therefore the cotton slipped into the loan. We had a whole year's crop in the loan. We had a whole year's crop under a farm program which was intended to solve the agricultural problem, and which solved it by putting a whole year's crop into the loan. But we had a bartering arrangement. No one opposed it; and what happened? We bartered 600,-000 bales of cotton for so many pounds of rubber. What did we get for the cotton? We received about 834 cents a pound—roughly, 8% cents a pound. That is the cost of producing cotton; that is the minimum cost of producing cotton. That is not the highest cost of producing cotton.

What did we give for the rubber? We gave about 17 cents a pound, buying it through a cartel; it is a cartel-controlled product.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. In a moment. We gave about 17 cents a pound for the rubber. What does it cost to produce it? All the economists say that it costs about 6 cents a pound to produce rubber. We pretty nearly lost our shirt in that transaction. In the barter we gave cotton which cost us to produce more than we got for it for rubber which cost our British friends about 6 cents a pound to produce, according to my information.

Not only that, but our British friends were shrewd enough to have written into the agreement a promise that we would pay the subsidy of $7.50 a bale if the Secretary of Agriculture subsequently fixed an export subsidy on cotton at a cent and a half a pound. What does that mean? It means that now, after having closed the trade with Great Britain for her rubber, for which we paid 17 cents, and which cost, let us say, 6 cents a pound, cotton which cost us every cent we got out of it. Now we must pay to Great Britain also $7.50 a bale on the 600,000 bales of cotton. Senators can figure it out for themselves. It means four and a half million dollars on a closed transaction.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. GEORGE. I yield. Mr. LUNDEEN. I have been listening with great attention to the able Senator, and I should like, if he will permit, to make merely one statement. It seems to me that the value of that rubber should have been applied on the war debt. I am not asking for an expression from the Senator on that point, but it seems that way to me.

Mr. GEORGE. I agree with the Senator, but we could not have sold it on that basis.

Let us go a little further with this barter transaction. We are now to pay an additional sum or an additional number of pounds of cotton to the British of the value of four and one-half million dollars-all to gratify our Secretary of Agriculture in trying out his subsidy plan on cotton.

Not only that, but our British friends were sufficiently alert, Mr. President, to require delivery or tender of this cotton at the ports, of a certain grade and staple, or better.

Already the other House is in a struggle now over an amendment which has been placed on the bill to carry out this barter transaction-an amendment which, if the House does not eliminate it, will probably require the moving of some 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 bales of cotton to the American ports, adding freight, adding cost, all to carry out a barter

If the Secretary of Agriculture succeeds in making many more barter exchanges, he will lose not only his shirt but he will lose his undershirt.

Yet in this very bill we are going to give to the Secretary of Agriculture $600,000,000, with which to do what? Three hundred million dollars of it to carry out the Jones-Bankhead Farm Tenancy Act. I am not going to raise a question about that. Three hundred million dollars of it with which to do virtually whatever he may please. It is true he will only be required to do what has been done in connection with some of the various farm operations which we have undertaken in the past.

But now I come back to the proposition. Has the wheat problem been solved? What are the farmers getting for their wheat today?. A few days ago wheat on the Liverpool market, on the world market, sold for the lowest price in American money and in American measure at which wheat has been sold on that market since 1592.

Cannot anyone see that as we subsidize the sale of our wheat to the foreign consumer we must necessarily drive down the world price of wheat? Cannot anyone know that as we subsidize our cotton to the foreign consumer, the foreign spinner, we must drive down the world price of cotton?

The same thing is true of corn. The same thing will be true of lard. Temporarily, yes, we can raise our price in the United States. We can do it in the case of cotton, but when we do it, the use of rayon will increase, jute and other substitute fibers will come in, and take more and more of the American cotton farmer's domestic market.

That is the story, Mr. President, and that will be the final chapter in the present agricultural program if it is followed.

In the meantime vast fortunes are spent out of the Treasury to enable the cotton farmer to live while he is reducing his cotton acreage and production, and vast fortunes are spent out of the Treasury to enable the foreign consumers to buy and use American cotton.

Mr. President, it is all very well to run the price up on our own mills, on our own people, on our people who need cotton textiles. They need bed clothes and sheets and towels, and the little children need clothing. It is all very well to run the price up on them, because the Secretary of Agriculture has the profound satisfaction that he is helping the farmer-helping the farmer! Helping the farmer when the world price of his product is going down, down, inevitably down as the result of his own program. Helping the American farmer when the only way he can live is on large grants from the Treasury of the United States. Helping the American farmer when the only way he can hold even a part of his foreign market, which is a part of his goodwill, his capital assets, is through the expenditure of other and further vast sums of money out of the Federal Treasury.

Are we getting anywhere? We are going to build roads. We are going to build superhighways. I dare say there is not any part of the United States today in which a toll road would pay, unless it should be from Washington City to New York or Boston. In no other part of the Nation would a toll road pay for the cost of policing it and keeping it in repair. Everyone should know that to be so; everyone is bound to know it if he will use his judgment; everyone is bound to know who will sit down and do a little figuring.

Besides, who wants a toll road? We fought here in the Congress year after year to get rid of toll bridges, to make them all free. We fought here year after year to abolish the policy of building and maintaining toll bridges, and even causeways-and now we propose to go back on all that and try out a superhighway system.

Mr. President, let us say, however, that the highways are all right. Let us say that they may pay the cost of policing, oiling, and repairing them; let us grant that in a few instances they may return something on the investment over a long period of years; let us grant also that the expenditure of this money may temporarily help business, that the expenditure of this money will temporarily give some workers employment, and therefore reduce the number of the unemployed, and therefore aid in relieving suffering and in taking some people off relief. Yet is it an answer to the problem? Is it getting us out of the woods? We know how rapidly we have increased our national debt. We very well remember how rapidly it has climbed. At the end of the next fiscal year it will be at $45,000,000,000. We all know, Mr. President, that today the secondary liability of the Government of the United States is more than five and one-half billion dollars for money loaned to help business so as to reduce unemployment. We know if the $3,000,000,000 provided by the pending bill are added, that the indirect secondary debt-which is, nevertheless, a binding debt of the Government—will be over eight and one-half billion dollars shortly, to say nothing of the direct Federal debt.

And where is it getting us? We have already tried this plan. It is nothing new. If we were in the midst of the depression of 1933 I would do as I did before-I would take a chance on this program succeeding. As an emergency measure it was all right and, as such, is all right. As a measure to meet a crying, pressing present need it appeared to be one way out, the only way out. But when the policy results in state socialism essentially, when it destroys private enterprise, when it cuts under private industry, when it enters and ousts from the field of free enterprise the productive enterprise of this country, upon which we have always relied to furnish work for our laborers, then it becomes definitely and decidedly unwise.

Mr. President, a moment ago I was about to enumerate some of the fields in which State capitalism, if you please, State socialism in fact had already become supreme, and I call attention to shipbuilding. An American ship of any consequence cannot be built in any American yard today unless money aid is given, or unless it is built entirely out of Federal funds.

Take home building. In this field the Government's activities are practically as extensive as in any of the totalitarian States. The Federal Government has loaned more than $3,000,000,000 to home owners in the United States. have provided the United States Housing Authority with $800,000,000, and another bill is pending in the House which the House Members are now vainly trying to dislodge, which provides for another $800,000,000. That will make a total of $1,600,000,000 to build low-cost, slum-clearance projects.

Mr. President, the objective is admirable; the purpose is excellent; but where has private enterprise gone? It has gone out of the field of low-cost housing construction. It has vanished in the field of slum clearance. Practically the whole private construction industry has ceased to operate save on Government contracts.

Then, Mr. President, let us look at some of the other fields. I have already called attention to agriculture, but I want to repeat. Little by little State socialism or State capitalism has taken over one activity after another of the farmer, until today the export of practically all of our basic farm materials is subsidized and controlled by the Government, and the price levels for wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, butter, lard, and almost every other farm product are no longer controlled by private enterprise or the operation of the capitalistic system; they are controlled by the State capitalism which has been set up.

Take the field of banking. Everyone knows that the banks have virtually become merely depositories for the Federal Government. The distinguished Senator from New York has complained about the banks. Certainly the banks will not loan money. Where is there a lawyer, Mr. President, who could advise an honest businessman what the law is upon any complicated question? Is there one? I presume there are good lawyers in this body; indeed, I know there are good lawyers in this body; there are as good lawyers in this body, perhaps, as are to be found anywhere; but is there a lawyer in this body who could confidently advise anyone even as to the existing status of the law, to say nothing of what the law will be tomorrow, the next day, or at the next session of Congress? If a businessman with a large enterprise came to a lawyer on a close question and said, "Advise me what the law is," the lawyer might say, "I cannot advise you what the law is now; I cannot tell you now what the Supreme Court will say the law is. I am not certain what it is going to hold." If he were a good lawyer he would certainly give that advice. Such advice, of course, would create much confidence in any businessman. He would go at once and invest all the money he could beg, borrow, or steal in some business enterprise when his own lawyer could not tell him what the law was upon a close or intricate question, one which had not been flatly, positively, and definitely decided by the present Supreme Court.

Mr. President, consider the question of hours and wages. Is there any private enterprise longer left free in this field? We have the Labor Relations Act and the Labor Relations Board. I favored the Labor Relations Act because I thought it granted certain fundamental rights. However, I did not think we should have a board which would deny free speech in America. It never occurred to me that we could have a board of Americans who would take an extreme partisan view of the law.

Maximum hours are fixed by law. Minimum wages are fixed by law, with a great bureaucracy in Washington to regulate hours, wages, and labor relations. Is there anything left for private initiative? Is there anything left for private enterprise to do but to fall in line and try to get what is coming, on the surface, as it were?

Take the case of the railroads. We know what is going on in that field. We have there virtually state capitalism.

I pass from the utilities field. It is one of those peculiar fields in which there is strong reason for State capitalism. There is no doubt of that. Yet the utility interests exist. They serve a good purpose. The State is not ready to take them all over. However, they are virtually all in the grasp of the State. I do not mean under proper regulation. I mean they must sell when somebody comes along and offers to buy, because they do not know what the policy of the Government will be tomorrow.

Take the matter of coal mining. It has passed entirely into the control of the State. Today there is no room for free enterprise in the mining of coal in the United States.

I have already spoken about insurance. Examples could be multiplied indefinitely.

When any government continues to borrow money and continues a program of deficit spending beyond the necessities to meet some pressing and immediate emergency, which I recognize as a governmental responsibility; wherever it goes into the field of business, into the field of financing, in America at least, the government must become dominant. Private capitalism must pass out and a form of State capitalism must take its place.

It makes all the difference whether our debts are public or part of them public and part of them private. As we shift from private debt over to Government debt, and as we increase the amount of the Government debt in proportion to the private debt for the purpose of stimulating business, for the purpose of starting enterprise and keeping it moving forward, we narrow the base of any possible revenue with which we can take care even of the ordinary overhead interest rate and service charge on the public debt as it grows larger and larger. As the public debt grows larger, Mr. President, and the private debt smaller, though they aggregate the same, as in some past time, the public debt eats up more and more of our national income, to the point where the country cannot operate under a system of free enterprise, free business, and free industry. The public debt eats up national income to the point where the State must take over private enterprises.

Mr. Berle may have pronounced a harsh truth. It may have sounded strange to the ears of some new dealers as it was spoken out loud, and not in a whisper; but Mr. Berle spoke the eternal truth. He spoke the plain, unvarnished truth when he said that if we continue the program—and he favors doing so-the time will come when the Government must take over all the productive enterprises in the Nation and carry them on.

Therefore I am against the bill. I do not care if some of its purposes are good; I do not care if I personally favor some of its purposes; I stand eternally against this entire movement. I set my face now sternly against the whole trend. the final, inevitable result of this course of conduct on the part of the Government.

Oh, yes; the individual things provided for in the bill are good. They are fine. Some of them will liquidate. Some will not liquidate. However, it does not matter to me if they all liquidate. Whenever the Government capitalizes an investment it pushes out of the field free private investment. Whenever the Government capitalizes a dollar of its borrowings and makes it pay itself back it puts free enterprise that much deeper down into the cellar. That is the course and effect of the program.

It is an easy way for our Government to operate: it is an easy way for the governments of the world to operate; but the way leads to death none the less; and as certainly as a deliberately chosen program of monetary inflation would lead to death.

Mr. President, to my mind one of the very ablest thinkers in the world is Dr. J. A. Tripp. Everybody knows who Dr. J. A. Tripp is. Reporting to the stockholders of the powerful Netherlands Bank, of which he is president, just a few days ago he had this to say-and I wish the officials of our Government would listen to it, because it is common sense:

Various governments are borrowing almost 2,000,000,000 guilders (roughly $1,060,000,000) a month.

Think of it, Mr. President, $1,060,000,000 a month!-

to cover their budgetary deficits.

Economic revival, financial recovery, and monetary stability are unthinkable unless international political relations show improvement; the fear of war is banished and armaments are reduced.

Further in his report Dr. Tripp says:

In the beginning it was expected that a lowering of the gold value of monetary units would lead to a corresponding rise in commodity prices; while a policy of cheap money and expansion of credit was to stimulate private enterprise. When this expectation was not fulfilled and the said policy would apparently not yield the desired results, refuge was taken in the great increase in Government expenditures, which caused budgetary deficits to grow rapidly.

It was supposed that this would make private business revive in a relatively short time and that the government would then be able to reduce its intervention within the limits of its revenue. This expectation was not realized either, with the result that the level of government expenditure and budget deficits was maintained, and even raised, on the assumption that in this way the national income and prosperity would increase.

How like the philosophy which obtains in our country!

Remarking that this depreciation of currency, cheap money, increase of government expenditure and growing budget deficits were taking on a more and more permanent character, Dr. Tripp said he could not see that the development had led to any lasting improvement, nor that it was reasonable to suppose it could be carried on much longer. He discerned a growing tendency of governments to interfere in almost every branch of economic life, a process that he believed would result in increased rigidity, followed by higher costs and increased cost of production. The burden that is consequently placed on the consumer, he said, added to the influence of monetary and fiscal measures, will not fail to lead to impoverishment, a decrease in consumption, and the growth of unemployment.

Dr. Tripp continues:

Only cheaper and more extensive production, gradually increasing international trade, and liberation of economic life from the innumerable impediments which are constantly neutralizing the essential elasticity in prices and cost of production and from the excessive burden of taxation in various forms which is stifling private initiative and investment, can bring goods within reach of consumers on a larger scale and at lower prices.

Mr. President, he must have had his eyes on the United States.

Here is one of the world's greatest financiers, one of the world's great authorities, who says that this policy not only in other countries but in our country as well is leading directly away from the results we are now told will follow from this further undertaking to extend deficit spending in the United States.

We are told that this bill will afford the last final push that will put us over the hill and down on the other side toward the placid fields of prosperity and contentment and happiness. This eminent economist says directly to the contrary. Our own experience should be sufficient to convince us, our own cause, marked by an increasing burden of debt—should be sufficient to convince us that we are going the wrong way.

There is but one way to go, and that is to recognize what always has been true and what always must be true, that there cannot be economic regimentation and control without ultimately the loss of political and civil liberty itself. They are not separable qualities, Mr. President. Through all history among men striving for free government-through all of human history, I repeat—political and civil liberty has disappeared when economic control passed out of the hands of individuals into the hands of the state. However beneficent, however high-minded, however the state under its rulers may strive for the betterment of its people, it is an utter impossibility to have political and civil liberty, they cannot be retained through any long period of time, if there is economic regimentation, control of economy, of enterprise, and of business by the Government. Mr. Berle was right, he was eternally right, when he said that this thing meant that the Federal Government would have to acquire more and more, practically all, of the productive enterprises of this Nation. He is right, and on the basic theory, Mr. President, of human accountability under law, both human and divine, both civil and penal, I must assume that men like Mr. Berle understand and purpose this forward movement into state control and state capitalism to the point where free enterprise must go down and out.

I do not desire to criticize anyone unduly, but, Mr. President, all rational men are presumed to be responsible for the logical and natural consequences of their own deliberate and intentional acts. This course of continued repeated spending cannot lead anywhere but to State control of everything in America. And we may not be very far from it; indeed, we are so close to it, Mr. President, that so far as I am concerned, as long as my voice is heard in any public council I shall raise it against this tendency.

I do not need to be told about rural electrification. I have always supported it. It is useless to come to me with various sugar-coated proposals, even good proposals, attractive and seductive proposals, the very proposals I have supported, for grants out of the Federal Treasury. I have supported them only in an emergency; I supported them only to meet a condition that was acute.

Now it is sought to establish permanently the doctrine of constant spending of public money, of constant increase of deficit financing, in order to keep moving the industrial and commercial machine and in order to keep it moving rapidly.

Mr. President, I prefer what perhaps may be called the hard way; I do not seek the easy way. When the darkest clouds of the depression into which we entered 6 or 7 years ago had been lifted and we could begin to see the sunlight, I had hoped that our Government would take even the hard way, the resolute way, but the way that leads to personal and national honor and not the way that leads to personal dishonor and national misery and degradation.

Mr. President, in the New York Times today the leading editorial is entitled "Collapse of Farm Planning." It is a scathing analysis of the whole program. I ask that it may be printed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

[From the New York Times of July 27, 1939] COLLAPSE OF FARM "PLANNING"

the crops that have been their particular concern.

Let us begin with wheat. There is practically no important country in the world that has not got a government "wheat plan" of some sort. Statisticians have calculated that various governments are jointly spending more than $2,000,000,000 annually in an effort to hold up grain prices. After all their activities in recent years the prospective world supply of wheat for 1939-40 is placed at 5,290,000,000 bushels, the greatest on record, while wheat has fallen in the Liverpool market to the lowest prices reached since Queen Elizabeth's time. It is small satisfaction that by a tariff and Government loans we have kept American wheat from falling quite as low. September wheat at 60% cents on Monday fell within three-fourths cent of the lowest price at which any wheat future has sold since April 1933.

any wheat future has sold since April 1933.

Some of our own Government's policies have certainly made the plight of the American wheat grower worse. It is futile for a country that grows wheat for export in a competitive market to adopt an acreage-restriction scheme. Our own restriction is not great enough materially to affect the world price, while it reduces farm income by reducing the amount of wheat we have to sell. It has not helped us to subsidize wheat for export. In combination with other countries doing the same thing, the result has merely been to push down the world price further.

In the 12 months ended on June 30 the United States Government sold 93,754,000 bushels of wheat in the export markets at a loss to the Government of $25,700,000, or 27.4 cents a bushel. The foreign consumer, in other words, was able to get his wheat cheaper at the expense of the American taxpayer. That is hardly the path to national enrichment.

Corn also is now selling at the lowest prices since 1933. For this our own governmental policy must again bear a large part of the blame. Last year and the year before the Government made "nonrecourse" loans to enable the farmers to hold large stocks of corn off the market. The loan rate was made so attractive that it even paid farmers to build extra cribs to store on their own farms the corn under Government loan. So the farmers withdrew from the market and stored in their own cribs some 257,000,000 bushels of 1937 and 1938 corn.

No doubt this helped to keep prices up for a time. But these loans fall due on August 1, and farmers want to free their storage space to make room for the new crop. Fears that the Government will be forced to take 100,000,000 bushels or more of this grain in satisfaction of the matured loans and sell it have been depressing the market. The price can be kept up, perhaps, by new Government loans so high that it would be profitable for the farmers to build still more cribs to hold still more unsold corn. Is this to be the outcome of Mr. Wallace's "ever-normal granary"? At present prices the Government already has a loss of about 25 cents a bushel on the corn under the present loan. The prospective carry-over of corn on October 1 next is already estimated to be at a record high level.

For the present plight of cotton the direct responsibility of our Government's policy is a very heavy one. The crop-restriction policy itself is indefensible on several grounds, but much worse in practiced effect has been the Government loan policy. Under that policy the Government has placed an entire year's American cotton crop in warehouses; the American price has been kept above the world price, and as a result, in the cotton year that ends with this month the United States will have exported only about 3.400.000 bales, the smallest export in 60 years.

In the 1932 year the exports of cotton amounted to 8,766,000 bales. The difference is not to be accounted for by any decline in world demand. On the contrary, in the same period in which our exports fell off by more than 5,000,000 bales, world consumption of all cotton rose by about 3,000,000 bales. Other producing countries have stepped into the place in world markets that we abandoned. As a cure for this, the Government does not propose abandonment of either the restriction policy or the more damaging loan policy. Instead, and in spite of the bad results in wheat, Secretary Wallace announces that beginning today the Government will subsidize the export of cotton to the extent of 1½ cents a pound. In other words, having artificially, and at great Government expense, held cotton off the world market, we are now artificially, and at further Government expense, to try to force some of it into the world market.

But the results will be much more serious than in the case of wheat. For cotton is a raw material that goes into manufactures. What we will be doing is to give foreigners cheaper raw cotton to compete against our own manufacturers in our own markets and in compete against our own manufacturers in our own markets and in world markets. To compensate, Mr. Wallace will also subsidize exports of finished cotton goods, and suggests limitations on imports of cotton goods. But this leads merely to the building up of a whole series of bureaucratic controls. And we are doing all this at the very time when we have placed countervailing duties on importations of silks from Italy and a whole range of products from Germany, on the ground that these importations are subsidized. In other words, we are deliberately undertaking what we officially penalize as unfair and demoralizing competition when it is done by other nations.

it is done by other nations.

This is the end result of the "orderly Government planning" that was to supplant the chaos of uncontrolled agriculture.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I inquire if an amendment is now pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no amendment now pending.

Mr. BARKLEY. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed on page 6 to strike out lines 11 to 25, inclusive, and on page 7, to strike out lines 1 to 12, inclusive, and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

SEC. 5. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Public Roads

Administration shall have power—

(a) To make loans to States, municipalities, and other public bodies for highway improvements as defined in section (4) (1)

(a) To make loans to States, municipalities, and other public bodies for highway improvements as defined in section (4) (1) hereof;

(b) With the consent and cooperation of the State, municipal, or other public-highway agency within the territorial jurisdiction of which the facility is to be located, to construct, reconstruct, enlarge and maintain bridges, viaducts, and tunnels, and to fix, maintain, and collect tolls or other charges for the use of such facilities which shall be sufficient (after making reasonable allowances for operation and maintenance expenses, for depreciation to the extent not provided for by amortization and contingencies) to amortize the cost of such facilities with interest as hereinafter provided, but no tolls or other charges shall be collected for the use of any such facility after the construction cost thereof has been paid or liquidated;

(c) To construct, reconstruct, alter, extend, enlarge, improve, repair, and acquire highway improvements, with a view to promoting interstate commerce, alding in the national defense, facilitating the use of the mails, or promoting the general welfare and to acquire by purchase or condemnation any real property adjacent to any such proposed highway improvement, but no such work shall be undertaken until a contract has been entered into between the Administration and a State, municipality, or other public body, pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement and all real property acquired under this section. Upon certification by the Corporation that the cost of any such highway improvement and such other real property together with interest thereon as provided in this act has been fully repaid by any State, municipality, or other public body.

(d) To acquire in the name of the United States by gift, pur-

(d) To acquire in the name of the United States by gift, purchase, exchange, or by the exercise of the power of eminent domain or otherwise, and to hold, lease (as lessor with or without the option to purchase, or as lessee), use, sell, exchange, or otherwise dispose of highway improvements or other real property, adjacent to any such highway improvement or necessary or convenient for carrying out any of its functions hereunder.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. Would the adoption of this proposed amendment preclude later on, if perhaps it should be amended in some respects, a motion to strike out the entire provision dealing with public roads?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would not.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say, if such a motion should be in contemplation, that all perfecting amendments would have priority and would be considered before any motion of that kind should be made.

Mr. KING. That was my understanding. I have no objection to such perfecting amendments as may be desired, but subsequently, after the amendment has been perfected, I intend to submit a motion to strike out the entire provision.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, where I am we could not hear the reading of the amendment. I should like to have it understood that I am merely one of those who may have been unable to hear it. I should like to have the Senator from Kentucky explain the amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. McNARY. As in the nature of parliamentary inquiry, I inquire if the Senator from Kentucky offered his amendment as a substitute for the section in the bill to which it refers?

Mr. BARKLEY. It is a substitute for a portion of section 5. It is not a substitute for all of section 5. It leaves three subsections as they are now.

Mr. McNARY. It is a very important matter, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	La Follette	Schwartz
Andrews	Downey	Lee	Schwellenbach
Ashurst	Ellender	Lodge	Sheppard
Austin	Frazier	Lucas	Shipstead

Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Calif.	Radcliffe	White
Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Reed
Danaher	King	Russell

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lucas in the chair) Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BARKLEY obtained the floor.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield to me for a question?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Before the Senator begins to explain his substitute, I desire to ask him for an interpretation of some of the language in the roads section of the bill, on page 3. I am referring to line 21, page 3, which refers to "other transportation facilities." I desire to know whether the words "other transportation facilities" are limited by the fact that they are in a roads section, and refer only to roads.

Mr. BARKLEY. Where is the language referred to?

Mr. VANDENBERG. In line 21, page 3. Is that language limited to roads, or could "other transportation facilities" be water facilities? Could they be canals?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; they are other transportation facilities connected with road systems.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It is the Senator's judgment that the language is strictly limited by its location in the bill? Mr. BARKLEY. Absolutely; yes.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I know that the Senator from Michigan, always on the alert when anything about a canal comes up, will not miss any opportunity to refer to the subject of canals in his own peculiar way, but I should like to know what it was that he said.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Michigan asked me whether the use of the term "and other transportation facilities" is to be interpreted as limited to the roads section of the bill and transportation facilities connected with highway systems; and my reply was that it is.

Mr. PEPPER. I suppose the Senator from Michigan is not trying to have an interpretation here which would absolutely and positively prohibit the Florida ship canal, or the John Smith canal, or anybody else's canal, or any other kind of public work, providing an application in a proper way is made; is he? If so, let us fight out the matter while we are at it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Florida that we are dealing now with the public-roads section of the bill, the public-works section. I shall be frank in saying that if such an interpretation is to be placed upon the language used in the bill in connection with this allotment of $500,000,000 that it could be used by the Public Roads Administrator to go out over the country and dig canals, I should myself move to change the language, because it is not the object of this appropriation to be handled by the Public Roads Administrator to do things of that sort. These transportation facilities are all in connection with the highway system over which he has jurisdiction. He has no authority, and would have none under the bill, to go out and improve a river, or to construct a canal.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McCarran. I say again, as I said before the quorum call just a moment ago, that we were unable to hear the reading of the Senator's amendment. In order to facilitate matters, let me ask whether it is contemplated that this money shall be expended on a basis of population in the several States, or on a basis of territory served.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no provision in the bill which allocates this $500,000,000 on the basis of population.

Mr. McCarran. Would the Senator object to an amendment providing that it might be allocated on the basis of territory served?

Mr. BARKLEY. Frankly, I will say to the Senator, I do not think the program contemplated under the amendment is of such a character that it can be circumscribed by a provision either as to population or territory in the various States, if that is what is in the Senator's mind.

Mr. McCARRAN. I have in mind that the greater population has the greatest demand, especially in a general-election year, and I am very much interested that a State which is cooperating in furnishing roadways across the Nation, which has a sparsity of population, shall nevertheless be recognized because of the fact that it has a great extent of territory; and I hope that the Senator will not overlook that fact.

Mr. BARKLEY. If I may explain the amendment somewhat, in order, I will discuss that feature of the Senator's inquiry.

Mr. McCARRAN. I shall listen to the explanation most carefully.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in the committee which reported the bill there was very earnest discussion of the contemplated road program. For more than 20 years we have had a Bureau of Public Roads, during most of which time it has been presided over and administered by Mr. Thomas H. MacDonald, one of the ablest, most competent, and most devoted and sincere advocates of highway improvements, and I think, under all the circumstances, as great an expert in highway improvement as we have in the United States.

He made a survey and study, occupying 3 or 4 years, looking toward the recommendation and suggestion of a program of highway improvements going a little beyond the method adopted by the Federal Highway Act, taking into consideration the need for peculiar treatment of highway improvements in congested areas throughout the United States.

As the bill was originally drawn, it was feared in the committee, and by other Senators also, that it might authorize the Federal Government on its own account, and without consultation and cooperation with and without the consent of any State, to go into a State and build highways which would be Federal superhighways under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government alone, on which tolls would be charged with a view of repaying the cost of construction.

Of course, the Federal Government and the Public Roads Administration have not contemplated and do not contemplate any wholesale program of that sort, although I think the time may come when the Federal Government will have to consider what its contribution may be toward the solution of highway congestion in the densely populated sections of our country.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McKellar. The Senator speaks of the report of Mr. MacDonald. The report was in response to a resolution, of which I believe I was the author, concerning what are known as superhighways. It will be remembered that several bills relating to superhighways were introduced, and Mr. MacDonald reported in regard to them. As I recall his report, although I have not read it in the last day or two, it expressed opposition to superhighways, and merely mentioned the fact that there was one possible superhighway which might be made to pay, that is, one between Washington and Boston. Otherwise, as I recall Mr. MacDonald's report, it does not stand as a reason for the amendment and the provision in the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. I may say to the Senator that Mr. Mac-Donald in his report does not oppose superhighways. He states in the report that, with the possible exception of one or two such highways, he doubts whether they would be wholly self-liquidating under any toll system which would be probably appropriate to the construction. But, regardless of Mr. MacDonald's report, and regardless of his opinion about the matter, the superhighway, as it is in the mind of the Senator from Tennessee, is out of the bill under the amendment which I have offered.

Mr. McKELLAR. The superhighway may be out, but toll roads are still provided for in the amendment. Does the Senator believe that toll roads will be acceptable to the people of the United States? The Senator no doubt recalls that in his own State, as in many other States, toll roads and toll bridges are about as unpopular as any public work which has ever been undertaken, and as soon as a toll road or a toll bridge is established in any State, one of the first things that is done is to have a bill introduced to do away with the tolls and make it a free road or a free bridge. It seems to me to be very unwise to introduce into the pending bill provision for a system of toll roads, for, in my judgment, they would not be acceptable to the people of this country. I do not believe the people approve of toll roads anywhere in our country, and I think that part of the bill should be stricken out.

Mr. McCARRAN and Mr. GUFFEY addressed the Chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. If I may reply to the Senator from Tennessee, I do not believe a system of general toll roads, which the people of the United States would be compelled to travel because of lack of any other sort of facilities, would be popular. I do not think any kind of facility on which anyone has to pay is extremely popular, so far as that is concerned. But there are toll bridges in my State, which were built under an act of the legislature authorizing the issue of bonds for the purpose of building those toll bridges, and those bonds are to be retired and are being retired out of tolls collected on the bridges, and it is estimated that within a very short time the bridges will be free because the revenue collected from the traffic upon them will be sufficient to pay the cost of construction, and when that cost has been paid, the bridges will be free.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I take it that the Senator from Kentucky has been applying his answer to the Senator from Tennessee, who propounded a question, and made a statement in which I concur very wholeheartedly. I am wondering whether the leader of the majority in this body is now promulgating or fostering an entering wedge whereby this country is to have a system of toll roads from now on. I take it that the answer is no.

Mr. BARKLEY. Absolutely.

Mr. McCARRAN. Very well. Then, if it is not good as a promulgation for a general system, it cannot be good for a system which would apply specifically to some particular section. If that be true, then the whole proposition falls, because toll roads have been a failure due to their condemnation from the standpoint of public sentiment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I am not promulgating or fostering any proposal which could be construed as an entering wedge for the adoption of any general toll-road system in the United States. But there are special facilities, such as tunnels and bridges over navigable streams, or over estuaries, or across bodies of water, or bypasses in order to escape congestion in particular localities, for the use of which already, in parts of the country, tolls are being charged, where it may not be entirely inappropriate to use that method for repaying the cost of construction. But that does not apply in this amendment in the same way to roads themselves. It applies to the particular facilities mentioned in the first part of the amendment, and such facilities can be erected only with the consent and approval of and in cooperation with the State highway departments and the highways departments of the localities in which they are to be built.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I make this expression basic to my support or nonsupport of the bill, that the so-called toll roads are to be self-liquidating projects. Therefore, they are to be fostered, promoted, promulgated, as self-liquidating projects. The amendment of the able Senator from Kentucky fosters and supports that theme and theory which I have put forward. If that be the theme of this program, we are lost.

Mr. BARKLEY. If I get an opportunity to explain my amendment I think I can disabuse the Senator's mind on that proposition.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator cannot disabuse my mind on the proposition that a toll road is not self-liquidating.

Mr. BARKLEY. . The self-liquidation of a toll road under my amendment is out, unless it is a road constructed in cooperation with a State or local highway authority, in which the State or local highway authority agrees to take over and maintain and operate the highway facility, and return the money to the Government of the United States in any way that it sees fit to raise the money.

Mr. McCARRAN. That does not really answer the question, though it answers it directly in furtherance of my idea that a toll road is a lost project. If that is the policy, if that is the idea of the able Senator from Kentucky, as now expressed, then his whole idea has been lost.

Mr. BARKLEY. I hope we can find it again, even if it is entirely lost.

Mr. GUFFEY, Mr. BYRNES, and Mr. ADAMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Pennsyl-

Mr. GUFFEY. For the information of the Senator from Nevada, the Senator from Tennessee, and the Senator from Ohio I will relate a little experience we have had in Pennsylvania in building a toll road. We are now building a toll road about 175 miles in length. It is a 4-lane road, 2 lanes in each direction. The road will shorten by about 40 miles the distance now necessary to travel over the existing road. A toll will be charged for traveling on that road. There will be no grade crossings, and there will be 7 miles of tunnels. The people who advocated the building of the road are those who will use the road.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Pennsylvania should add to his statement that there was a grant of Federal money of 45 percent to the construction of the toll road referred to.

Mr. GUFFEY. I repeat, those who advocated the building of the road are those who will use the road.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senate is to conduct business in the way it is accustomed to do so, we must have order, and Senators will obey the rules of the Senate.

The Senator from Kentucky has the floor.

Mr. BYRNES and Mr. ADAMS addressed the Chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield first to the Senator from South Carolina, who has been on his feet for a long time.

Mr. BYRNES. I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that there is a misunderstanding on the part of many Senators who believe that the language of the amendment as reported by the committee is to be considered by the Senate, and I think, if the Senator will ask permission to go ahead and explain the substitute he has offered, we might possibly save much discussion.

Mr. ADAMS and Mr. McCARRAN addressed the Chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say that I am going to do what the Senator from South Carolina has suggested. I first yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Pennsylvania should add a statement to his illustration. There was a grant of Federal money of 45 percent for the construction of the toll road referred to by him, and it could not have been built if the cost was to be repaid entirely from the tolls without the Federal grant having been made. If it had to be built at 100 percent cost to the State authorities, it would not have been a success.

Mr. GUFFEY. The people of the community were anxious and willing that the road be built, and are willing to use it and pay tolls for the use of it.

Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD at this point in connection with my remarks a telegram from Walter A. Jones, chairman of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, addressed to the chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The telegram is as follows:

JULY 25, 1939.

Chairman H. B. STEAGALL,

House Committee on Banking and Currency,
House Office Building, Washington, B. C.:
Your wire addressed to me at Harrisburg received here, New York, too late to appear today before your committee. I had hoped to speak briefly on the subject of toll roads and urge the necessity of beginning at once the construction of a system of express high-ways, cost of which to be amortized by the traffic using them, especi-ally interstate trucks; such roads to circumvent all cities and towns. This can be done, I am convinced, after extensive study, by private capital if the Government will create a Federal Road Authority with power to issue bonds, which would be guaranteed by the Government. Under this plan private capital will be put to work immediately and go very far to relieve unemployment and stimulate business. This would also lessen the necessity of Government appropriations. The railroads need help, which can be obtained only from the Government, because of the loss of business to highway to the control of traffic. It is only reasonable that the great corporations, including the railroads, who are now using the highways should pay for the system of express highways. The construction of the tunnel highway by the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, of which I have the honor to be chairman, and which project is being financial. entirely by Federal money, has created a golden streak of prosperity and relief and also an uplifting encouragement to the citizens along the 160-mile stretch through the mountains of Pennsylvania. So I urge that this matter at least be started at this time by your committee, even if nothing more is done than the appropriation of a sum to enable the authority you would create to make necessary studies as to the initial location of such express highways.

WALTER A. JONES,

Chairman, Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I now yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish to address my remarks to the Senator from Kentucky in order that he may clarify the expression just made by the Senator from South Carolina, who said that a misapprehension existed and that we should consider the language of the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky. What else would we consider, because that is the mater now before the Senate? And I say that the language of the amendment of the able Senator from Kentucky conveys the idea that toll roads are to come into the picture as self-liquidating projects.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. No, Mr. President, I will not yield until I make a start toward explaining the amendment. I will yield later on.

Mr. LODGE. Very well.

Mr. BARKLEY. We yield around here until the whole day is gone and we do not get anywhere. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, as I was saying an hour or two ago [laughter] when this language was in the Committee on Banking and Currency-I hope I may have the attention of my devoted friend the Senator from Nevada when I explain my amend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senators kindly take their seats while the Senator from Kentucky explains his amendment?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, as this bill was originally introduced it carried the idea which is in the mind of the Senator from Nevada, and because of that there was serious objection to it. We had Mr. MacDonald before the committee. The Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], who, I think, knows more about public highways than any other Member of the Senate, came before the Senate committee and gave us the benefit of his experience. It was difficult to write language in the hurly-burly of debate in a committee that did just what we are trying to do. So the language of this amendment has been framed after consultation with the Senator from Arizona, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes], the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], who had offered in the committee an amendment dealing with the same subject. But while the Senator from Ohio may not entirely agree to the language in which the amendment is couched, I understand that it is fairly satisfactory to him.

The amendment takes the place of paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of section 5, dealing with highways. Section 5 of my amendment begins:

Subject to the provisions of this act, the Public Roads Administration shall have power-

And, of course, the only other part of the measure dealing with highways is in section 4, where the allocation of the $500,000,000 is provided for.

SEC. 5. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Public Roads

Administration shall have power—

(a) To make loans to States, municipalities, and other public bodies for highway improvements as defined in section (4) (1)

Section 4 (1) is to be found on page 3, where the allocation of the sum of $500,000,000 for post roads, highways, parkways, grade crossings, underpasses, overpasses, viaducts, bridges, and tunnels, and so forth, is provided.

(b) With the consent and cooperation of the State, municipal, or other public-highway agency within the territorial jurisdiction of which the facility is to be located, to construct, reconstruct, enlarge, and maintain bridges—

Senators will bear in mind that that section does not deal with highways; it deals with bridges, viaducts, and tunnelsand to fix, maintain, and collect tolls or other charges for the use of such facilities which shall be sufficient

Omitting the parentheses, which merely makes provision for reasonable allowance for operation and maintenancewhich shall be sufficient to amortize the cost of such facilities with interest as hereinafter provided, but no tolls or other charges shall be collected for the use of any such facility after the construction cost thereof has been paid or liquidated.

That only applies to bridges, viaducts, and tunnels. It does not apply to roads in the ordinary acceptation of that term out through the country.

I now read subsection (c) of my amendment:

SEC. 5. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Public Roads Administration shall have power-

(c) To construct, reconstruct, alter, extend, enlarge, improve, repair, and acquire highway improvements, with a view to promoting interstate commerce, aiding in the national defense, facilitating the use of the mails, or promoting the general welfare and to acquire by purchase or condemnation any real property adjacent to any such proposed highway improvement, but no such work shall be undertaken until a contract has been entered into between the Administration and a State, municipality, or other public body, pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement and all real property acquired under this section. Upon certification by the Corporation-that the cost of any such highway improvement and such other real property together with interest thereon as provided in this act has been fully repaid by any State, municipality, or other public body, title thereto shall be vested in such State, municipality. pality, or other public body.

That is the provision of this amendment which carries out the idea of constructing highways, highway improvements. and the acquirement of land necessary for rights-of-way and land adjacent thereto. However, before the Federal Government may go into a State and build a mile or a foot of such highway it must have a contract with the State, the municipality, or other public body, under the terms of which, at the conclusion of the construction of the highway, the State or locality shall take it over, operate and maintain it, and repay the Federal Government the cost of the construction, with interest. The local communities are at liberty to raise the money necessary to repay the Federal expenditure by any method which they see fit to adopt. They may do it out of general revenues. They may do it out of license taxes. They may do it out of gasoline taxes; or I presume, if the local highway authority wanted to do it or had the power to do it. they might themselves fix a toll. But the Government of the United States has no power to fix a toll on any highway constructed under the provisions of the subsection of the amendment which I have read. I dare say that no highway department in any State or city would levy a toll for that purpose; but if it did so, it would be doing it on its own responsibility and not through any coercion, cooperation, or any other authority or power vested in the Government of the United States to bring about the collection of any such toll. The local authority, whether it be State or municipal, is absolutely free to determine for itself how it shall raise the money to repay the Government of the United States for the expenditure necessary to carry out the program.

Mr. McCARRAN rose.

Mr. BARKLEY. Before yielding I should like to refer to an instance to which I referred earlier in the debate. In the city of Chicago, where traffic is congested in and out of the city and in Cook County, the local authorities now have a program involving the widening of streets and roads to avoid congestion and to enable traffic to go around the congested sections of downtown Chicago. Chicago has $60,000,000 with which to carry on the improvement. Forty-five million dollars will be required to buy the rights-of-way. So if the city of Chicago were compelled to pay $45,000,000 out of its available fund of $60,000,000 for the rights-of-way it would have only $15,000,000 left for construction, which would not be sufficient.

Under this program the Federal Government could go in and buy the rights-of-way, assuming that they would cost $45,000,000. That would leave the city of Chicago and Cook County $60,000,000 with which to build the highway. Then, under any plan adopted by the city of Chicago, Cook County, or the State of Illinois, either separately or together, they would repay the United States Government over a period of not to exceed 40 years. I think in that particular case the plan would be to pay back in 25 years, out of current revenues-not out of tolls but out of current revenues-the entire amount involved in the expenditure by the Government of the United States, with interest. Under this provision, if the locality decided to set up a toll system to raise part of the money, at the end of the amortization period no more tolls could be charged, even by the community in which the facility is established. So there is nothing in the bill which authorizes, empowers, or in any way makes it possible for the Federal Government to build a highway and charge tolls upon it to those who use it.

Mr. McCARRAN and Mr. DANAHER addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I appreciate the courtesy and kind attitude of the Senator from Kentucky in this matter. I represent a rather peculiar section of the country-a section with 110,000 square miles of territory and a population of 100,000. The population is carrying a tax burden to maintain a State which is progressive to the "nth" degree, and at the same time to maintain its part in the Federal system. We are not inclined—and we never will be inclined-to tax those who pass over our territory by way of a toll to be paid for the use of the roads over that territory. The Federal Government has contributed, in keeping with its proportion of contribution and the principles of equity, toward the building of transcontinental and other highways over that State.

I use my own State as an example. It is not an isolated example. There are other examples. We have not heard about some of them, but they are, nevertheless, examples. All the sparsely settled States of the West are involved in this question. If there are benefits to come from the bill, and if we are to gain the benefits only by taxing the transient public which passes across our territory; if we are to say, "Yes; we will take advantage of the bill, but we will tax those who visit our community," then I say that some of us must be opposed to the proposal, because we are opposed to any proposal which involves a toll to pass across the territory of a

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, there is nothing in the bill which remotely authorizes such a thing. The Federal Government may not even go into the State to help it build a road, bridge, tunnel, or viaduct unless the State itself consents to it.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is very true.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator's State is not different from many other States. I am as much opposed as is the Senator to any scheme by which we would establish toll roads all over the country and charge tolls for the people to travel over the roads, although it may be possible that in some densely settled sections of the country many persons who are in a hurry with trucks and automobiles might be willing to pay a reasonable toll in order to avoid such congested centers as Baltimore, Philadelphia, or New York in going on a long trip. However, that is neither here nor there. Such a thing may not be done under the provisions of the bill without the consent of the locality. The way the measure would operate would be that localities and States would make application to the Government of the United States through the Public Roads Administration. The operation does not involve the question of the United States forcing itself on some locality to build a road or establish a toll. Such roads are to be built in cooperation with and with the consent of the State or locality. As a matter of practice, it would be at the invitation, and usually at the urgent request of the State or locality, in order that the financing of the enterprise might be assisted with funds from the United States.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator further vield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. There would be an inducement offered to the State to establish tolls. For example, in my State we would be asked, "By what process would you repay the expenditure?" Having been taxed almost up to the limit, we would say, "We now have no available process." I am not speaking for Nevada alone. Senators from some of the Western States with sparsely settled communities may well listen to what I am saying. The Federal Government would then say, "There is another avenue. If we build this road for you, you may charge a toll." The natural inducement is to bring the public into our community. We would be induced to impose a toll upon those who pass across New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Wyoming, and other States of like sparseness of population.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think that result could ever happen unless we assume that the highway authorities of Nevada and the other States are totally oblivious to public opinion and would force a toll on their own people, which I do not believe would ever occur.

Mr. McCARRAN. The highway departments of Nevada and other Western States are never oblivious to public opinion. They are always sensitive to public opinion. However, the public opinion of the sparsely settled States is in favor of bringing the traveling public to those States.

Mr. BARKLEY. They would not want to bring them there if it would operate as a burden upon the States.

Mr. McCARRAN. It would not be a burden upon the States. It would be a burden upon the traveling public.

Mr. BARKLEY. It might be a burden of such size as to keep the traveling public from visiting the beauties of Nevada, but that is a matter which the people of Nevada would have to consider if they were to entertain the proposal to levy a toll. I think the Senator from Nevada can rely upon the sentiment and the attitude of the people of every State with respect to toll roads. A different question is involved in building a tunnel under a stream, or a viaduct of some sort to get away from congestion in a city or in the outskirts of the city. The local community might be willing to pay a small charge to enjoy that privilege. However, nothing could be done without the consent of the locality. No power on earth can force the Federal Government into a State, city, or county unless the locality wants it to come.

Mr. McCARRAN. I should like to make one further observation, and then I shall not interrupt the Senator any further. I have already interrupted him more than I intended. I am opposed to anything which carries out the principle of toll roads. That principle belongs to a century ago. It has been lost to America. It should never be revived. And I am opposed to anything that would revive it. I hope the Senator from Kentucky agrees to that view-

Mr. BARKLEY. I share the Senator's sentiment. There is no one who is more opposed generally to the existence of toll roads than I am. However, that question does not lurk in this amendment.

Mr. LODGE and Mr. McNARY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield first to the Senator from Massachusetts, who has been on his feet for some time.

Mr. LODGE. I merely wish to ask one question. Under the terms of the Senator's amendment, is it correct to say that all road projects would have to be adopted with the consent of either the State or the subdivision of the State?

Mr. BARKLEY. Absolutely.

Mr. LODGE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Oregon. Mr. McNARY. I do not desire to interrupt the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have concluded.

Mr. McNARY. He has made a very clear exposition of his amendment, but it appears to me, if I read his amendment aright, that it contemplates that the construction of roads shall be done exclusively by the Federal Government and not by the highway commissions of the various States.

Mr. BARKLEY. It makes it possible for that to happen, but it is not obligatory.

Mr. McNARY. That is the interpretation I place on it. According to the amendment, section 5 provides that the Public Roads Administration, which is the Federal Government, "shall have power to construct, reconstruct, highway improvements."

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; that it shall have the power to construct, but it is not compelled to construct.

Mr. McNARY. And then only in the event that the highway commission shall enter into a contract to take the road off the hands of the Federal Government after it is con-

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct. For instance, if a State had a sum of money that would enable it to make a contribution to the construction of the highway and the Federal Government put up the balance, that would leave, of course, a smaller amount to be paid by the Federal Government whenever the State and Federal Government, which they might do in partnership, should build a highway, but the road when constructed would be turned over to the State or to the locality, and would be maintained and operated by the locality, and the amount of the Federal contribution paid back over a period of years.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate that; and the Senator's proposition is to transfer the final liability from the Federal Government to the State highway commission, which, of course, is the agency of the State.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true. Mr. McNARY. I think it is an improvement over the bill as originally framed, but it occurs to me, even after the explanation, that the power is given to the Federal Government to construct, and then leave the State to take over the program after the construction period has been fulfilled.

Mr. BARKLEY. What we have all been trying to get away from is the theory that the Federal Government is going to build main highways or any other highways and charge tolls and itself operate the highway as a Federal highway free from any cooperation, jurisdiction, or connection with the State highway system. So, under this amended proposal, while the power exists for the Federal Government to incur the entire expense necessary to build a road, as soon as it is built it is turned over to State operation, just as if it were a State highway, except that the money must be paid back.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate that, but let me state again my position. The highway commissions of the various States have facilities and equipment with which to construct roads and have long experience. The Federal Government has had no experience, and has no equipment, no facilities for the construction of highways. Would it not be better if all the power were removed from the Federal Government to construct roads and that power reserved exclusively to the State highway commissions?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think so, because I think the Federal Government might, in some cases, put up the entire amount, and while the Federal Government does not have a large amount of equipment it has had much experience in the building of highways. All highways in this country are built under specifications that have to be approved by the Federal Government.

Mr. McNARY. In part. There are three factors, as the Senator knows, namely, the State highway commission, the Forest Service in the case of forest roads, and the Federal Bureau of Roads. I only express my view when I say I fear the power conferred by the amendment. I think it would be better in the consideration of this measure if all the power for the construction of roads were taken away from the Government and placed in the States.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the Senator's opinion, but I do not think that would improve it. The other subsection of my amendment is practically the same as was in the bill authorizing the Federal Government to acquire title and take the property, and so on. I do not wish, however, to take any more time.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. What concerns me about paragraph (c) is that it says:

But no such work shall be undertaken until a contract has been entered into between the administration and a State, municipality, or other public body, pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement and all real property acquired under this section.

Does the Senator think that that would permit the Federal Government to build $40,000,000 of highway improvements in the city of Chicago and then lease them to the city for a dollar a year?

My amendment provided that there could not be such a lease unless a rental was paid under the lease which would pay all costs over a period of 30 years.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator's amendment would practically compel the locality to levy tolls.

Mr. TAFT. No; that is not correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, it would not be possible for the Federal Government to lease any such highway or improvement to the city of Chicago or any other municipality for a dollar a year, because that would not pay back the cost of construction in 30 or 40 years, the period provided for in the bill.

Mr. TAFT. In other words, the Senator relies upon section 17 in the making of lease?

Mr. BARKLEY. That section is to be considered, but there is a provision in the amendment that there must be a contract with the locality, State, municipality, or other public body in which locality covenants to pay the Federal Government the cost of construction and interest.

Mr. TAFT. I do not see that.

Mr. BARKLEY. I beg the Senator's pardon. I should have referred him to section 13, on page 15.

SEC. 13. The Department of Agriculture, the Public Roads Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, and the Corporation shall exercise their powers under this act so as to reasonably assure recovery of any expenditure under this act, with interest, at a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Corporation for the cost to it of the capital required for any expenditure under this act, but not to exceed-

And so forth.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator is referring to section 17, I think, which reads that-

No project shall be constructed, nor any loan made directly or indirectly to construct any project unless, through its operations or from reasonable assurances or agreements, it is determined by the agencies making the expenditure or loan that the amount expended, or the loan, with interest, will be repaid within 40 years.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is right; it is section 17.

Mr. TAFT. That, of course, is entirely at the discretion of the Federal Road Administrator.

Mr. BARKLEY. He has to convince the Federal Loan Administrator that the terms of the contract and the whole contract are of such character and the revenues of the State or locality are of such character as reasonably to assure the repayment within that period.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator, then, would probably not object to the amendment I intend to offer to provide that the Federal Loan Administrator shall find or shall approve a finding that the improvement is self-liquidating and the cost will be paid back.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has criticized the use of the word "self-liquidating" so much that I do not think that question ought to be injected into the bill.

Mr. TAFT. Very well.

Mr. BARKLEY. I would have no objection to an amendment that would require more specifically that the Federal Loan Administrator shall find that the contract with a State or locality is of such nature that the money will be

Mr. TAFT. I will submit such an amendment.

There is another feature. As I understand, in two places the amendment proposes the condemnation of property. Paragraph (c) authorizes the Road Administrator "to acquire by purchase or condemnation any real property adjacent to any such proposed highway improvement." Again, in subsection (d), it speaks of acquiring "other real property, adjacent to any such highway improvement."

Then, in the old subsection (d), which now becomes (e), there is authority to improve "such real property in any way authorized by this act."

It seems to me that that restores to the bill the feature the committee took out, which authorized the Federal Government to go into the business of excess condemnation of acquiring property on both sides of the right-of-way adjacent—and "adjacent" is a pretty broad term—and then to go ahead and build on that property garages or apartment houses or any other kind of construction which might be authorized under the P. W. A.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is referring, is he not, to old subsection (d)?

Mr. TAFT. I am referring to old subsection (d).

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that the purpose of that section is to enable the Federal Government to do what it cannot now do. It cannot expend any money on a piece of property it has purchased until title has been certified by the Attorney General as being vested in the Government of the United States. So, under this section, if the Government goes in and starts condemnation proceedings, as it does now in the national parks and the Forestry Service, and has to wait until the condemnation suit is brought and compensation is fixed and title vested in the Government and the Attorney General certifies that fact, the Government may go in now and expend money upon the property, take possession of it, and when the compensation has been determined by the condemnation then, of course, the owner of the property is paid, but in the meantime the Government can go ahead and make improvements on it. That is the object of this provision.

Mr. TAFT. I will speak in my own time later, but I want to say that it seems to me the Senator has restored the excess-condemnation provision which the committee expressly struck out in the form of a bill. I do not think they are in the present (a), (b), and (c) paragraphs, and I do not think the committee approved of such excess-condemnation proceedings.

Mr. BARKLEY. The purpose of that section is to take these improvements out from under the prohibition of section 355, which compels the Government to delay the expenditure of any money on property until there has been a certification of title.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. I only want to call the Senator's attention to line 22, page 2, of his amendment, where the word "section" appears. The fact has been called to my attention, as a matter of draftsmanship, that the word should be "subsection" instead of "section."

Mr. BARKLEY. What page is the Senator referring to? Mr. BYRNES. Page 2, line 22, of the Senator's amendment. The language is:

but no such work shall be undertaken until a contract has been entered into between the Administration and a State, muncipality, or other public body, pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement and all real property acquired—

The amendment says under this section.

The section provides for the acquirement of other property.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think that is all right; but it would also be necessary to say "this section and subsection (e)."

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator would say "under this subsection in connection with such improvement," I think he would provide for just what was intended.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection to that language.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky and the Senator from South Carolina state what is intended?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have yielded to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am addressing my question to the Senator from Kentucky and the Senator from South Carolina, in view of what has been stated. What is intended?

Mr. BYRNES. I have called to the attention of the Senator from Kentucky the fact that on page 2, line 22, there appears the word "section"; but I am satisfied that the intention of the Senator from Kentucky and the committee was that it should be "subsection", so that the provision would apply only to the real property acquired pursuant to the subsection. The draftsmen have called attention to it, and the Senator from Kentucky states that he realizes that it should be done.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator speaks of the intention of the committee. I do not understand what is meant by that. This matter was not before the committee.

Mr. BYRNES. The members of the committee to whom the Senator from Kentucky talked with reference to this matter had the intention which the Senator from Kentucky states.

Mr. McCARRAN. What was their intention? Please state it in the language of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. The intention was that no such work should be undertaken—until a contract has been entered into between the Administration and a State, municipality, or other public body, pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement and all real property acquired under this subsection in connection with such improvement.

Mr. McCARRAN. What is meant by "and all real property acquired"?

Mr. BYRNES. The language means what it says—all real property acquired in connection with the construction of the road or bridge.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, still pursuing my inquiry, and again stating my objection to the Federal Government constructing these roads, and looking more closely to the language, I am confirmed in my conviction and expressed opinion that by this amendment the power to construct roads is vested, if not contemplated, in the Federal Government.

On page 2, line 20, the language of the amendment reads, referring again to the contract between the State or municipality and the Public Roads Administration of the Federal Government, that the State or municipality may enter into a contract "to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement." The clear deduction from that language certainly is that if the State or municipality is to lease the road, or if it is to purchase the road, the Federal Government must have constructed the road, because if the State or municipality constructs the road, it certainly would not purchase or lease the road; it would own the road, subject to the liability to return to the Government the amount of money advanced for the construction of the road.

I do not want any doubt thrown upon the matter. If this unfortunate bill should become a law, and if this section should remain in the statute in the fashion in which it is offered here by the able Senator from Kentucky, I should not want to have the Comptroller General or the Department of Justice construe this amendment to mean that in view of this rather ambiguous language the Federal Government only had the power to construct the road, and the State had the power to lease or purchase and maintain it. Therefore, to remove all doubt and to make it clear, I suggest that on line 20, page

2, before the word "purchase," we insert the word "construct," so that it shall read, commencing on line 16:

but no such work shall be undertaken until a contract has been entered into between the Administration and a State, municipality, or other public body, pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to construct, purchase, or lease—

And so forth. That will make it clear, in my opinion, that the State may construct the road; but if the Government itself does construct the road, it may be leased.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that I have no objection to that amendment. I think the States, municipalities, and so forth, can do it anyway; but if they cannot, I want them to be able to do it. I accept the amendment.

Mr. McNARY. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to say, in that connection, that the reason why the word "lease" is used is that there may be some States and some localities which have reached their limitation of indebtedness, and they could not go into debt, but they could enter into a lease by which they could repay the Government over a period of years.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate the intendments of the Senator. Mr. BARKLEY. I modify the amendment in the regard suggested by the Senator from Oregon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky also accept the modification of the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I stated that I would modify the amendment as suggested by the Senator from South Carolina, and also as suggested by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Kentucky a question, if I may.

On page 2, lines 14, 15, and 16, the amendment reads:

And to acquire by purchase or condemnation any real property adjacent to any such proposed highway improvement.

That is known as excess condemnation. There are only seven States in the Union—possibly eight—which provide by their constitutions for excess condemnation of land.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are 15 States which, either by constitutional or by legislative authority, provide for the purchase or acquirement of excess land.

Mr. McKELLAR. Well, let us say 15. Then necessarily the benefits of this bill would be confined to 15 States, because there would be no way of condemning excess property in other States. I do not think that ought to be the case.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course this condemnation and this acquirement are to be done by the Federal Government in connection with the construction of the highway. Then the highway is to be taken over by the State. The State does not have to engage in any condemnation proceedings.

Mr. McKELLAR. Unless the State's constitution or law provides for excess condemnation, is the Senator of the opinion that the Federal Government may step in and condemn any amount of land? And, by the way, this amendment as the Senator has drawn it, provides for the unlimited acquirement of such excess property.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I do not think it is unlimited. The amendment says "adjacent."

Mr. McKELLAR. All property in the United States would be adjacent to the road if we should keep on widening it. We could widen it until we got it all.

Mr. BARKLEY. That certainly would be a broad interpretation. [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. That would be a very broad interpretation, and perhaps too broad; but there is no limit on this language. It really applies, if the Senator is right, to only about 15 States. The benefits provided in the bill would go to only 15 States.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not agree with the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will state to the Senator what Mr. MacDonald has reported. Mr. MacDonald has reported that in California, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, and Rhode Island a limited amount of excess property may be condemned. Ohio also authorizes a limited amount; Wisconsin likewise, and Michigan likewise. Mr. MacDonald says there are seven States in which such condemnation is permitted under the State constitutions. In the others it is not permitted. Necessarily, in my judgment, the benefits of the act would be limited to the States which have such provisions in their constitutions. I may be mistaken. I have not examined the decisions.

Mr. BARKLEY. This is the way that would work: The Federal Government, we will say, would buy or acquire in some way 100 feet or 200 feet on either side of a road. When the road was completed, the State would take over what the Federal Government had acquired, namely, the road and the adjacent property. No question of condemnation would be involved. The State would just take over and maintain the property which the Federal Government had taken in connection with the highway; and in that connection there is one advantage to the State which I think probably has been lost sight of-that the Federal Government would get back only what it had paid for the improvement of the property, with interest. If there should be any increase in the value of the property taken over it would accrue to the State, and the State would get the benefit of it, not the Federal Government.

Mr. McKELLAR. That may be so; but I find from the report of the Bureau of Public Roads that in the case of Cincinnati v. Vester (281 U. S. 439), a very late case, decided in 1929, this statement was made by our Supreme Court:

We conclude that the proceedings for excess condemnation of the properties involved in these suits were not taken in conformity with the applicable law of the State, and in affirming the decrees below upon this ground we refrain from expressing an opinion upon the other questions that have been argued.

That is a very clear implication that we must follow the State law, and, according to the report of Mr. MacDonald, there are only seven or eight States which have constitutional provisions permitting the acquisition of excess property by condemnation. Therefore the benefits of the act would be limited to those States. Under those circumstances it seems to me it would be very unwise to adopt such a provision.

Mr. BARKLEY. The case to which the Senator has referred involved the interpretation of a city ordinance of the city of Cincinnati, under the constitution of Ohio, which the circuit court of appeals held authorized condemnation for a nonpublic use. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court of appeals, but expressly declined to consider the constitutional validity of excess condemnation. The circuit court of appeals held that the ordinance of the city of Cincinnati was constitutional; the case went to the Supreme Court, and they affirmed the decision, but did not pass on the question of whether the ordinance authorized the purchase of land for nonpublic uses.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, as I read the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky, it in no manner interferes with or changes the existing Federal-aid highway policy of the United States, but does properly supplement it. The existing policy was initiated in 1916, and contemplated that the United States would not build roads, but that the Federal Government would aid the States in the construction of highways. The way in which the United States does that is by the appropriation of a lump sum of money, which is apportioned among the States according to area, population, and mileage of post roads.

The law provides that when a State has a project which meets with the approval of the Bureau of Public Roads, and it submits that project to the Bureau and it is approved, it becomes a contractual obligation of the United States to pay its share of the cost.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Under the proposed act there is to be no distribution among the States. All of the money, if the President of the United States so desired, could go to one State, and the other 47 States would not receive a dollar. Am I correct about that?

Mr. HAYDEN. I do not think the Senator is correct.

Mr. BYRD. What is there in the bill which makes provision for any distribution among the States? It is left to the President of the United States to say where the money shall be spent. Would it not be possible for him to spend all the money in Virginia, for instance?

Mr. HAYDEN. I say that the President of the United States could take all this money and spend it in Virginia, yes, if he desired; but after all, that is not a sound suppo-

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, he could not spend it all in Virginia, could he, because Virginia has certain constitutional provisions, has it not, which would prohibit the application of the proposed law now being written?

Mr. McKELLAR. In furtherance of the statement made by the Senator from Nevada, is it not also true that the President would be limited to the seven States which authorize excess condemnation?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I started to tell the Senate what our policy is, and how this program has been initiated. I do not desire to be diverted by questions which obviously answer themselves, or by legal arguments.

Mr. McCARRAN. Just a moment, if the Senator will yield. He imputes to me that I propounded a question which answered itself.

Mr. HAYDEN. I was looking at the Senator from Virginia when I said that. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCARRAN. I was not answering myself; but I realize that the able Senator from Arizona is the master of Mr. HAYDEN. I am no master.

Mr. McCARRAN. He has made a very careful study of this matter. But there are some States which cannot meet the conditions imposed, of which I may say, without fear of contradiction from the able Senator from Arizona, his own State is one.

Mr. HAYDEN. Not at all. My State can meet all the obligations and conditions of the bill if it should desire to utilize its privilege. But let me proceed with my statement.

Mr. McCARRAN. If I may interrupt the Senator once more, this will be the last time.

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The pressure which would be brought to bear in order to acquire superhighways-

Mr. HAYDEN. There is no superhighway in this bill; there is no toll road in this bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. But they will be permitted.

Mr. HAYDEN. They cannot be permitted under this

Mr. McCARRAN. They will be permitted as highways.

Mr. HAYDEN. They cannot be permitted as highways under this measure. I am talking about toll roads and superhighways, and we both have the same idea. As I read the amendment, toll roads are completely out of the

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt, but the Senator from Kentucky has stated that a State may establish toll roads.

Mr. HAYDEN. Not a toll road.

Mr. McCARRAN. Then, there are no toll roads in the bill?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is correct. That is exactly the way I read it.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Arizona does not agree with the patron of the bill, the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McCARRAN. Will the Senator consent to strike out the term "toll roads" all through the bill?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly; because it is not in the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. It is in the amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. No; it is not in the amendment. The only thing in the amendment is that there may be constructed viaducts, tunnels, and bridges, on which tolls may be paid. It does not include toll roads, and the whole idea of superhighways is out of the bill the way it is drawn. But I ask Senators please to let me state why I think this proposal fits in with our existing Federal-aid system.

The Federal-aid system is based upon applications made to the Bureau of Public Roads for the construction of projects. The projects are initiated by the States. All the Bureau of Public Roads does is to pass upon the merit of the project; and if it fits into the law, it approves it. Then the United States contributes its part of the construction cost. That is what would happen under this bill. Under the change which has been made in the bill, nothing can be done unless first initiated by a State.

What is the difficulty we are now having with our Federalaid system? The difficulty primarily is over rights-of-way. Every 2 years we appropriate money for Federal aid, and there is a long lag in its expenditure. It drags and drags and drags. It drags so that last year, when the Senator from Tennessee and I and others on the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads came to make up the bill authorizing expenditures for the next 2 years, we found $150,000,000 of authorizations which were unused. Realizing that this long lag had taken place, that the money was not going to be used, we determined that it would not be necessary to appropriate so much money for the present fiscal year, and so we cut the Federal aid for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, from $125,000,000 to $100,000,000, and made it $115,000,000 for the fiscal year 1941

For the fiscal years 1938 and 1939 $50,000,000 a year was authorized for the elimination of grade crossings. We cut that to $20,000,000 for 1940 and to $30,000,000 for 1941, because the money was not being expended. The authorizations were piling up.

In the same bill, as the Senator from Tennessee has stated, we placed a provision directing the Bureau of Public Roads to make an investigation of the highway situation throughout the United States. The report states that the reason why Federal funds are not being spent, and why roads are not being built, is the bottle neck over rights-of-way. That is the great difficulty. This bill clears that situation.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Why can it not be cured in a much simpler way, by merely providing that Federal-aid money may be used for buying rights-of-way, instead of having an elaborate bill creating all kinds of power in the Federal Government to construct bridges, and highways, and other things of the kind?

Mr. HAYDEN. Let me suggest to the Senator where the right-of-way difficulty occurs. It does not occur in rural sections of the country, where we have been building most of our Federal-aid projects. Since 1916 we have been connecting up the different centers of population in the United States. Until 5 years ago not a dollar of Federal-aid money was expended in any town or city which had a population of more than 2,500. The result has been that we have fairly good highways between the cities, but when we get into the cities, we run into terrific traffic jams. It is the cost of rightsof-way inside the cities that is causing the great difficulty.

The pending bill permits a project to be set up by any municipality or by any State. It is theirs; they work it out, and then say, "In order to straighten out the traffic conditions the way they must be handled, we have to acquire rights-of-way."

There are two difficulties in securing rights-of-way. is the antiquated condemnation laws. A group of States, which the Senator from Tennessee has mentioned, have improved their laws and their constitutions so that they can handle the matter. In many cases, however, title must be acquired to the last tract of land before it is possible to proceed with the work, and perhaps a whole project may be tied up on that account.

The pending measure provides for a Federal statute, which is just the same as the statute we now have for the condemnation of Federal building sites. It is possible to take the property, appraise it, and pay for it afterward, so that the project may proceed. That is one big advantage.

The other feature that has held up the States is the lack of right-of-way money, and the pending bill provides for the funds to pay for the rights-of-way.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I know how very enthusiastic the Senator is about roads, and how very helpful he has been in aiding in the establishment of the road system, which I think is second to none, and under which we have had most wonderful results.

When I first came to Congress, some 28 years ago, no road in my section of the country went through as much as two counties, much less through a State, but now we have many of the most highly improved roads.

I am very much in favor of appropriations for highway improvement. I should like to see such an appropriation go into this measure. I call the attention of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] to the language on page 6 of the bill, line 11, under the heading "Highway Improvement"_

SEC. 5. Subject to the provisions of this act, and utilizing the services of and with the cooperation and consent of the States, municipalities, and other public bodies concerned, the Public Roads Administration shall have power—

(a) To make loans for highway improvements, or to construct, reconstruct, alter, extend, enlarge, improve, repair, and acquire highway improvements-

I would add right there-including viaducts, bridges, and rights-of-way-

Then the bill continues-with a view to promoting interstate commerce, aiding in the national defense, facilitating the use of the mails, or promoting the general welfare.

And stop right there. That would enable cities, States, and towns to do what we may call extraordinary road work; to put in viaducts where they are necessary, if they want to take advantage of borrowing money as provided in the bill. Such a plan would apply to every State and would not apply to only seven States.

I wish to ask the Senator to accept such an amendment, which would apply to all the States and would not commit us directly or indirectly to a toll system either of bridges

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I do not claim to be a legal authority at all, but, as I read this measure, it would constitute a Federal condemnation statute, which, according to the brief which has been submitted to us, Congress has a perfect right to enact, and which would be entirely constitutional; so that we could go into any State and condemn a right-of-way for a highway and for property fronting on each side of it. Only a few States have the right kind of a statute to permit such a proceeding to be prosecuted promptly. I think there should be a Federal statute applicable to the 48 States.

Mr. BARKLEY. In addition to that, Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee is suggesting practically that we simply loan to States and localities the money with which to do that.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is correct. Mr. BARKLEY. That would bar any city, county, or State that could not legally borrow more money, which had reached its debt limitation from participating in any of this program. But under this bill they can lease the highway facility, and over a period of years repay the cost of its construction. Without such a provision all those States, and all those counties, and all those cities that are constitutionally unable to borrow more money would be barred from participation in this program.

Mr. HAYDEN. I have a table before me which shows, as of June 30, 1939, the balances of Federal aid credit available to the several States, and it amounts to $228,180,000. One large item is $57,449,000 for the elimination of railroad grade crossings.

The railroad grade-crossing money is appropriated by Congress, and not one cent of it has to be matched. All the locality has to do, all that the State has to do is to provide the right-of-way. Why is it that that vast sum of money has accumulated, and we have not got rid of these death traps at which people are being killed all over the United States? It is because of the difficulty in getting the right-ofwav.

There is an illustration of this situation existing at Phoenix in my State. At the Union Station there the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe come in together. The principal road leading out of the city to the south has to cross both sets of tracks. People have been killed on that grade crossing. Freight trains come in there and block the traffic for great distances on either side. There is no place anywhere in the country where an underpass is more needed. Money was made available, appropriated by Congress, but the city has to provide the right-of-way. The city was bonded to its limit. The only way in the world it could get the money was to levy a special tax on top of every other tax. The city authorities hated to do that, and they tried in every conceivable way to get around it. They tried to get the State to take it over. Finally, after some 2 years delay they did levy the tax. If it had been possible for them to have the United States acquire that right-of-way for them, pay for it, and then apportion the $100,000, or whatever the amount necessary was, over a period of 8 or 10 years, they could have taken care of it in their budget. That is all there is to this proposal.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator from Arizona think that the Federal Government can acquire a right-of-way cheaper than can a State or a municipality?

Mr. HAYDEN. I should say, if a State had a good condemnation law such as that of the State of New York, which has an excellent taking statute, that it would be better to proceed under the State statute. I say, though, that when the State has a statute which is so antiquated that it cannot get possession of the entire property until it has brought the matter into court and taken the last parcel, then I would prefer to have the Federal Government take it.

Mr. BYRD. If the case were brought to court, would or would not a local jury assess a higher cost against the Federal Government than against the State or local governments?

Mr. HAYDEN. I know that juries in cases where the United States is to take, or a State or a county or municipality is to take, may argue, "Well, Uncle Sam, or the State, or the county, or the city is rich."

Mr. BYRD. I think what the Senator proposes would result in increased rather than decreased cost of the rightof-way. Most of the States have right-of-way laws to permit them to condemn property for public purposes and to pay for them later. I know we have such a law in Virginia.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator from Tennessee was quoting a statute-

Mr. BYRD. That statute related to excess condemnation, which is entirely different from condemning for public purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, there are some States which have power to take possession of the property and pay for it later, but most of them do not have such authority.

Mr. BYRD. Let me say to the Senator from Kentucky that is a matter for the States. In this instance the Senator from Arizona is advocating that the Government of the United States perform by means of a Federal condemnation what the State should do and then transfer the property to the State for State use.

Mr. HAYDEN. What is the difference so long as the public obtains the service to which it is entitled? What is the difference in the net result?

Mr. BYRD. The difference in the net result is that the cost of the right-of-way would be greatly increased if the Federal Government should acquire rather than have the State government acquire it.

Mr. HAYDEN. When a case is brought into court the jury fixes the value. Why would the jury place a higher value on the property simply because the Federal Government was condemning it?

Mr. BYRD. I think a local jury would undoubtedly be inclined to assess a higher cost to the Federal Government than it would to local governments. They know that if the local government were acquiring the property that government would have to pay for it out of the local taxes, whereas the Federal Government is regarded as a Santa Claus who gets its money out of thin air.

Mr. HAYDEN. The localities are obliged to tax in order to pay amounts assessed by juries for property acquired by them. I do not think there is much force to the Senator's argument

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. I would be happy to have the Senator explain how the city of Phoenix would contemplate repayment, assuming that the government should obtain the right-of-way for the underpass to which the Senator referred.

Mr. HAYDEN. The city could pay it under the bill, according to a contract which they would make, by which it would pay the amount over a period of years.

Mr. DANAHER. How would the city get the money?

Mr. HAYDEN. The city would get it by local taxation. It would be paid back over a period of years, so the burden would not be so great.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. Though the Senator from Arizona is not a member of the bar, I recognize him as one of the best lawyers in this body. I ask him how the city of Phoenix could make a valid contract unless it had adopted a provision with respect to payment of money under the contract?

Mr. HAYDEN. Under this bill the city of Phoenix would lease the property from the United States at an annual rental.

Mr. ADAMS. Does the city of Phoenix have such authority?

Mr. HAYDEN. I have not examined their charter, but if they do not have it, I think they would quickly fix the charter so they would have it.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Is it not true—I know it is in the State of Virginia—that the legislature of a State cannot bind the State for financial payment beyond the term of the particular legislature, which is to last for 2 years? Virginia is prohibited under the constitution from issuing bonds. It is likewise prohibited from making contracts for payment that must be paid out of taxes beyond the life of the general assembly that creates the obligation. I think the Senator will find that many sections of the country would be prohibited from getting any benefits from the long-term leases of which he speaks.

Mr. HAYDEN. I know that that very identical constitutional question was raised with respect to Public Works loans, and leases were made and worked out in an entirely satisfactory manner. I do not know the details of the leases, but I know it is done in that way.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator thinks that the chief advantage of this proposal is in the matter of the purchase of the right-of-way. He does not expect, does he, the Federal Government to build the roads or the State to build them from the particular funds provided under the pending bill?

Mr. HAYDEN. No.

Mr. BYRD. But that then there will be another fund that the State would use to build the road?

Mr. HAYDEN. I say that the chief advantage which is going to accrue from the enactment of this proposed legislation is that it will clear up the right-of-way difficulty.

Mr. BYRD. Then, why not pass a simple statute giving the Federal Government the right to condemn property for roads?

Mr. HAYDEN. This is a simple statute to do that.

Mr. BYRD. But connected with it is an appropriation of $500,000,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. What is the use of enacting a statute to condemn property and have no money with which to pay for it?

Mr. BYRD. The Senator called attention to some $210,-000,000 of unused balance which could be used.

Mr. HAYDEN. No; I did not say that. I say those balances have been appropriated and made available to the States for the purpose of building Federal-aid highways, and for no other purposes. They cannot be used for rights-of-way.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. How much of the land of the State of Arizona belongs to the Federal Government?

Mr. HAYDEN. About 65 percent.

Mr. McCARRAN. In the State of Nevada 85 percent belongs to the Federal Government. In the Senator's State 65 percent is entirely available now, and no condemnation for Federal highways is at all essential. In the State of Nevada on 85 percent of the land no condemnation is essential at all; no condemnation proceedings are necessary. Why does the Senator camouflage his proposition?

Mr. HAYDEN. I am not camouflaging the situation. In my own city of Phoenix we had to buy a right-of-way for an underpass.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am speaking of the State of Arizona and the State of Nevada, and not about the cities.

Mr. HAYDEN. On the roads and streets of the United States there are some 30,000,000 motor vehicles; and the congestion is in the cities and towns. That is where the underpasses and overpasses are located; that is where we are encountering the right-of-way difficulty; that is where the streets are narrow and have to be widened; that is where we must make improvements; and that is where property must be condemned to make the improvements, because the property is settled and in private ownership. I say that the enactment of the pending bill would do more to release the lagging impounded Federal funds than any other step which possibly could be taken.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Has the Senator found any lagging, impounded funds during the past 6 years, during which time he has had almost exclusive control over the Federal highways of this country as a member of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. HAYDEN. I have just read to the Senate that $228,-000,000 of Federal-aid funds are now available which are not used.

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; but where were the lagging projects due to a lack of facilities for condemnation?

Mr. HAYDEN. I should like to read from Mr. MacDonald's report in that connection.

Mr. McKELLAR. What page?

Mr. HAYDEN. Page 114. It is under the heading "The Nature of the Right-of-Way Problem." I think this one paragraph will state it:

The most influential causes of delay in effecting the needed changes hitherto have been the inadequacy of available funds and the overpowering legal obstacles and inhibitions that stand in the way of obtaining essential rights-of-way. These will continue to retard action and eventually build up a formidable burden of construction expenditures unless early provision is made to deal adequately with the problem.

We asked Mr. MacDonald to investigate this problem. This is his finding, and the proposal made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] is the answer. It will do the trick. It will do two things. Where we have legal obstacles, to which Mr. MacDonald referred, such as inadequate State condemnation laws, we will have a Federal statute which will permit us to step in and take the property, just as we take the site for a Federal building. Then we will have the cash to pay for it. Those two things are required, and the bill provides them.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator mean to convey the idea that the Federal Government is to step into the confines of a sovereign State and condemn rights-of-way?

Mr. HAYDEN. On the application of the State.

Mr. McCARRAN. On the application of the State?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is all.

Mr. McCARRAN. But the State now has the power to apply; and the State has had the power.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. MacDonald finds that the overpowering legal obstacles and inhibitions that stand in the way of obtaining essential rights-of-way have made it impossible for the States to do that. I have before me a statement with respect to $228,000,000 worth of work which should be done, but which has not been done. I pointed out $57,000,000 worth of grade-crossing eliminations with respect to which the Federal Government pays the whole cost, and the only thing that stops the work is the lack of rights-of-way.

Mr. McCARRAN. I take it that condition was not in the State of Arizona or the State of Nevada.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator contend that the entire question has been held up because of right-of-way difficulties?

Mr. HAYDEN. We started in with $50,000,000. The first money provided for grade-crossing elimination was back in.....

Mr. BYRD. I was speaking of the $200,000,000 item to which the Senator referred.

Mr. HAYDEN. Highway work is lagging on the average in most of the States from a year and a half to 2 years; and the greatest single cause of the lag is, first, the difficulty about acquiring rights-of-way, and, secondly, the difficulty in finding the money to pay for the rights-of-way. This bill would cure both difficulties.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let me take the last statement of the Senator and divide it. The Senator referred to the difficulty of acquiring rights-of-way. The difficulty of acquiring rights-of-way is a matter of law.

Mr. HAYDEN. That is a matter of law. This bill corrects that.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Federal Government propose to step in and supersede the State law in the matter of acquiring rights-of-way?

Mr. HAYDEN. If a State highway department is operating under a State statute which is antiquated and is causing difficulty, it will have the option of applying to the Federal Government to use the Federal statute. If the State has a satisfactory statute, that will not be done.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am taking the statement of the Senator. If that be true, I shall, of course, oppose the bill, because I believe the sovereignty of the State to be paramount.

Mr. HAYDEN. How can the State sovereignty be impaired when the State makes application to invoke the Federal statute?

Mr. McCARRAN. The State will be forced to do it or it will not obtain any Federal aid whatever.

Mr. BARKLEY. It cannot be done without the consent of the State.

Mr. HAYDEN. No; it cannot be done without the consent of the State. If the Senator says that the State is being forced to do something for which the State applies, I cannot argue with him.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will argue from the standpoint of the able Senator's own State, which in some respects is comparable to my State. I say that the Federal agency can be used to force the State into a position in which it will do everything to bring into operation the power of the Federal Government for condemnation.

Mr. HAYDEN. My State does not need a condemnation statute. It has a very good one. However, we did need the money to pay for the property taken. The city of Phoenix could not obtain the property without levying a special tax and collecting it all in 1 year. There should be a place to borrow the money.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is speaking of the city of Phoenix.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. He is speaking of a municipality.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. He is not speaking of a State-wide situation.

Mr. HAYDEN. Of course not.

Mr. McCARRAN. Because if he is, his whole argument fails.

Mr. HAYDEN. I have stated over and over again that the bottle neck, in acquiring rights-of-way, the place where the trouble is in the United States, is in the cities and towns. That situation has tied up the program more than has any other condition. The building of the proper kind of roads will do much toward saving human life. The proper kind of roads will enable people to get in and out of congested areas. If we look at the matter from a humanitarian point of view, the bill will become one of the greatest acts ever passed by the Congress.

Mr. McCARRAN. Of course, I am looking at it from a humanitarian point of view, and I do not think it would be anything of the kind. The able Senator from Arizona is using a very cogent argument. When a lawyer offers the last word to a jury to save the neck of his client, he uses such an argument. However, the argument does not apply in this case. It is lost in this case.

Mr. HAYDEN. I know that more persons are being killed every year in the United States in highway accidents than were killed in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. I know that highway engineers can design roads which will save human lives. A case of this very kind was brought to my attention the other day by a gentleman who gave me information from the State of Michigan. He called attention to a twoway highway which was highly congested. Innumerable accidents have occurred on that highway, with resulting loss of life and property. What is needed is to have the highway made into a four-lane highway with separated traffic. The State Highway Department of Michigan will take immediate advantage of the act to borrow the money to obtain the right-of-way; and if it can obtain the right-of-way money, the State of Michigan has sufficient money of its own and sufficient Federal-aid money to establish a four-lane highway and stop the slaughter of human beings and the loss of property. The same thing is true all over the United States.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Has the State of Michigan been deprived of the right of acquiring right-of-way prior to this time?

Mr. HAYDEN. The State did not have the money.

Mr. McCARRAN. But it could have acquired right-of-way by condemnation.

Mr. HAYDEN. It could not pay for it.

Mr. McCARRAN. After acquiring the right-of-way it could have applied to the Federal Government to pay for it, could it not?

Mr. HAYDEN. It could do so under the provisions of this bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Under the provisions of the bill the Federal Government steps in to condemn the right-of-way.

Mr. HAYDEN. Not unless the State requests it. If the State has a satisfactory statute, we are not bothered with condemnation at all; but if the State has not that kind of a statute the Federal statute can be used. It is a double-barreled affair. One barrel or both may be used.

Mr. President, I have concluded my remarks.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, addressing myself to some observations made last night with reference to this particular subject, I crave the indulgence of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY]. I know he has been exercising the greatest forbearance and patience, but I should like to impose further upon him if he will permit me.

I ask the Senator to direct his attention to page 3 of his amendment, on which subsection (d) appears.

According to the Senator's amendment, the Public Roads Administration shall have the power to acquire in the name of the United States property within a State, by the power of eminent domain or otherwise.

Is it not the purpose, just as the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has so frankly stated it to be his view, that under the provisions of this subsection the United States would acquire the power to go into any State which, as the Senator from Arizona put it, does not have a satisfactory statute, and condemn land?

Mr. BARKLEY. With the consent and cooperation of the local authorities.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator please point out the section of the amendment or the bill under which he finds that qualifying language?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Federal Government may not go into a State for the purpose of building a tunnel, bridge, or viaduct without the consent of the State. It may not go into the State for the purpose of building a road or buying property in connection with the construction of a road, or improving it, widening it, and so forth, without a contract with the State or local community to take it over, operate it, and pay for it after it is constructed.

Mr. DANAHER. Let me point out to the Senator that I must respectfully disagree with him and, by way of illustration, direct his attention to the fact that the amendment does not say, in subsection (d), that it is for the purposes of this section.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course this whole allocation of funds is for highway construction, and it is necessary to read subsection (d) in connection with subsections (a) and (b). The words "Subject to the provisions of this act" apply to all the subsections, not only in this amendment but the following subsections of the bill; so I do not think there can be any doubt about that.

Mr. DANAHER. Has the Senator objection, then, to interpolating in subsection (d) language which definitely will limit it to the consent that is required under subsection

Mr. BARKLEY. If any clarification is needed there, I should have no objection to it. I should like to see the language before agreeing to it.

Mr. DANAHER. Then may I direct the Senator's attention to page 7 of the bill itself, the former subsection (d), which will now become (e)? Has the Senator it at hand?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I have it. Mr. DANAHER. If the Senator will direct his attention to lines 19 and 20, he will find that the bill would, notwithstanding the provisions of section 355 of the Revised Statutes, authorize the action contemplated. If we examine section 355 we find that that is a section which has always required consent of the legislatures of the States before there is a taking of the land; but by the language of this bill it is obviously the purpose to do away with requiring the consent of the legislature. Is not that so?

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the consent of the highway department of any State or local public body is required before any expenditure, or any taking, or any activity under this bill can be undertaken by the Federal Government.

Last night the Senator called attention to the use of the word "act" in line 18. That was either a misprint or an oversight. It ought to be "section." I am glad he called attention to the word, and I propose to make that correction. But all this program, whether it is the acquirement of property or whether it is the condemnation of property, must be as a result not only of the cooperation but of the consent of the State authorities in charge of highways, and also of a contract with the State or local highway authorities that they will take over the highway, maintain it, operate it, and repay the Federal Government. But in order that the Federal Government may do these things, as the basis of the contract, either under the subsection pertaining to highways or the subsection pertaining to bridges, tunnels, and viaducts, it must have power to take the property by condemnation or gift or purchase.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator for his explanation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President— Mr. DANAHER. Does the Senator from Nevada wish me to yield to him for a question?

Mr. McCARRAN. Perhaps my question may not be apropos the matter or thought which the Senator from Connecticut has in mind. I want to concur in the statement made by the Senator from Connecticut just a moment ago; and I should like to propound what is probably a three-barreled question, because the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] may leave the floor.

I desire to know whether or not the bill, or the bill plus the amendment which is now offered by the able leader from Kentucky, proposes to do away with all control over highways in the respective States?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, answering that question, I can say categorically that the answer is "No." We do not propose to do away with any control of highways in States.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does it mean, then, that there shall be an involvement between the Federal Government and the State governments as to the control or supervision of the highways in the respective States?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; it does not. It means that whenever the Federal Government builds a tunnel, bridge, or viaduct, or builds a road, the State takes it over, maintains it, and operates it, and the Federal Government is free of it, except that it does have the obligation of the State or subdivision to repay the money.

Mr. McCARRAN. Now, just one more question, and I hope it may conclude the matter. I do not want to be captious about it. I now invite the attention of the able Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the able Senator from Kentucky, and the able Senator from Connecticut, who has yielded to me. Does this measure do away with Federal aid in highways, or the system by which and through which we have operated in past years?

Mr. HAYDEN. In no manner whatsoever does it impair or change or in any way affect the existing Federal-aid highway system. Upon the other hand, it assists it to function in the way it should.

Mr. BARKLEY. That program, under which we have been operating since 1916, will continue to go forward just as it has, regardless of this act. This act supplements it.

Mr. McCARRAN. But may I say that under that program we have never borrowed a dollar, and now we are forced to borrow; otherwise, we get no highway system.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, that all depends. The Senator says "we have never borrowed a dollar." Whom does he mean by "we"?

Mr. McCARRAN. I mean the States of the Union. Mr. BARKLEY. They may not have borrowed any money from the Federal Government; but many of them have bonded themselves over a period of years to obtain money to build highway systems. One of the most progressive States and most forward States in the Union in the construction of highways is the State of North Carolina. The State of Illinois several years ago bonded itself. Nearly all the States have done that. They did not borrow the money from the United States, but they borrowed it from private lenders, those who were interested in investing money in State bonds. This bill only provides another way by which the States may obtain the facilities without in any way interfering with their jurisdiction to operate, maintain, control, and run the roads, subject to their own laws. There is nothing in the bill which gives the Federal Government jurisdiction over any violation of the traffic or other laws of any State or any city in the matter of control.

Mr. McCARRAN. I still am obligated to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] and addressing my question to the Senator from Arizona. I hope I may be wrong in this contention. I want the Sentaor from Arizona to correct me if I am wrong. I shall still insist, however, that I am right. [Laughter.]

For the past 25 years we have gone on with Federal-aid roads through the Western States. Am I right in that state-

Mr. HAYDEN. One hundred percent.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator's State of Arizona, my State, and all the other Western States have been obligated to the Federal Government, because the Federal Government has contributed so as to make it possible for the public to travel in our part of the country. My contention is that if this bill goes into effect we shall have set aside the system under which and by which we have gone forward in the past 25 years, and we shall now obligate ourselves to borrow money from the Federal Government or from some agency backed by the Federal Government for the construction of these highways to which the Federal Government heretofore has been contributing, and to which the Federal Government should contribute.

Mr. HAYDEN. It is obvious that the Senator cannot be convinced against his will, because he would be of the same opinion still. I have just as keen an appreciation as has the Senator of all the Federal Government has done for the development of Federal-aid highways in the Senator's State and my State, which perhaps have benefited more than any other States in the Union. I assure the Senator that it is my considered judgment that there is nothing in the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky which will in any manner interfere with, change, modify in any way, or do anything other than cooperate with and assist our States when we need help.

Mr. McCARREN. Why, then, the amendment?

Mr. HAYDEN. The amendment is necessary, as I stated to the Senator, because-

Mr. McCARRAN. Why the amendment as against the present system?

Mr. HAYDEN. It is not as against the present system; it is a supplement to it.

Mr. McCARRAN. It does not supplement it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Oh, yes; it does.

Mr. McCARRAN. It could not do that. The Senator is entirely in error about that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Truman in the chair). The Senator from Connecticut has the floor. Does he yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. DANAHER. Has the Senator from Nevada con-

Mr. McCARRAN. No; I desire to ask a question. Why do we substitute a new system for the system which has been tried out for 25 years, if the new system does not offer anything in the way of advantage? I address that question to the able Senator from Arizona.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit my own interpretation of the matter, let me offer just this much: I heard the question discussed. I was on the committee. The old system does continue. This measure purports to supplement it. As the Senator from Arizona states, it provides a brand-new condemnation statute, and in States which do not have what the Federal Loan Administration thinks are satisfactory statutes this measure will supersede the State statutes requiring consent of the States before land is taken. In other words, in that particular it represents a brand-new innovation under which the Federal sovereignty will be superimposed upon the States and the title taken. whether they like it or not.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am entirely in accord with the construction applied to this amendment and to the bill by the able Senator from Connecticut. What I fear is that there will be a supersedence of Federal control into the States; and we have relinquished State rights so far that I am reluctant to go much further.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator for his views, Mr. President.

I should like to direct to the attention of the Senator from Kentucky one question, as to whether or not he will accept an amendment to subsection (d) of his amendment on page 3, ahead of the word "To", in the first line, to insert "With the consent of the States."

I ask the Senator to accept that amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am willing to put in the same language there that is in the previous subsection.

Mr. DANAHER. Let me call to the Senator's attention the fact that on page 1, in line 6, the Senator has written his amendment and included the words "With the consent and cooperation of the State." Is there any reason why a similar amendment should not be made at the point stated by me?

Mr. BARKLEY. I am willing to put the same language in subsection (d)

Mr. DANAHER. In line 3?
Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; "With the consent and cooperation of the State, municipal, or other public-highway agency."

Mr. DANAHER. "To acquire," and so forth? Mr. BARKLEY. "To acquire"; yes. I accept that amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator. I ask the Senator to join me in a unanimous-consent request that we-

Mr. BARKLEY. Wait a moment. I want to clear up this matter. I am willing to modify my amendment, in order to simplfy the parliamentary situation, by inserting on page 3, before the word "To" in line 3, the words "With the consent and cooperation of the State, municipal, or other public-highway agency."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is modified as stated by the Senator from Kentucky

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator. I ask the Senator to join me in a unanimous-consent request that we amend. on page 7 of the bill, in line 18, the word "act" to read "section."

Mr. BARKLEY. I am glad to modify the amendment to read "section," because that is what the language is intended to mean; and it could not apply to any other part of the bill anyway, because it is limited to the road provisions. I think it ought to be "section" instead of "act."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the word "act" in line 18, page 7 of the bill, will be changed to read "section."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Would not the intent of the author of the bill be carried out better if there were a comma at the end of line 12 on page 7?

Mr. BARKLEY. After the word "hereunder"?

Mr. AUSTIN. No; after the word "condemnation."

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator apparently does not have the same print of the bill I have. Line 12 on page 7 ends with the word "hereunder" and a semicolon.

Mr. AUSTIN. I will have to find it in Senate bill 2864. I had before me Senate bill 2759.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is the old print. What section and subsection is it?

Mr. AUSTIN. It is subsection (g) and would follow the proposed amendment of the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. That would be subsection (h), for the subsections are to be relettered.

Mr. AUSTIN. The text seems to be entirely different. Was the text changed? I can state what I fear. The language is "to acquire by purchase, but not by condemnation for investment purposes."

Mr. BARKLEY. That is not in the bill. That has all been stricken out.

Mr. AUSTIN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I invite the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to line 13, on page 7, as to which there was a discussion last night. The Senator at that time said that he would like to think about the amendment I suggested at that time, and which I asked him to accept, in line 13, to strike out the word "purpose" and insert in lieu thereof the words "purposes of this section," so that the first line would read, "to expend moneys for the purposes of this section," and so forth.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is entirely acceptable. Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky modifies his amendment as suggested.

Mr. DANAHER. I shall conclude in just a moment. Last night I made references, reported at page 14110 of the RECORD, in which I stated I was paraphrasing a certain editorial comment, or newspaper article, and, that the reference may be direct, let me say that the Washington Post, on the front page, contains this item:

A complete break between President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley can be averted only by a full exchange of views concerning the 1940 campaign, says Ernest Lindley, probably the closest to the White House of all special writers. See his article on page 3 of the editorial section.

In the editorial section there was an article entitled "Parting of Ways," by Ernest Lindley, from which I quote:

Farley, on the other hand, greatly overemphasizes the importance of the Democratic Party politicians. He shares their belief that they "made" Rocsevelt and that they are entitled to cash in on Roosevelt's accomplishments.

The answer of Roosevelt's friends is that while the Democratic Party nominated Roosevelt, it did not elect him, either in 1932 or in 1936. Roosevelt is the leader of a movement of which the Democratic Party is only a part.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, is that what the able Senator meant by the term "new movement"?

Mr. DANAHER. Yes. It is distinctly what I referred to as the "new movement."

Mr. McCARRAN. I notice the Senator last night repeatedly referred to the "new movement."

Mr. DANAHER. I did. Mr. McCARRAN. I wondered whether it was a 17-jewel movement, or a Swiss movement, or what it was. I could not understand what the new movement was.

Mr. DANAHER. It is a movement which evolves itself in a mainspring fashion, from the center out, I will say to the Senator, and apparently ultimately is to be all-inclusive, and the pending bill is typical.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. TAFT. I should like to offer an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky, and I ask that it be stated.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator kindly yield to me for a moment?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, there has gone forward in this body during the last 12 hours a propaganda-and I choose to term it a propaganda—whereby it is proposed that my amendment which is to come up, to revive and restate the prevailing wage amendment in America, shall be set aside so far as the pending bill is concerned, with the promise that it will be incorporated in the third deficiency bill.

I desire to set the Senate right on this matter. If that provision were to be incorporated in the third deficiency bill it would mean that it would have to come out of the Committee on Appropriations, and that would contemplate the necessity of setting aside a rule of the Senate, which would require a two-thirds majority. So let the Senate not be dissuaded, let it not be misled. I propose to offer the amendment-and to persist in the amendment until it is adopted or voted down by a record vote-so as to do away with that which has set America in a turmoil, by restating the prevailing wage amendment as it was stated when the relief bill was before this body, and was adopted by this body, and rejected by a conference committee. So, let it not be said with any consistency or cogency that we could set it aside and incorporate it in the third deficiency bill, because that is out of the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky it is proposed on page 2, line 20, after the word "covenants" to insert "to pay a purchase price or rental sufficient in amount to reimburse the administration in not more than 40 years for the expenditures it has made in connection with such highway improvement and."

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I think I can state what the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky does. In one respect, in my mind, it is an improvement, because the bill introduced finally, and which we are now considering, authorizes the Federal Government to build its own roads, and maintain and operate those roads. I think it is most important that we get rid of that power, for if the Federal Government ever starts into the business of building Federal roads in the United States, whether they are supposed to be toll roads or whatever they may be, I do not believe we are going to stop short of a complete Federal system, adding to the Federal appropriations a vast additional expense over what we have today.

The amendment attempts to cut that out, and provide merely that the Federal Government may build a road providing they have a contract with the State or municipality concerned to take the road off their hands.

The amendment is offered because I do not believe the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky quite carries out the purpose intended. The amendment as I see it provides only that "no such work shall be undertaken"-and I suppose the word "work" may be considered to mean condemnation or acquisition of real estate, as well as the construction work:

No such work shall be undertaken until a contract has been entered into * * * pursuant to which such State, municipality, or other public body covenants to purchase or lease and to maintain and operate the improvement.

But a contract or lease does not mean much. A contract or lease means only that they may contract to lease the road for only 1 year, to pay $1 rental, perhaps. It does not really bind the State to take the road off the Federal Government's hands, or to repay the Government. That is why I offer this amendment, and ask the Senator from Kentucky to accept it. The amendment proposes, after the term "covenants to purchase or lease", to insert the words "and to pay a purchase price or rental sufficient in amount to reimburse the administration in not more than 40 years" for the expenditure it may make. In other words, if we are going so far as to build a Federal road—and I personally disapprove of that policy, but I understand the argument made by the Senator from Arizona-if we are going that far, we certainly ought not to do it unless we make certain that the State agrees by contract to take the road off our hands, or to pay for it.

Mr. HAYDEN. What is the difference between what the Senator is proposing and what is already in the bill in sec-

Mr. TAFT. Section 17 is a very general provision. It does not apply to the contract involved. Someone may hopefully say that he thinks the State will lease the road for a year, and think that then they will lease it for another year. I think the general provisions of the section are not sufficient, in the light of its very indefinite language. If section 17 means that, why does the Senator object to putting it into this section also?

Mr. HAYDEN. Why does the Senator want to have us say the same thing twice?

Mr. TAFT. I do not think we would be saying the same thing twice.

Mr. HAYDEN. Section 17, it appears to me, makes it perfectly obvious that it is not possible to construct any project, unless, through its operations or from reasonable assurances or agreements, it is determined by the agencies making the expenditure or loan that the amount expended, or the loan, with interest, will be repaid within 40 years.

Mr. TAFT. There is one very uncertain phrase, namely, "from reasonable assurances." What on earth is a "reasonable assurance" of a municipality? Can a mayor make a "reasonable assurance"? What is it? I do not know. It does not say a contract, but it says "a reasonable assurance."

Mr. HAYDEN. The amendment of the Senator from Kentucky says a contract.

Mr. TAFT. It says a lease, but a lease is not a contract to buy. A lease would generally provide for taking the road off the hands of the Government for a while, and perhaps paying a dollar or so as rental.

Mr. HAYDEN. "A dollar or so" would conflict with section 17.

Mr. BARKLEY. A dollar or so a year would not pay anything back in 40 years.

Mr. TAFT. They may say, "We have not any tax money this year, but come around next year and we will give you a reasonable assurance"—whatever that may be, or whatever it may be worth-"that we will pay a bigger rental." I think the language is so wide open that there is no real assurance that the Federal Government would not get the road back on its hands as a Federal road.

Mr. BARKLEY. I agree with the Senator from Arizona that the language now proposed is not necessary, but I am willing to accept it. Of course, if the locality is able to buy the road outright, when it is completed, that ends the matter, and the question of 40 years does not enter. There may be in some States some sort of inhibition against a contract running for 40 years which would be interpreted as a contract which might require a vote of the people.

Mr. TAFT. Say "not more than 40 years." Mr. BARKLEY. After the word "or" in the Senator's amendment, why not insert the phrase "from year to year," so that it would provide that they should pay a purchase price or from year to year an annual rental sufficient to pay back in 40 years?

Mr. TAFT. That is all right. I accept that.

Mr. BARKLEY. With that modification, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky modifies his amendment.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I have only one other objection to the section. I myself think that the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency struck out the so-called excess condemnation provision. I cannot find in the bill as introduced by the Senator from Kentucky anything which authorizes anyone to think that the Federal Government can buy property on both sides of a right-of-way. I think the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency disapproved of that principle. I think they disapproved of the idea that the Federal Government could buy property on both sides of a right-of-way with the idea that they might make some profit on it.

The original bill I may say contained very elaborate language as to how the Government was to buy land if it thought that within 20 years it would be worth more than the price paid for it. In other words, a distinctly speculative proposition was contemplated. Those words are now all stricken out by the committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Truman in the Chair). Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator says the committee struck that all out. In subsection (c), line 11, the language is:

Use, sell, exchange, or otherwise dispose of highway improvements or other rail property necessary or convenient-

There was ambiguity about the word "convenient."

Mr. TAFT. No. no; that word "convenient" is all right. But convenient for what? For carrying out any of its functions hereunder. The only functions hereunder are to build a road; not to make a profit on real estate.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, this amendment, which requires the Government to enter into a contract with a State or locality to take off its hands not only the road but the property which it has bought at the price which has been paid for it, so as to reimburse the Government for the amount, with interest, certainly eliminates the element of profit to the Federal Government. If there is profit it will accrue to the State, because it gets it at actual cost.

Mr. TAFT. Buying land on both sides of the highway is a beautiful theory.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I have been disturbed because of this general language giving the right to condemn. The bill provides that the Federal Government has the power of condemnation of any real property adjacent to any proposed highway. I realize that the right of eminent domain is an essential attribute of sovereignty, in fact it is concomitant with sovereignty, but I had always throught that the right of eminent domain was in some way coupled with a public use. Unless the power of eminent domain has some relation to a very definite public use, I apprehend the rights of private property in this country are very insecure. Neither the Federal Government nor any governmental subdivisions should, without consent, divest an individual of his land unless it is for a public purpose, and this bill should contain some limitations and safeguards. I agree that the rights of an individual must yield where the public interest is involved, but this subdivision and development by the Federal Government scheme set forth in this bill does not embrace my idea of a public interest or use.

There would be nothing under this bill to prohibit the Federal Government from condemning land that any little bureau chief might decide was adjacent to public highways and devote it to the purpose of building stores, tourists' camps, or even hot-dog stands, or any other private use. I cannot see how that is impressed with a public interest. Has the Senator from Ohio, who is an able lawyer, given any thought to that particular point?

Mr. TAFT. I think it has always been the rule that that is not a public use. Seven States have amended their constitutions because it was unconstitutional to give their municipalities or other public authorites or bodies the right to acquire adjacent real estate, but in the case of Vester against Cincinnati it was contended that, in spite of that provision of the Ohio Constitution, it was contrary to the United States Constitution to condemn such property.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is what I had in mind.

Mr. TAFT. While the Supreme Court opinion is not finally conclusive, it is sufficiently so that the city of Cincinnati abandoned its effort to carry out any excess condemnation, and constructed the improvement without it, and, so far as I know, the question has not been finally settled.

Mr. RUSSELL. It has been repeatedly said this afternoon that these properties would not be purchased or condemned without the consent of the State or local subdivisions of government, but it occurs to me that we might occasionally give attention to individual property rights and the rights of the individual that might have property in land adjacent to the highway that the Federal Government might seek to condemn. This amendment, if I have the proper construction of it, would give to the Federal Government the power to condemn lands in States where perhaps the State constitution did not give any such power, but then by a contract which the State or the subdivision of government might enter into with the Federal Government the State could circumvent the provisions of their own State constitutionif the Federal Government had the right to proceed under the Federal Constitution-and condemn the lands adjacent to the highway by taking lands for uses prohibited by the constitution of the State.

Mr. TAFT. I think the Senator states clearly the law with respect to the matter.

Mr. HAYDEN. Let me state the question not as a lawyer but as I view it as a layman. Take, for example, the city of Baltimore. Let us say it is necessary there to build a bridge across the Patapsco River, and in order to get to the bridge there must be an approach road at each end. Would it not be the part of wisdom for the city of Baltimore in condemning the right-of-way in order to get to the bridge to condemn not only the narrow strip of land for the roadway but also some property adjacent to it, which at some future time it could sell and thus recoup itself for some of the money expended?

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, my answer is no. It would probably lose money on it. These things look very nice on paper, but they work out very poorly. The best thing I think is to leave it alone. I do not see why the United States Government when building a viaduct across the railroad tracks in the city of Phoenix should buy property on both sides of that right-of-way and hold it until it could sell it at some time in the future. I do not see why, if they are going to help the city of Phoenix to build a viaduct across the railroad tracks, they should not confine themselves to getting the right-ofway for that viaduct.

Mr. HAYDEN. Then, it is the Senator's contention that when a large sum of money is to be spent in a public improvement of this kind the owner of the property is entitled to all the unearned increment that comes from the improvement. and that the public has no interest in it at all? I can state to the Senator that Mr. MacDonald in his report shows us instances in England and in the United States where very substantial returns have been made by acquiring more land than was necessary for the right-of-way.

Mr. TAFT. At times the Government has engaged in successful real-estate speculation. I do not approve of the Government engaging in such speculation.

I offer an amendment to the bill which I ask to have stated. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, in lines 14, 15, and 16, it is proposed to strike out the words:

And to acquire by purchase or condemnation any real property adjacent to any such proposed highway improvement.

And on page 3, in lines 8, 9, and 10, to strike out the

Or other real property adjacent to any such highway improvement or necessary or convenient for carrying out any of its functions hereunder.

Mr. TAFT. In other words, Mr. President, I move to strike out the words which are conferring the power to acquire by purchase or condemnation the property adjacent to the improvement.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Does the Senator from Ohio know whether there is a constitutional prohibition against the acquisition by an agency of the State of excess lands adjacent to highways? In other words, does any constitutional prohibition exist against an agency of the State making a valid contract with the Government whereby it may turn over to the Federal Government the authority to condemn?

Mr. TAFT. No; I would question whether it could do so.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. Can the Senator give us any information as to whether or not any State or subdivision of any State ever experimented in this field?

Mr. TAFT. I stated that there have been, I think, a few instances, which are listed in Mr. McDonald's report. Seven States have authorized it, and I think one or two have done it. I know that in the city of Cincinnati, after carrying the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, the decision against the right of the city to do so, in spite of the Ohio constitutional provision, was so discouraging that the city abandoned the project and proceeded without it.

Mr. WALSH. Can the Senator give us any information as to the result of the experiments of the seven States to which he has referred?

Mr. TAFT. I am afraid I cannot do so at this time.

Mr. WALSH. I observe that the able Senator from Kentucky yesterday called attention to the fact that this plan had been undertaken and was in operation in England. Am I correct about that?

Mr. TAFT. It has been done in one or two cases, but I may say that incidentally it increases the net cost of the right-of-way about three times, because the property on each side is going to be just as expensive as the right-ofway itself. So, it results in piling up the cost on the Federal Government and adds to the difficulty of getting the money back. Sometimes the Government engages in successful real-estate speculation, but I am one who does not believe that the Government should engage in real-estate speculations, which may not be successful in many cases.

Mr. WALSH. I think the Senator's observations carry a good deal of weight. I think it may be a dangerous course to pursue, but I should like to hear what the Senator from Kentucky has to say with respect to how the experiment worked in England.

Mr. BARKLEY. In England they built a highway from London to the sea, and they paid for it out of the income from the use of the property which they bought adjacent to the highway, which they put to use in the way of concessions and rentals. They were able to control what went on on the adjacent property, and the entire cost of that project was paid for out of the property which they purchased on the adjacent sides of the road.

The Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], who is not present, called attention to the fact that they did the same thing in New York. The State is operating gasoline stations on the adjacent property. Of course, there is no contemplation that that would happen under this bill. The fact that the State has got to make a contract with the Government to take it over and operate and maintain it at the conclusion of the construction, even eliminates from the Federal Government the possibility of making any profit, because it only takes it over at the cost of the Federal Government plus interest over the period of years for which the debt will be amortized.

Mr. WALSH. Is there any limitation on the amount of right-of-way that may be taken for this purpose?

Mr. BARKLEY. No. It merely must be adjacent, necessary, and convenient for carrying out the project.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish to refer to what the Senator from Ohio said. Of course, we should be very careful that the Federal Government does not make any money anywhere. That ought to be the first thing we should make sure of, that in this great undertaking the Federal Government must never make any money. If it should have, by mistake, some property willed to it in some way or other, there should be a provision in the bill that any money made should be given to the State or to some corporation or some institution.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield I will say that that possible contingency has been amply taken care of.

Mr. NORRIS. It seems from the discussion that has taken place here that such a contingency has been taken care of. Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. The Federal Government will furnish the money, but in no case shall it be entitled to get any money in return.

Mr. BARKLEY. Even where a property owner has given to Uncle Sam some property-

Mr. NORRIS. We must not take it. Mr. TAFT. I do not think the Senator from Nebraska need have the slightest fear that the Federal Government will make any profit out of it.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not think it will if the Senator from Ohio has his way.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. HAYDEN. I wish to refer to a condition in connection with State highway departments which has come up many times in the hearings on road bills. There is what is called in the common law the right of ingress-egress. If you condemn a right-of-way through a man's farm, you just have a bare right-of-way. He owns the land up to the edge of the road, and he has the right to come in and out of that road when he pleases. In the old days, when he had a barn on one side of the road and a pasture across on the other side of the road—

Mr. TAFT. Why does the Senator say "in the old days"? The same situation now exists. I have frequently seen such conditions.

Mr. HAYDEN. What happens, though, when it comes to high-speed traffic, such as we now have? Today every State highway engineer will testify that it is absolutely imperative in order to protect that traffic and to safeguard human life to control not a mere highway but some land in each side of it.

Mr. TAFT. Do I understand the Senator is proposing not only to eliminate every railroad grade crossing but every farm crossing, every crossing over which a farmer drives his cattle back and forth across a public road?

Mr. HAYDEN. I say that crossings where there is highspeed traffic must be regulated or farm animals will be killed, and people driving along the road will be killed. Take the fine bouleyard which the Government built from Washington, D. C., to Mount Vernon, Va. We acquired just the bare right-of-way. What do we find on the side of that road? Beer signs and almost everything imaginable which should not be there. Undoubtedly, if the Government had bought a little more land on each side it could have controlled the situation without great expense. I am merely repeating to the Senator what has been testified to by every State highway department representative who has appeared before the committee, that it is highly advantageous to have some excess taking of land adjacent to the The Senator would prohibit that by his amendhighway. ment.

Mr. TAFT. Absolutely, except for this fact: The courts give a liberal construction to the amount of land required for a road improvement. If it is claimed that a right-of-way 100 feet wide is necessary, but that only 60 feet will be used for the highway proper, as a rule the courts hold that there is a public use for the entire 100 feet. However, if it is perfectly clear that the purpose is to acquire the land for some other use, such as building hot-dog stands, that would not be a public purpose. I do not see any reason why the United States Government should go into that business. I think it is doubtful whether a State or city should do so. In the end, I do not believe they will make any money out of it. The only purpose is to make money. There is no other purpose that I know of.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator and I are in accord in one respect. I do not think the United States ought to do it.

Mr. TAFT. We propose to go a step further. We propose to go into many States which themselves are not permitted to do such things, and we propose to have the Federal Government do them, although the people in those States are protected by the State constitutions against the States doing such things. When we once allow excess condemnation, I am not certain whether or not the other subsection applies. I do not know exactly what the words mean. Even after it is changed by the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Danaher], subsection (d), which is now subsection (e), says:

To expend moneys for the purpose for which any real property has been purchased, in improving such real property in any way authorized by this section.

Of course, the real property has been purchased for the purpose of building things on it. That is the only reason it has been purchased. It has been purchased to make money out of it. When we add subsection (c) to subsection (d), if we leave those words in, I still am not clear as to whether or not the Federal Government could go into a State, as it undoubtedly could under the terms of the original bill, and build any kind of building it thinks ought to be there, including apartment houses and garages. Mr. Carmody testified that we ought to finance public garages, and that the Government ought to build garages. Those who will administer the act are in favor of the Government going into every business; and if they can torture that power out of the words of the act they will do so. So it seems to me that if we keep this language in we shall be putting the Federal Government into every business in the world along the vast superhighways which the Federal Government is proposing to build and turn over to the States at a practically negligible rate of interest.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a moment ago the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] asked me where such an experiment had been tried. Yesterday I referred to the so-called seven-States experiment in a number of the States, including New York. The Senator's own State has engaged in this activity. A number of years ago the State of Massachusetts reclaimed the so-called Back Bay Flats, which were lowlands washed by tides from the Boston harbor. The lands were absolutely unusable. In fact, their existence prevented the use and development of the harbor. The State condemned the area, drained it, and provided proper protection, with the result that usable land was created. A large portion of the land was sold at a profit to the State. In a test case the project was upheld as constitutional.

Mr. WALSH. I am very much pleased to have the information. That section of the city of Boston is known as Back Bay.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am familiar with it.

Mr. WALSH. It contains the residences of some of the most well-to-do families in Boston.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true.

Mr. WALSH. Now that the Senator has called my attention to the matter, I think the State of Massachusetts also carried on a somewhat similar project in connection with filling in some of the low, flat lands in the harbor. I think the Army air base, which the Government now owns, was originally built by the filling in of land by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not as familiar with that project, but I have had it called to my attention.

Mr. President, I hope the amendment of the Senator from Ohio will not be adopted. The bill is now so restricted with respect to the purchase of adjacent lands that the Federal Government is compelled to turn the highway over to the State when it is completed. If we should adopt this amendment, all the Federal Government could do would be to acquire the actual strip of ground on which there would be traffic, and then it would be required to turn it over to the State. Even if the State then desired to acquire adjacent land in order to do the things to which the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has called attention, and which the State had the power to do, it would have to pay the increased price brought about by reason of the construction of the highway. That would again involve the question of money.

Under the provisions of the bill the Federal Government may take the adjacent property, and when it turns the completed highway over to the State under a contract to pay for it in 40 years, it also turns over the adjacent property as a part of the highway system; and the State which operates and maintains and later will own the highway when it is paid for will have the power to protect its highway against any unsightly, unseemly, or obnoxious structure or enterprise or activity which ought not to be located on the side of the road.

The only way the State can protect itself is to allow the Federal Government, when it acquires the right-of-way, either by gift, purchase, or condemnation, to take enough land on either side of the road, not only to build the highway, but to provide ingress and egress along the highway for the convenience of the public. Otherwise, a concrete spur 10 or 15 or 20 feet out from the highway itself could not be built in order that the public, looking over a long period of years, might be able to accommodate itself to such a thing by the building of feeder roads into the highway. If the Senator's amendment should be adopted, it would result in very great disadvantage in the operation of the measure, and inconvenience to the public.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. McCARRAN. I do not wish to embarrass the able Senator from Kentucky. I am quoting a part of his statement, as I recall it. As I understood him, he stated that the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] would provide against the Federal Government taking a part of the highway essential to a highway project. Am I correct?

Mr. BARKLEY. What I said was that under the provisions of the Senator's amendment all the Government could take would be the actual strip upon which it proposed to build a highway, but it could not take any ground on either side adjacent to the highway.

Mr. McCARRAN. That would be the situation under the provisions of the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. That leads me to this thought: Does the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky propose that the Federal Government may take anything within the confines of a sovereign State?

Mr. BARKLEY. Only with the consent and cooperation of the authorities of the State.

Mr. McCARRAN. Of course.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, these things will be done, as has already been explained, on the application of the authorities of the State. The Federal Government may not go into a State and do any of these things over the objection of the State authorities.

Mr. McCARRAN. The power of free money or easy money is a terrific power. I do not think the able Senator from Kentucky will deny that statement.

Mr. BARKLEY. I know. From time immemorial it has been said that the love of money is the root of all evil.

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. However, I think that when the Senator intimates that the power of free money in the building of highways is so seductive as to destroy the moral stamina of a whole State he is doing what Edmund Burke once said could not be done. Edmund Burke said that you could not indict a whole state or a whole nation.

Mr. McCARRAN. I agree with Edmund Burke that you cannot indict a whole State or a whole nation, but you can indict the political power which controls a State. Edmund Burke did not have that situation before him when he uttered the words to which the able Senator from Kentucky refers.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the elected officers of any State, or the appointed or elected highway authorities of any State were so spineless, weak, and susceptible that they would cave in, in spite of the opposition of the people of the State, in order to get the Federal Government to build a bridge, tunnel, or viaduct, or to put up the money to buy the rightof-way and build a highway to turn over to the State, I think the people themselves could attend to that situation at the next election.

I do not share the Senator's suspicion with respect to State authorities. I realize that all the people of the country have lately learned to get all the help they can from the Federal Government. While that is true, they are very loath and stubborn when it comes to surrendering any of their authority over either the expenditure of the money while it is being expended or the project after it has been completed.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am very sorry the Senator from Kentucky continuously returns to the matter of tunnels, overhead bridges, and underpasses, because they are really not the spirit of the amendment. The spirit of the amendment is the building of highways. I am at a loss to understand why the Senator from Kentucky should contend, on the one hand, that this program does not involve a relinquishment of State rights, and, on the other hand, that the Federal Government might step in where it wished to and condemn.

Mr. BARKLEY. It seems to be very difficult for me to make myself clear in respect to this matter. I have insisted, and I still insist, that the Federal Government may not engage in a single operation under the provisions of the bill without the consent of the State authorities, whether it applies to bridges, tunnels, viaducts, a highway, or a street.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky, as modified.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Downey	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Ellender	Lee	Schwartz
Austin	Frazier	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Bailey	George	Lucas	Sheppard
Bankhead	Gerry	Lundeen	Smathers
Barbour	Gillette	McCarran	Smith
Barkley	Green	McKellar	Stewart
Bilbo	Guffey	Maloney	Taft
Bone	Gurney	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Hale	Miller	Tobey
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Townsend
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Truman
Byrnes	Hayden	Neely	Tydings
Capper	Herring	Norris	Vandenberg
Chavez	Hill	Nye	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Ho!man	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Holt	Pepper	Wheeler
Connally	Hughes	Pittman	White
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe
Davis	King	Reed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

Mr. TAFT. I call for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Those favoring the amendment will stand and be counted. [A pause.] Those opposing the amendment will stand and be counted. [A pause.] There are 20 ayes and 25 noes. The amendment to the amendment is rejected.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, a point of order. A quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-eight Senators answered to their names on the roll call, and the Chair declared a quorum present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], as modified.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I have an amendment which strikes out all of the bill relating to the appropriation for public roads. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry, as to whether my amendment would be in order in the event the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky should be first acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would be. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky, as modified.

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, just a moment. The amendment makes necessary the relettering of the following subsections of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will be authorized to reletter and renumber the sections as they should be lettered and numbered to carry out the purposes of the amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Also, I desire to offer another perfecting amendment. I overlooked one correcting amendment to my amendment. I ask that the vote be reconsidered for the time being.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote will be reconsidered.

Mr. BARKLEY. In line 7, page 1, I move to strike out the word "agency" and insert the word "body", so that it will read "public highway body."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be modified as requested; and, without objection, the amendment, as modified, is agreed to.

Mr. BYRD obtained the floor.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia yield to me for a moment?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator. I had previously discussed with the Senator from Kentucky the substitution of the same words, "public highway body", for "highway agency" with reference to his amendment on page 3, line 3. I take it the Senator has no objection to that substitution there, instead of "public highway agency."

Mr. BARKLEY. I intended to have it apply to both.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that will be done.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask that the clerk read the amendment offered by me with respect to the elimination from the bill of the $500,000,000 made available for public roads, and to change the lettering of the amendment to comply with the amendment which has been adopted, offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia will be stated.

Does the Senator desire to have all of the amendments reported together, or one at a time?

Mr. BYRD. Would it be in order to act on all the amendments at one time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If they pertain to the same subject, the Senate may act on them all at one time, by unanimous consent.

The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 3, it is proposed to strike out "the Public Roads Administration."

On page 2, line 22, it is proposed to strike out "$2,390,-000,000", and in lieu thereof insert "$1,890,000,000."

On page 3, beginning with line 16, it is proposed to strike out down to and including line 4 on page 4.

On page 6, beginning with line 10, it is proposed to strike out down to and including line 10 on page 9.

On page 11, lines 4 to 7, it is proposed to strike out the following: "the Public Roads Administration (after reserving when necessary sufficient funds to pay operating and maintenance expenses of any highway improvement)."

On page 15, lines 7 and 8, it is proposed to strike out "the Public Roads Administration."

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have no desire to detain the Senate. This subject has been very fully discussed during the past 2 days. The purpose of the amendment is to eliminate from the bill the $500,000,000 made available for loans for the purpose of constructing public roads, and other parts of the bill pertaining thereto.

I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the name of Mr. Adams, who voted in the affirmative.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I simply wish to say that I hope this amendment will be voted down. This is one of the most important parts of the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. McCARRAN. I understand that the call of the roll is not to be interfered with.

Mr. BARKLEY. But nobody had answered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk resumed the calling of the roll.

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY] and, being free to vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. BARKLEY (when Mr. Logan's name was called). My colleague [Mr. Logan] is unavoidably detained. If present, he would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. Gibson] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON. I have a pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary]. I understand that my pair, if present, would vote as I intend to vote; so I vote "yea."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are necessarily detained.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. Andrews], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Bulow], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Slattery], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Van Nuys] are absent on important public business.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]; and

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton].

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 40, as follows:

	YE	AS-38

AMENDMENT OF MERCHANT MARINE AND SHIPPING ACTS-CONFER-ENCE REPORT

Mr. BAILEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6746) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with the following amend-

On page 2, line 17, of the Senate engrossed amendment, strike out "ten" and insert "five".

On page 4, line 16, after the words "vessels and", insert a comma, the words "for instructional purposes only" and a comma; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOSIAH W. BAILEY, MORRIS SHEPPARD, BENNETT CHAMP CLARK, WALLACE H. WHITE, JR., W. WARREN BARBOUR, Managers on the part of the Senate. S. O. BLAND, ROBERT RAMSPECK, FRANCIS D. CULKIN, Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment I desire to propose, and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert a new title, as follows:

TITLE II-PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 201. (a) In order to increase employment by providing for useful non-Federal public-works projects of the kind and character which the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works has which the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works has hereofore financed or aided in financing, pursuant to title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1936, the Public Works Administration Extension Act of 1937, or the Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1938, there is hereby appropriated to the Public Works Administration (herein called the "Administration") in the Federal Works Agency, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $300,000,000, together with the balance of the appropriation made under section 201 of such act of 1938, not reserved for administrative expenses of the Administration and not now or hereafter expended pursuant to allotments heretofore made, which ministrative expenses of the Administration and not now or hereafter expended pursuant to allotments heretofore made, which amounts shall be available until June 30, 1941, and may be expended by the Commissioner of Public Works (hereinafter referred to as the "Commissioner") for (1) the making of loans or grants, or both, to States, Territories, possessions, political subdivisions, or other public bodies (herein called "public agencies"); or (2)
the construction and leasing of projects, with or without the privilege of purchase, to any such public agencies.

(b) No amount available under this title shall be allotted for any project which, in the determination of the Commissioner, cannot be commenced prior to March 1, 1940, or the completion of which cannot be substantially accomplished prior to July 1, 1941: Provided, That this limitation upon time shall not apply to any Provided, That this limitation upon time shall not apply to any project involved in litigation in any Federal or State court.

(c) Under the funds available in this title, no grant shall be made in excess of 30 percent of the cost of any project, and no project shall be constructed for lease to any public agency unless the Commissioner shall determine that the nonrecoverable portion of the cost of such project shall not exceed 30 percent of the cost thereof.

(d) No moneys for a non-Federal project shall be paid from the funds made available by this title to any public agency unless and until adequate provision has been made, or in the opinion of the Commissioner is assured, for financing such part of the entire cost thereof as is not to be supplied from Federal funds.

thereof as is not to be supplied from Federal funds.

(e) Not more than $6,825,000 of the amount available under this title may be used for administrative expenses of the Administration during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, in connection with this title; such amount shall be available for administrative expenses thereof during such fiscal year for the purposes set forth for such Administration in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1940. The Commissioner shall reserve from the amount available under this title an adequate sum for administrative expenses of the Administration in connection with this title for the fiscal of the Administration in connection with this title for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, subject to authorization hereafter by annual appropriation acts for the utilization thereof.

(f) No funds made available under this act shall be allotted for any project undertaken pursuant to this act which will compete with a property and available under the same project undertaken pursuant to this act which will compete with a property privately covered or constant while utility whose presents. any project undertaken pursuant to this act which will compete with any privately owned or operated public utility whose rates are subject to public regulation on the date of enactment of this act (1) until such public utility has been notified by the Commissioner that a competing project of such character is proposed to be financed with such funds, and (2) until such public utility (A) has rejected, or has failed to accept within 30 days after it is made, a bona fide offer by a public agency, or by or on behalf of the United States, to purchase the property of such public utility at a price fixed by a board of arbitration appointed as hereinafter provided, or (B) has failed to appoint within the time specified a member of the board to be created for the purpose of fixing such price: Provided, That the board of arbitration in each such case shall consist of three members, of whom one shall be appointed by the public utility, one by the public agency which of fixing such price: Provided, That the board of arbitration in each such case shall consist of three members, of whom one shall be appointed by the public utility, one by the public agency which is to construct such competing project or to which such project is to be leased, and one by the two members so appointed, and all such appointments shall be made within 30 days after the notification by the Commissioner to the public utility as provided in clause (1) of this subsection: Provided further, That if the members of any such board appointed by the public utility and the public agency are unable to agree upon the third member of the board within such 30-day period, then the Governor of the State in which the competing project is proposed to be located shall, within 10 days after the expiration of such period, appoint a third member of such board: Provided further, That the price fixed by the board for the property of the public utility in any such case shall be a price which in its opinion is the fair and reasonable value of such property to the public agency, and such price shall be agreed upon by at least two members of the board, and shall be fixed within 60 days after the third member of the board is appointed: Provided further, That in any case in which the Governor of any such State fails to appoint a third member of a board of arbitration within the time specified for such appointment by him, and in any case in which any such board fails to fix the price for the property of the public utility within the time specified therefor, funds appropriated under this title may be allotted for the competing project.

(g) The rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects under the appropriations in this act shall be not less than the prevailing.

be allotted for the competing project.

(g) The rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects under the appropriations in this act shall be not less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality as determined by the Commissioner: Provided, That if minimum rates of pay for persons employed by private employers in any occupation are established by or pursuant to the authority conferred by the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, not less than the minimum rates of pay so established shall be paid to persons in similar occupations in the same locality employed on projects under the appropriation in this title.

tered by the Federal Government or by the States or local govern-mental agencies from funds contributed in whole or in part by the Federal Government, shall be used by any Federal, State, or other agency to purchase, establish, relocate, or expand mills, factories, or plants, which would manufacture or produce for sale articles, commodities, or products in competition with existing industries.

SEC. 202. Moneys realized from the sale of securities acquired by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works or the Public Works Administration, or the proceeds of such securities, may be used by the Commissioner for the making of loans in connection with projects under this title, notwithstanding any previous limitations on the total amount of such securities or proceeds thereof that may be used for loan purposes.

SEC. 203. The Public Works Administration is hereby continued to the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1942, and is hereby authorized to continue to perform all functions which it is authorized to perform on July 1, 1939. All laws, Executive orders, and other documents referring to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works shall be deemed to refer to the Public Works Administration, and all laws, Executive orders, and other docu-

"Sec. 206. No new applications for loans or grants for non-Federal projects shall be received by the Administration after September 30, 1939: Provided, That this section shall not apply to applications amendatory of applications for projects received prior to October 1, 1939, and such amendatory applications shall be confined to projects which, in the determination of the Commissioner, can be started and completed within the time limits specified in section 201 (b) of the Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1939."

(b) That profition of section 201 (f) of the Public Works Administration appropriation and the public works administration appropriation appropriation and the public works administration appropriation appropriation and the public works administration appropriation appropriation appropriation and the public works are public works are public works and the public works are public works are public

(b) That portion of section 201 (f) of the Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1938 which reads "for the completion (except liquidation) of the activities of such Administration," is hereby repealed.

SEC. 205. (a) There is hereby appropriated to the Administration of the control of the contr

tion, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to remain available until June 30, 1941, the sum of $50,000,000, to be expended at the direction of the Commissioner, $50,000,000, to be expended at the direction of the Commissioner, for the making of allotments to Federal agencies for the financing of Federal construction projects (including projects for making surveys and maps) in continental United States outside of the District of Columbia, and the acquisition of land for sites therefor, such projects to be selected from (1) projects authorized by law and (2) projects for the enlargement, extension, or remodeling of existing Federal plants, institutions, or facilities.

(b) No Federal construction project, except flood control and water conservation or utilization projects now under actual construction, shall be undertaken or prosecuted with funds made available by this section unless and until moneys sufficient for appropriated therefor.

appropriated therefor.

SEC. 206. This title may be cited as the "Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1939."

Mr. MALONEY obtained the floor.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield. Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to call the Senator's attention, first, to page 2, line 1, where the language of his amendment is "there is hereby appropriated."

Mr. MALONEY. If that had been read as I have corrected it, the Senator would have found that I have changed the language to read, "there is hereby authorized to be appropriated."

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has corrected it?

Mr. MALONEY. I have corrected it.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator will turn to page 7, line 24, he will find this language:

There is hereby appropriated to the Administration, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated—

Mr. MALONEY. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be amended so as to read "authorized to be appropriated."

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is the Senator offering an original section or is he offering a substitute for section 2?

Mr. MALONEY. Actually it is an additional section. As it will work out, in my opinion, it would prove to be a substitute for section 2.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Why does not the Senator offer it as a substitute for section 2, so the issue can be squarely drawn? The P. W. A. has an excellent record. If any such thing is to be done, I agree with the Senator from Connecticut it should be done under the P. W. A. Why does not the Senator offer it as a substitute for section 2, and thus let us have the issue squarely drawn?

Mr. BARKLEY. The provision for which it is proposed to be a substitute is to be under P. W. A.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Under a totally different method.

Mr. BARKLEY. A system of loans, not grants, but still · to be under the P. W. A.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator has raised the issue, as I understand, which places the P. W. A. as the formula, as we know it, and I think the Senator ought to offer the amendment, if he will permit me to say so, as a substitute for section 2, so that we can have the issue squarely drawn before us.

Mr. MALONEY. I am a little bit in sympathy with the Senator, but because there are some in the Government who have the idea that a 100-percent lending plan might work, I am perfectly willing that it should be tried out, and I prefer not to offer my amendment as a substitute for section 2, although I think it will prove to be a substitute.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If it were not that it would result in an increase of $350,000,000, I should be willing to vote for the inclusion of the Senator's formula in the bill.

Mr. MALONEY. If the Senator's proposal had come at an earlier time, perhaps the amendment could have been offered in line with that proposal.

Mr. President, I presume that the reason why the Senate is considering this so-called work financing bill is because the administration is anxious to find jobs for men who are unemployed. It seems to me that the most serious problem of the time is that millions of men are out of work. I am sorry to say that I think that in our attack on the unemployment problem we have lost our grip in these last few months. It does not seem to me that we have followed through.

I regret, as every sane Senator and American regrets, that the Budget is so out of balance. I am sorry that there is a need for unusual expenditure, but I am satisfied, Mr. President, that the sane and the safe way, and the American and the necessary way, is to provide Federal funds to take care of men who are out of work, and who might otherwise be cold and hungry.

I think we made mistakes as we passed the relief bill of this year. I think that the principal reason for these mistakes is the fact that the bill was passed hurriedly, and that there was misunderstanding on the part of some Members of Congress. I did not so much misunderstand it myself, Mr. President, because I then pointed out on the floor of the Senate that we were making those serious mistakes.

I said then, and I say again, that the proposal that men after 18 months of employment should be laid off was an extravagant step-a cruel and serious mistake-and generally a bad thing to do. I am satisfied that a majority of the Members of Congress now realize that it was a bad thing to do-that it was wasteful-that it was cruel that those who were marked to be laid off should be subjected to worry and suffering for a period of at least 30 days. It now has created a chaotic situation in some municipalities and States, and brought misery to a great many people.

At this point, Mr. President, I want to read an editorialnot a news story, but an editorial, and to mention that it appeared in one of the largest, if not the largest newspaper in my State. I want to point out that it is a part of a newspaper chain of Frank Gannett, a man who, in my opinion, is a conservative. I do not mean to say that this is a conservative newspaper, because I regard it as a reasonably liberal newspaper, and a splendid and fair newspaper. The title of the editorial is, "Trouble With the W. P. A. Order."

It appeared in last night's newspaper. I read:

TROUBLE WITH THE W. P. A. ORDER

Told of her dismissal from a W. P. A. sewing project under the new ruling, a woman fainted in New Haven and was taken to a hospital. Her friends said she had been the main support of her hospital. Her friends said she had been the main support of her family since her husband became an invalid several years ago. That simple news item illustrates the strongest argument against the lay-off plan. The W. P. A. contains many men and women who have no other hope of sustenance other than the jobs on which they are employed. Some are physically or mentally unfit for private employment. Some are too old. A variety of reasons disqualify more and distinguish them from other numbers who have continued on W. P. A. because they are well expected. have continued on W. P. A. because they are well enough satisfied with its meager returns or too indolent to attempt to find private employment.

A sifting of the W. P. A. ranks probably would be highly desirable. But merely because a man or woman has been a project worker, even for 5 or 6 years, does not in itself prove that he should be required to seek charity for 30 days or starve.

Mr. President, I agree with that editorial. I think there are, without question, a number of people on the W. P. A. who could be better engaged in private employment. I think that out of millions there are some indolent men. I think in some instances the wages are too high.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I also agree most heartily with that editorial, but it seems to me that there is an opportunity for misjudgment of one of the material things referred to in the editorial, because as I understand, the person who was discharged was discharged because of an act of Congress. The editorial says it was on account of a new ruling. The impression that may be conveyed-I do not know that it is intentional, and I do not accuse the writer of the editorial of intentionally doing so-but the impression that will result is that the discharge took place because of some activity of a person having charge of the work, or some new ruling made by the existing W. P. A. administration, when as a matter of fact it all occurred because Congress passed a law which made it imperative that such a thing take place. I think that ought to be said in reference to the editorial.

Mr. MALONEY. I am going to mention that.

Mr. NORRIS. I agree with the Senator most heartily that Congress made a serious mistake when it passed that provision of the law, and it has resulted in a great deal of misery. Illogical conclusions have been drawn from the results since that time. But Congress ought to, as it must, it seems to me, take the entire responsibility for whatever happens in regard to that action.

Mr. MALONEY. I am very grateful to the Senator from Nebraska, and he is, of course, entirely right.

The editorial writer is slightly in error in saying that this woman was dropped from the sewing project under the new ruling. I am glad the Senator from Nebraska made that point, and I am going to attempt to lay emphasis upon it. It is not the fault of the administration that this situation prevails. It is entirely the fault of Congress that there is confusion in the W. P. A. It was pointed out to the Congress, and the Members of the Senate, that this sort of situation would result, just as it was pointed out to the Congress that there would be confusion in other instances under the W. P. A. unless the proposed law was made more liberal and a greater care was exercised. I know that, because I, I presume rather feebly, pointed it out myself. And I am glad to have the chance to try to emphasize this, Mr. President, for while we are only going to be here for a little while longer, it seems to me that we might correct this 18 months' situation. I understand that such a proposal is to be offered in connection with the pending bill, and I shall be very pleased with the chance

One of the other serious mistakes of the relief act was the proposal which led the W. P. A. Administrator to believe that he had been directed to cut the security wage as of September 1. I have on several occasions during the past few weeks discussed that particular proposal in the Senate, and I am happy to be able to say that others have joined in the effort to clear the situation, and that it now appears that it has been made clear to the Administrator, and I say that on my own responsibility, that there is no need or direction that he cut the security wage. The law, if interpreted in accordance with the intent of Congress, and in accordance with the intent of the conferees, will make it unnecessary for the W. P. A. Administrator to cut the wages of these more than 1,000,000 men in the North and West who are certified workers and getting a meager pittance.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to inquire of the Senator, in order that the RECORD may be clear, in which branch of the Congress the 18-month furlough originated in the relief bill.

Mr. MALONEY. It is my understanding-and I should be glad to be corrected if I am in error—that it originated in the other branch of the Congress.

Mr. WALSH. That is also my understanding.

Mr. MALONEY. That does not excuse us, however, Mr. President, because we voted on it after that.

Mr. WALSH. I am not commenting on that. Of course. the Congress is blamable. The bill was given too brief consideration in the Senate.

Mr. MALONEY. I know the Senator is not.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator will recall that some of us voted against this provision. Now I should like to inquire whether or not the 18 months' furlough was recommended by the Administrator of the W. P. A.?

Mr. MALONEY. I am not in a position to say. I was not a member of the subcommittee, and I do not know.

Mr. WALSH. Neither do I. Does any member of the committee know? I am making these inquiries only for the record.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield. Mr. MURRAY. I have discussed the matter with Colonel Harrington, of the W. P. A .-

Mr. WALSH. I have also discussed it with him. I do want the information of the committee.

Mr. MURRAY. He points out—
Mr. WALSH. I want to know if anyone representing the Administration appeared before a committee of the Congress and made that recommendation?

Mr. MURRAY. I understand not. Colonel Harrington refers to the record and points to the testimony in the record, which would indicate that no such recommendation was made by the W. P. A.

Mr. WALSH. If that be so, the Senator from Nebraska is correct in stating that Congress is entirely to blame; but I have been under the impression that it may have been recommended or tacitly agreed to or at least approved by the Administrator. I merely wanted the record to be clear, because of the conflicting opinions expressed.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] was chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. ADAMS. I did not hear the question.

Mr. WALSH. In view of what the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] said a few minutes ago, to the effect that Congress was solely to blame for the furlough provision of 18 months, I asked whether or not the furlough was recommended at any time by the Administrator or whether it originated in the House committee.

Mr. ADAMS. I thought at first the Senator was speaking of the 130-hour provision and the prevailing wage. That recommendation came from Colonel Harrington.

Mr. WALSH. I was inquiring where the provision originated. I think we are all agreed it was in the House.

Mr. ADAMS. The 18-month provision was in the bill when it came to the Senate. The Senate changed the provision.

Mr. WALSH. We all agree upon that; but there seems to be a difference of opinion as to the next step. Was it or was it not recommended by the Administrator of the W. P. A.? Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. ADAMS. I can answer the question. The provision which the Senate put in the bill was a provision which Colonel Harrington gave to us. I know that because he brought us a typewritten statement and we substituted the typewritten paragraph which Colonel Harrington gave us for the House language. Colonel Harrington's amendment provided, in substance, that if any man had been in need of relief for 3 months and had been certified and could not get on relief, as between that man and a man who had been on relief for 18 months, preference should be given to the man who had been unable to get on the roll. House provision arbitrarily took people off at the end of 18 months, regardless of whether or not there was anyone to take their places. Instead of the House provision, the Senate merely said that there was provision for only a certain number, and that either a man who had been in need for 3 months and could not be taken care of had to be kept off, or a man who had been taken care of for 18 months would have to be taken off, and that the preference as between the two should be given to the man who had not been able to get on the roll.

Mr. WALSH. I think also Colonel Harrington added another proposal, namely, that the most needy of those on relief should be reinstated.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I offered an amendment on the floor, not exactly in that language, which amendment was adopted. The language referred to by the Senator from Colorado, which was inserted by the Senate committee on the recommendation of Colonel Harrington, was an effort to soften the arbitrary provisions of the House bill, which automatically struck off everybody who had been on the roll 18 months. When the bill came on the floor of the Senate I offered an amendment which provided that preference should be given to those who had been certified for 3 months and could not get on the roll, as compared with those who had been on for 18 months, except that that provision should not apply in cases where undue hardship would result.

Mr. WALSH. I thank the Senator. I think it is conceded that the Senate made less severe and less drastic the provisions of the House bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

Mr. WALSH. I think that is generally agreed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Colonel Harrington did not originally recommend the provisions in the House bill.

Mr. WALSH. I am pleased to know that, for it is but just to him to have that a part of the record.

Mr. BARKLEY. I talked with him after the House bill came over to the Senate in an effort to arrange it so that the hardships resulting from automatic dismissal of everybody who had been on the roll for 18 months might be in some way assuaged.

Mr. WALSH. I have a very high opinion of Colonel Harrington. I think he is trying to do a good job and will do a good job.

Mr. ADAMS. I did not know as to the origin of the House provision. I did know as to the origin of the Senate pro-

Mr. WALSH. I thank the Senator from Connecticut, and I wish to say that I concur in all that he has said in relation to the cruel and harsh effects of the administration of the 18 months' furlough provision of the law. My conversation with Colonel Harrington disclosed the fact that he was taking steps not to stagger the discharges over as long a period of time as he could under the law. He began earlier than the law required so that that could be done.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder if the Senator has received a satisfactory answer to the query which I know is in his mind if he has not propounded it. Why was it necessary for anybody to be cut off the W. P. A. who had been certified for relief by a competent and responsible agency? Did the United States Government profess to be so impoverished that it was willing to go back on the platform declaration that no one in this country would be allowed to go hungry? What answer has been given to the Senator's query as to why anybody has had to go off the roll at the end of 18 months or any other time?

Mr. MALONEY. Of course the Senator knows the answer, because he was on the floor. He was one of those who, like myself, made an attempt to overcome the threat at that time. However, the Congress is entirely responsible. The Congress decided. The Senate joined with the other branch of the Congress in reaching a decision.

Mr. PEPPER. Did the Senator obtain the impression that the Senate and the House intended to represent that the United States did not have the money to afford jobs, or that the United States did not want to provide jobs?

Mr. MALONEY. I will answer the Senator by saying that I think the bill was rushed through too hurriedly. I do not believe there is a single Member of the Senate who does not want to provide jobs for unemployed men who want work. I think some Members of the Senate conscientiously believe that the way to correct the unemployment situation is by another way than the expenditure of further relief funds.

I should like to believe that there is another way. Year after year in the Senate I introduced a bill which would do it in another way. I do not think that the W. P. A. method is the proper procedure, but this is the only road left open to us, Mr. President. The other proposals have been set aside; and we cannot sit idly by and maintain that private employment is the place for men to go.

In my opinion, we cannot satisfy ourselves by saying that if we let business alone men will be given jobs in private employment. That argument makes no impression on me. Mr. President, because in 1929, 1930, 1931, and 1932 there were no restrictions on business. There was no hampering governmental influence. Businessmen were riding wide and fancy. We dashed downhill toward ruin. So the only way we can do it, Mr. President, is by providing relief funds.

Although I should like to see the Budget balanced, and although I know there is danger in continuing expenditures, I am satisfied that that is the right way because, in my opinion, it is the only way left to us for the time being. I believe that there is a governmental responsibility so long as able-bodied and willing men are anxious to have a job and cannot find it in private employment. I believe that the true test of a nation is its care of the weak, and that the responsibility of providing assistance for the millions of men now terror-stricken because of the W. P. A. rules, and the passage of the Relief Act, is ours: I further believe. unless we take some steps before we go home, we shall be more seriously sorry before we come back in January.

Mr. President, I am quite satisfied from the standpoint of the record and of my conscience that I have not voted to cut a single relief bill or against a single relief bill. I know that some Members conscientiously and sincerely believe that such is the proper way. I do not think they are helping to hasten better times in our country.

Mr. President, I wish to read another article from one of yesterday's newspapers. I presume it is possible that the editorial which I just read and the brief item which I am about to read are to some extent indicative of conditions over the country. This article happens to be from the New York Sun of last night:

Persons on the Triborough Bridge observed a man leap from a guardrail of the Manhattan lift span, off One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, into the Harlem River, 65 feet below, and apparently drown, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

In a pocket of the coat left behind by the man was a W. P. A.

Mr. President, I do not like to inject this sort of thing into debate in the Senate. It is probably wrong. Perhaps I make a serious mistake when I do it. I hope it is not. However, the situation is serious; and I cannot forget that, in my opinion, we hurriedly and carelessly considered the relief bill. I do not want to miss the last chance we have this year to provide an opportunity for men to return to

During the past few days in the Senate I have obtained unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD newspaper articles showing that in the comparatively well-off State of Connecticut, as a result of the restricted relief appropriations, thousands of men were being dropped from the rolls, with no place to go. That is a sad state of affairs, Mr. President. And with that situation true in a State which is relatively as wealthy as mine, I dislike to think what the consequences may be in some of the other States of the Union.

Mr. President, unlike some of those who have expressed such an opinion, I do not think the present bill proposes a spending spree. I think it is too conservative a proposal. I should not handle the problem this way. I do not think too much will happen as a result of the bill; and I think very little will happen under the P. W. A. part of the bill. That is why I have offered an amendment which I hope may provide jobs for men in private employment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator's amendment touch any of the problems to which he has recently been advertising, such as the furlough and the prevailing wage?

Mr. MALONEY. No. I will answer the question by saying that such amendments have been printed, and they will be called up in connection with the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I was wondering whether or not the Senator's observations attached to his own amendment.

Mr. MALONEY. I think they do, Mr. President. I am making these observations because I want to make up for the errors of the relief bill, which is behind us. We cut down the amount of money to a considerable extent. As a result of the limitations of the relief bill, which I have been discussing, thousands of men have lost their jobs. Thousands more will lose their jobs; and more than 1,000,000 will have their wages curtailed on September 1 unless the Administrator follows the viewpoint of those Members of the Senate who have declared that the language of the law does not compel him to cut the wages of the certified relief workers. I know of no Senator who has a different opinion.

Mr. President, I answer the able Senator from Michigan by saying that I think there is a relationship; and I want to show that under my amendment jobs will be provided, because the P. W. A. section of my amendment makes certain the expenditure of at least $1,000,000,000 on work to be undertaken by private contract.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I merely wish to get straight the answer to my original question. Of course, the Senator's contention is that by providing supplemental work he provides supplemental jobs.
Mr. MALONEY. That is correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. However, the Senator does not contend that his amendment is the direct answer to the other criticisms which he levels at the original relief bill. Is that Mr. MALONEY. That is correct; and I am sorry the Senator seems not to have understood me. I know it is my fault.

I have been endeavoring day after day for a period of 2 weeks to gain the attention of the W. P. A. authority and the assistance of Senators for the purpose of trying to correct the situation which I have described. Perhaps we cannot entirely correct the situation by law, because it seems to me we are soon to adjourn. But a part of it can be corrected by interpretation of the language that we passed, and that is one of the reasons why I am discussing this matter just now.

Mr. President, the first part of this amendment relating to the P. W. A. Administration might be best and briefly explained by saying that it is substantially the same proposal which was offered to the Senate in connection with another bill a short time ago by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAY-DEN]. It is an appropriation of $350,000,000 to provide a continuation of the P. W. A. as it existed when first created by Congress. Senators will recall that at that time grants in the amount of 30 percent and loans in the amount of 70 percent were available.

It proved not too tempting a proposal. The municipalities and States of the Union, despite the seriousness of the times, despite the great and widespread unemployment, did not take full advantage of that opportunity. So Congress, anxious to stimulate employment and return men to work, liberalized the P. W. A., and we made loans of 55 percent and grants of 45 percent. If I now thought there was the slightest chance that I could get such a proposal adopted at this time, I would offer an amendment continuing the P. W. A. as it last existed, with grants of 45 percent and loans of 55 percent. I would do it, because the municipalities and the States of this country, hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of them, have set out local programs, and by action of their boards of aldermen or courts of common council or town meetings have prepared plans and specifications and expended a considerable sum of money to take advantage of the P. W. A. 55 percent-45 percent plan. They are not responsible for the fact that the plan has died. They spent a great deal of money, and it seems to me that there has been not a betrayal but a misleading suggestion on the part of the Federal Government.

I do not offer that liberalized proposal, because the Senate had a chance to vote on it through an amendment offered by the junior Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD] just a little while ago.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ELLENDER in the chair). Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Connecticut whether or not he believes that his amendment will take care of a community, for instance, which has voted $40,000 in bonds on the theory that the Federal Government was going to give it a grant of 45 percent. Will the Senator's amendment take care of that situation?

Mr. MALONEY. I cannot be sure that it will take care of it in all instances: but I assume that what a municipality has once done, it can do again; and while I know that they would prefer the increased grant of 45 percent, I believe that these States and municipalities and subdivisions of government which have indicated a willingness to take advantage of a 45-percent grant will in a great many instances be anxious to take advantage of a 30-percent grant. Perhaps all of them cannot do it, but I think most of them should be able to.

Mr. LUCAS. I do not agree with the Senator upon that proposition. In most of the cases in the State of Illinois I find that nearly all of the municipalities have done all they can do, so far as issuing bonds or raising funds is concerned, to meet a particular grant given to them under the present law; and I do not believe the Senator's amendment is going to have any material effect on obtaining relief for the people in the various communities and in the municipalities which have already voted bonds or have already raised money on the theory that they were going to get a 45-percent grant.

Mr. MALONEY. I am sorry the Senator misunderstands what is uppermost in my mind. I am trying to further expand the national economy at a time when business seems to be showing improvement. I do not want it to drop off. I am trying to provide jobs for men. I am not especially concerned with making it easy for the municipalities, although I feel that we have a responsibility in that direction, and I should like to do it; but I am recognizing a practical situation. I do not believe the Senate will vote a 45-percent grant. We tried it here 2 months ago, or less, and it did not work. We had a tie vote on such a proposal as I am now offering, but I am very hopeful that we may get this one passed. I am in sympathy with what appears to be the opinion and the desire of the Senator from Illinois, but I do not think it is possible, and I think we should be realistic about it.

Mr. LUCAS and Mr. HUGHES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield first to the Senator from Illinois. Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, does the Senator believe that any more men would be employed on the basis of 70-30 than would be employed on the basis of 45-55?

Mr. MALONEY. Of course not. That question answers itself. I do not think any men would be employed under this proposal if I offered it for 55-45. If we can pass the 70-30 amendment we are going to spend a billion dollars in this country, and it will employ a great many men.

I now yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I was not here when the Senator from Connecticut started his discussion and offered his amendment. As I understand, the bill itself provides $350,000,000.

Mr. MALONEY. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator's amendment provides an additional $300.000.000. Is that the idea?

Mr. MALONEY. I will get to that, if the Senator will bear with me for just a minute. I will explain it right now, if the Senator desires.

The proposal offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], insofar as the P. W. A. is concerned, indicates a desire to continue the P. W. A. by appropriating $350,000,000, under the new idea that the municipalities and the States will borrow 100 percent from the Federal Government to undertake these public works, which they refused to undertake in the beginning, when times were much more desperate than they now are, on the basis of a 30-percent grant. I offer my proposal because I do not think the municipalities or the States will take advantage of the provision in the so-called works-financing bill as it now stands. I have served as a mayor. I know something about local problems and the viewpoint of municipal officials. I was a mayor during this administration while a Member of the House. I saw this situation from both sides, and I know the resistance against local borrowing, because of the heavy burdens of the small-home owners of the municipalities of the country, at least in the industrial part of the country.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. MALONEY. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. Is there anything in the Senator's amendment which would confine the expenditure of these funds to projects which have already been filed? In other words, I have in mind a sewage-disposal district in my own State which has been recently interesting itself in a project but has not filed any application because there seemed to be no reason for doing so. Would its application be considered under the terms of the Senator's amendment, or is it going to be limited entirely to projects which have already been filed and approved?

Mr. MALONEY. I will read that part of my amendment to the Senator:

Sec. 206. No new applications for loans or grants for non-Federal projects shall be received by the Administration after September 30, 1939.

There is a limited leeway. There is not a need, insofar as providing jobs is concerned, that the doors be opened to any additional projects, because there are more than enough projects now available with plans and specifications approved. I presume, however, that when this amendment—and I will say that this language is not mine—was originally offered to the Senate it was felt that there might be some such situation as that suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts which might be important and ought to be considered under this new appropriation.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. HUGHES. I am not quite clear about whether the Senator has answered my question.

Mr. MALONEY. I am going to answer it. I was in the middle of the answer to it when I was interrupted again.
Mr. HUGHES. What I have in mind is this: The bill originally provided for $350,000,000.

Mr. MALONEY. Yes; on a 100-percent lending basis.

Mr. HUGHES. I wanted to know whether the Senator's additional $300,000,000 was in any way connected with this provision, whether they were to be operated together, or whether they were separate and distinct provisions for the Public Works Administration.

Mr. MALONEY. They would both come under the Public Works Administration. I do not think the proposal in the bill as it came to the Senate is going to be operative. I do not think the municipalities are going to take advantage of it, though they might do so. I may be mistaken, but I do not want to run the risk; and I am sorry to hear the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg] say that, because I did not offer this proposal as a substitute for the section in the pending bill he would not vote for my proposal, but that otherwise he would. I think he might well give his vote to my amendment if he believes in the plan I have submitted, because, whether or not my suggestion prevails, I doubt that there is very much chance of the expenditure of $350,000,000 on a 100-percent lending basis.

I do not think the municipalities will do it. They were badly enough off 2 months ago, but as a result of our action on the relief measure the situation in the cities of this country is serious. The heavy tax burden of every municipality now is largely that of relief. Heretofore the expenditure has been largely, at least in my part of the country, for education; but the relief expenditures have passed those for education, and have become a terrific burden on the cities, and a terrible drain on the local treasuries. While I think that under normal and ordinary conditions they might have taken advantage of such a proposal as this, I think that time has passed.

Unless someone wants to question me further about the matter I am anxious to hurry through the discussion of the bill, because weak as I think it is in some places, I think it is extremely meritorious in others, and I want to vote for it whether or not my amendment should be accepted. I think it will be a much better bill with the amendment. I think more men will be given work. I think it is extremely important that we now get into circulation the extra billion dollars which would be authorized by this proposal.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President-

Mr. MALONEY. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming. Mr. O'MAHONEY. I understand the Senator's argument to be, in substance, that W. P. A. appropriations and made work paid for by such appropriations do not effect the stimulus that is really necessary to provide the force to carry on our economic system.

Mr. MALONEY. For this reason, let me say to the Senator from Wyoming that the big purpose of the W. P. A., and properly so, is to provide actual labor for men certified for relief work. The W. P. A. tries to avoid the purchase of material, and consequently there is not much contribution to private industry. The W. P. A. worker gets, for the most part, a subsistence wage. His pay is somewhat helpful to the national economy because, in addition to being able to keep his family alive and together, he contributes a little bit to the small-business man. But under the P. W. A. we contribute to private industry. We buy from the manufacturing plants of the country. We buy steel and concrete. We buy, under this plan, automobiles and machinery for every sort of building. We go into the hardware factories. We buy lumber and we buy brick, and things too numerous to mention that will give aid to the national economy, which, at least for the moment, seems to be properly on its way again to better times.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. In other words, the W. P. A. expenditures are practically dead expenditures. They turn over only once or twice.

Mr. MALONEY. I think that may be right.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. They serve only to give a little passing relief. They do not put the workers who are employed upon a self-supporting basis; but the money which is expended in public works will be reflected all through the economy, and therefore will be beneficial to everybody at every step of the economy.

Mr. MALONEY. It is helpful to the great number of unemployed who will go back to work as a result of the expenditure, and it makes more certain, if there is any such thing as certainty, positions held by men still at work. It adds to their security.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I assume that the Senator means that the provision now in the bill for a 100-percent loan of $350,000,000 will be an ineffective provision, because, in his opinion, the States and municipalities and other public agencies will not be in a position to take advantage of 100-percent loans.

Mr. MALONEY. That is my opinion.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. And the Senator feels that it is necessary, in order to promote this renewed activity throughout the economic system, for the Federal Government to stimulate public works by a grant of 30 percent of the cost.

Mr. MALONEY. I think it is an economical investment on the part of the Federal Government.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I take it that the Senator believes that an investment of this kind is far more effective than an investment of twice that sum in W. P. A. expenditures.

Mr. MALONEY. From the standpoint of the national economy, yes. In addition to providing a sufficient amount of money to keep families together, the greatest benefit from W. P. A. expenditures is that they protect the natural American pride of men. Once the pride of Americans is destroyed, they are not the same kind of people, and giving them work instead of a dole is tremendously important to our whole national structure. But from the standpoint the Senator points out, it does not, in my opinion, provide very much assistance to general business.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If I may ask another question, I understand that the Senator is not offering the amendment as a substitute for the 100 percent loan provision now in the bill.

Mr. MALONEY. For this reason, let me say to the Senator from Wyoming, there are those of this administration who seem to believe that this 100-percent lending plan can be made to work. I do not think it can. But the $350,-000,000 provided in my proposal is aleady expended, insofar as the municipalities and States are concerned. They are ready to take it over. That means that there will thereafter be a further chance to find out whether or not the proposal already in the bill will work. I could offer this as a substitute, but I do not feel that it is fair to deny this new experiment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Would the Senator feel that it would be a proper thing to provide in the amendment, if it is not already provided, that no applicant which was actually able to accept a hundred percent loan should be permitted to take the grant?

Mr. MALONEY. Who would determine whether or not the applicant was able?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I would say that the Public Works Administrator could easily determine that.

Mr. MALONEY. I prefer not to do that, although I should like to see it worked out if it were possible. I do not think it is possible. I do not think that any man, without great study and the expenditure of much time and money, could determine just exactly which municipality could afford the 100-percent basis and which was entitled to consideration on the 70-percent basis. If the Senator thinks it might work out, and he is willing to prepare such an amendment—and I cannot think of anyone who prepares amendments more efficiently and quickly than he does—I might be willing to add it to my amendment; and I am certain, in any event, that the Senate would be glad to have him offer it for consideration.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think it would be a valuable provision, because I have had the opportunity of examining statistics which have shown that there has been a practically complete transfer of the sponsorship of public works from States and municipalities to the Federal Government. Expenditures which, prior to 1930, were being made by States and municipalities for public works, have dropped off, and in lieu of those expenditures there has been a great rise in the amount of expenditures by the Federal Government for the same sort of work.

Mr. MALONEY. There are two reasons for that, I should like to point out to the Senator, at least two reasons appear to me.

The taxing opportunity of the municipalities and the States has been to a considerable extent lessened by several years of hard times. In my own State I think the State budget for this year is the largest in the State's history, though I may be in error about that. If the Federal Government was not pouring millions of dollars into my State, as it is into all the other States of the Union, the people of my State would find the tax burden exceedingly heavy.

There is one additional reason—and I think this reason especially important—and that is that it is more reasonable to take the taxes from those who are best able to pay, for providing work and creating social values, than it is to take the money from the heavily oppressed small-home owners in the towns and cities of the country; and that is the reason, in my opinion, why there has been this willingness on the part of Congress and the majority of the American people to shift the heavier burden to the Federal Government and to get most of the money through the income tax. It is entirely a tax matter.

Let me add, at that point, that while those who clamor for State control and State rights in connection with relief have as clear an understanding of the situation as I have. They know the local folks cannot stand the tax burden; and if it were shifted to them, the States and the municipalities in this country, in my opinion—although I dislike to say it—would in some instances head toward bankruptcy.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, with the permission of the Senator, I shall offer a perfecting amendment to his amendment.

Mr. MALONEY. Will the Senator permit me to finish my discussion before he does that?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course; I beg the Senator's pardon. I thought the Senator was about to conclude.

Mr. MALONEY. Oh, no. I would have been through except for the interruptions.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I apologize for the interruption. Mr. MALONEY. No; the interruptions please me. I welcome them.

I should like to say, in connection with the P. W. A. proposal, that as I read the House hearings, and listened to the testimony in the Senate committee, it seemed to me that the P. W. A. authorities were in sympathy with the continuation of the P. W. A. in the manner I have suggested. It seemed to me that Governor Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, who has made a special study of this sort of program, is in sympathy with my method, or the method I suggest. I know that the mayors of the cities of the country are in sympathy with the proposal, and perhaps it is natural that they should be.

It is my impression that the majority, and perhaps nearly all, of the State and local officials are in sympathy with this way of procedure. They are in sympathy with it because there is a need for the building of many tremendously important projects—the creation of improved sewer systems and expanded water systems, the erection of new schools, and advancement of education, with which we are so much concerned—and these officials realize that there is no better way to expend public funds than in the creation of these kinds of projects under private industry.

It is not money lost; it is social values on one side to balance the expenditures on the other. The money we spend for these things now will be saved in another day. With improved business which I think would result from this further expenditure, I suggest there could be a more definite move toward the balancing of the Budget and the cutting down of Federal expenditures. But I am fearful, as Mr. Carmody seemed to be, that unless we make this P. W. A. expenditure at this time, or prepare to make it, there will come another lag a year hence, just as there was in 1937, and that we might lose the gains we made simply because we lack sufficient courage, and, in my judgment, foresight, to follow through.

Mr. President, in connection with the P. W. A. bill, I offered an amendment which would provide for the payment of prevailing wages. I wish to point out to the Senate that this prevailing-wage amendment is in connection with private industry, and simply carries out a policy which has been in effect in the Congress for some time.

Someone may suggest a little later that in the so-called Works Finance Act of 1939 there is a prevailing-wage amendment. That amendment was offered, I think, last Saturday at the final meeting of the committee. I was not present at that meeting, because I had assumed that we concluded on Friday night, and I was out of the city on Saturday on important business.

The committee prevailing-wage section only provides for prevailing wages under the committee P. W. A. proposal, which, I maintain, may not work. That prevailing-wage amendment has nothing to do with the rest of the bill, and I insist that when the Federal Government expends money or provides money to assist industries, either by loans or by grant, it has the right to insist that the men engaged in plants using Federal funds and Federal help should receive the prevailing wage. It is not anything new. I mention this to show the difference between my proposal and the one that is in the bill as it came to the Senate.

I should like to point out one other part of the amendment, and if they are here, I should like particularly to call this to the attention of my colleagues who come from the North and the industrial Northeast.

I refer to subdivision (h), which reads:

(h) No funds made available under this act, whether administered by the Federal Government or by the States or local governmental agencies from funds contributed in whole or in part by the Federal Government, shall be used by any Federal, State, or other agency to purchase, establish, relocate, or expand mills, factories, or plants, which would manufacture or produce for sale articles, commodities, or products in competition with existing industries.

There is one part of that section with which I am especially concerned. I have the fear, and some of my colleagues from the North share the fear with me, that there might be a relocation of some northern industry as a result of loans made under the bill. While our hearts bleed a little for the stricken farmers of the West and the South, and while I have endeavored to give support to proposals which would be beneficial to them, and while I was glad to vote for the agricultural bill last year carrying a large appropriation, and while I realize that we cannot ever be happy unless they are happy, I should like to have them know that we suffer a bit from fear in these days of economic stress. We are losing some of our factories in the North to States in the South because of a special invitation, and we are paying for it in more ways than one.

I heard only last night of a Connecticut manufacturer who had opened a plant in one of the Southern States. He did not move his existing plant, but opened a new factory there. I may be in error about this, but I was advised not longer ago than last night that he moved to the South because wages were more favorable to business, because he would have no taxes to pay for a period of 10 years, and because he received other concessions from that particular State. Still, that State will come here and contend it cannot make a full contribution to the pension laws we pass. Representatives of that State and others like it tell us that the charge is too heavy a burden to bear. But they give tax-free plant locations in order to bring people down from the North. We tax our plants, and it does not seem to me at all fair that those States should give tax-free opportunities in the South at our expense.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder whether the Senator is aware of how violently the South has been discriminated against in the freight-rate structure of the United States; and if the Senator might not perhaps attribute inducements of the character he has described as being extended by Southern States to northern industry to a desire on their part to make up in the best way they could the burden under which industry was laboring in the South by having to pay the excessive freight rates that were imposed upon southern industry, which northern industry did not have to bear.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, while I am here to represent in part the State of Connecticut, I hope I will never lose sight of the fact that I am a Senator of the United States, and I do not ever intend to cast a vote that will unfairly impose a hardship on any State. I prefer, however, not to discuss the freight-rate situation in connection with the pending proposal. It is something entirely apart, and I would rather not be diverted at this particular time.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. DAVIS. I agree with what the Senator has stated about factories moving from the North to the South, because in my State of Pennsylvania we have lost a number of factories, and we have found that they go South because they are relieved from the payment of taxes in the South, and because they get other concessions.

And we find, too, that, as in our State, after the original factory got started in another State, it was only a question of a short time before we heard people in our State saying, "The taxes are too high, the wages are too high, and we cannot compete." First they pass the buck by contending that foreign competition is coming in, but now we know that it is because the materials are produced cheaper in other sections of the country than they are in our own State.

Mr. MALONEY. I will say to the Senator from Pennsylvania that it is not a political question until it comes here. These States are fighting for their lives. They are anxious to do things to protect themselves. But we in Congress have a responsibility when it comes to the matter of fixing wages and we have a responsibility when it comes to a matter of providing the contributions of Federal money. We have a responsibility when it comes to appropriations for aiding States in the advancement of education. I do not think any State, no matter how poor that State may be, has the right to come to the Government for educational assistance, for old-age assistance, or any other assistance, so long as it wipes out taxes for industries that might be making large profits.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Brown in the chair).
Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Is not the Senator aware of the fact that the Southern States, and particularly the Southeastern States contribute a larger portion per capita wealth, in proportion to their population, than the Northern States contribute?

Mr. MALONEY. The point I am trying to make is that their per capita wealth may not be a true picture of the situation. They are permitting some northern manufacturers to sweat their labor, and it does not seem to me entirely correct to say that they are contributing for education more than other States insofar as their per capita wealth is concerned. I say they should be taxing the northern manufacturer who goes down there instead of giving him a 10-year free rent.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one more question?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Is the Senator not aware of the fact that the wage and hour bill was favored by a great many southern Members in the House and Senate and that it is now in effect in the South as well as in the North?

Mr. MALONEY. Oh, yes.

Mr. PEPPER. And that in the last few days, due to the efforts of the able Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russell] and the able Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes], with the cooperation of their colleagues, a provision has been written into the W. P. A. appropriation requiring that the same wages be paid for the same kind of work in all sections of the country, including the South, with only an allowance for the difference in the cost of living, which is negligible, and are we not in that way trying to raise the southern wage scale, and might we not be brought to the necessity in this very bill of trying to protect the efforts that were formerly employed to restore the southern wage scale?

Mr. MALONEY. Of course I am aware of it, and I have applauded it here in the past few days. Perhaps I went too far when I said what I did. But the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor, if I am correctly informed, has stated in the last few days that very serious violations of the law are being discovered, and has called attention to the fact that the law is being ignored in certain parts of the country.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. I trust that the Senator will not make blanket charges against an entire section of the country.

Mr. MALONEY. I just said I thought I may have gone too far in that statement. I am sorry.

Mr. BYRNES. I would ask the Senator, knowing his accuracy of statement always, whether the only State offering inducements of that kind were south of the Potomac. A Sentaor representing a State north of the Potomac who sat listening to the Senator told me his State offered an inducement, by way of exemption from taxation for 10 years, which the Senator has talked about. That situation does not exist in the State of South Carolina. It does not exist in many States. I hope the Senator from Connecticut will not say that such inducement is offered to industry only from southern States. If he will inquire, he will find that in many States of the Union outside of the South inducements are offered to industry.

Mr. MALONEY. What I referred to was one southern State, which was called to my attention last night, and which took away part of a Connecticut company.

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator says only one State—
Mr. MALONEY. I said only one State, I will remind the

Mr. BYRNES. It may be true. If the Senator says that he knows it I will agree, but I would advise him then that a Member of the Senate, representing a northern State, listening to the Senator, told me that tax inducements were offered by his State.

Mr. MALONEY. I trust the Senator from South Carolina will understand that I did not criticize the States for offering such inducements. What I did say was that it was unfair for the representatives of States which made special inducements in the matter of the remission of taxes, to ask for a special consideration because they did not have sufficient tax income.

Mr. BYRNES. Then the Senator and I would have no argument about it, and if I misunderstood him, and he said only one State I would have no question about that.

Mr. MALONEY. I will say to the Senator from South Carolina that so far as I know South Carolina has not done anything of that sort.

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator would inquire he would find that some States in his own section offer inducements to industries to come to those States.

Mr. MALONEY. I must insist here that I have a further chance to make myself understood. The States have a right to do that if they like to, but they have no right to ask the Federal Government to pay the tax bill.

Mr. BYRNES. I agree with the Senator in that respect. When it is done the representative of the State would have little justification for asking for any special favors because of lack of tax-paying capacity. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. MALONEY. I certainly absolve South Carolina and its very able representative now on the floor who, while he represents his State better than especially well, does not seem to expect that it shall receive consideration at the expense of other States.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator perhaps overlooks the fact that the per capita wealth of a given State that may offer industrial inducements would be less without the industry that they induced to come there. So that the situation has been improved by the industry coming there, even though the State gives it tax inducements. So the States are better able to pay their share by having the industry there, even though they give it certain tax benefits, than if the industry were not there.

Is the Senator not aware of the fact that the South has labored under many burdens and disabilities in the last 50 years, and that it has had a Herculean struggle to pull itself back up to a position of even comparable advantage with certain other sections of the country? It has not had a decent freight rate system, and it has not had access to an adequate capital market. There was a political party in power which consciously discriminated in favor of other interests and other sections of the country, a party which was dedicated by its whole history to the service of the kind of special interests which had their lodgement in other sections of the country. So the Republican Party, which dominated this Government through the major part of the last 50 years, has a great deal of responsibility for the impoverishment and the conditions that made it desirable for the South to get industry at almost whatever price it had to pay for it.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I am in sympathy with the effort to rehabilitate the South. If there is one reason above others that makes me willing to vote for this proposal, it is the $600,000,000 that the bill contains to provide relief through the Department of Agriculture by way of the lending of money to distressed farmers to repair their farms and farm properties and to acquire farm stock. I am pleased with it because it helps the tenant farmer to acquire a home. I do not think that the able Senator from Florida would now contend that the Congress has at all turned its back upon the stricken South, but that if it has been especially generous to any part of the country, to make up for the sins of another day, it has been generous to that part of the United States.

Mr. PEPPER. I want to say, Mr. President, in connection with that statement, that I believe that in the last few weeks and the last few months there has been less objectionable sectionalism manifested in this body than before in a long time. I certainly share the pleasure that the able Senator from Connecticut observed in seeing the abolition here of sectional tendencies, and the desire on the part of the United States Congress to legislate for the best interests of the whole country and the whole people.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, we have always had a great representation from the South, and it has not lessened in brilliancy or militancy in the last few years.

Mr. President, I shall not take long. I think the reclamation proposal in this bill is a fine self-liquidating project and I think it is extremely important. We have done much for the agricultural parts of the country, but in the part of the bill providing money for loans to the railroads, with which to buy equipment, we find an isolated situation insofar as employment is concerned. It is not a provision which will be particularly helpful to the country as a whole.

Certainly it cannot be said that the export-import feature of this bill is going to provide a great help. I have some doubt about that. But I am hopeful that by the adoption of this amendment, and appropriation of $350,000,000, and the expenditure of $1,000,000,000, widely over the entire country, leaving no section untouched—creating splendid social values carefully selected and minutely scrutinized—we can do much to accelerate a national economy that is moving forward.

I have left to the last one section of the bill which seems to me important. I do not think that the Federal Government has a right to be loaning Federal funds or making Federal grants in instances that would permit a confiscation of property. So I have inserted a provision herein, Mr. President, that would prevent the expenditure of Federal funds for the establishment of a utility in competition with an existing utility unless a fair price was offered for that utility. It provides the price be fair to the public agency. I want to emphasize that point. The proposal is not just that it pay a fair price to the utility, but rather that the price be fair to the municipality or public agency. It seems to me to be an ironclad, fool-proof amendment-a protection to the municipality, a protection to the utility, a guaranty against confiscation, and at the same time permitting a nationalizing of power just as far and as fast as the Federal Government can fairly afford to go.

I should be glad to go into details about that amendment, but sometime ago I offered it here in the Senate, and I explained it in very careful detail. I shall not take a bit more time of the Senate, but I am going to ask for a yea-and-nay vote on the amendment, Mr. President. With that, I have

CORDELL HULL-EDITORIAL BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, when tribute is paid to a man by one who has systematically scrutinized the actions of this administration for the purpose of laying bare its actions to criticism, one may properly feel that the tribute he pays is not only deserved, but may be entitled "high praise."

I find in the writings of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson a splendid tribute to a distinguished American, Cordell Hull. Everyone recognizes that General Johnson, since he severed his connections with this administration and became a columnist, has paid his respects to the administration; but in this article he approves most enthusiastically of Secretary Hull's handling of foreign problems.

Cordell Hull is deserving of this praise; and it is especially noteworthy as it comes from one who has looked askance at the administration. Secretary Hull is deserving of the good will, admiration, and gratitude of the American people.

It gives me pleasure to ask unanimous consent that General Johnson's article be placed in the Congressional RECORD, following my remarks.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may I inquire of the Senator from Indiana if he has now changed horses and is supporting a different man for President?

Mr. MINTON. No. We are both going in the same

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana?

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hull and Hitler. Their names shouldn't be mentioned in the same breath but they are the only two consistent ministers in same breath but they are the only two consistent ministers in diplomacy today.

Their policies are completely opposed but they are equally steadfast. Hitler has been consistently a heel. His policies are almost solely responsible for the hatred, danger, unrest, and uncertainty in the world. They have tended to dry up the channels of world trade, destroy so much of international good faith as ever existed, and keep the whole of humanity under the threat of war. He has encouraged similar policies in other gangster grabber nations and is extending all his resources to set half the world to tearing out the entrails of the other half.

and is extending all his resources to set half the world to tearing out the entrails of the other half.

But even including incidental frauds and lies, Mr. Hitler has never deviated from the course he promised in his book at the beginning. The nations do not know what British or French policy is or may be day after tomorrow, but they have never had the slightest cause to doubt what Hitler's policy is. It is to take whatever he wants of other people's property or freedom by threat or force of arms whenever and as fast as he can swing it.

Neither has the world had any cause to wonder about Mr. Hull's policy—to the extent that he controls policy. This column represents no interview with the Secretary of State. It does reflect impressions gained in many conversations, both recently and in past years, and my understanding of his published utterances.

He very early made it clear that, regardless of how far other nations might depart from the principles of international law, this country would never either condone such departures or let a single one pass without protest. He consistently opposed freezing the world's commerce into water-tight trade compartments or engaging in undercover war by economic assaults and batteries. done his best to break trade barriers down. He has

His policy has been to avoid commitments or entanglements with any European country because it happens to be of British or French or any other race. If the policies of other nations coincide with his, he counts it fortunate because he believes those policies to be the best hope of humanity. But, considering the erratic conduct of some of those nations and our traditional policy in that regard, he can be counted upon not to get us into harness with any. Regardless of rumor, I am convinced there are no secret agreements or "gentlemen's understandings" or undercover secret agreements or "gentlemen's understandings" or undercover commitments with any nation.

He regards war as not probable but as possible. So far as Mr. Hull is concerned, if we are dragged in, it will not be to fight the battles of anybody else. It will be because our own rights have been assaulted beyond the point of American endurance.

This last statement is of supreme importance because it has been the foundation of Mr. Hull's policy since the beginning to leave no doubt in the minds of the gangster or any other nations that such a point exists. There has been no swaggering about leave no doubt in the minds of the gangster or any other nations that such a point exists. There has been no swaggering about that and there will be none. Mr. Hull's policy is to avoid that point as long as it is honorably possible—but no longer. For if Japan, the Nazis, and the Fascists were ever foolish enough to be convinced that there is no such limit, we could and probably would have war in the world immediately.

Cast your eye over the entire company of the world's "statesmen" in the past few years. If any measures up to the waistline of Cordell Hull, I don't know who he is.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE-ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States." approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory and supplementary thereto, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

TRUTH IN FABRIC

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I shall ask the attention of the Senate for a very few moments. Tomorrow at 12 o'clock a motion will be made to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 162 was passed. That bill is known as the truth-in-fabric bill. Inasmuch as the debate tomorrow will be limited to 1 hour, I occupy this time to make a portion of the RECORD so that Senators who may be interested will have the advantage of the Record when the vote is taken at 1 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. President, this bill is a bill in favor of raw wool, termed "virgin wool"; and to the extent that the bill favors raw wool or virgin wool to the same extent such bill discriminates against reclaimed wool and other textile products. By other textile products I mean cotton and rayon. So the bill is a wool bill, and is against rayon and cotton.

If I may apply terms of finance to the bill, the bill seeks to monetize wool and to demonetize cotton and rayon.

Mr. President, the record is as follows:

During the debate on the bill the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, the majority leader [Mr. BARKLEY], admitted that the bill would have a great effect upon cotton, and that a vast amount of cotton was used in connection with wool in the making of cloth. Wool and cotton are woven together. They are spun together in the form of yarn, and from the yarn various classes of wool products are made. That information is now in the RECORD.

After this issue was developed in the debate I sent a telegram to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a copy of such message.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I shall not read the message. It will be in the RECORD for those who care to read it tomorrow.

I next ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point the reply to the telegram just referred to. The reply is signed by the National Association of Wool Manufacturers.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 24, 1939.

Hon. Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, United States Senate Office Building:

Re your telegram July 21, beg to advise that vast amounts of cotton are combined with wool in the manufacture of various types of textile fabrics for many purposes. Despite the fact that our association represents a large majority of the textile mills classified as wool textile mills, it will be necessary to get information on com-bined use of wool and cotton from mills considered cotton textile mills in order definitely to estimate annual volume of cotton so used. We are undertaking a survey to get this definite information from mills of both classifications immediately. At the same time we are asking these mills to advise us their opinion of the effect the pending bill will have on their use of cotton; that is, whether or not the present proposal enacted into law will increase or crease the use of cotton by them and to what extent. We will immediately forward this information to you as quickly as received.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF WOOL MANUFACTURERS.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. One sentence of the reply reads as follows:

Re your telegram July 21, beg to advise that vast amounts of cotton are combined with wool in the manufacture of various types of textile fabrics for many purposes.

Mr. President, after this issue arose I made a search of the House hearings, and likewise of the Senate hearings. I found practically nothing in either regarding the relation of wool to cotton. The House hearings were on a similar bill. I do not complain that the hearings are silent as to the effect of this bill upon cotton because the subcommittee in the Senate was made up of members from Northern States, where no cotton is grown.

The distinguished Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Schwartz] was made chairman of the subcommittee. He comes from a wool-growing State and where no cotton is produced. The second member of the committee was the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Lundeen], likewise from a wool-producing State, where no cotton is grown. I make no complaint at The third member of the subcommittee was the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], likewise from a Northern State. I make no complaint about that. The subcommittee was selected from Senators from Northern States. There was no one on the committee to represent cotton, and because of that fact the cotton issue was not raised.

There was nothing in the Senate hearings about the relationship between wool and cotton in the making of any kind of cloth. I made a search of the House hearings, and I desire to place in the RECORD at this point all I could find, which was a question submitted by a Representative from my State, Mr. Boren, in interrogating another Representative from my State, Mr. Monroney. This testimony is found at page 373 of the House hearings on House bill 944. On that page we find the testimony of the Honorable Mike Monroney, a Representative in Congress from the Fifth Oklahoma District. Mr. Monroney was formerly a furniture manufacturer, and later expanded his business to include the retailing of furniture.

It is conceded that it was because of the testimony of Representative Monroney that articles going into the manufacture of furniture were excluded from the House bill. Such articles are floor coverings, upholstery, drapery fabrics, rugs, and mats.

In connection with Mr. Monroney's testimony he was asked the following question by Mr. Boren:

I understand that you indicate it is your belief that it would be injurious to the cotton raiser and the seller of cotton that moves into the manufactured article?

Mr. Monroney answered:

Very definitely. To me this sets up the word "sterling" or "carat" of the fabric.

That was the answer by Mr. Monroney, a Representative from my State.

In discussing the fabric known as mohair, on page 379 of the House hearings, Mr. Monroney is quoted as follows:

The face of the fabric being all mohair, 100 percent mohair, this bill, if enacted, would require the trade to place on its tag the information that the fabric was made of 50 percent mohair, for instance, and 50 percent jute or cotton.

Then on page 380 he stated:

But after the customer has been used to an article containing 100 percent mohair, on the face, and picks up a label and sees this same fabric now labeled 50 percent mohair and 50 percent cotton or jute, I am afraid it is going to have an adverse effect.

Mr. President, that is all the testimony in the hearings in the House document as to the relation of cotton to wool.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Brown in the chair). The Senator has made a unanimous-consent request. Has he read in the RECORD whatever he wanted to have included?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I asked unanimous consent that the telegrams be inserted in the RECORD, and I think consent was granted. I shall not ask for further unanimous consent with regard to the hearings. I have given the pages and the quotations which I desire the Record to con-

When I found nothing in the House hearings, I then made a search of the Senate hearings, and I found in the Senate hearings only one little item which gave any light whatever upon the relation of wool to cotton. On page 116 of the Senate hearings on Senate bill 162 we find a table compiled from the United States Census figures for the years 1914, 1919, 1929, 1931, and 1935. That table assumes to give the principal fibers consumed in the woolen and worsted industries.

In 1914, according to this table in the hearing, some 28,387,022 pounds, or 56,777 bales, of cotton were used in conjunction with the making of woolen and worsted fabrics. The table shows the amount of cotton used in each of the years mentioned in connection with the making of such fabrics. The table does not give the amount of cotton used in the making of woolen and worsted fabrics for any year subsequent to 1935.

That is all the information that the Senate hearings contain with relation to the amount of cotton that is used in conjunction with wool in the making of textiles.

Mr. President, because I could find no information in the hearings, I addressed a letter to the National Retail Dry Goods Association. I understand that this association represents 5,900 stores. It is not a fly-by-night organization. It is one of the largest organizations in America, an organization having membership representing 5,900 stores. Included among those stores is the Penney organization, which of itself has 1,800 stores throughout the United States. In addition to the Penney organization and these other stores, this number embraces the mail-order houses. So I sent a letter to the head of this organization; and in order that the Senate may be advised, I ask permission to have printed in the RECORD at this point a copy of my letter to such organization.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request is granted.

The letter is as follows:

JULY 26, 1939.

To National Retail Dry Goods Association:

We have pending in the Congress a bill known as the truth-infabrics bill sponsored by Senator Schwarz, of Wyoming.

No doubt you have read the provisions of this proposed legislation. If not, I am enclosing copy for your inspection.

The subcommittee considering the bill was appointed from northern Senators; hence, the relationship between cotton and wool was not brought out in the hearings. At the last moment it has developed that a very large amount of cotton is used by the wool manufacturers in making yarn, consisting of both wool and cotton. and cotton.

The purpose of the legislation is to increase the demand for raw or virgin wool and to discredit the demand for reclaimed or shoddy wool. It is my fear that the bill will have the same effect upon cotton that its promoters want it to have upon reclaimed or shoddy wool.

I have just sent a telegram to Mr. Fred K. Nixon, sales manager for the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills, asking for an opinion as to the probable effect of the passing of the Schwartz bill upon the cotton industry. For your information I am enclosing copy of this message herewith.

I have the Schwartz bill held up in the Senate pending a motion to reconsider. The vote comes up on my motion at 1 o'clock on Friday. I am desirous of securing all the information I can prior Friday. I am desirous of securing all the information I can prior to the vote; hence, if you will send me a memorandum by messenger, giving me your reaction to the effect of the Schwartz bill upon the cotton-textile industry, the favor will be appreciated.

Yours most cordially,

ELMER THOMAS.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I have received a reply to this letter. I shall not take time to read the letter, because it will be in the RECORD in the morning if I obtain permission to make it a part of the RECORD; and I now ask permission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request is granted.

The letter is as follows:

NATIONAL RETAIL DRY GOODS ASSOCIATION, New York, N. Y., July 26, 1939.

Hon. ELMER THOMAS.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Thomas: A great deal of attention and consideration is being given at the present time to the cotton-surplus problem, and there appears to be no question but that it requires solution in the interests not only of the cotton growers but of the general economic situation.

You are aware, of course, that there is a tremendous amount of apparel and household products, such as textiles, underwear, hosiery, blankets, etc., which are made of mixed wool and cotton. Under the provisions of S. 162 and H. R. 944 the percentage of cotton content of all these products must be revealed on the label.

The use of cotton in these mixed products is often for very excellent purposes, too numerous to detail.

Ient purposes, too numerous to detail.

There has been such a huge amount of advertising of rayon and rayon products during the past year, particularly with respect to women's apparel, although to a lesser degree with respect to men's apparel, that inevitably, should it become necessary to label all merchandise containing wool as to fiber content, manufacturers of yarns, textiles, etc., will turn to rayon and eliminate cotton as far as possible. There is no real reason for doing this excepting the psychological one of minimizing sales resistance; and, of course, in these times, when increased sales and increased production are so vitally important, everyone will attempt to operate along the lines of least resistance.

The same is true in the matter of blankets. The tendency nat-

The same is true in the matter of blankets. The tendency nat-urally will be to use less and less cotton in blankets if the blanket be labeled as to the exact percentage of cotton contained therein.

As you probably know, substitutes for cotton are being used all over the world and are being continuously developed.

I believe that this country consumed over 325,000,000 pounds of rayon during the year 1938, and there isn't very much doubt but that the two bills before mentioned will increase the use of rayon as against cotton in mixed fibers.

In attempting to increase the sale of wool it is quite evident that it will undoubtedly be at the expense of cotton and the cotton surplus presents a far more serious condition than any wool surplus, and, in addition, contrary to the belief of the wool growers, this legislation, if enacted, will in our opinion not increase the use of virgin wool.

Our opposition to this bill is not based on any desire to misrepresent products to the consumer. Make no mistake about that. It is based primarily on the premise that the enactment of these bills is based primarily on the premise that the enactment of these bills will simply open the door to further misrepresentation, to a sanctification of virgin-wool products without regard to the quality of such products, and will generally impede business at a time when no legislation should be enacted which would have this tendency. Importations of woolen goods, according to the Department of Commerce, have increased tremendously since the effective date of the reciprocal tariffs. It will be exceedingly difficult to enforce this law against such imports, and even if it could be enforced foreign exporters would have a further price advantage over American manufacturers, since this law would undoubtedly increase prices. Competition in the retail field assures consumers of the best possible value which is obtainable at the price the consumers desire to pay, and, of course, the Federal Trade Commission has ample and complete authority to eliminate misrepresentation.

This law would without question tend to largely nullify all the combined efforts of the Department of Agriculture and members of industry to promote the increased use of cotton.

Very truly yours,

Very truly yours,

HAROLD R. YOUNG, Washington Representative, National Retail Dry Goods

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I shall read the last paragraph of the letter. It is signed by Harold R. Young, Washington representative, National Retail Dry Goods Association. The last paragraph is as follows:

This law would without question tend to largely nullify all the combined efforts of the Department of Agriculture and members of industry to promote the increased use of cotton.

Then, Mr. President, after I had failed to get information from the hearings, I sent inquiries to the Department of Agriculture. I addressed a communication to Mr. Harry L. Brown, the Assistant Secretary; I addressed a communication to Mr. Milo Perkins, an expert in that organization; I addressed a letter to Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, the economic adviser to the Agricultural Department; and I addressed a similar letter to Dr. Boyd, an economist in that organization. When my letters reached the Department of Agriculture, these gentlemen got together and formulated a reply. have the reply; and I now ask permission to insert in the RECORD at this point the reply, signed by Mr. Harry L. Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Agriculture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter is as follows:

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OFFICE OF THE UNDER SECRETARY, Washington, D. C., July 27, 1939.

Hon. ELMER THOMAS,

United States Senate.

Dear Senator Thomas: This will reply to your letters of July 26 concerning certain aspects of the truth-in-fabrics bill, S. 162, addressed to several individuals in this Department, including Dr. Ezekiel, Dr. Boyd, Milo Perkins, and myself.

Ezekiel, Dr. Boyd, Milo Perkins, and myself.

You ask whether the provision of this bill requiring labeling of the manufactured goods to show the amounts of reclaimed wool fibers and other fibers which are intended to "discredit the demand for reclaimed or shoddy wool" will have the same effect on the demand for cotton for combining with virgin wool in spinning wool-cotton yarn. Broadly speaking, this Department takes the view that all information helpful to consumers in making intelligent purchases is desirable. Aside from this consideration, however, we believe that there are other important points to be mentioned in regard to enactment of the bill referred to.

If passage of this bill should result in increased consumption of virgin wool, we do not see how this increase could fail to be at the expense of reclaimed wool and other fibers, among them cotton, now expense of reclaimed wool and other fibers, among them cotton, now used in the wool and woolen industries. What the extent of this effect on cotton might be it is impossible accurately to estimate, but that there would be some decrease in the use of cotton seems

Bureau of the Census data indicate that the wool and woolen industry used in 1935 about 20,300,000 pounds of cotton and cotton waste, which is equivalent to about 42,000 bales of cotton. In addition, this group of industries uses considerable quantities of cotton and part cotton yarns purchased from other industries. There are also considerable quantities of cotton-and-wool-mixed fabrics pro-also considerable quantities of cotton-and-wool-mixed fabrics produced in mills primarily engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods. The total quantity of cotton consumed in worsted and woolen goods is probably in excess of 50,000,000 pounds, or the equivalent of about 105,000 bales of cotton.

It should be pointed out that the quantity of cotton consumed in the worsted- and woolen-goods industries referred to in the preceding paragraph is relatively small in percentage compared to the total amount of cotton consumed in this country. Also, we wish to make it clear that we do not infer that the use of cotton would be completely eliminated in the manufacture of worsted and woolen goods by enactment of this type of legislation.

woolen goods by enactment of this type of legislation.

Due to the urgency of your request, this letter cannot be cleared through the Budget Bureau, as is customary on all formal reports on legislation issued by this Department.

Sincerely yours,

HARRY L. BROWN, Assistant Secretary.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I now desire to call attention to one or two sentences from the letter of the Department of Agriculture.

The sentences to which I call attention are as follows:

If passage of this bill should result in increased consumption of virgin wool, we do not see how this increase could fail to be at the expense of reclaimed wool and other fibers, among them cotton, now used in the wool and woolen industries.

The second sentence to which I desire to call especial attention is as follows:

The total quantity of cotton consumed in worsted and woolen goods is probably in excess of 50,000,000 pounds, or the equivalent of about 105,000 bales of cotton.

Mr. President, here is an official letter from the Department of Agriculture which makes the positive statement that this bill will have the effect of decreasing the demand for cotton, and it might decrease the demand for cotton to the extent of the present amount being consumed, which is estimated to be 105,000 bales per annum.

Mr. President, in order that I might have further information, I sent a telegram to Mr. Fred K. Nixon, manager of the Riverside & Dan River Cotton Mills, 40 Worth Street, New York City. I ask permission to have this telegram inserted in the Record at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so

The telegram is as follows:

JULY 26, 1939.

FRED K. NIXON, Manager, Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills,

Schwartz bill pending before Congress proposes to force manufacturers to label contents of cloth, especially wool. Am advised much cloth contains both wool and cotton. This fact will force manufacturers to label cloth, giving percentage of contents of both wool and cotton. Respectfully request your opinion as to how provisions of Schwartz bill will affect cotton industry. Theory of Schwartz bill is to magnify and increase importance of virgin or nonreclamed wool and to discredit wool that has been once woven into cloth and thereafter reprocessed and reclaimed. If such bill has effect wanted by promoters, reclaimed wool will be discredited, and I fear that cotton, when used with wool, will likewise be discredited; hence, if my interpretation is correct, Schwartz bill will place premium on virgin or unreclaimed wool and will likewise discredite otton, placing cotton on same status as reclaimed or so-called shoddy wool. Representing a large cotton-producing State, I do not wish to have Congress enact legislation which may have the effect of discrediting the demand for cotton. I shall appreciate any facts or opinion you will give me relative to effect of Schwartz bill upon cotton industry.

ELMER THOMAS.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am promised a reply to this telegram between now and tomorrow noon. At that time, if the reply is available, I shall submit same to the Senate.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the statement of the Senator from Oklahoma pertaining to Senate bill 162. It appears that the objection of the Senator from Oklahoma to Senate bill 162 is based upon the fact that it may interfere with the use of cotton.

I happen to come from a wool-producing State. I also happen to come from a cotton-growing State. I cannot see one thing, nor did I see one thing, in Senate bill 162 which would in any way interfere with cotton. From what I was able to ascertain concerning that particular bill, the only thing that the sponsor of the bill had in mind, or those who would vote for the bill had in mind, was to try to keep honest those who deal in wool.

There is nothing whatsoever in Senate bill 162 which would prohibit a single soul in the entire country from using New Mexico or Oklahoma cotton; but we do insist that when a fabric is made of cotton, it should be so stated. All we ask in the particular bill is that when they say a fabric is wool, the housewife or anyone who makes a purchase of a particular commodity that is supposed to be wool shall get a commodity that is wool.

There is nothing deceptive about Senate bill 162. There is nothing which would in any way interfere with cotton. While we may not raise as much cotton as some of the other States raise, we still raise cotton in my State; but we do not want anyone in New England or elsewhere when he is selling New Mexico cotton combined with wool to say that it is wool. If they buy wool from Oklahoma, or wool from New Mexico, or wool from Wyoming, all we ask for in Senate bill 162 is that they be honest about it and tell us that it is wool, not with the idea of interfering in any way whatever with cotton, or prohibiting the marketing of cotton in any way at all.

I hope that when the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed Senate bill 162, the bill of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Schwartz], comes up, Senators will have in mind the fact that there is nothing at all in that bill that will prohibit in any way whatever buying 1 pound of cotton anywhere. It is designed only to keep wool honest, even if we cannot keep any other commodity honest.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, unfortunately I have been absent from the Chamber. The truth-in-fabric bill has come up from time to time. I merely want to remark that if the use of cotton in the manufacture of woolen fabric lessened the value and comfort of the wool, I would not open my mouth about this bill; but, in fact, it improves the quality of the garment because of the peculiar character and tensile strength of the cotton.

When a man buys a woolen suit there is a certain amount of cotton in it. It does not detract one particle from the woolen effect. The fact is that with the modern loose weave and aniline dyes, it takes an expert to tell the difference between a woolen garment and a cotton garment. The dyes make the color fast. The comfort of the garment is just as great, and there is no kind of moth or insect that has ever been known to attack a cotton garment.

I am not here to try to discredit the use of wool, but I am here to state that if this bill passes and the use of cotton, which lessens the price of the woolen garment, is made impossible, and the use of absolutely virgin wool is enforced, the sale of woolen garments will be as disastrously affected as the Senator from Oklahoma is afraid that cotton will be disastrously affected.

Mr. President, that is one feature, the commercial feature. The other feature is the attempt to promote the industry of one section at the expense of the products of another section. I have only to refer to the oleomargarine tax. The product called oleomargarine was being extracted from cottonseed, and, of course, it entered into competition with butter. So there was a rush to Congress, and the butter interests had a bill introduced putting a prohibitive tax on oleomargarine—after awhile the Senate got a little more common sense—arare thing in this body—and modified the bill. They said, "You may sell that product as oleomargarine, and color it"—as they did butter—"but you must label it 'colored oleomargarine,' so as to inform the public what it is."

All this grew out of simple competition. There was no question as to the nutritive value of this edible fat, its wholesomeness, its palatableness, but it was a competitor, and therefore must be taxed out of existence. That was all there was to it. One section was devoted to the production of butter, another devoted to producing a substitute. Dr. Wiley, appearing before a subcommittee in 1911, of which Senator Lodge, the grandfather of the present Senator from Massachusetts, and I were members, testified that oleomargarine was just as palatable, just as wholesome, and just as nutritious as butter, and stated that when colored with the extract of carrot it was just as pleasing in its yellow appearance.

A Senator who was devoted to the butter industry asked me, "Do you pretend to say that this miserable vegetable stuff taken from cottonseed is as good as good Elgin butter?"

"Well," I said, "I do not know. I take my cow and feed her on cottonseed alone, and I milk from her the product of the cottonseed, as changed by the chemistry of her anatomy, and churn it into butter—pure cottonseed butter run through a cow." Science runs cottonseed through a machine and extracts butter. I believe I would just about as soon have the machine product, because it is not as subject to animal disease as it is when run through the cow. [Laughter.]

All sorts of unpatriotic measures are resorted to in an attempt to get a little advantage of another section. This truth-in-fabric bill should be labeled a bill to protect the wool growers of America, not the manufacturers; they are not the ones who are asking for the bill. It is the sheepmen who want to eliminate any use of cotton.

Mr. President, I deplore this kind of legislation, not because it would affect cotton, since 150,000 bales of cotton in a fifteen or sixteen million bale crop does not spell much, but the use of the cotton does help the poor to get woolen clothes, which are, in a way, more desirable under certain conditions than the cotton-fabric goods.

This bill is not worthy of the United States Senate or of the Congress. No one has suffered; no one has complained except the wool grower. No one has been denied a comfortable suit, no one has been denied any of the comforts of clothes, but the wool growers want a monopoly, and they are welcome to it, so far as I am concerned. I do not believe, however, that this kind of legislation adds anything to the American spirit or to the spirit of fair play.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may we not get back to the bill under consideration and have a vote on the pending amendment?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I merely desire to observe at this time that I am not going to reply to what has been said, because I do not desire to delay the vote on the pending bill, but I hope to demonstrate to the Senate tomorrow that I know something about cotton, and I know what is driving cotton out of woolen textiles, and I will demonstrate that it is not new wool.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Maloney].

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut asked for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am willing that he shall have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MILLER (when his name was called). I have a special pair with the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely]. I am advised that if present he would vote "yea," and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following general pairs: The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]; the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton]; and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison].

These Senators are necessarily absent.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. GREEN. I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. That pair has been transferred to the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY], and I am at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Slattery] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison], the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Neely], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Minton], and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Herring] are unavoidably detained.

I announce the following pairs: The Senator from Indiana [Mr. Minton] with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Herring]; the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] with the Senator from Utah [Mr. King]; and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Indiana, the Senator from Washington, and the Senator from Montana would vote "yea." The Senator from Iowa, the Senator from Utah, and the Senator from North Carolina, if present and voting, would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 44, as follows: YEAS—27

So Mr. Maloney's amendment was rejected.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, yesterday the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Taft] made certain remarks in regard to a rural-route project in the State of Ohio. Much to the discredit of that particular project he read from a brief filed by the attorneys in some tax proceeding in Ohio, by which they undertook to reduce the taxation of that particular project. That was one of the first projects started by the R. E. A. when the law was enacted. I wish to say before I refer more particularly to the project itself, that no one, neither friend nor foe of the Rural Electrification Administration, expected that it would work altogether without mistake. It covered the entire United States. It undertook to bring electricity to the farm homes of America.

It was an experiment in that kind of legislation, especially in this country. I have no doubt the Rural Electrification Administration made many mistakes and will make many more in an undertaking of this kind, which is Nation-wide in its scope, and I think I can say without any fear of contradiction that the Rural Electrification Administration has improved very greatly and is doing a better job now than it did when it began.

The particular project referred to by the Senator from Ohio, one of the first started, was in his own State. It was started in 1936. The Senator referred to the income and the expenses of that particular project up to the end of the year 1937. It had been in operation only 1 full year and part of 1936. The financial statement shows that there was a deficit of $717.76 in 1936, and that the net revenue for 1937—I speak of the net revenue—was $849.06.

Of course, if that kind of a financial showing had extended during the life of the project it would have been a failure. There would not have been sufficient money to pay the interest and to make payments on amortization of the principal. The Senator from Ohio made much of that, and he stopped at the end of the year 1937. If he had gone just 1 year more he would have found that the net revenue in 1938, the next year, was $24,805.27.

That brings us up to the present year. The Senator would have found, had he gone into the present year, that in the first 5 months of this year there was a net revenue of $16,692.12.

I do not know whether the Senator, when he made his remarks, was informed of anything beyond the 2 years of failure, the 2 experimental years, the 2 beginning years.

I have a table here prepared by the R. E. A.. I presume it is correct and taken from the records. It sets forth that the gross revenue has shown a constant and satisfactory increase, as indicated by the following statement of monthly receipts taken at 6 months' intervals since the project was energized. The first figure is for October 1936, $2,193.12; in April 1937, $5,880; October 1937, $8,794.35; April 1938, $9,341.08; October 1938, $10,986.59; April 1939, $11,225.97; in June, that is the last month, 1939, $11,548.20.

The operating profit has shown a steady and satisfactory increase, as indicated by the following statement.

Mr. President, I ask that the entire statement be printed at the conclusion of my remarks and as part of my remarks. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I will not read all of that statement. But in October 1936 the operating deficit was $33.57. In April 1937 the profit was $539.75. And so on, until April 1939, when there was a profit of $3,403.37. In June, last month, 1939, there was a profit of $3,775.84.

The average consumption per customer is now running nearly 20 percent ahead of 1938. The interest which has fallen due has been paid. For interest, $26,992.56, or practically $27,000, has been paid, and as yet no principal payments are due.

Mr. President, this was one of the earliest R. E. A. projects, and was constructed at a time when costs were running about 20 percent higher than present costs. It was a pioneer project, not only in name but in fact, and was very much lower in construction and in load building than the present experience of R. E. A. projects.

In view of these facts the favorable upward trend indicated by the statement, is particularly significant.

It is notable that the operating figures for the calendar year 1937, which was the only period involved in the tax case, constituted no criterion whatever concerning the future of this project as illustrated by the fact that the net revenue for the calendar year 1938 was nearly 300 percent higher than the net revenue for the year 1937.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, those figures cannot be right.

The net revenues?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. What does the Senator include in "net" revenue? Does he include depreciation, the replacing of poles and lines, and so forth?

Mr. NORRIS. I am reading the statement issued by the R. E. A.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator does not know how they calculate their net revenue?

Mr. NORRIS. I suppose they are intelligent, probably as intelligent as is the Senator from Ohio, and probably much more intelligent than I am, and that they know how to do that business. I assume that they do it honestly.

Why did the Senator from Ohio stop with 1937? Why did he quit just when that project commenced to grow and become useful and self-supporting?

Mr. TAFT. Because the statement I was reading from was a Government brief, a brief filed with the Tax Commission of Ohio by the R. E. A., the Government, and which covered that full year. I might say that I did not cover the year 1938, but this brief shows that they did have the figures for 8 months of 1938; and whereas in 1937 they told the tax commission they had an average monthly deficit of $6,394, they told them that in the first 6 months of 1938 they had an average monthly deficit of $6,194. In other words, the figures for 1938—

Mr. NORRIS. Now the Senator is quoting from a brief by the attorneys-

Mr. TAFT. For the Rural Electrification Administration. Mr. NORRIS. I understand. They are Government attorneys.

Mr. TAFT. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. But does the Senator expect attorneys in trying a lawsuit and trying to get, as they think, a reduction in taxation—does the Senator believe they used anything unfavorable to their view? So while I do not know whether they were telling the truth or not—I assume they were—the fact remains that the Senator was quoting from something that he knew was absolutely adverse to this project.

Mr. TAFT. If the Senator will yield—that is absolutely untrue. I am quoting from the figures filed, which are true figures. They are far more true than the figures presented to the Senator, because here are included reserve for maintenance and for depreciation. Does not the Senator suppose they have to replace their poles after 20 years?

Mr. NORRIS. Why did the Senator stop with 1938?

Mr. TAFT. Because that is practically the same as 1937.

Mr. NORRIS. It is not the same.

Mr. TAFT. There is a $200 difference.

Mr. NORRIS. There is increase of net revenue there of nearly 3,000 percent.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, a point of order.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator was presenting the situation in just as unfavorable a light as he could. If he wanted to be fair with the project in his own State why did he not give the facts as they are given now? Why did he not give both sides?

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President-

Mr. TAFT. I asked the Rural Electrification— Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, a point of order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Ohio is interrupting the Senator from Nebraska without securing the permission of the Senator or addressing the Chair. The Senate has rules, and the Senator knows what they are.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is well taken. The Senator from Ohio will address the Chair.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. The figure which the Senator has shown of net revenue left out the item of interest. It also left out depreciation. The figures which I presented show there was an operating revenue in 1937 of about $88,000.

The Government attorneys estimate that the real deficit in 1937 was $76,000. The Senator is correct that in the first 8 months of 1938 the revenue, leaving out interest and depreciation, was apparently $10,000; but they show that the net deficit for 8 months was $50,000 in 1938, substantially the same deficit which existed in 1937. I do not object to the Senator presenting figures, but I object to his charging me with unfairness when all I have done is to read from the briefs of Government attorneys and from the figures of the balance sheet and the statement of operating expenses and operating receipts filed by the R. E. A. itself with the Tax Commission of Ohio and sworn to by its attorneys and supporters.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I do not think I have made any charge against the Senator from Ohio for which I have to apologize or which needs any defense. The Senator from Ohio in his speech was trying to throw as much dust as he could against the success of the Rural Electrification Administration. If anyone doubts that statement, let him read the speech.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. No; I will not yield at this time. Wait until I answer the first question.

At the same time, in almost every paragraph he was saying, "Oh, I am a friend of the Rural Electrification Administration." God knows, if we had many such friends we should not have any rural electrification! That is what I thought from reading his speech. I challenge anyone to read it for himself and see if he can draw any other conclusion.

The figures he gave he quoted from an attorney's brief. Of course, the attorney wanted to win his case. I do not mean to say that the attorney misstated anything; but he made the statement as unfavorable to the R. E. A. project as he possibly could. The presentation was of only one side. The attorney had the right to present that side. The Senator from Ohio had a perfect right to read from the brief and put it all in the Record if he desired; but when I read his speech, which I did not hear, it struck me that he was as one-sided as any attorney ever is in trying a lawsuit, and that he had put only one side in the evidence.

He had not put in anything as of the time when the project commenced to improve. It has been improving and increasing in net revenue every year from the time it began. To start with it had a deficit. Many others have had deficits. No private company ever put in an electric distribution system, either rural or urban, in a territory where none was in existence before, without having to build up the load. Nine times out of ten there is a deficit, sometimes for 8 or 10 years.

As I understand the experts—of course, I do not understand them as well as does the Senator from Ohio; perhaps he knows more than I know about the subject—they do not commence to charge depreciation the first year. They recognize that they will have a deficit. They recognize that these projects, like any other projects, have to be built up.

From the day the project was put in there has been a constant increase, as the statement shows. I have not figured it out, but as the statement shows, there is an increase in net revenue in this particular project of more than 3,000 percent since it has been in existence. It has paid every debt it owed up to this hour. It does not owe a dollar to the Government or to anyone else, and it is still climbing up.

We cannot expect any project to be a success the first year, if we are to charge depreciation. If we are to charge up ordinary expenses, we will find a deficit to start with, either in private or public projects. There is no difference between them in that respect. They are all alike.

I do not think it is fair to the Senate for a Senator to give the results while the project was a failure and not give any of the results while it was a success.

It is not fair to the country. It is not fair to his own State. It is not fair to the farmers who are now making a success of the project which the Senator wanted the country and the Senate to believe was an abject failure.

EXHIBIT A

JULY 27, 1939.

STATEMENT RE PIONEER RURAL ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE LOCATED IN THE

The tax case referred to in the testimony related solely to the operations of this project for the calendar year 1937, which was the tax period at issue. This was the first full year of operation of this project, and the operating figures for that year, although of controlling importance in connection with this particular tax case, had no significance as an index of future income during the 20-year period of the Government loan.

The steady upward trend of net revenue available for debt service during the past 2½ years evidences the economic soundness and self-liquidating character of this project. The operating figures for the calendar year 1937, which was the only period involved in the tax case, constitute no criterion whatever concerning the future of this project, as illustrated by the fact that the net revenue for the calendar year 1938 was nearly 3,000 percent higher than the net revenue for the year 1937. The following statement is a record of the net revenue available for the debt service:

Five months, 1936	1 $717.76
Full year, 1937	849.06
Full year, 1938	24, 805, 27
First 5 months, 1939	16, 692. 12
¹ Deficit.

The gross revenue has shown a constant and satisfactory increase as indicated by the following statement of monthly receipts taken at 6 months' intervals since the project was energized.

October 1936	$2, 193, 12
April 1937	5, 880, 30
October 1937	8, 794. 35
April 1938	9, 341. 08
October 1938	10, 986. 59
April 1939	11, 225, 97
June 1939	11, 548. 20

The operating profit has shown a similar steady and satisfactory increase as indicated by the following statement:

Operating deficit: October 1936	400 57
Operating profit:	$33.57
April 1937	539.75
October 1937	1, 395, 09
April 1938	1, 126, 97
August 1938	1,567.97
September 1938	3,090.72
October 1938	3, 329, 80
April 1939	3,403,37
June 1939	3, 775.84

The average kilowatt-hour consumption per consumer is now running nearly 20 percent ahead of the year 1938. All interest that has fallen due totaling $26,992.56 has been paid and as yet no principal repayments are due.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. NORRIS. I now yield to the Senator if he wants to ask me something.

Mr. TAFT. I think I was recognized in my own right, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator from Nebraska has charged me with unfairness because I happened to present the only figures I could obtain. The figures are official figures, sworn to by the Rural Electrification Administration. They are correct. They must be correct. There is no alternative. So far as I know, the Senator has not presented a complete statement of operation in 1938. He merely presented the conclusion of some R. E. A. administrator, instead of the statements of attorneys. He draws conclusions.

The Senator does not even know whether or not depreciation and interest are included in his figures. As a matter of fact, we asked the officials of R. E. A. to present to us the operating figures of some of the cooperatives. They said they would do so, but they have not yet done so. Incidentally, it is their duty to present the figures to the committee if they have them, and not to the Senator from Nebraska, because we asked for them, and we have not been furnished with them.

In the second place, I did not really notice yesterday the figures for 1938; but if I had, they prove only what the figures for 1937 prove. The difference is almost negligible. All I had was the figures for 8 months of 1938, when the brief was filed.

The average deficit for the year 1937 was $6,394 per month; and the average deficit for 1938 was $6,194 per month for the months reported. In other words, in 1937 the cooperative had a gross deficit of $75,000; and apparently from the figures its gross deficit would be something like $65,000 or $66,000. In other words, the figures for 1938 were not substantially different.

Furthermore, the brief says:

It is apparent that some deficit will continue for a period of years. Although there has been a slight improvement the trend is very slow. Three thousand two hundred and thirty-one customers have been connected, including almost all the profitable business.

The Senator emphasizes the increase in gross business. He does not say anything about expenses. Apparently there is some increase in business. The year before the project made only $80 more than actual expenses. In 1938 it made a few thousand dollars, but not sufficient to begin to pay depreciation; not sufficient to pay any interest whatever; and, so far as I know, not sufficient to pay any amortization on the debt to the Government.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TAFT. Incidentally, the Senator said I was reflecting on the Rural Electrification Administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. TAFT. No; I will not yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

The Senator is mistaken in that statement. My whole effort yesterday was to prove that the R. E. A. was a spending and not a lending organization; that the debts are not good debts; that the debts cannot be paid back and will not be paid back beyond a certain percentage. I suggested that 50 percent of the total amount put into the R. E. A. might be paid back.

We asked the Rural Electrification Administration to present all the figures from 600 cooperatives. It has not done so; and I venture to say that if the figures were furnished it would be found that operating expenses have exhausted every cent of operating receipts and that today nothing is left to pay interest or amortization, to say nothing of depreciation on the equipment.

I did not criticize the Rural Electrification Administration. In fact, the Administration explained why it cannot pay the charges. I agree with the explanation. The lack of earning power is said to be due wholly to the thin character of the rural business. The property has been efficiently managed. The gross earnings are as large, and the operating expenses are as low, as is reasonably possible.

The Senator states that this project is one of the R. E. A. mistakes. I did not say it was one of the R. E. A. mistakes. So far as I know, it is as good a cooperative as there is in the United States. So far as I know it is well administered. I read this statement to the Senate last night:

The rates at which electric energy is sold to the members of the corporation are as high as the traffic will bear and comparable to the rates charged by power and light companies in adjacent territories.

It is reasonable to assume that higher rates would result in restricting the development. To have avoided a deficit for the year 1937 would have required gross revenue 87 percent greater than that actually received. It is obvious that no such result could be obtained.

Those are the figures. They seem to me to prove completely what I said yesterday, that the bill is a spending and not a lending proposal; that if we want to appropriate more money for the R. E. A. we ought to appropriate it out of the regular Budget, as we have done for the past 3 or 4 years. It ought not to be assumed to be loaned money, on the theory that in some way it is going to be paid back.

My whole objection to the Government going into business is illustrated by the Senator from Nebraska. He does not know what depreciation is. He has no idea of the figures from Government enterprises, or of the way in which any private enterprise has to figure. He has never figured correctly as to the T. V. A.; and if the Government goes into business men like the Senator from Nebraska and men of his point of view will run those businesses. That is why Government businesses are bound to fail. That is why we ought to stay out of private businesses.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TAFT. I shall be through in half a minute.

The Government ought to stay out of business. The Government ought to be engaged in governmental business. It ought to be interested in assisting the people; but when governments go into actual business my contention is that they always lose money, and are likely to lose money, and cannot be blamed for losing money. Therefore, it seems to me very clear that a bill which puts the Government into the lending business and which, through the lending business, goes into the control of all the companies to which money is loaned, as set forth by Mr. Berle before the Temporary National Economic Committee, is a bill which ought to be rejected unless we are prepared to go to the point of Government regimentation and regulation of all business, and finally actual operation of all business.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio in his speech, if one reads it through, was trying to do just what he is now attempting to do—that is, to show that this is a spending bill, and that we are going to lose on it. To demonstrate his point he used this particular illustration in his own State. He was trying to show, if one went no further than he did, that the project was an absolute failure; that the Government would have to take over all of the R. E. A. before it got through, and that it was going to fail.

The Senator has a perfect right to believe as he does. I do not find any fault with a man who so argues. I know that some men honestly believe such a thing, as probably the Senator from Ohio does. That does not do away with the fact that when he comes to prove his proposition he uses an illustration and tells only half the story. I previously stated, and I now repeat, that that is not a fair way to present any case in the Senate. That is the way an attorney presents his case to a jury, but it seems to me it is not the way the Senator ought to have presented the case to the Senate if he wanted to be fair. He should have told both sides.

The Senator from Ohio charges me with much ignorance, to which I plead guilty. I do not claim to be a wise man. I do not claim to have the knowledge of the Senator from Ohio. With his superior knowledge he tells us what ought to be done.

No private corporation in the country ever started a project, either rural or urban, without having a loss at the beginning of the operation of the project. I am referring to a project which is started new, as the R. E. A. had to do in the case of this particular project.

That is probably true of every R. E. A. that is put into force. You have to build up a load. It takes time. You cannot charge depreciation, you cannot charge amortization, for the first year or two; and this project is going on now, at this moment, entirely out of debt. It does not owe a dollar for interest. It may not be able to meet the principal when it comes due. I do not know what may happen. A private company would not try to meet the principal. It would go in debt, and stay in debt, and get in debt further and deeper all the time; but this rural electrification statute provides for amortization for the payment of these debts, so that when the cooperatives get through they will not owe anything, but they will own the property, and will have only the operating expenses and depreciation to look out for.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Record, in connection with my remarks, extracts from a brief of the Rural Electrification Administration in the case of the Pioneer Rural Electric Cooperative, Inc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[The Tax Commission of Ohio. In the matter of the Pioneer Rural Electric Cooperative, Inc., taxpayer. Application to obtain a reduction in the tentative assessed valuation of its property for the year 1938. Memorandum submitted by the taxpayer and by the Rural Electrification Administration on behalf of the United States of America, a creditor of the taxpayer]

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

It is respectfully submitted that the tentative valuation of the taxpayer's property for the year 1938 in the sum of $887,080 should be very greatly reduced. This memorandum presents the reasons of fact and of law in support of the application for reduction.

STATEMENT OF THE INTEREST OF THE RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

The properties of the taxpayer were wholly financed by the United States, acting through the Rural Electrification Administration. The taxpayer is now indebted to the United States in the total sum of $1,184,272, evidenced by 20-year notes, bearing interest at 3 percent, and secured by a first mortgage upon all the property here involved. The notes are to be repaid in equal monthly installments, adjusted to retire the total principal amount, with interest, by December 1, 1956.

The taxpayer has not at any time earned enough even to pay its operating expenses, exclusive of the debt service and exclusive of

The taxpayer has not at any time earned enough even to pay its operating expenses, exclusive of the debt service and exclusive of essential reserves. The only source of repayment of the indebtedness which brought this taxpayable property into being is the net revenues after payment of all operating expenses. The United States, therefore, is vitually interested in the maintenance of the taxpayer's property as a going concern. It is not only interested as a creditor, but it shares with the rural population of Champaign, Miami, and Shelby Counties an interest in the successful maintenance of this electric service. The enterprise of the taxpayer represents much more to the people of Ohio than an addition to the taxable property in these counties. It represents the fulfillment of many years' desire on the part of this large rural area for a service that has become an essential commonplace in urban life. The increasing gap between urban and rural standards of life has become a great public problem in the solution of which the Federal rural-electrification program plays an important part.

for a service that has become an essential commonplace in urban life. The increasing gap between urban and rural standards of life has become a great public problem in the solution of which the Federal rural-electrification program plays an important part. The successful development of this enterprise is now jeopardized by the prospect of continuing deficits. This jeopardy may be relieved by an adjustment of the tax load to a level that reflects the true earning power and the true value of the property. The Rural Electrification Administration, therefore, for the reasons set forth above, joins in this memorandum.

RELEVANT FACTS CONCERNING THE BUSINESS AND PROPERTY OF THE TAXPAYER

The Pioneer Rural Electric Cooperative, Inc., is an organization of rural electric consumers, formed by a merger of three similar cooperative associations. It operates wholly in rural areas, where, for many years, the farmers had tried in vain to obtain service from existing utility companies. Service was consistently denied on the sole ground that the business would be unprofitable. The business of the taxpayer in this proceeding became possible only through the program of the Rural Electrification Administration. It was only because of the willingness of these farmers and the Federal Government to take financial risks which private capital would not take that this taxable property came into being. Those concerned in the enterprise have faith that it will become self-sustaining, but this will be possible only by an adjustment of all items of operating expense, including taxes, to the business facts of the enterprise in its early years.

The fact which is chiefly relevant to this proceeding is the present earning power of the property. In the year 1937 the gross operating revenues were $88,111.83. The operating expenses, including taxes, but exclusive of interest and exclusive of any reserves for depreciation and future maintenance, were $88,084.35. Interest was $26,190.89. Reserves for depreciation and maintenance, computed at 5 percent of the book value of fixed assets, amounted to $50,567. It appears, therefore, that the first full year of operation showed a deficit of $76,731.32, equal to 87 percent of its gross revenues. These facts as to the earning power of the property are set forth in the report heretofore filed by the taxpayer. The report, however, did not include any reserves for depreciation and maintenance which proper accounting practice and the decisions of the courts require. A summary of the profit and loss statement is shown in exhibit "A." attached hereto.

It is apparent that some deficit will continue for a period of years. Although there has been a slight improvement, the trend is very slow. Three thousand two hundred and thirty-one customers have been connected, including almost all of the profitable business. In ex and in exhibit A indicates an unusually low ratio of operating expenses. Exactly the opposite is true. The break-down of operating expenses set forth in the taxpayer's report and in exhibit A indicates an unusually low ratio of operating expenses to the book value of the property. It is apparent that every item of expense has been cut to the bone. Such items as salaries, wages, rent, and office expense are very much lower than similar items in the current practice of electric companies. It must be assumed that the usual type of utility company, privately financed and operated for profit, would show a greater deficit in the operation of this property in this area.

Respectfully submitted.

On behalf of Pioneer Rural Electric Cooperative, Inc., Taxpayer.

VINCENT D. NICHOLSON, General Counsel On behalf of the Rural Electrification Administration.

This is good management as an inducement to greater use in developing a strictly rural business where consumer buying power is relatively low.

Mr. LUCAS obtained the floor.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Washington.
Mr. BONE. I think it were well for all of us to recall, in the light of the discussion which has been going on here for the past few minutes about the defects, if any, of the R. E. A. program, that before this administration came into power there was in existence in this country the most ruthless, cold-blooded business machine ever built in America—the American Power Trust. It had received no check at the hands of Congress. It dominated that particular field as wholly and completely as it was possible for any business organization in America to dominate a field. Is there any doubt of that in the mind of anyone? If it wanted anything, it got it. It got it from State legislatures, from municipal organizations, from every public body in America. It was handed power on a silver platter in plentitude, the like of which this country has never witnessed.

Now, what happened? There arose in this country a veritable stench in business. The Power Trust rooked and robbed everybody who was foolish enough, in good faith, to invest possibly his last nickel in its stock. Friends of mine out West lost every penny they had in the world in buying the stock of scandalous, thieving outfits like the Insuli combine in Illinois, and there was scarcely a murmur of protest from people in public life about that. In the city of Portland, Oreg., a peculiar stock manipulation went on which almost cost their whole investment to those who had invested their money.

I am not going to attempt to recall to your minds the investigation of the Federal Trade Commission, which revealed some things which actually stank to high heaven.

There has not been a private power utility company in this country that ever pioneered anywhere. Show me where a private company ever really pioneered? When they built a power line, they knew they had their hooks into the consumers in such a way that they were enabled to get back every cent of their money. They made the consumers sign 3-year contracts, tying on electric ranges. They fortified themselves against loss; and even in spite of that iron control, that cold-blooded, monopolistic control of that business, with all that graft sanctified by State regulatory devices, even then they could not make that rotten business make money for some of the people who were in it. One after another these monstrous financial frauds went down, down and out, and they took the savings of millions of people with them. This smelly mess we know as the Insull outfit is typical of such operations. So when we are talking about sacred private business in this country, let us recall that the monstrous abuses of the private power combines show what flattened America. We allowed such burglars to run loose in this country, and they cleaned America. Who challenged them before 1932? Let someone rise and tell me one effective challenge laid at the door of that gang. They got every law they wanted on the statute books. They got it up in my State, and in every sovereign State of the Union. You good lawyers rise and tell me where there was a real check, except a very brief one here and there.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. LUCAS. I have the floor. I want to get this amendment along.

Mr. REED. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. BONE. I am going to conclude in a moment.

Mr. REED. With the permission of the Senator from Illinois, I want to offer Professor Ripley, of the Harvard staff, as exhibit A. He began, back in 1924, to point out the evils of holding companies in this country. The public-utility companies stopped advertising with my newspapers, in part.

Mr. BONE. They know how to put the heat on, all right. Mr. REED. I came to Washington in 1926 three times, at my own expense, to help Senator Walsh get his resolution in shape. The charts that he hung up in this Chamber were made in my office at Kansas City. I am offering as exhibit A a man who started 10 years before this administration started to point out the evil of the holding companies, if you please.

Mr. BONE. I want to say to the Senator from Kansas that I admire him very much as a Member of this body. I am glad that he contributed to Professor Ripley, and I hope he helped to write the chapter in Ripley's book headed "More light and power, too."

Mr. REED. Professor Ripley wrote his book, Main Street and Wall Street, and at that time the professor and I had some correspondence on the subject. The only thing I wanted to bring out was that Professor Ripley and I were early in this game. We had no monopoly upon purity or wisdom. We thought we did know something about the abuses. The only thing I object to, now and then, is the assumption on the part of this administration that it was the first to discover the evil, and that nobody else ever had any part in trying to stop it.

Mr. BONE. The Lord knows I would not arrogate to myself or this administration any assumption of virtue, or assert that this is the first time anything had ever been done; but this is the first time that I recall when any money was appropriated by the Federal Government in a practical effort to get at and correct some of these abuses. Any man who has had a bit of experience in utility regulation knows how this all adds up. I recall one outfit out west which collected from its consumers $800,000 for depreciation and paid it out in dividends to the stockholders, and none of its officials went to jail. By that act they were violating every recognized canon of business decency. There was not a lawyer in public life who did not know precisely what it implied. That was an act for which they ought to have been challenged; but under this beautiful thing that we call State regulation they were not even rebuked. Public morals in the private power field were at a low ebb before 1932.

Mr. REED. The Senator means in Washington, not in Kansas?

Mr. BONE. Kansas is still Kansas, and not only has virtue in her outward parts but is clean inside.

I thank the Senator from Illinois and my friend from Kansas for his contribution.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I offer an amendment. I move to strike out paragraph (2) on page 4, and insert in lieu thereof the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator desire to have the amendment stated?

Mr. LUCAS. I desire to have the amendment stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, it is proposed to strike out paragraph (2), and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

(a) In order to increase employment by providing for useful non-Federal public works projects of the kind and character which the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works has hereto-fore financed or aided in financing, pursuant to title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1936, the Public Works Administration Extension Act of 1937, or the Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1938, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Public Works Administration (herein called the "Administration") in the Federal Works Agency, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $250,000,000, together with the balance of the appropriation made under section 201 of such act of 1938, not reserved for administrative expenses of the Administration and not now or hereafter expended pursuant to allotments heretofore made, which amounts shall be available until June 30, 1941, and made, which amounts shall be available until June 30, 1941, and may be expended by the Commissioner of Public Works (hereinafter referred to as the "Commissioner") for (1) the making of loans or grants, or both, to States, Territories, possessions, political subdivisions, or other public bodies (herein called "public agencies"); or (2) the construction and leasing of projects, with or without the privilege of purchase, to any such public agencies.

(b) No amount available under this title shall be allotted for any present which is the determination of the Commissioner.

(b) No amount available under this title shall be allotted for any project which, in the determination of the Commissioner, cannot be commenced prior to March 1, 1940, or the completion of which cannot be substantially accomplished prior to July 1, 1941: Provided, That this limitation upon time shall not apply to any project involved in litigation in any Federal or State court. (c) Under the funds available in this title, no grant shall be made in excess of 45 percent of the cost of any project, and no project shall be constructed for lease to any public agency unless the Commissioner shall determine that the nonrecoverable portion of the cost of such project shall not exceed 45 percent of the cost thereof.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I should like to ask whether the clerk read the original paragraph (f) on pages 3, 4, and 5 of the so-called Maloney amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk did not read the paragraph to which the Senator refers. The Chair understands it is stricken out.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, sometime ago the Congress of the United States considered a relief measure and when that bill came from the House of Representatives $125,000,-000 had been earmarked for the use of the Public Works Administration. From reading the Congressional Record in connection with the debates which were held on this bill. it was easy to understand why the House included and earmarked a hundred and twenty-five million dollars for Public Works Administration projects. Various Members took an unusual interest in debating that bill when it was up before the House for consideration.

Mr. President, I dare say that there is not a Member of the House who has not some project in his district at this time which has been given encouragement by the agents of the Public Works Administration, to the point where many of the communities have voted bonds, or have raised the money in one way or another to meet the conditions of the law as laid down in the present act.

In Illinois we have a number of such projects, and all this amendment seeks to do is to appropriate $250,000,000 to care for the projects in the various communities throughout the Nation which have been approved by the P. W. A. agency here in Washington.

It strikes me that it is filled with wisdom and a great deal of merit, because, as I see section 2 of the pending bill, and as I attempt to look into the future and visualize what is going to happen in the event the $350,000,000 is appropriated for loans and for projects of the character outlined in that paragraph, I am compelled to say that in my humble judgment, even though there is a small rate of interest charged on the loans, we are going to find a tremendous amount of difficulty at this particular time in getting a municipality interested in any self-liquidating project, as contemplated under said section.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. HAYDEN. I should like to understand the proposal. The way I do understand it is that the Senator prefers to give away $250,000,000 rather than to lend $350,000,000.

Mr. LUCAS. I will answer the Senator in this way: There is no one in the Senate more interested in the question of economy than the Senator from Illinois; however, this is not a question of giving any money away. This is not a question of economy. This, I am constrained to advise the Senator from Arizona and other Members of the Senate, is a question of a moral obligation to take care of those communities which relied upon the statements made by the representatives of the Public Works Administration. These Government officials met with the engineers, the architects, the boards of school directors, or the mayors of the cities. They approved and advised the holding of elections, employment of attorneys and architects. With such P. W. A. approval these communities voted and sold bonds in many cases, and now have the money deposited in the local banks, but can do nothing with it because it was voted for a specific, definite purpose, upon the recommendation and advice of the agents of the Administration here in Washington.

That is why I said to the Senator that I am interested in living up to what I contend is, if not a legal obligation, certainly a moral obligation on the part of the Government.

Mr. HAYDEN. I would have no quarrel with the Senator if he put his proposal on another ground, and urged it in addition to what is in the bill, but in making this suggestion he proposes to destroy the opportunity for the Government to make loans which, if they are made according to the provisions of the bill, will be good loans, and the Government will get the money back.

Mr. LUCAS. My theory about section 2 is, as I stated before, that in my humble opinion all of the cream of the Federal projects, insofar as the Public Works Administration is concerned, has been taken up now under the system of public grants.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator may be right; and if he is right, then the authorization for the lending of $350,000,000 will not be utilized, and no money will go out of the Treasury under that provision, and no money will be borrowed under it. But I do not see the object of destroying that opportunity.

Mr. LUCAS. I have offered my amendment, and I have made my position as clear as I can. Of course the amendment will have to stand on its merit, notwithstanding the opposition of the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. President, in order to complete the case and demonstrate to the Senate just what went on prior to January 1, 1939, when, under the law, these communities had a right to bargain with the Public Works Administration insofar as these projects were concerned, I wish to read into the RECORD some evidence to show just what happened in my own State; and I submit what has happened there is typical of what has occurred in every State of the Union.

For instance, I pick up exhibit 1, and on the caption of this letter appears "Board of Education, Mendota Grade Schools, Mendota, Ill." The letter is dated July 18, 1939, and reads:

Senator Scott Lucas,

Havana, Ill.

DEAR SIR: Somewhat over a year ago our grade school board, district 289, made application for a Public Works Administration loan for improving, remodeling, and equipping Blackstone School. This was listed under docket number Illinois 2193.

We were then informed by the Public Works Administration regional office that our request would be looked upon with more favor if we applied for more money and built an entirely new building. This procedure was followed. On September 7, 1938, a special election was held on bonding the district for $30,000. This project This procedure was followed. carried 218 to 31.

Mind you, Senators, in the example I have cited the Federal Public Works Administration was not satisfied with condition No. 1 as it was promulgated by the school board, but they came along, through their representative, and said, "If you change your plan and your specifications, and if you will lay this out under a different theory and scheme, and provide a little more money, we will see that you get the necessary grant from the Government."

Upon that representation they called an election, upon that representation the school board and those who were friends to this type of project went out into the highways and byways and corraled votes, and the result of the election shows that the project was carried 218 to 31.

These people, today as of yesterday, are vitally concerned about this project. Does not that vote convince the Senate that this community at Mendota, Ill., emphatically wants this project? Were they sufficiently encouraged to believe that the Federal Government would give them the 45-percent grant? Most certainly they were.

The letter continues:

The entire cost of the building together with P. W. A. grant was to be $52,000.

Nothing has ever come of this proposition. We are told that the money has all been allocated and no more is available. This Blackstone Building must be repaired before we can use it this This will take considerable money, which we can ill afford to spend at the present. When the regional office told us that a request for a grant on an entirely new building would be looked upon more favorably than a grant to rebuild the old one, we felt that we would have no trouble in getting our grant.

You can appreciate our position; repairs that must be made, if we must continue to use the building, on money that we should use in our current budget.

Mr. President, this presents one of the reasons why I voted against the Maloney amendment a little while ago. Here is a school district which could not comply with the provisions of that amendment. They were expecting a 45-percent grant from the Federal Government, and they are entitled to it by every rule of the game. The Senate will be doing an injustice to every community in this country which has relied upon these representations if the amendment of the Senator from Illinois is not adopted.

The letter continues:

May we expect any assistance from P. W. A. in the near future? We would greatly appreciate any assistance you might be able to give us in this matter.

E. J. FEIK, President.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Is the Senator proposing to vote larger funds for public works; that is, are we to have more money for public works under his amendment than is proposed in the bill?

Mr. LUCAS. No. Under the bill $350,000,000 is to be loaned. Of course, under the theory of the bill, the loans are presumed to be self-liquidating. Under the amendment to section 2, which I propose, $250,000,000 would be appropriated to take care of communities just like the ones I have been discussing.

Mr. LUNDEEN. The Senator would iron out those differences?

Mr. LUCAS. That is correct. Now I turn to exhibit No. 2. The caption is:

MURRAYVILLE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Mr. SCOTT W. LUCAS

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In view of the recent relief legislation in Washington, we feel that our grant for $14,000 from P. W. A. funds for a gymnasium and annex to our school building, costing $30,000. should be allowed.

In other words, they were depending upon the Senate to confirm what the House did with respect to P. W. A., which we denied at the time it came before us.

The letter continues:

The election to construct the building and sell bonds has already been held and passed, but we are unable to proceed, as P. W. A. funds had been exhausted.

We are writing you urging you to use whatever means are at your disposal to secure such grant for us. No P. W. A. money has ever been expended in this vicinity, and we believe that our project merits favorable consideration. This construction is badly needed in Murrayville.

Our standards of recognition and accrediting for our school will be jeopardized unless our school plant is enlarged. The high-school be jeopardized unless our school plant is enlarged. The high-school visitor from the university severely criticized our plant in his last inspection. He especially called attention to our crude, "barnlike" gymnasium, our basement rooms, our crowded assembly, and our small classrooms. He said, "Your present building situation makes it impossible to offer a modern program of studies."

Our district has a low assessed valuation and has voted the maximum bonding capacity allowed, which is $16,000. We need much more than this, but can construct a very desirable addition with P. W. A. support. We feel like now is the opportune time for Federal support.

The amount of our request ($14,000) is a relatively small.

The amount of our request ($14,000) is a relatively small amount, and we feel certain that you can secure it for a grateful community.

That $14,000 is just as important to the individuals residing in that little community having children going to that school as many problems we consider in the United States Senate, because, after all, these communities are the real builders of American life. Unless we assist these school districts and communities, which have gone the limit in bonding their districts in order to get what they believe is sufficient for them to keep in step with progress in education, and all that goes along with it, then I say we are not keeping faith. They needed $14,000, they are bonded to the limit, and, Mr. President, why? Because of the representations of the agents of the Public Works Administration.

Exhibit 3 is under the caption:

County superintendent of schools, Rock Island County.

Rock Island, Davenport, and Moline, the tri-cities, have a population of some 100,000. Rock Island is a city of 50,000 people.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming and the Senator from Illinois are justified in the complaint they make. There is too much confusion in the Chamber.

I trust Senators will give the Senator from Illinois the respectful attention to which he is entitled.

Mr. LUCAS. Following is the letter I received from the superintendent of schools of Rock Island County, Ill.:

> COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS, ROCK ISLAND COUNTY, Rock Island, Ill., January 17, 1939.

Hon. Scott W. Lucas,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Lucas: I am writing you at this time in behalf of the Milan grade-school district, which is located immediately adjacent to the city of Rock Island. Milan is a village of approximately 800 inhabitants, and we have a very fine grade school located there. During the past 5 or 6 years our enrollment has increased from 80 to 154 pupils.

On July 18, 1938, the school directors held an election for the purpose of selling bonds to the extent of $17,500, with the expectation of receiving approximately $17,000. With the cash on hand and future revenue, it would allow us to enlarge our building to meet present and future needs. At the time of the election the Federal grant looked very promising, but, try as we did, little the Federal grant looked very promising, but, try as we did, little action was secured. In the meantime the city of Rock Island has received a great deal of money for various projects.

has received a great deal of money for various projects. I have written to Mr. Kennicott, regional director of the P. W. A., located in Chicago, and today I have received a letter stating that our application was approved as of July 28, 1938, and forwarded to the central office in Washington, D. C.

I realize that the Chicago subway allocation used a great deal of our Illinois allotment, but if the Senate and the House see fit to apportion more funds for P. W. A., the people of this district, including the teachers and myself, will greatly appreciate your looking into this matter for us. There might be a possibility, since this project is not so large, that enough funds are still available which would allow us to start remedial measures, which are needed so badly, for the development of this school district.

needed so badly, for the development of this school district.

In one of our schoolrooms we have 54 pupils, and I believe you realize, as well as I, the unfairness to the children in this room. The board of education is powerless to use the money voted already for bonds, since the proposition was submitted to the people that the project would be carried out providing the grant from our Federal Government was fortherening. people that the project would be carried out providing the grant from our Federal Government was forthcoming. As one Democrat to another, I would appreciate anything that you could do for us in regard to this matter.

[Laughter.]

Senators now know why I am interested in that fellow.

I sincerely hope your new work is enjoyable, and may I call your attention to the standing invitation you have to visit Rock Island County.

Very truly yours,

FLOYD A. SHETTER, County Superintendent of Schools.

The next letter is from the city of Oglesby, as follows:

CITY OF OGLESBY. La Salle County, Ill., June 27, 1939.

Hon. Scott W. Lucas,

United States Senator from Illinois,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

In re P. W. A. Illinois Docket 2212.

Dear Sir: The city of Oglesby has had pending before the Public Works Administration since August of 1938 an application for a 45 percent grant to aid in financing the construction of a system of intercepting sewers and a sewage-treatment plant.

On October 15, 1938, since the local financing was to be done

On October 15, 1938, since the local financing was to be done by general obligation bonds, a referendum was held at which the voters overwhelmingly approved the issuance of approximately $60,000 in bonds to defray the local portion of this cost.

All engineering details including final plans have been prepared and are before the State sanitary board for approval by that agency. We have a commitment with H. C. Speer & Sons Co., of Chicago, by the terms of which they have agreed to purchase the city's bond issue for this improvement.

In company with most other industrial cities, however small, Oglesby has both a chronic and acute unemployment problem. We here know of no finer way to lessen the evil of unemployment, and at the same time secure for the local community a modern sewage-treatment plant, which is badly needed, than by favorable and at the same time secure for the local community a modern sewage-treatment plant, which is badly needed, than by favorable action on the part of P. W. A. at this time.

Our engineers inform us that within 3 weeks of favorable action by P. W. A. a contract for this improvement could be let. So far as we know all preliminaries have been cared for. Very truly yours,

FOR THE CITY OF OGLESBY City Clerk.

So they go on, Mr. President, one after another. I have one more letter I wish to read. I have many others. No doubt every Senator has some such letters in his file. Here is one from Smith & McCollum, lawyers in Flora, Ill.:

FLORA, ILL., July 25, 1939.

Hon. Scott F. Lucas,

United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR Sin: We represent the board of education of the Noble community high-school district, of Noble, Richland County, Ill.

This school district in 1938 made application to the Public Works Administration for a grant to assist in the construction of a new school building. This district voted and sold bonds to the amount of $100,000 and received bids for the construction of the new building prior to January 1, 1939, all in accordance with advice from the P. W. A. officials, who indicated that a grant would be made by the P. W. A. to make possible the financing of the proposed building. This project is on the approved P. W. A. list, the building site has been secured and paid for, and the district has cash in the bank to the amount of about $100,000.

The district has cash in the bank to the amount of $100,000, and what are they going to do with it? It has been voted upon the theory that the Federal Government would provide a grant-in-aid, as was represented by the agents of the Public Works Administration. Is the Senate of the United States going to stop at this point and refuse this relief? Are we going to keep faith with the individuals living in those districts? Are we to repudiate the pledges that have been made by individuals representing the Government? I regret the executive branch of the Government feels that these obligations should be forgotten, but we should not forget. It is with the utmost sincerity that I contend there is a moral reason, if not a legal one, for the Congress to make good this obligation and others which have been contracted throughout the country.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And section 2 of the pending bill is no answer to the communications which the Senator presents.

Mr. LUCAS. Section 2 has absolutely nothing to do with the proposition that I am submitting here in behalf of these school districts which are in such peculiar financial straits.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. I ask the Senator from Illinois if he knows that Mr. Ickes, who has been in charge of Public Works Administration throughout its entire experience, was never asked to testify before this committee.

Mr. LUCAS. I am not advised, I will say to the Senator from Connecticut, as to what happened before the committee. All I can say is that I did make some inquiries about the amount that was earmarked, that came from the House of Representatives, and got very little information from the Appropriations Committee which was handling the bill at that time as to just why the $125,000,000 was stricken.

Mr. DANAHER. Is it not a fact, I will ask the very able Senator, if he will yield to me for another question-

Mr. LUCAS. I will yield to the Senator from Connecticut. Mr. DANAHER. That Mr. Ickes did recommend a program of P. W. A. loans and grants to Congress in the amount of $500,000,000?

Mr. LUCAS. I think the evidence may disclose what the Senator from Connecticut says.

I read further from the letter written me by the lawyers in Flora, Ill.:

It now appears that the probability of a P. W. A. grant is very unlikely unless legislation is passed to take care of this sort of situation. The board of education of this school district is receiving much criticism for getting the district $100,000 in debt and being unable to proceed with the building program.

Why, of course, they would receive criticism, but they should not receive criticism. They were acting in good faith upon the advice and the representation of an agency of government. Right or wrong, these men were put in the field, meeting with this board of school directors, this engineer, that architect, telling them to go ahead, to push forward, that "the Government is behind you." Shall we let them down under such circumstances?

The letter continues:

The amount of money which the district now has on hand is only about half enough to erect a building sufficient to take care of the needs of the district, and unless a P. W. A. grant can be secured, this district will be left with only about half enough money to erect a building and no means of securing the balance. Inasmuch as the actions of the board has been in good faith and in reliance upon P. W. A. help, we feel that every effort should be made by the Federal Government to help them out in this situation. The Honorable Lawrence Arnold, Representative from this district, and Senator Slattery have interested themselves in this district, and Senator SLATTERY have interested themselves in this matter, and we sincerely hope that you will do everything possible to the end that a Federal grant shall be made available in connection with this project, which bears the docket number Ill. 2530.

Very truly yours,

SMITH & McCollum, Fred McCollum, Jr.

Those are examples of what has been going on in the State of Illinois. Whether they are the result of representations or misrepresentations does not alter the picture.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I hope the amendment will pass. I believe it is a meritorious amendment. I believe the people in my community and in your community who have acted in good faith upon these projects are entitled to this grant from the Federal Government. And I make bold to say that unless we act in the affirmative upon this amendment, a flagrant violation of good faith will result. Whether the executive branch of the Government wants to discontinue making these grants is beside the question. There is a moral if not a legal obligation involved in this premise that a grateful Government should not abandon with a wave of the hand.

I submit the legislative branch of the Government should take the initiative and supply the remedy for the wrongs committed by those representing the Public Works Administration.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I sympathize with the Senator from Illinois in the statements made by him with reference to the complaints from local officials as to projects which they hoped to secure but did not secure. But I cannot agree with him that there would be any breach of trust on the part of the Government of the United States or the Congress of the United States should we fail at this time to appropriate $250,000,000 for the purpose urged by him.

The Senate is familiar with the fact that when in 1938 we provided for Public Works Administration appropriations, we provided that an application should be filed by October 1, and that actual work upon the projects must be commenced by January 1, 1939.

Pursuant to the provisions of that act applications were filed, not only in the State of Illinois, but throughout the Union. Those applications came here to Washington; they were considered, approved, and funds were allotted to the extent that the available appropriations made possible.

What happened? From the letters read by the Senator from Illinois it is evident that employees of Public Works Administration went into some communities and encouraged local officials to believe that they would receive an appropriation or allotment for projects in which they were interested.

I know in my own city that even after January 1, when there was not any chance on earth for a community to secure an allotment for a project, a representative of the P. W. A. encouraged officials to go to the legislature to secure enabling legislation to put up the sponsors' contribution toward a project. In Washington I read in my daily newspaper that some representative assured them that the application for a hospital had been approved by P. W. A., and that if the legislature would make available the necessary funds for the local contribution, the project was on the preferential list, and relying upon it, the legislature acted.

Right there I part company with my friend from Illinois. No employee of P. W. A. had the right to bind the Congress of the United States. No employee acting in the manner I have described, acting in order that he may induce Congress to make another appropriation, could ever bind me to appropriate more money of the people to carry out a promise by him.

Mr. President, we are confronted with a problem of this kind for the second time. Back in 1937 there was no program for P. W. A.; but when the relief measure was reported to the House, Representatives of districts cited instances such as those cited by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas], the Congress believed there was a moral obligation to carry out pledges made by some employees, and $250,000,000 were appropriated for that purpose.

This year, employees of P. W. A. knew from experience the possibilities; and as late as March or April I received a letter from the regional headquarters of the district in which my State is located telling me that at a meeting of 23 field representatives it was agreed that they should go out into the field advocating the enactment of the Starnes bill then pending in the House of Representatives.

I do not think Congress can permit 23 men or 230 men who are on the pay roll of the Government, in order to make permanent their employment, to go out into communities and encourage local officials to believe that because their applications have been approved, if they will bring pressure to bear on us we shall have to respond and appropriate $250,000,000 tonight because some school officials in Illinois or in South Carolina think that as a result their projects will be allotted funds.

How many applications are pending? Down in P. W. A. tonight there are approved applications to the extent of $1,500,000,000. What would we do with the $250,000,000? How would it be divided? We would divide the $250,000,000 among the $1,500,000,000 of approved applications; and on January 1 other communities would come in and say, "You divided it. Some communities received allocations and some did not. We now want $1,250,000,000, which we should have gotten, in order to provide an allotment for every application which was approved."

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. LUCAS addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yields; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield first to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, would there not always be a considerable hangover of approved applications at the end of any period, no matter how often Congress extended it, and no matter how much money was appropriated under the plan theretofore in force to carry out the proposal under this amendment?

Mr. BYRNES. There is no doubt about it.

I wish to say, in fairness to the Secretary of the Interior, that when the action of the employees to whom I have referred was called to my attention, I called it to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior; and within 48 hours a statement was sent to every regional headquarters forbidding such action, and an announcement was carried by the press associations criticizing the employees of the Public Works Administration for their conduct. However, even without that action by the field representatives, whenever we pass a bill and give to every community the right to file an application by October 1, when those applications are investigated inevitably we shall have $1,000,000,000 or $1,500,000,000 approved, because it is not known how many of them will be withdrawn before the time fixed for the actual commencement of operations upon the projects.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
Mr. BYRNES. We should then have to go back and provide all the money for every application that was approved by P. W. A. No employee of P. W. A. has power to pledge the Congress to discharge that responsibility, either as a legal or a moral responsibility.

I now yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. The distinguished Senator from South Carolina is continually discussing $1,200,000,000 of approved projects down in the office of the Secretary of the Interior at the present time. I am sure the Senator does not want the Senate to understand that $1,200,000,000 of bonds have been voted by the various communities.

Mr. BYRNES. No; I have not said so, and I would not. Mr. LUCAS. The $250,000,000 which the Senator from Illinois is seeking to obtain through this amendment will take care of all the cases in which bond issues have been voted and floated on the representations referred to.

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator has investigated the figures, I accept his statement; but what about the city of Spartanburg? It has not issued bonds, but its representatives have gone to the legislature and fought out quite a controversial question as to whether or not money should be made available. The State has not been issuing bonds, but through its legislature it has made available the necessary funds. In other ways, in other States, funds have also been made available. There is a difference only in the degree of trouble to which local officials have gone in order to make funds available; but the situation is not changed. If the Congress takes the position, whenever we have a public-works program, that when applications are investigated and approved the Congress thereafter must appropriate every dollar, we never shall get through with appropriations for the Public Works Administration.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. One moment.

I am astonished to hear Senators on the other side of the aisle, including the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], asking whether or not section 2 would be taken care of. The Senator from Michigan may vote against this bill. I think he will, as will the Senator from Connecticut. They are opposed to lending a community money with assurances that it will be returned to the Treasury; but, in the name of economy, they would favor a proposal to give 45 percent to the communities of the country without any opportunity to get it back.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I understood the Senator to say that we would never get through voting funds to meet these situations. Why not meet these situations? As long as we have 12,000,000 unemployed we should have public works and more public works, until we take up the unemployed. If private industry does not meet the situation the Government must meet it, or we will face serious trouble in

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have no argument with the Senator from Minnesota. He believes that so long as there are 12,000,000 unemployed we must appropriate billions; and it is immaterial to him whether it is on the 70-30 basis of the Senator from Connecticut or the 45-55 basis of the Senator from Illinois. As a matter of fact, a 95-5 basis would be satisfactory to the Senator from Min-

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. I know the Senator and I could not agree on the question.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President-

Mr. BYRNES. I understand the Senator's position.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I wish to say to the Senator that I demand jobs for our unemployed.

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Let private industry furnish these jobs, and if private industry is unable to meet the situation it is the duty of the Government of the United States to see that every man has a job. It is the divine right of every able-bodied American citizen to have a job.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I said that I knew I would have no quarrel with the Senator. If there is a divine right, he is receiving information from on high; and I cannot argue with the Senator.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I think the Senator must receive his information from the other place.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The amendment of the Senator from Illinois not only deals with spending applications, but it opens the way for new applications until September 30 of this year; so it would renew the problem.

Mr. BYRNES. If the way is open to new applications, and we now have $1,500,000,000, that would be true. I must say to the Senator from Colorado that I understood from the Senator from Illinois that he wanted to confine his amendment to cases in which bonds have been issued. However, if the way is open until September 30, there is an invitation to a community to issue bonds hereafter. If a community should issue bonds hereafter, it would have an advantage over all the other communities.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. So far as the repayment of anything that is presumed to be paid back under this bill is concerned, nothing like that will happen; so why not be honest about it, and give the communities 45 percent, and let them pay back 55 percent?

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator believes that when the securities of a State are presented nothing will be paid back. If that be true, there is no use in stopping at 45 percent. We might as well give them 100 percent. However, I do not agree with the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. Would the bonds issued for the 55 percent be any better than the bonds proposed to be issued for the loans covered by the bill?

Mr. BYRNES. No.

Mr. BARKLEY. If one type of bonds would be no good.

how could the other type be collected?

Mr. BYRNES. I do not think my good friend the Senator from New Mexico is serious. As a matter of fact, we know that the securities of the State, county, and municipal governments which have come to P. W. A. under the P. W. A. appropriations have been negotiated in the markets, and in many instances at a profit to the United States Government. Instead of losing money, the Government has made money on the allotments covered by the securities of local governments.

I think the time has come to stop causing local governments to believe that if they pave streets or build waterworks the people of the United States outside the particular cities will pay 45 percent of the cost of constructing improvements within the cities. Many people who live without the city limits cannot participate and are entitled to some consideration at the hands of the Congress. Inasmuch as the Congress heretofore has voted upon this question. I do not think it should now be opened up, or that we should give away 45 percent instead of asking that the amounts loaned under the provisions of the bill be repaid.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I rise to speak in support of the amendment of the Senator from Illinois. I should like to have the attention of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes], if I may have it.

When the Senator from South Carolina argues against the amendment of the Senator from Illinois on the ground that the people of the United States are to contribute 45 percent to local grants, I call his attention to the fact that when we had the highway amendment before us only a few minutes ago the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] pointed out that the city of Phoenix, Ariz., could not build an underpass unless the United States of America bought all the land for the right-of-way to permit the underpass to be built. Under the very theory the Senator talks about, the trunkline system of highways would be loaded on the taxpayers of the United States to the extent of 100 percent of the cost, and not 45 percent or any such amount. Moreover, there would be an appropriation rather than a spurious loan program such as we have before us; and that is the beneficent side of it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator certainly has misquoted me. I made no proposal at any time today for a 100-percent grant in connection with the bill.

Mr. DANAHER. No. Did I not say that the Senator advanced the argument that the town of Phoenix, Ariz., could not buy the right-of-way for an underpass under the junction of the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe Railroads?

Mr. HAYDEN. I said that the city of Phoenix, Ariz., had difficulty in financing the project, and that I wanted the city to have an opportunity to borrow the money.

Mr. DANAHER. Yes. Mr. HAYDEN. Not a grant.

Mr. DANAHER. Did not the Senator say that the city of Phoenix, Ariz., was bonded to its limit, and could not put a dollar into the project?

Mr. HAYDEN. I said that the only way the city could do it, and actually has done it, was to levy a tax out of 1 year's revenue, and that if the city had had an opportunity to spread the tax over 10 years, there would have been no difficulty about it. However, I made no proposal at any time that the city should receive the money for nothing.

Mr. DANAHER. Without going into the question of whether or not the Senator said it, the proposal of the Senator definitely was that the funds of the United States should be used to acquire the entire right-of-way for the highway system.

Mr. HAYDEN. And that every dollar used in that way would be repaid by the city.

Mr. DANAHER. The Senator hopes it would be.

Mr. HAYDEN. I know it would be. Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota. Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, a statement was made concerning 100-percent contributions where a community was practically bankrupt, as I understood it.

Mr. DANAHER. That is correct.

Mr. LUNDEEN. So far as I am concerned, I can see nothing wrong with that; and I am not engaging in any controversy with the able Senator. I should merely like to say that I can see nothing wrong about a 100-percent contribution to a community that is bankrupt, where American citizens are jobless. We shall have to face the guns on this proposition, legislatively speaking, one of these days with something besides speeches that are as clear as mud, so far as solving the unemployment problem facing us today [laughter], and I am certainly not now referring to the able Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator for excluding me. Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator certainly did not mean—Mr. LUNDEEN. Oh, I am not referring to the distinguished Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I yielded for a question.

Mr. BARKLEY. I hope the Senator from Minnesota does not mean that the speech of the Senator from Connecticut is not as clear as mud.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I wish to say that I was not referring to the speech of any Senator, but to some speeches that occasionally come to the attention of the Senate.

Mr. DANAHER. If I may just add my bit to that, I hope my speech is not so opaque that the Senator from Kentucky will not understand it. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I want to call one thing to the attention of Senators. That is, when the Banking and Currency Committee met, and I asked the Senator from Illinois a question or two on the point, Secretary Ickes did not appear and testify. The one man who has had all the experience in Public Works development in this country was not called to speak, and why was he not called to speak, Mr. President?

Tonight one of Washington's most capable news commentators, a man with long experience in the field of journalism, broadcasting over the Mutual network from coast to coast, gave us the answer. I sent for and received a copy of the script. This is the reason why Mr. Ickes was not in the last few days, gentlemen who are absolutely reliable, who positively verified, without any qualifications, that Secretary Ickes did send a memorandum to the President. These gentlemen told me they saw the actual text of that memorandum, and they saw it with their own eyes. They said they read it, and that in the memorandum Mr. Ickes told the President he was vigorously opposed to the lending program. He said the bill should not go through, and he grave extensive research when he considers the programs the he gave extensive reasons why he considers the program to be unjustified.

I have talked with several individuals-

That, I may say to the Senator from Illinois, is the reason why I wanted to lay, through him, the foundation for the questions I asked him, and thus to tell the Senate why it was that the Administrator of the Public Works Administration, who has spent millions and millions under this administration's program in the past, was not called to comment upon the lending provisions of section 2 of this bill.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Under the program as administered by Mr. Ickes there was never, during the years of his experience in that office, a word of scandal in connection with all the millions that he spent. I think those on this side of the aisle as well as on the other will agree that he has done a No. 1 job in connection with the projects.

Mr. DANAHER. I have not the slightest question that every word the Senator says is absolutely accurate. The fact of the matter is that when we stop and think back of those who did appear before the Banking and Currency Committee in favor of a bill which later was entirely superseded by the one we now have, we had a group there who were not in favor of the program of Mr. Ickes. They were in favor of this siphon arrangement of short circuiting the Congress of the United States; and I may add, by way of conclusion, that they did it on the theory that Mr. Ernest Lindley told us about in the Sunday Post, when he said:

Roosevelt is the leader of a movement of which the Democratic Party is only a part.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, no importance whatever may be attached to the fact that Secretary Ickes did not appear as a witness before the Banking and Currency Committee. While it is true that in the past Mr. Ickes has administered the Public Works Administration, he is not now the Administrator and would have had no duties under this bill; but Mr. Carmody, who is the new Administrator of the Public Works Administration, did come before the committee, because he is to be charged with responsibility for administering the $350,000,000 that is provided in the bill for loans. In his testimony before the committee he said that, in his opinion, every dollar of the $350,000,000 would be absorbed in the loans provided for in the bill at the low rates of interest which we are providing.

The amendment of the Senator from Illinois strikes out this $350,000,000; it strikes out the loans at the low rate of interest which we are providing and substitutes an appropriation out of the Treasury of $250,000,000 for 45-percent grants, which changes the entire theory of the Public Works Administration.

We might as well under this bill say that we will change the rural-electrification provisions for loans and, instead of providing for 100-percent loans, such as they are making now, grant 45-percent, and permit them to have rural electrification on the basis of 55-percent loans and 45-percent grants. We might as well say to the farmers of the United States who are tenants, who are to borrow money under the bill. "We will not loan you 100 percent, as we are now doing, but we will give you 45 percent."

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. Mr. DANAHER. Is it not a fact, therefore, that we had Mr. Carmody before us testifying with reference to a bill as to which we had assurances of a program which has been completely operated upon, as compared to the bill we now have?

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no!

Mr. DANAHER. And he was predicting on the basis of experience that he had not even had?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is not accurate?

Mr. DANAHER. What is not?

Mr. BARKLEY. What is what? [Laughter.]

Mr. DANAHER. What is accurate?

BARKLEY. What I am saying is accurate. [Laughter.]

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator. I fail to recognize the pontifical status. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not responsible for the failure of the Senator to understand. His understanding is too keen, however, to convince me that he cannot understand even a pontifical statement. But, Mr. President, the cities of our country have no moral right now to expect any more in the way of grants or gifts than we are providing for anybody else in the United States. More than $4,000,000,000 has been expended under a provision and a program of grants of 45 percent and loans of 55 percent.

Of course nobody could tell how many of these applications would finally be approved and be carried out. Everybody knew, when we provided this program, that there would be more applications than could ever be approved and completed. No matter how many times we may extend the time for making applications and extend the time for the completion of these projects, no matter how many times we may increase the appropriations for P. W. A. on a loan-and-grant basis, there will always be a time at the end of that period when there will be a billion or a billion and a half dollars of applications which cannot be carried out; and if we are to adopt this program, we never would finish. We might as well adopt it in perpetuity. The theory of this legislation is that we have gone as far as we ought to go in giving to communities money that the Government of the United States can never get back.

Mr. LUNDEEN and Mr. LUCAS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield first to the Senator from Minne-

Mr. LUNDEEN. But we did have $100,000,000 a ship or thereabouts for building meddling battleships and dreadnaughts, now being dispatched by the administration, it seems, to get us into trouble all over the earth. We had plenty of money for that-nearly $2,000,000,000 in all.

Mr. BARKLEY. No: we did not.

Mr. LUNDEEN. We had the money for that, but we have not enough money to take care of the unemployed of America.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no, Mr. President; we did not have $100,000,000 or any other amount to build "meddling" battleships to go around all over the world. We did have $100,-000,000, and we will have $500,000,000 if necessary, to build enough battleships to protect the United States and our interests and our people from attack by any power in the world. There is no relationship between the expenditure of money for defense purposes and giving money to every city and town in the United States to enable them to build non-Federal public buildings.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Then let us bring the battleships home from foreign waters and Chinese rivers. Bring them home from Europe and Asia and Africa. Let us bring them home to protect the coasts of the United States, which they were built to protect. They belong here, not over there.

Mr. BARKLEY. All right; bring them home. I commission the Senator from Minnesota to go and get them.

[Laughter.]

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield; yes. Mr. LUNDEEN. On that question you will get a commission from the people of the United States that the Democratic Party will understand.

Mr. BARKLEY. All right.

I now yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I want to say to the very able majority leader of our party-

Mr. BARKLEY. Thanks for the compliment.

Mr. LUCAS. That I do not disagree with the philosophy of the Senator. I will say to him that if these very peculiar cases did not exist, I would not be here offering this amendment; but I do not think the Senator from Kentucky or any other Senator can overlook the fact that these communities have voted bonds, sold them, and placed the money in the bank, and the only thing they can use the money for under the referendum is one particular purpose.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the Senator's position. I have the same situation in my own State. There is nothing peculiar about it in Illinois. The same condition may exist in other States; but I think the time has come when we have to take into consideration the fact that we have already gone a long way in the expenditure of $4,000,000,000 to enable cities and towns in this country to build public improvements.

I agree with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. It may be that some subordinate away down in some county in Illinois or in Kentucky went out and encouraged the local authorities to issue bonds; but in his testimony before the committee the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, emphatically stated that he had neither entered into any legal nor any moral obligation to carry out. any such program as that, because he knew, as we all knew, that there would be a number of these projects approved that could never be carried out, and that the time would come when there would be hang-overs; and there always will be hang-overs. We never can cut it off like sawing off the butt end of a log, and say we are through.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, irrespective of what the distinguished Senator may have understood, the Senator from Illinois cannot be made to believe that the Secretary of the Interior did not know, or at least the assistants in that office did not know, that back in August and September of 1938 the communities were voting these bond issues in my part of the country.

Mr. BARKLEY. I had a community in my State say that the promise had been held out to them that if they would vote bonds or make some arrangement for 55 percent, the grant would be made. I took up that individual case with Secretary Ickes and with Mr. Gray, his subordinate, who was the active head of the P. W. A., and they emphatically stated that nobody had any right to bind them either legally or morally.

Mr. LUCAS. I never heard of any one being discharged as a result of misrepresentations on this particular issue.

Mr. BARKLEY. I never did, either. I do not suppose anybody was discharged; but, Mr. President, the adoption of this amendment will uproot the entire theory and philosophy of this bill. It will deny communities the right to borrow money at low rates of interest, all of which will be absorbed and repaid to the Government of the United States, and substitute gifts.

I should like to try out this method and see if it will not work. The man who is going to administer it says it will work, in view of his experience as an administrator in this

For that reason I hope the amendment of the Senator from Illinois will be rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas].

Mr. VANDENBERG and other Senators called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. GREEN. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY], which I transfer to the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], and vote "nay." am not advised how the Senator from Wisconsin or the Senator from Arkansas would vote if present.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following general pairs: The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison]; the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]: and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton]. These Senators are necessarily absent.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] has a general pair with the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 43, as follows:

So the amendment of Mr. Lucas was rejected.

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so that I may offer a technical clerical amendment?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 5, line 1, it is proposed to strike out the words "as provided in said act" and to insert the words "and pursuant to and subject to the provisions of

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be reported. I think the Senator in charge of the bill will accept it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 10, line 21, before the period, to insert a colon and the following:

Provided further, That no project involving the taking of waters out of any lake situated in two or more States shall be undertaken with moneys made available under this act unless and until the consent of all such States shall have first been obtained.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the amendment is offered to the reclamation provision in the bill, and while I do not think any such project would be attempted even without the language, I am glad to accept the amendment and let it

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which is purely technical.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed on page 18, line 5, after the word "determined", to insert the words "or adopted (subsequent to a determination under applicable State or local law)."

Mr. BARKLEY. The amendment is entirely acceptable. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. McCARRAN. A point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McCARRAN. Who has the floor?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada really has the floor.

Mr. NORRIS. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. NORRIS. Can a Senator get the floor and retain it while we are voting and adopting amendments and still have the floor? I understood I was recognized by the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada by unanimous consent yielded to two Senators to offer perfecting amendments.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not understand that.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Nevada obtained the floor and offered an amendment, which was agreed to and the Senator from New York was recognized to offer an amendment. But I will say to the Senator from Nevada and to all other Senators that it is my purpose to move a recess now. I had hoped we might finish the bill tonight, but apparently that will not be possible.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, before the Senator moves a recess I desire to offer an amendment, which I think will not be objected to and will not take any time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well.

Mr. NORRIS. I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, line 1, it is proposed to strike out the words "as provided in said act", and to insert the words "and pursuant to and subject to the provisions of said act."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I offered that amendment a moment ago and it was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Very well.

VARIABLE PAYMENT OF CONSTRUCTION CHARGES ON RECLAMATION PROJECTS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. O'MAHONEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6984) to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, and agree to the same.

ALVA B. ADAMS JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, CHAN GURNEY, Managers on the part of the Senate. COMPTON I. WHITE, KNUTE HILL, Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES WITH THE UNITED STATES

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, there has been a great deal of interest in Senate bill 915, to provide for the more expeditious settlement of disputes with the United States, and owing to that great interest throughout the country the supply of the bill has become exhausted. I therefore ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 915 as voted upon in the Senate be reprinted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

VALUE OF FLOOD-HEIGHT REDUCTION FROM T. V. A. RESERVOIRS TO ALLUVIAL VALLEY OF LOWER MISSISSIPPI RIVER (H. DOC. NO. 455)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress a letter from the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, submitting a report entitled, "Value of Flood Height Reduction From Tennessee Valley Authority Reservoirs to the Alluvial Valley of the Lower Mississippi River."

The Tennessee Valley Authority believes that this report is a contribution to the theory of valuation of the benefits of flood control, and as such will be useful to the legislative and executive branches of the Federal Government in considering flood-control problems in general.

The attention of the Congress is invited to the suggestion of the Board that the report be printed as a Senate or House document.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 27, 1939.

[Note.—Report accompanied similar message to the House of Representatives.]

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nomination of Henry J. Willingham, of Florence, Ala., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Alabama in place of Harwell G. Davis, resigned.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably the nominations of several officers for promotion in the Coast Guard.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nomination of Chief Boatswain (L) Charles R. Peele to be a district commander, with the rank of lieutenant, in the Coast Guard.

Mr. ASHURST (for Mr. Logan), from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Howard L. Doyle, of Illinois, to be United States attorney for the southern district of Illinois.

Mr. NEELY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Francis M. Shea, of New Hampshire, to be Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Claims Division of the Department of Justice, vice Sam E. Whitaker, resigned.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of sundry officers for promotion in the Navy.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nominations of sundry officers for promotion in the Marine Corps, and also the nominations of sundry citizens to be second lieutenants in the Marine Corps.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

He also, from the same committee, reported adversely the following nominations, with the recommendation that they be rejected:

James Walter Morrow to be postmaster at Iberia, Mo., in place of Walter Morrow; and Amy Foster to be postmaster at Warrensburg, Mo., in place of A. T. King, removed.

Mr. TYDINGS, from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, reported favorably the nomination of Francis Bowes Sayre, of Massachusetts, to be United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, vice Paul V. McNutt, resigned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state nominations on the calendar.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William J. Patterson, of North Dakota, to be Interstate Commerce Commissioner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the President be notified of the confirmation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the President will be notified.

POSTMASTER-NOMINATION PASSED OVER

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Charles A. O'Donnell to be postmaster at Frackville, Pa., which had been adversely reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the nomination of Charles A. O'Donnell to be postmaster at Frackville go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination will be passed over.

POSTMASTERS-NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters, with the exception of the one which has been passed over, be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters, with the exception noted, are confirmed en bloc.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, during the day the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] reported certain nominations. I do not see them on the calendar, and I wish to ask what the nominations were.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that they were nominations to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. AUSTIN. Under the rules, would they appear on today's calendar, or on the calendar for tomorrow?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They have to lie over, and they will be on the printed calendar tomorrow.

That concludes the nominations.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock and 26 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, July 28, 1939, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou great Jehovah, our God and our Father, we praise Thee that the essence of life is divine. Blessed Lord, it is an inspiration to see visions, greater to do, but greatest of all to be; therefore let this be our canticle of character; let it go singing along the paths of space:

Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of Me: I delight to do Thy will, O my God: yea, Thy law is within my heart. The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace.

Both now and ever. In the name of our Saviour who forgot Himself, even in death. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Luplow]?

There was no objection.

[Mr. Lublow addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include a letter from Mr. McNutt.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Ludlow]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record at this point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it was the understanding that we would not do that. If remarks were extended on a bill under consideration and they were germane to the bill, they could go in the Record at this point. We agreed that extension of remarks would not go in the front of the Record, Mr. Speaker, but in the Appendix.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to that. I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR]?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the daily Congressional Record states on the front page each day that it is the proceedings and debates of the Seventysixth Congress, first session. I quote from yesterday's Record, which contained 175 pages, a large volume, over 30 percent of which consists of requests made by Members of the House to extend their remarks in the RECORD. Mr. Speaker, that is quite a volume and the heading of the Record is not exactly what it says it is. It is not the truth. It states that it is the proceedings and debates of the Congress, which is not the case. It contains much other matter than what happens in the House or Senate. We ought to change the heading of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD or the majority leader should try to get the Senate to make it a record of Congress. That body promised to do that, but it has not fulfilled its promise. hope the Democratic Party, that is in power and responsible for these large RECORDS, will assume its responsibility.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR]?

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] that he gets his remarks in at the beginning of the Record usually and is not called upon to extend his remarks. Other Members do not take as many minutes in the beginning of the session as the gentleman does. Furthermore, the gentleman is a member of the Joint Committee on Printing and I keep on calling his attention to that fact.

Mr. RICH. I cannot do a thing with the committee. That is the trouble. They should confine it to the work of Congress or change the title page.

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know how much power the gentleman has, but he does have some responsibility.

Mr. RICH. That is the reason I am calling upon the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR]?

There was no objection.

GOVERNMENTAL EXPENDITURES

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, my friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], usually accurate and always interesting, states on the floor that the total appropriations for the last session amounted to $13,371,-000,000 and that in this session, up to this time, they aggregate $13,836,000,000.

In order to alleviate any trepidations which may have been occasioned by the statement, may I call attention, first to the fact that the actual appropriations for the third session of the Seventy-fifth Congress were $12,182,073,028, a discrepancy of approximately $1,600,000,000.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. With pleasure, if the gentleman will permit me to have time to answer him.

Mr. TABER. I will try to get the gentleman an additional minute.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the same situation prevails with reference to the statement of appropriations for the current session. Instead of $13,836,000,000, the actual figures compiled up to this time show the amount to be definitely under $13,000,000,000, a difference in the two figures considerably in excess of $2,000,000,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I gave some figures day before yesterday with reference to the actual appropriations of the last session of Congress and of this session. The gentleman from Missouri has given figures today that do not agree with mine. My figures agree with the figures that the clerk of the Committee on Appropriations has over at the committee room. Last year I submitted an itemized statement. This year I shall submit an itemized statement. The reason the gentleman's figures do not agree with mine is that he does not include reappropriations of funds which would expire if they were not reappropriated. I do, because I feel that the money would not come out of the Treasury without the reappropriation.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, In 1938 over 81,000,000 airmiles were flown for profit by commercial air lines; 1,536,111 passengers were carried. To do this splendid job 13,309 employees were required. Of this number, 4,724 work in air-line offices.

To supervise these operations the Civil Aeronautics Authority uses almost 3,600 persons. Something must be peculiar in an arrangement which requires 3,600 bureaucrats to regulate 4,724 office workers, or even 13,000 employees. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a short newspaper article on the spending-lending program.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an editorial concerning the Honorable Hamilton Fish.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a brief series of resolutions by the McKeesport Council.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a radio address by Senator Taft, of Ohio.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an article from the Christian Science Monitor with reference to the salmon industry on the Columbia River. I also ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include an article appearing in today's Washington Post entitled "Money Goes Begging."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, next Monday is the fifth Monday of this month. Every other Monday the calling of the Consent Calendar and motions to suspend the rules are in order. So many Members are interested in the Consent Calendar, the Private Calendar, and in motions to suspend the rules with regard to certain measures that I ask unanimous consent that on next Monday it shall be in order for the Speaker to recognize Members to move to suspend the rules, and that it shall also be in order to call the Consent Calendar and the Private Calendar, not for omnibus bills but for individual bills on the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

CONSTRUCTION CHARGES ON UNITED STATES RECLAMATION PROJECTS

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6984) to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain the effect of this conference report?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I may state to the gentleman that this is to bring money into the Treasury that is not coming in now. I will state further that the statement of the managers will better explain the conference report, and I think it will be satisfactory to the gentleman.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 146]

Alexander	Crowther	Hartley	Reed, N. Y.
Andresen, A. A.	Cummings	Hennings	Rodgers, Pa.

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 364 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

CONSTRUCTION CHARGES ON UNITED STATES RECLAMATION PROJECTS

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Idaho asks unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to object to this unanimousconsent request, with the understanding that the gentleman from Idaho will take a little time to explain the Senate amendments when we reach the conference report itself.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I will be perfectly willing to do that; and I may say for the information of the gentleman from Massachusetts that the Senate amendments have been gone into in some detail in the statement of the conferees, but I shall be pleased to enlarge upon the statement or explain it further, as the gentleman may desire.

Mr. FADDIS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Idaho just what provision will be made with respect to time on this

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. It is not expected there will be any controversy over the report. I believe an agreement has been reached with both sides of the House that a brief explanation will be made, and then the previous question will be ordered and we will vote on the matter.

Mr. FADDIS. I think the gentleman is taking quite a good deal for granted in making that statement.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman from Idaho is going too far when he states there is no controversy concerning the conference report, and I do believe he should yield a reasonable time to anyone who wants to discuss the conference report.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I shall be perfectly willing to do

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6984) to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, and agree to the same.

COMPTON I. WHITE, KNUTE HILL, Managers on the part of the House. ALVA B. ADAMS, JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, CHAN GURNEY. Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6984) to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

On amendment No. 1: This Senate amendment adds clarifying language to explain the purposes of the bill. It does not change any of the objectives of the measure as it passed the House.

On amendment No. 2: This Senate amendment is also clarifying in its effect and makes no substantial change in the effect of the bill as it passed the House.

On amendment No. 3: This Senate amendment reduces the minimum rate of interest on the share of construction cost attributed to power construction which may be considered by the Secretary as a factor in determining the rates at which electric power may be sold.

On amendment No. 4: This Senate amendment grants a prefer-On amendment No. 4: This Senate amendment grants a preference in the sale of power from reclamation projects to municipalities and other public corporations or agencies; and also to cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 and any amendments thereof. As the bill was originally introduced it contained a clause granting a preference right to "municipalities and other public corporations or agencies and to cooperatives." The Senate amendment limits the preference to such cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations as may be financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 and any amendments thereof.

On amendment No. 5: This Senate amendment was introduced as a saving clause to preserve the rights now held by certain particular projects. It does not change the effect or purpose of the bill.

The House conferees agreed unanimously to recede from amend-

The House conferees agreed unanimously to recease in ments 1, 2, 3, and 5.

With respect to amendment No. 4, which reads as follows:

"Provided further, That in said sales or leases preferences shall be given to municipalities and other public corporations or agencies; and also to cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 and any amendments thereof," the House conferees agreed to recede by a vote of 2 to 1, the negative vote having been cast by Mr. Hawks.

COMPTON I. WHITE, KNUTE HILL, Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Idaho is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker-

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Is there not a typographical error in this conference report?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Yes; and I want to explain that. That mistake is only in the statement and the language of the amendment is correct. The first line of the amendment states "that in said sales or leases preferences shall be given to municipalities." That is the way the language is in the amendment, but there is a typographical error in the statement accompanying the report.

Mr. RANKIN. In the statement the word "no" is used instead of the word "to."

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman realizes when this bill was here before it was passed by unanimous consent and that it was reported out by the committee unanimously because a so-called power amendment was not included. The intent of the House to have this amendment eliminated was quite plain. The other branch of the Congress inserted it. Now, the gentleman, I presume, naturally went into this conference to uphold the position of the House and I want to ask the gentleman if he worked very diligently to bring that about.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I would like to answer the question of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. RANKIN. First, I want to correct the gentleman with respect to his question.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I have yielded to the gentleman from Massachusetts and I will state for the information of the gentleman from Massachusetts that this bill, in its present form, is practically in the form in which it was prepared by the Department to effectuate the recommendation of the Repayment Commission. It was considered and amended in the committee and the amended bill was reintroduced. When the new bill came up for approval it was again amended, and, as the gentleman states, when it went to the Senate they restored the provision giving preference to municipalities and cooperatives. This was discussed at length in the conference and finally an agreement was reached with the Senate and the bill is brought back here in its present form.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I believe the conferees from the House should uphold the viewpoint of the House, and I would like to know whether the gentleman made any effort in that direction.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. The managers on the part of the House, naturally, would sustain the position of the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes or no, did you try to have the House viewpoint prevail?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. We did.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I yield.

Mr. HILL. I call the attention of the gentleman from Idaho to the fact that this amendment is different from the one that came before the House. The last part of the amendment states, "financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, and any amendments thereof"; and since that was different from what we acted on in the House, we thought it was only fair to bring it back here for the Members of the House to act on, because this amendment is different from the one rejected by the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I understand that, but the point I am making is, we passed this measure unanimously in the House and, of course, with that fact in mind, I think the gentleman from Idaho should have made an effort to uphold the viewpoint of the House, and I understand he states he did that.

Mr. HILL. I just wanted to call attention to the fact that this is a different amendment.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. I call the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] to the fact that when this bill was first agreed on by the committee of which the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. White] is chairman, the full committee agreed a bill should be reported out with a similar provision to that now in the bill.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. That is correct.

Mr. RANKIN. Then when they went back to ratify what the full committee had done, only a few members were present, and that provision was stricken out. When the gentleman from Massachusetts says that the House unanimously agreed to that, I think he should correct his remarks, for this reason. When the bill was brought here, it was brought to the House, under unanimous consent, and passed, because when a bill is taken up under unanimous consent, it is usually agreed that it goes on through without amendment, but when it went to the Senate, the Senate put in this amendment, which in effect is the provision agreed upon by the full Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yielded only for a question. I think I can explain the proceedings of the committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I think we are all genuinely interested in promoting proper irrigation and reclamation. I believe the West needs a program, and there is no disposition on my part to oppose anything which is reasonable. I would like to inquire if it is the purpose of the amendment to give preference to power over reclamation?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. It is not. Power is subsidiary to reclamation. It is only available where the storage dam raises the water to a sufficient level. This is a conservation measure that utilizes the power created in connection with the reclamation project. The main thing in this bill is reclamation, and, further than that, it is designed to bring into the Treasury the money that has been expended on these reclamation projects, to insure repayment on some practical plan. It is the most practical plan that could be devised, and I hope the House will agree to it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am very glad to be reassured upon that point. There is one thing more that I do not understand. Why is it the Senate should insist on the amendment, when in the report it says it does not materially change the present status?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. If we had deleted the amendment we would still have the existing law. This only qualifies it and extends it. These projects are financed by money appropriated by this Congress.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. The statement of the managers on the part of the House says this of amendment No. 3:

The Senate amendment reduces the minimum rate of interest on the share of construction cost attributed to power construction which may be considered by the Secretary as a factor in determining the rates at which electric power may be sold.

What reduction was made in the rate of interest?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. One-half of 1 percent, and the Government still makes a big profit, because it borrows money at a lower rate than the rate fixed in this bill. The Government is making a profit on the interest, and we have extended those benefits to these reclamation projects.

Mr. RICH. What rate of interest are they now bearing?
Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Under the bill it is a minimum of 3 percent. Different amounts are fixed.

Mr. RICH. Who has the authority to say what amount of the construction shall be attributed to power?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. That is determined by the Bureau of Reclamation and the engineers that make the examination, who set up the plan. Nobody can know in advance of the estimates made by the engineers what part of the cost of a project is chargeable to power development.

Mr. RICH. Has the Reclamation Bureau made any changes in any of these projects for the amount attributed to power and the amount attributed to reclamation?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. It has not, It proceeds under well-defined rules.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, several members of the committee want some time on this, and I ask the gentleman from Idaho whether he will yield this side 20 minutes.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has consumed 10 minutes.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Hawks] 5 minutes.

Mr. HAWKS. I would like to have 20 minutes for the rest of the committee.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I will give the gentleman 20 minutes if he will allocate it on his side.

The SPEAKER. It is contrary to the usual practice for the chairman of a conference to yield time to other Members to be in turn yielded by them. The gentleman may yield such time as he desires to individual Members.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Then I withdraw that, Mr. Speaker, and I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Hawks].

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin] I would like to make the statement that it was the desire of the chairman of this committee [Mr. White] that this bill, which was designed primarily for the relief of water users, be reported out of the committee unanimously. Naturally the fight in the committee was over the proviso that has been put back into the bill by the Senate amendment. There was no compromise in the committee on the part of those opposed to this particular power clause in this water-relief measure. The minority and those opposed to this power clause in the bill were determined that they were going to make a minority report on the bill and that they would not sign the report of the committee as being a unanimous statement.

That is contrary to the statement of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN]. In the matter of the vote that was originally taken that vote was divided 7 to 6, as I recall it, for the bill

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. HAWKS. I yield.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Is it not a fact that this question was put in the committee by a majority of the committee, and the amendment was disagreed to, and the provision in the original bill stayed there?

Mr. HAWKS. The original provision?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Yes.

Mr. HAWKS. No.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. It was not in the original bill?

Mr. HAWKS. In the original bill, yes; that is right; but not by unanimous agreement.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I did not say by unanimous agreement. I said it was by a vote of the committee.

Mr. HAWKS. That is right. That is exactly what I said.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWKS. I yield.

Mr. MAY. I would like to ask the gentleman for some information with respect to the authority to make contracts, under the report as it comes in here, as the legislation will be written. I would like to ask whether or not they can make them even to the extent of 40 years?

Mr. HAWKS. That is right.

Mr. MAY. A 40-year contract?

Mr. HAWKS. As I understand it; yes. Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAWKS. I will be glad to yield. Mr. TABER. The result of this amendment is that those who already have been favored by the Federal Government having granted them loans would get more special privileges;

Mr. HAWKS. That is the design of this legislation. Mr. TABER. The reason it is opposed is because it hands out special privileges to one group of people rather than to the people generally?

Mr. HAWKS. I would like to remind the gentleman from New York that that has been the philosophy of the New Deal power program throughout. This amendment, which was placed in the bill by the committee of conference, I was not opposed by the two Democratic conferees. I opposed this amendment and refused to sign the report. I do not believe that this bill with the Senate amendment represents the will of the House of Representatives. I believe that by receding and concurring in the Senate amendment we are giving in to the Senate. I had hoped that the two Democratic conferees would make a fight, but they are excusing this on the ground that the Senate amendment does not compare with the original power provision in the bill. However, if you will analyze the amendment as it is put into the bill on page 22, line 11, I think you will agree that there is not a great deal of difference between that language and the language in the original bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWKS. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Does it grant any particular extension of time for the collection of reclamation rents?

Mr. HAWKS. It only extends it to this extent: They disregard the moratorium period, but go right on with the original 40-year plan.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, the primary purpose of this bill is stated in the conference report:

The committee find that the proposed legislation is adequate to provide flexibility in the annual construction charges under repayment contracts, so that repayment obligations of the reclamation projects each year will move up or down contemporaneously with increases or decreases in the crop returns realized by the farmers.

In other words, it gives the farmers some chance, in case of a complete loss, so that their rights will not be imperiled or in any wise foreclosed.

Other provisions of the proposed legislation provide for simplifications and economies in administration of the reclamation program and provide a sound basis for undertaking new construction.

Now, with reference to this amendment about which there has been so much talk, it really is not of much importance one way or the other. The bill as originally presented to the committee, which I think a majority of the committee agreed upon, contained substantially the same language that is now the subject of controversy before the House.

The original bill before the Committee on Reclamation provided that in such sales of leases preference shall be given municipalities and other corporate corporations or agencies, and also to cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations, and then it stopped at that. The Senate added these words:

Financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural Eelctrification Act of 1936 and any amendments thereof.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of placing that language in the bill was simply to legalize a practice that the Reclamation Bureau has been following for years; in fact, since the basic act was passed. Preferences were given to cooperatives for the purpose of assisting rural electrification. Commissioner Page testified before the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation that that was the practice generally followed. He said it did not make much difference to him whether it was in the bill or out if the practice of the past was not interfered with. This information came out as the result of a question by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Thomason], asking if a court had ever passed upon the right to pursue that policy under the original act. He said the policy had never been questioned, and as long as it was not questioned he was not particular about whether the amendment was in there or not.

So, what I want the House to understand is that this has been a practice of the Reclamation Bureau to give preference to just such organizations as are named in this amendment. It is not anything over which the House should become disturbed; it does not alter anything that has been done in the past nor does it establish any new policy on the part of the Bureau. It does not add any additional burden to the power companies of the country; it does not take anything away from them. So, as I said before, there is no occasion for any disagreement about this.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. LEAVY. In addition to carrying out what has been the policy of reclamation since the basic act was passed in 1902—that is, of favoring municipalities in the sale of surplus power-this assures that rural electrification projects shall be included in that class, and that is all it does.

Mr. O'CONNOR. That is all it does. I want to thank the gentleman from Washington for his very valuable contribution, because that is the identical thing the Reclamation Department has been doing.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Does the gentleman believe it is a wise policy for the Government to be a party to contracts running as long as 40 years?

Mr. O'CONNOR. That always depends upon the circumstances of the case. For instance, the Boulder River Dam project contracts run for 50 years. So there is nothing to get excited about. We are not taking a thing away from the power companies or giving them anything.

Mr. MAY. I did not have any reference to power companies. I simply asked about the wisdom of these longterm contracts.

Mr. O'CONNOR. What we are trying to do by this bill is to legalize a practice that has been followed since the inception of building up these irrigation projects.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. HAWKS. Will the gentleman please tell the House just why a similar amendment was taken out of the House bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD rose.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I will tell the gentleman why. First of all, the committee voted the amendment in by a majority vote. I think there were several votes against it, but the majority voted for it. It was taken out upon the theory of legislative expediency in that we did not want to have any trouble with the bill's passing the House. We thought we might secure the passage of the bill easier with the amendment stricken out than if it were retained in the bill, because we anticipated somebody might object to it upon the ground that we might be giving preference to power over reclamation.

I now yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The only question I was going to ask was in response to the gentleman from Kentucky as to the necessity for the 40-year contracts. It is almost imperative that they be spread over a long period of years to give them a chance to liquidate on a reasonable basis.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I thank the gentleman from his contri-

As I say, I ask the Members of the House to approve this amendment because as I said before, and it cannot be repeated too often, it simply legalizes a practice that has been indulged in since the basic act was passed.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. Since we are lending hundreds of millions of dollars for the purpose of building rural power lines is there any reason on earth why we should not at least put rural-electrification projects on a par with the municipalities?

Mr. O'CONNOR. That is it exactly.

Mr. RANKIN. We should let them have this preference. Mr. O'CONNOR. Exactly, they should have this right.

Mr. RANKIN. I can see no objection to it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. WINTER].

Mr. WINTER. Mr. Speaker, the controversial questions that have arisen under this bill were threshed out in the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, and this particular amendment, although not exactly in the terms in which it is now couched was stricken from the bill.

I repeat, this particular amendment was stricken from the bill for the reasons stated by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR]. We discussed this problem and we had a vote on it in the committee. With the proxies that the chairman of that committee had in his pocket, the proposition was defeated by one vote.

Those of us who are opposed to this amendment are not opposed to irrigation and reclamation, but we are opposed to bringing the power question into an irrigation and reclamation project. The primary purpose of irrigation and reclamation, as I understand it, is to bring relief from the water-users' standpoint and reclamation of the lands to the people of the various States who participate in such a program. The purpose of power is a secondary proposition.

We have this power question brought into this bill, and I say to you in all candor and fairness I think the amendment changes the entire power policy of the Irrigation and Reclamation Department of the United States Government.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINTER. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Is it not a fact that that very language is now in the law?

Mr. WINTER. It is not.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. If the gentleman will read the Reclamation Act he will find that is true.

Mr. WINTER. Here is what the Reclamation Act says:

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to lease for a period not exceeding 10 years, giving preference to municipal purposes.

That is all it says. They could lease it to me for municipal purposes or they could lease it to anyone else.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. If that is not the spirit of the act, what is it?

Mr. WINTER. The spirit of the amendment is to limit the sale of surplus power to municipalities, public corporations, and to the R. E. A., nothing else.

Mr. HAWKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINTER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. HAWKS. The amendment says that "In said sales or leases preference shall be given."

Mr. WINTER. Yes; it says "shall," and as I interpret the meaning of that word, and as it has been interpreted by various courts, "shall" means must.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINTER. I yield to the gentleman from Montana. Mr. O'CONNOR. Time is short. Congress will be adjourning shortly. If this conference report is not agreed to, we might imperil the passage of this bill during this session. I know the gentleman and every Member serving on the Reclamation Committee is in favor of this bill so far as reclamation is concerned, and every Member worked dilgently to report the bill out. I do not believe the gentleman feels this amendment seriously changes the set-up, in light of the practice of the Reclamation Department since the passage of the basic act. I believe the gentleman ought to take that into consideration in connection with the whole matter today.

Mr. WINTER. I think it does change the whole power policy of the Government. It changes the entire policy of the Irrigation and Reclamation Department. The way this thing is working now is shown by the testimony given by Mr. Page, Commissioner of Reclamation, who stated, in answer to a question by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Thorkelson]:

We have many dealings with utilities, and we have never had any difficulties with the utilities.

They are selling that power to the utilities on many of these projects; but under this amendment, if some municipality or one of these R. E. A. corporations or other public corporation wants this power, the law says they shall have preference over a contract that has already been entered into. If you will read this report you will find that Mr. Page stated they draw their contracts in such way that they can withdraw that power from any private corporation that they lease it to in the event that a public corporation may desire it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. If there is any excess power, this amendment simply gives preference to these cooperatives, municipalities, and so forth. And in such cases the excess power may be sold to the utilities just the same as has been the case in the past.

Mr. WINTER. That is true if there is any excess power that those given preference do not want.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. Murdock].

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I want to point out that this conference report in its present form now before us is designed for the protection of the water users throughout the West wherever irrigation prevails, and it is for the protection of the United States Government as well. Many of these great projects are eminently successful, as I could point out, for instance, the Salt River Water Users' Association in my State, but other projects have been less successful and have been granted relief in years past. During the last few years of the depression we have granted them a moratorium—a blanket moratorium whether they needed it or not. What we want to do is to get away from that sort of thing by giving each project which chooses it a new contract which will enable it to shape its repayments according to the crops, this being changed up or down annually. This is for the protection of the distressed farmers and is also for the protection of the reclamation fund of the Government itself.

May I say in regard to this 40-year contract it is not new in this bill, for under existing law it is now a policy of the Reclamation Service to enter contracts for repayments of construction costs over a period of 40 years. This measure in no way changes that. It is the intent of this measure is spread the cost of construction of new projects over a period of 40 years, without interest charge, and on the most liberal terms consistent with security. It is the spirit of this bill to extend to existing projects which accept it the same liberality of repayment of construction costs without interest.

And now just a word to my friends on the other side of the aisle, some of whom I feel are making a mountain out of a mole hill. I make this statement concerning the power item in all sincerity. You who are the guardians of the utilities object to giving a little preference to the R. E. A. I believe if you will look it up you will find that the practice has been for the R. E. A. to get little more preference out of the Bureau of Reclamation than do the private utilities, although municipalities do. I wish the R. E. A. to have preference. The Bureau has given preference to municipal purposes, which is now in the law. I want to emphasize prevailing practice of the Bureau of Reclamation.

Mr. HAWKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Briefly.

Mr. HAWKS. The gentleman said we were guardians of the utilities. Has he any proof of that?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I meant no offense. In a certain sense I am such a guardian, but, of course, I am more of a guardian of miners, stockmen, and farmers, in watching legislation, for such are my constituents. May I say to those who try to make this matter an issue between private power and public power that this bill gives preference to a new agency, the R. E. A., which is one of the saving agencies to the irrigated regions of the West. The United States Government is investing vast sums of money in that agency. I have new R. E. A. projects in Arizona. Right now the farmers in the southern part of the State would be in desperate straits if it were not for this new agency, which has been installed to pump water supplementing what they lack in their reservoirs.

In the conflict between private power and public power throughout the country generally, I am inclined to take middle ground, but although power production is incidental and purely secondary in most reclamation projects, yet it is so vitally important to help pay total costs and to supplement the water supply by pumping, that I want such power produced in the greatest possible quantity and so used as best to develop the whole community. I, too, want the farmer to get the greatest benefit. Today R. E. A. projects are going into certain communities where private utilities would not go for many years to come. Let us remember that this bill is distinctly a reclamation bill and not primarily a power bill, but I am well pleased with the power provision as written into the measure by the Senate amendment. I feel that its importance is second only to the liberal terms given the water users for making their repayments. The preference given to R. E. A. does not take anything from existing private utilities but merely enables the R. E. A. projects to develop areas which have never before been touched with electric power. It is very important to the West that we accept this conference report and concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I take the floor rather reluctantly on this matter. The bill as it was reported to the House was a perfectly proper reclamation bill. I joined others in giving assurances to members that it did not contain this power clause and thereby helped to secure unanimous consent to permit its passage. Let us keep the record straight. No part of this Senate power amendment was in the bill when it passed the House. In its entirety, it was added in the Senate. True, part of it was in the bill as first introduced in the House, but that was eliminated by the committee and came to the House and was passed by the House without containing any part of this amendment under present discussion. The Senate added it, all of it. I say this, because the discussion makes some of you feel that some of us betrayed you when we assured you the power provision was eliminated when we secured your approval for unanimous consent.

Now then, the effect of the Senate amendment is to change the emphasis in this bill from reclamation and water conservation to power promotion. As the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Winter] has pointed out, there is a difference between this amendment and the present law, not only in the addition of the language regarding cooperatives financed by the R. E. A., but in the first part of the amendment as well. It has been passed over by most of the speakers. The present law states that the Secretary of the Interior can give preference—

To municipal purposes-

In the sale of this power. The amendment placed in the bill by the Senate states that—

In said sales or leases, preference shall be given to municipalities and other public corporations or agencies— $\,$

And so forth. There is all the difference in the world between a clause permitting "preference for the sale of power to municipal purposes" and a mandatory clause requiring "preference to municipalities and other public corporations and agencies and cooperatives" in the sale of that power. The net effect of the amendment is to change the bill from a water-conservation measure to a power-promotion measure.

The point of view taken by many of the speakers has been that the amendment merely added R. E. A. cooperatives to a preferred list of public-power distributors already established by law; that is not the case. Existing law only gives preference to sale for municipal purposes, not to municipalities as distributors of power.

I would not have asked for time except that the record should be kept clear as to what this amendment actually does, and because I do not want any Member to think that we acted in bad faith in asking his agreement to unanimous consent for consideration of the bill when it first passed the House, on the assurance that it contained no part of this proviso on the sale of power. It did not. Consequently, in good faith I felt I should state what this amendment actually does that is different from the assurances earlier given you.

I want to see this bill become law because in other respects it sets up a sensible and very greatly needed system in reclamation repayments, but I do not like to see the farmers, who should be the primary beneficiaries of water conservation, made the goats to promote the use of water for power promotion, when primarily this should be a water-conservation measure.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman has brought out a point that has not been made clear, and I am glad that he has done so. In the discussion before the committee it was a question of interpretation as to what "municipalities" included. Commissioner Page had been acting upon the theory in the past, since the passage of the basic law, that "municipalities" included cooperatives and other public agencies.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes; but of course, the gentleman knows that is carrying his argument pretty far, because the present law does not state that preference shall be given to municipalities or other public corporations, it merely states that preference shall be given to municipal nurposes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Exactly.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. There is a vast difference between saying that the power shall be sold for municipal purposes and saying that it shall be sold to municipalities or other public agencies, because the present law permits the sale of power to the high bidder, and that is to the interest of the people who want the water conserved and the benefits of smaller irrigation costs to accrue to the farmers. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Robinson].

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I believe a great deal of confusion has arisen in the House because of this report. It was my amendment that struck the power question out of the first bill. However, I believe that it is not as serious a matter as the gentleman from South Dakota indicated in his remarks just completed. It does not make any difference as far as the price of the power is concerned with the farmers, because that is a matter that is agreed upon by the Government before these reclamation projects are started. Therefore, it is wholly a Government matter.

I hope the House will vote for this conference report. This is an important question with the farmers of the West. While the power question is indirectly brought into this subject, still there is some reason for the present amendment, which is fundamentally different from the amendment that was stricken from the original bill. This bill gives preference to the Rural Electrification Administration projects, and that is proper and should be done because the Government is furnishing the money for those projects. The bill simply says that any power that is produced on the project shall be first sold or at least offered for sale to agencies in which the Government is now investing its money. It seems to me there is some distinction between that and the original amendment which was stricken from the bill.

This bill is important in every particular to the farmers of the West. Let us not get the power question mixed up with it. We are going right on whether this bill passes or not or regardless of the form in which the bill passes. The Reclamation Bureau is going right on to carry out its present policy as far as the sale of power is concerned. The law of 1902 has been in operation since that date and will continue to be in operation; and Mr. Page in his statement before the committee stated that whether or not we put such an amendment in this bill would make little or no difference because the Reclamation Bureau under the Department of the Interior was going right along to carry out its present policy. Therefore, I hope the House will vote for this conference report. [Applause.]

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Voorhis].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that what all this controversy is about is a provision in this conference report that states in effect that where the people's money is expended on a project the benefit from that project in all its forms shall accrue as directly as possible to the people themselves.

I hope we will speed the day when cheap electricity can be got into the farm homes of America. I am not afraid of it. I hope it will come soon. I hope we can speed the day when the factories of America can have their wheels turned by cheap power. I believe that is a good thing and not a bad thing. But we find that even as in certain ages of history people have feared witches and in other ages of history they have feared sea monsters, so today we have a great new fear on the part of some Members of the House, a majority of whom are Republican Members, and this great fear is of electric power.

I do not understand it, I cannot conceive it, and I do not see why people should be afraid that the homes of America are going to be lighted up or that cheap power is going to be made available to the farms and the factories of America.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I have voted for rural electrification appropriations and for rural electrification projects, and I object to that kind of interpretation because I am just as much interested in that matter as anybody else, but when we have power from a reclamation project for sale and the purpose of the sale of power is to make the water burden on the farmers as little as it can be, why should not that power be sold to the best market so as to make the burden as light as possible on the farmers?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. There is nothing in the bill to prevent its being sold in a profitable manner.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. As I read the Senate amendment it provides for sale with preference to public bodies, municipalities, cooperatives, and so forth, regardless of the yield their bid will give to reducing the cost of irrigation.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The preference should go to those very same farmers wherever it is possible and feasible for it to go there. That is the point I make, and I hope the gentleman did not interpret my remarks as being any reflection on him or on his votes. I have the greatest respect for the gentleman both as to integrity, ability, and devotion to the people whom he represents. I know the gentleman has voted in favor of measures of this kind. All I am speaking of is of the general circumstance that I find it difficult to understand, for it seems to me that the development of this power is a positive and not a negative thing and one that should be forwarded and not feared.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. In explanation of the statement of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case], I simply want to say that the farmers do not get this power revenue. That is a direct payment by the Government, and the amount is fixed on these projects, and no matter what it is sold for, that does not go to the farmer. It comes out of the Public Treasury or into the Public Treasury and has nothing to do with the farmer.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. And the provisions of this amendment are merely prudent provisions in order to prevent some intermediary corporation from taking advantage of this publicly developed power and charging an additional amount to the ultimate consumer, and therefore the conference report should be adopted.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Izac].

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time merely to explain how this thing works.

The Federal Government spent nearly $30,000,000 in building the all-American canal. The farmers, as represented by the irrigation districts, cannot pay that money back out of the use of water. It would make the irrigation of those farms down there prohibitive. So the only way we can get the money back is by having the Federal Government, through the R. E. A., make it possible for the irrigation districts to build power lines, develop the power at the drops on the all-American canal, sell it back to the farmers at a reasonable price, and then have that money revert to the Treasury and pay back the $30,000,000. So by simply giving preference to these R. E. A. borrowers, in this case the farmer, as represented by the irrigation district, you are merely making it possible for the Federal Government to get back the money it has spent in such projects as Boulder Dam, for instance, the all-American canal, and the other reclamation projects of the West.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HILL.]

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, in the first place, let us get a picture of this proposition. In 1937 we passed a law providing for a commission to investigate the different reclamation projects throughout the United States. They made a report, and, based on that report, the original bill was introduced and referred to the Irrigation Committee. That bill included language far more drastic than the language we have here. It provided "that in said sales or leases preference shall be given to the municipalities and other public corporations or agency and also to cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations," and the measure stopped there.

A controversy arose in the committee which has been explained. This was ironed out; and in order to get the bill out, because we are all interested in the repayment proposition, we agreed to report a bill with that language deleted. I agreed to that, and that was done; and that measure passed the House unanimously. Then we went to conference, and the Senate meanwhile had added to that provision "financed in whole or in part by loans made pursuant to the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 and any amendments thereof"; and I may say that the reason I voted to report that to this House was to give the House an opportunity to vote on that amendment, which is fundamentally different from the original amendment.

As to the merits of the question, I call the attention of the Members of the House to the fact that this has been the policy—not the law, but has been the policy—of the Reclamation Eureau since 1906. Commissioner Page testified to that effect before the committee. It has not been the law, but it has been the policy. We are merely putting into law the policy of the Reclamation Bureau. It has been the policy under Republican administrations and under Democratic administrations, and we are simply carrying into effect that policy.

It has been said that we injected the power question into this proposition. If you will look at the top of page 22 of the bill you will find this language:

In the sale of electric power or lease of power privileges, made by the Secretary in connection with the operation of any project or a division of any project, shall be for such period—

And so forth. That shows that we are dealing with power there, and we are not injecting the power question into this matter at all. That is already here.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman to yield me 2 minutes more.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 1 minute more.

Mr. HILL. As for my friend from South Dakota [Mr. Case], who says that he has been in favor of rural electrification and for the farmers, may I say that this provision in this bill is for the benefit of the farmers, because preference will be given to those who receive loans from the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 and any amendments thereof. If the gentleman is in favor of the farmers, then he should be in favor of their getting the preference, which has been the policy of the Department since 1906. We are not changing the policy; we are simply putting it into law. That is all we are doing in this bill, and I hope gentlemen will vote for the conference report as it came back to us.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Leavy].

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, it is only to clear up one or two misunderstandings that have arisen during the course of the debate that I take the floor at all.

It has been the policy of the Reclamation Service, made so by the act itself, the basic law, that they may give preference to municipalities and public corporations in the purchase of power. This amendment goes one step further and includes cooperatives and rural electrification projects. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case]-and there is no better friend of reclamation in this House than heis under a misapprehension when he says that this law will require that such preference be given irrespective of the bid. That is not the fact. If a private corporation makes a better bid, then, under this law, it will become the duty of the Commissioner of Reclamation to consider that fact, but when the two make bids that are equal, it becomes his duty then to give preference to the public corporation, or cooperative, whether it be a city, town, cooperative, or rural electrification project.

There is one other misapprehension. A question was propounded, I think, by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. May]. He said these contracts would be 40-year contracts.

Mr. Speaker, the 40-year provision is a part of the reclamation law in reference to the repayment for the water brought to the land but has nothing whatever to do with the contract insofar as it involves the sale of power. Those contracts can be made for such period as the Commissioner and the contracting party see fit to fix, and it is usually for 5 years. That has been the limit usually, because then the changed conditions call for changed rates, but without the possibility of selling power and thus securing revenue, at least a score of the best reclamation projects we have in the United States would be impossible. I have in mind this great Kendrick project in Wyoming. Were it not for the fact that the power could be sold, the project could not be brought into being. The same is true of Boulder Dam and of Grand Coulee in my district. There is nothing here that should cause Members on either side of the House to oppose this conference report.

This legislation, when enacted, will prove the greatest step forward in reclamation history, since the enactment of the basic law over 30 years ago. It insures orderly and necessary development in the West and preserves to the people the greatest single asset the West has; that is its hydroelectric energy. It will make possible an industrial electrical development, undreamed of when the basic reclamation law was first passed. Modern civilization will flourish in the West as nowhere else in the world, and we will set the example for the remainder of the Nation. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Pierce].

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, it is a well-known fact that for years the power in the reclamation districts was taken over by utilities with very little compensation to the farmers. I think that has ceased. It is now being generally conserved by and for the people who use the land in the irrigation districts and struggle to repay the costs of the project. One project in Oregon, one of the finest irrigation projects in the Union, owed perhaps $6,000,000-a project that has sixty or eighty thousand acres, highly cultivated. The power on the project belonged to the farmers. It was taken from the water users with the consent of the Reclamation Service for a credit of a little over $100,000, some 20 years ago. It was capitalized by Wall Street, one of the Byllesby companies, for $4,000,000. It is probably worth $10,000,000 today. Had the farmers been allowed to use that power in that district, every farm on that irrigation district would be free from debt. When the history of it is written it will be a small Teapot Dome. I mean to write it. This conference report should be adopted. There is nothing wrong in it. Why should not the farmers have preference? The money is put up in their behalf, and they repay it. If there is anything to be saved out of the power, why should it not go to the farmer? Give the private electric companies preference? Of course, then comes manipulation. Give the farmers preference? There is nothing wrong in it. It belongs to them.

I assure my colleagues from South Dakota and from Kansas that there is nothing wrong in this conference report. The farmers will have and should have a preference right to the power that may be generated by irrigation districts.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, in concluding this debate I want to call the attention of my colleagues on both sides to the main issue here. I do not think there is a man on either side of the House who wants to put a middleman between the Government, which finances these projects, and the farmers, who buy the electric energy, and for that reason the cooperatives delivering electric power to the settlers are entitled to preference.

With that statement, I move the previous question, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Schafer of Wisconsin) there were ayes 95 and noes 5.

So the conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. St. Claire, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 18. An act authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for the lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896, and reopening such lands to mineral entry.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2009) entitled "An act to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Truman, Mr. Donahey, Mr. White, and Mr. REED to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. COLE] be allowed to extend his own remarks by printing an address delivered in his district by Mr. Hamilton.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

NATIONAL STOLEN PROPERTY ACT

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 1996) to amend the National Stolen Property Act, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REPORT FROM TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY—MESSAGE THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 455)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered printed with illustrations:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress a letter from the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority submitting a report entitled "Value of Flood Height Reduction from Tennessee Valley Authority Reservoirs to the Alluvial Valley of the Lower Mississippi River."

The Tennessee Valley Authority believes that this report is a contribution to the theory of valuation of the benefits of flood control and as such will be useful to the legislative and executive branches of the Federal Government in considering flood-control problems in general.

The attention of the Congress is invited to the suggestion of the Board that the report be printed as a Senate or House document.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 27, 1939.

AMENDING THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory and supplementary thereto.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory and supplementary thereto, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recom-mend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 21

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory and supplementary thereto, submit the following explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon in conference, and recommended in the on amendment No. 1: This Senate amendment excludes from application of the bill corporations in equity receivership. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 2: This Senate amendment excludes from application of the bill corporations in proceedings for reorganization under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 3 and 4: These Senate amendments exclude from application of the bill corporations in equity receiverclude from application of the bill corporations in equity receivership or in process of reorganization under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act at the time of filing a petition under the new chapter and which have been in equity receivership or in process of reorganization under said section 77 within 10 years prior to the filing of such a petition. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11: The House bill permitted filing a petition on the basis of certain action "before or after the effective date of this chapter." These Senate amendments permitted filing a petition only on the basis of certain action taken prior to April 1, 1939. The House recedes on amendment 5 and recedes on amendments 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11 with amendments. The effect of the action agreed upon in conference and recommended in the accompanying conference report with respect to these amendeffect of the action agreed upon in conference and recommended in the accompanying conference report with respect to these amendments is as follows: Petitions may be filed on the basis of action taken either before or after April 1, 1939, but the required specific findings to be included in an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission made under section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act prior to April 1, 1939, are those required under said section 20a in accordance with existing law, while in the case of such orders made prior to April 1, 1939, other findings must be included. Furthermore, the requisite orders if made prior to April 1, 1939, may be by a division of the Commission, but those made after April 1, 1939, must be by the full Commission. These other findings relate to the petitioner's need for financial reorganization of the character provided for under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act; to the reasonable expectation that the petitioner's financial difficulties are temporary only; and to the plan of adjustment. The findings required with respect to the plan are that after due consideration of the earning power of the property, the plan is in the public interest earning power of the property, the plan is in the public interest and in the best interest of each class of creditors and stockholders; is feasible, financially advisable, and not likely to be followed by insolvency or need of financial reorganization or adjustment; does not provide for fixed charges in excess of what will be adequately covered by the probable earnings available for the payment thereof; leaves adequate means for such future financing as may be requisite; is consistent with adequate maintenance of the property; and is consistent with the proper performance by the railroad corporation of service to the public as a common carrier and will not impair its ability to perform such service. The Commission is directed, in making the specific findings, to scrutinize the facts independently of the extent of acceptances of a plan and of any lack of expectition thereto. opposition thereto.

On amendment No. 12: This Senate amendment eliminates the provision relating to the court in which a railroad in equity receivership shall file a petition under the new chapter. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 13 and 14: These Senate amendments correct erroneous references to "this section" instead of to "this chapter." The House recedes on both amendments.

On amendments Nos. 15, 16, and 17: These Senate amendments entitle all "persons in interest" to notice of a hearing and not merely "creditors affected by the plan"; allow intervention to "persons in interest" and entitle "any person in interest" to be heard and not merely "holders of securities of the petitioner". The House recedes on all three amendments.

The House recedes on all three amendments.

On amendments Nos. 18, 19, and 20: These Senate amendments relate to modifications of plans by the court. The House recedes on both amendments 18 and 19 and recedes on amendment 20 with an amendment. The effect of this agreed action is that a proposed modification of a plan which substantially alters the basis for the Commission's findings requires resubmission of the plan as proposed to be modified to the Commission for appropriate findings; and a proposed modification which substantially or adversely affects the interests of any class of creditors requires resubmission to such creditors, plus a hearing and opportunity to withdraw or cancel assents to the plan.

On amendment No. 21: This Senate amendment provides that the interests or claims of the United States shall be deemed to be affected by a plan. The Senate recedes.

On amendment No. 22: This Senate amendment provides that if the United States is a creditor on claims for taxes or customs duties no plan which does not provide for the payment thereof may be approved except upon acceptance of a lesser amount by the Secretary of the Treasury; and that upon failure of the Secretary to accept or reject a lesser amount for more than 60 days after receipt of written notice so to do from the court, accompanied by a certified copy of the plan, the consent of the United States insofar as its claims for taxes or customs duties shall be conclusively presumed. The House recedes with an amendment which puts a "postponement" in the same status as a "lesser amount.

on amendment No. 23: This Senate amendment requires that as to stated matters the court shall make findings and not merely "be satisfied." The House recedes.

On amendment No. 24: This Senate amendment clarifies the provisions that acceptance of a plan "as submitted" is sufficient if the plan be not modified, but that acceptance of a plan "as modified" is requisite if the plan be modified. The House recedes with an amendment which is grammatical.

On amendments Nos. 25, 26, and 27: These Senate amendments relate to the findings by the court required as a condition of approval and confirmation of a plan. These amendments insert the words "as an adjustment" after the words "fair and equitable" in the required finding that the plan is "fair and equitable"; require a finding that the plan "is in the best interests of the creditors and stockholders of each class" and that the plan "is feasible"; and insert the plans "conforms to the requirements of the law of the land pertaining to adjustments regarding the participation of the vapertaining to adjustments regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders." The House recedes on all three amendments with an amendment, the effect of which is all three amendments with an amendment, the effect of which is to make the clause affected by these three amendments read as follows: "(3) That the plan meets the requirements of clauses (c), and the petitioner meets the requirements of clauses (a) and (b) of subparagraph (2) of the first sentence of section 710, and that the plan is fair and equitable as an adjustment, affords due recognition to the rights of each class of creditors and stockholders and fair consideration to each class thereof adversely affected, and will conform to the law of the land regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders: Provided, That in making the findings required by this clause (3) the court shall scrutinize the facts independently of the extent of acceptances of such plan, and of any lack of opposition thereto, and of the fact that the Commission, under section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act, has authorized the issuance or modification of securities as proposed by such plan, and of the fact that the Commission has made such or similar findings;"

On amendment No. 28: This Senate amendment adds a clause

On amendment No. 28: This Senate amendment adds a clause conditioning approval of a plan on a finding that the petitioner has not, in connection with the plan or the effectuation thereof, done any act or failed to perform any duty which act or failure would be a bar to the discharge of a bankrupt, and that the plan and the acceptance thereof are in good faith and have not been made or progressed by improper means promised or ages. The made or procured by improper means, promises, or acts.

House recedes.

House recedes.

On amendment No. 29: This Senate amendment requires full disclosure of fees and expenses incurred in connection with the proceedings and plan and conditions approval of the plan on a finding that the fees and expenses are fair and reasonable; and provides that to the extent the fees and expenses are not ascertainable at the time of the hearing, they are subject to the approval of the court as fair and reasonable. The House recedes with an amendment, the effect of which is to make the clause added read as follows: "(6) That, after hearings for the purpose, all amounts or considerations, directly or indirectly paid or to be paid by or for the petitioner for expenses, fees, reimbursement, or compensation of any character whatsoever incurred in connection with the proceeding and plan, or preliminary thereto or in aid thereof, together with all the facts and circumstances relating to the incurring thereof, have been fully disclosed to the court to the incurring thereof, have been fully disclosed to the court so far as such amounts or considerations can be ascertained at the time of such hearings, that all such amounts or consideration are fair and reasonable, and to the extent that any such amounts or considerations are not then ascertainable, the same are to be so disclosed to the court when ascertained, and are to be so disclosed to the court when ascertained, and are are to be so disclosed to the court when ascertained, and are to be subject to approval by the special court as fair and reasonable, and except with such approval no amount or considerations covered by this clause (6) shall be paid."

On amendment No. 30: This Senate amendment makes clear that a decree approving and confirming a plan does not dispense with any required authority where required by any law relating to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 31: The House bill contained a paragraph providing that the plan of adjustment may contain appropriate provisions whereby the interests of creditors affected by the plan shall be safeguarded in all matters of the petitioner's financial policy and operations. Senate amendment 31 strikes out this paragraph and substitutes the mandatory requirement that no plan may be approved unless the court finds that with respect to (a) the continuation of, or (b) any change in (1) the voting of the continuation of, or (b) any change in (1) the voting rights in the petition, (2) control of the petitioner, and (3) the power and manner of selection of the persons who are to be directors, officers, or voting trustees, if any, upon the consummation of the plan and their respective successors, the plan is equitable, compatible with the interests of creditors and stockholders and consistent with public policy. The House recedes with an amendment amplifying the substituted paragraph, so as to refer also to the identity of the persons who are to be directors, officers, or voting trustees, and also so as to require that the plan make full disclosure, be adequate, and be in the best interests of creditors and stockholders of each class.

On amendment No. 32: This Senate amendment makes clear that the injunction or stay of actions or proceedings may be for a reasonable time only. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 33: This Senate amendment makes clear that, with respect to claims which would be required to be paid if the plan were in effect, the stay shall affect neither proceedings to explanate the plan were in effect, the stay shall affect neither proceedings. to enforce such claims (such as actions at law for a money judgment) nor proceedings based on such claims (such as equity receiverships or bankruptcy proceedings). The House recedes.

On amendment No. 34: This Senate amendment makes clear that the court may not continue a proceeding beyond 1 year from the date of filing the petition unless it is satisfied that confirmation of a plan is in immediate prospect. The House

On amendment No. 35: This Senate amendment makes clear On amendment No. 35: This Senate amendment makes clear that the making of payments during a proceeding as provided in a plan shall not constitute a preference under the Bankruptcy Act and that the acceptance of such payments shall not constitute an acceptance of a plan. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 36: This Senate amendment strikes out the words "and circumstances" so as to eliminate any possible construction that security holders can be required to accept conditions or make rights in order to receive payments. The House ditions or waive rights in order to receive payments. The House

> WALTER CHANDLER CHARLES F. McLaughlin, EARL C. MICHENER, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ELBERT R. MILLER-VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 454)

The Speaker laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 2687, an act for the relief of Elbert E. Miller.

This bill provides, "That effective on and after the date of enactment of this act, all rights, claims, and benefits forfeited by Elbert R. Miller (C-132757) under the provisions of section 504 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, by the decision of the director, United States Veterans' Bureau, dated October 28, 1929, are hereby restored, but this act shall in nowise be construed as authority to pay any sum, claim, or benefit that may have matured or become due prior to effective date of this act."

Approval of the bill would have the effect of restoring to Elbert R. Miller, a World War veteran, effective on the date of approval, rights which have been forfeited, on account of the veteran having furnished false evidence in support of his claim in violation of the provisions of section 504 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, which provide as follows:

Any person who shall knowingly make or cause to be made, or Any person who shall knowingly make or cause to be made, or conspire, combine, aid, or assist in, agree to, arrange for, or in anywise procure the making or presentation of a false or fraudulent affidavit, declaration, certificate, statement, voucher, or paper, or writing purporting to be such, concerning any claim or the approval of any claim for compensation or maintenance and support allowance, or the payment of any money, for himself or for any other person, under titles II or IV hereof, shall forfeit all rights, claims, and benefits under said titles, and, in addition to any and all other penalties imposed by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, for each such 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, for each such offense.

This case has received sympathetic consideration by the Veterans' Administration and no facts or circumstances have been found which would warrant singling this case out for preferential treatment.

It is with regret, therefore, that I find myself unable to give my approval to this bill.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 27, 1939.

The SPEAKER. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal.

Mr. GAVAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the bill, together with the veto message, be referred to the Committee on War Claims and ordered printed.

The motion was agreed to.

AGREEMENTS FOR EXCHANGE OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR STRATEGIC AND CRITICAL MATERIALS PRODUCED ABROAD

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution

LXXXIV-646

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 273

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 2697, an act to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes].

I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution, as has been indicated, is the so-called barter bill. I am satisfied the House is familiar with this, from press report, and those who have had an opportunity to study the legislation.

In brief, it provides the machinery to carry out agreements made between the British Government and this Government for the barter of certain strategic war materials. It is necessary to have some legislation upon the subject, and that is what this bill proposes.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, the controversy which is involved in this bill, so far as I personally am concerned, hinges on the question of warehouse rates which are being charged by the warehousemen in whose warehouses the cotton is stored which will be used to fill the barter agreement consummated between the Government of England and the Government of the United States on the 23d of June 1939.

The Senate bill 2697 was sent to the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House. The purpose of the bill is to effect the delivery of some 600,000 bales of cotton covered by the barter agreement wherein the United States is trading cotton to the United Kingdom in exchange for rubber. Article I, subsection (b) of that agreement reads:

The cotton will be inspected to determine its classification in accordance with the universal cotton standards for grade and the official standards of the United States for staple, and will be accepted—

Here is a very important part of this agreement by experts appointed by the Government of the United Kingdom.

Article II, subsection (b) provides that:

In determining the quality of rubber which shall be exchanged by the United Kingdom to the United States for the cotton, the rubber will be inspected and accepted by experts appointed by the United States Government.

In other words, I would construe that to be a mutual agreement, in that England through her experts can determine the quality and staple and character of the cotton she is to receive, and the experts representing the United States can determine the quality of the rubber which we are to receive

Throughout the United States, in the cotton sections particularly, we have cotton stored in warehouses, which storage has been created under the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act approved February 16, 1938. Section 383, subsection (b) reads:

Cotton held as security for any loan heretofore or hereafter made or arranged for by the Commodity Credit Corporation shall not hereafter be reconcentrated without the written consent of the producer or borrower. When, therefore, it comes to filling a barter agreement on cotton it becomes necessary to move cotton from inland warehouses to port warehouses in order to carry out the agreement made with the United Kingdom with reference to the exchange of cotton for rubber, and it is in the movement, or the transfer, or the reconcentration of this cotton from interior warehouses to port warehouses that this controversy arises

Referring back to the Agricultural Act, subsection (b), which I just read, we find that subsequent to the enactment of that short clause of some three and one-half lines, someone discovered that the cotton-loan agreements and the cotton notes signed by the grower—copies of which I hold here in my hand—carried under section 6 this interesting language:

The undersigned agrees that if any Federal agency or instrumentality shall be the holder of the above-mentioned note, it may before or after maturity move the collateral cotton from one storage point to another and pay freight, may compress the cotton, may store separately, en bloc, or otherwise.

You will notice that the grower signing this note agrees to that interesting clause. Going back to subsection (b) we find:

Cotton held as security for any loan heretofore or hereafter made or arranged for by the Commodity Credit Corporation shall not hereafter be reconcentrated without the written consent of the producer or borrower.

So there was a very definite conflict. What happened? In June 1938, a short time after that, we find an amendment brought in here which changes that whole situation very materially, and then we also find that when it came around to signing the 1938–39 cotton-loan notes, that section 6 of the loan agreement has been drafted so that it reads thus:

The undersigned agrees that if any Federal agency or instrumentality shall become the holder of the above-mentioned note, it may before or after maturity move the collateral cotton from one storage point to another, subject to the provisions of the act of June 16, 1938 (Public, No. 660, 75th Cong.).

Even a high-school student who wants to sit down and read the record can come to only one conclusion, and that is that subsection (b) of section 383 and Public, 660, of the Seventy-fifth Congress was dictated completely and absolutely by the warehouse ring which brings about this controversy.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield for just a question because my time is limited and I want to get this case before the House. Mr. PACE. Does not the gentleman think—

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield for a question only, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. PACE. I was about to ask the gentleman a question. Mr. CRAWFORD. Very well, ask the question.

Mr. PACE. Does not the gentleman think that the farmer who produced the cotton on which he secured a loan has some interest in the cotton rather than having it moved 1,000 miles from his warehouse where he is unable to have it resampled and graded when it is offered for sale? And that that is one of the purposes of keeping the cotton from being moved hundreds of miles away from where it was produced or where the farmer lives?

Mr. CRAWFORD. At no time during my presentation shall I suggest that the principle enunciated by the gentleman from Georgia be in any way invalidated; and, indeed, the cotton grower should have this cotton located near him so long as he holds title to the cotton; but for the information of the House, this controversy arose because I offered in the Committee of Banking and Currency a simple proviso which reads in this exact language:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as preventing the reconcentration of the cotton by the United States Government or any of its agencies where a saving in carrying charges can thereby be effected.

This in no way interferes with the right of the borrowing farmer who has his cotton up as collateral under a cotton loan. It does, however, put the Commodity Credit Corporation, a Government agency, in a position to protect the rights of the taxpayers of this country, Government rights, if you please, to the end that no such outrages can be perpetrated by the Government on the taxpayers, which I shall now proceed to demonstrate, as has taken place under these warehouse agreements.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, does not that encourage the Commodity Credit Corporation to foreclose as quickly as possible to close out the farmers so they can move it away from them?

Mr. CRAWFORD. In no way would it do that, and I hope that the gentleman in his time will make the necessary effort to demonstrate how the Commodity Credit Corporation can run contrary to the laws which this Congress enacts.

Let us see what is happening. These are the official records furnished me by the Commodity Credit Corporation. Here we find the schedule of rates to be used in calculating warehouse charges on the 1934-35 12-cent cotton loans. The rates on this schedule were effective August 1, 1938, on 1934-35 12-cent-loan cotton. I shall be glad for any Member of the House who desires to examine them to look over these schedules. We find these rates of the warehouses on this lot of cotton range from about 1134 cents up to 18 cents per bale per month. That is per bale per month for storing a bale of cotton of approximately 500 pounds.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. It has been suggested in the Committee on Agriculture quite definitely that the cost to the Government for storage of cotton runs around $4 a bale and that the total carrying charges now are around $45,000,000 a year to carry the loan cotton.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I expect to bring that out. I thank the gentleman. Notice that these rates run from about 12 cents to 18 cents per bale per month on this enormous storage of cotton.

What happened on the next crop year? Let us take the 1937-38 loan cotton which is operating under these provisions of the law, which gave protection to the warehouse ring.

In the next year the 1937-38 crop we find these rates are almost without exception 18 cents per bale. Once in a while you will find a rate of 15.6 cents per bale per month. The 18 cents I believe is the highest rate in this schedule which takes care of the 1937-38 loan cotton.

Let us take the next year's loans. This is the 1938-39 cotton. The rates in this schedule were effective August 1, 1938. If you care to look at this schedule of rates I hold in my hand, you will find that in almost every case, with just a few exceptions, the rates have been jumped from a range of about 12 to 18 cents per bale per month, which I gave you in the first case, to where the rates are now 25 cents per bale per month.

It will be argued, of course, that you must charge 25 cents per bale per month the first year the cotton goes into storage. It takes time to cure cotton. Cotton goes through great physical changes following the month in which it is put into bales. When someone tells you that the character of cotton does not change after it is baled, you come to me and I will show you official information on that. It does change. As a spinner, you want character cotton, otherwise you cannot produce character cloth. So when the cotton is in storage the first year there is more or less of a handling charge, they tell me, that must be taken care of, for turning and flopping the cotton and some claim that justifies the 25-cent rate, but with that contention I disagree. I challenge the warehousemen to make a showing of their accounts and to justify such an exhorbitant rate. If it was necessary to pay 25 cents the first year, under what conditions do you get 12, 14, and 15 cents under the previous loans?

I am informed by some of the warehousemen they can make money storing this cotton at 11 cents per bale per month and come out in fine shape financially. I also understand that in some cases the warehousemen are willing to store this cotton for 10 cents per bale per month.

Referring now to the remarks of the gentleman from Minnesota, you have approximately 12,000,000 bales of cotton to deal with here. I have the figures here showing the amount of cotton in storage in port warehouses, and out of the 6,943,011 bales of cotton, title to which will be taken by the Government under this procedure, 1,225,366 bales were stored in port warehouses and 5,717,645 bales were stored in interior warehouses where the highest rates prevail.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, it will be claimed that the port warehouses are owned by the rich fellows; it will be claimed that this is a raid on the interior warehouses, the little fellow, by the big octopus, the economic royalists—the man who wants to destroy the little fellow—but I have information which satisfies me, at least, that a number of the interior warehouses are owned and controlled financially by the big fellows on the coast.

It will also be claimed that the big fellows on the coast, particularly one big operator in the State of Texas, has taken his money and poured it into South America, developing the cotton industry against the interests of the American cotton grower. Since when has it been news that the administration has been promoting policies which induces the shipment of manufactured machinery to other countries in payment of agricultural goods coming into this country? Of course, manufactured machinery in the form of ginning machinery, tractors, and other tools have gone to Brazil and have gone into cotton production and cotton processing. Of course, the smart, sagacious fellows of the South followed that trend to Brazil under our cotton-control movement and under our reciprocal trade-agreements plan. Indeed they did that. Now, then, will you condemn an American for going to foreign lands, particularly to Latin America, when the front pages of your papers are loaded with the proposition of "Southward we must go"? Those who have so faithfully supported the President's reciprocal trade-agreement plan must find themselves in a perfectly ridiculous position for condemning a man for going along and supporting reciprocal-trade agreements, the good-neighbor policy, the Latin America good will policy, and the disastrous cotton-control policy through taking his money to Brazil, investing it there in the production of cotton and cotton goods, where there is no Government interference. I do not condemn the Texan, but I do condemn the administration and those who promoted and supported the policy which makes it so profitable for the Texan to do so. Of course he did it. If we could establish the record, we would find that many southern cotton men have done that very thing.

It comes right back to this proposition: If you will take Public, No. 660, of June 16, 1938, you will find this interesting provision in the law. It will be contended that this provision now protects the Commodity Credit Corporation, as my suggested amendment would protect it, but such contention cannot be supported. What is the truth? If the Commodity Credit Corporation can effectuate downward these warehouse charges, why has not the Commodity Credit Corporation done so?

It has not done so because of this interesting provision in the June 16 amendment, which states:

Provided, however, That in cases where there is congestion or lack of storage facilities—

And it goes on in detail-or if carrying charges are substantially in excess of the average of carrying charges available elsewhere, and the local warehouse after notice declines to reduce such charges, such written consent as provided in this amendment need not be obtained.

That is, the written consent of the grower.

How is the Commodity Credit Corporation going to substantiate that Mr. A's carrying charges are substantially greater than Mr. B's carrying charges? The rates are virtually uniform. My contention is that the Commodity Credit Corporation, by section 383, subsection (b), and by Public, 660, has been denied the right to go in and negotiate for reduced carrying charges in storage and insurance, and therefore the Commodity Credit Corporation has been forced by acts of Congress to go along and have the taxpayers bear these unreasonable and exorbitant warehouse charges shown in the schedules here displayed.

If the Commodity Credit Corporation can show, and if it will issue an official statement to the effect that it will reduce the rates on this 6,943,000 bales plus such other bales as title may be taken to by the Government, I have no complaint. I am not fighting for the rich man on the coast or for the rich man in the interior. I have satisfied myself that all these warehousemen are making fabulous profits through this rate of 25 cents per bale. One warehouse company has been paid, and is to be paid, for instance, $8,518,000 for warehousing. Another $942,000, another $1,296,000, and another $445,000.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. When this bill came before the Committee on Banking and Currency I was perfectly satisfied to accept the Senate bill as it was sent to us, but the warehouse crowd induced the committee to put in the interesting language, which you will find in the House print of the bill. The claim will be offered that the Committee on Banking and Currency should not disturb law already enacted by Congress. If the Committee on Banking and Currency does not want to protect the warehousing monopoly, you might call it, in the 25-cent rate, why did they disturb the Senate bill? If the committee is willing to eliminate the amendment put in the Senate bill by the Committee on Banking and Currency I have no further objection. I am willing to accept the Senate bill as it came to the Committee on Banking and Currency. But if you accept the Senate bill as amended by the House committee, then you are perpetuating this combination in restraint of trade, you are accepting this proposition which prevents the Commodity Credit Corporation from proceeding to negotiate for reduced rates on this cotton.

If you will adopt my amendment, the Commodity Credit Corporation can go to warehouse A and say, "Listen, Mr. Warehouseman, your rates are too high. Can you not bring them down a little?" If he declines, the cotton can be reconcentrated. What cotton? The cotton owned by the Government, not the cotton owned by the farmer. Let that stay in the community where it belongs until you are ready to ship it, or until the Government takes title thereto.

This whole thing is another barrier against the feeding of cotton into the channels of trade. I understand my New England friends will point out some of the damage that has come to the New England industry as a result of this

Mr. Speaker, at the opportune time I shall proceed to offer amendments to correct the bill, so that it will be in the form I believe it should be.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Massa-

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I wonder if the gentleman would be willing to accept an amendment that would provide that some of this cotton in storage should be assigned to places in New England where they manufacture textiles and where the storage of this cotton would be most helpful.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I certainly would be willing to accept such an amendment. If you will put cotton contiguous to the New England spinner, he will be able to buy from hand to mouth. He will not be forced to take long risks on the market. He will use more cotton, the banks will go along with him, and more cotton will be consumed. Cotton stored in New England near the mills will strengthen their chances for profitable operation, will add to their financial standing, will promote employment in New England. Certainly I shall support the gentleman's amendment.

I also wish to point out that of the total world consumption of cotton today the United States furnishes only 22.2 percent and other parts of the world are furnishing 77.8 percent. We need to store a little cotton, at least, that will be required for the spinners in New England. I hope the gentleman will offer such an amendment.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia. Mr. PACE. How would we know what cotton to ship to New England before we knew what the textile mills were going to buy?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I suggest the gentleman ask that question of the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I could tell the gentleman that. The gentleman knows that for years the New England spinners have been buying southern cotton, and the sellers of that cotton certainly know what they sell to the New England mills.

Mr. PACE. They buy only certain grades and staples.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. You know what those grades and staples are from past experience.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In that connection, as the House Committee on Banking and Currency amended the Senate bill, it is proposed that our agents determine the quality of cotton to be picked at your interior warehouses and sent to port to carry out this barter agreement. This agreement provides that such selection shall be made by the United Kingdom experts, so certainly, if you could carry out the intention of the Committee on Banking and Currency, you could fill those little orders for the New England spinners.

Mr. Speaker, under permit to include in the RECORD for information of House Members, I submit the letter which I received from Mr. Goodloe, vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation; a schedule of payments made and to be made to cotton warehousemen; a statement showing cotton stored at port and interior warehouses; and a second letter from Mr. Goodloe dated July 26.

> COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION Washington, July 22, 1939.

Hon. FRED L. CRAWFORD,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.
DEAR MR. CRAWFORD: Responsive to your letter of July 21, 1939, we submit herewith the following information:

1. Statement showing storage in excess of $25,000 per year paid to warehouses during the cotton years 1936-37 and 1937-38 and an estimate of such charges for the cotton year 1938-39.

2. Loan cotton is stored at the following points:

Alabama: Mobile. California: Los Angeles, San Pedro, and Stockton.

Florida: Pensacola. Georgia: Savannah.

Louisiana: Lake Charles and New Orleans.

Mississippi: Gulfport. North Carolina: Wilmington. South Carolina: Charleston.

Texas: Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Galveston, Houston, and Texas

3 and 4. Schedules showing storage and insurance rates applicable at all warehouse locations. Since a flat rate is made for both storage and insurance, it is not possible to separate these charges.

5. In the absence of final specifications from the British Government as to the qualities of cotton desired, it is not possible to estimate the quantity of cotton to which it may be necessary for the Corporation to take title.

6. It is not possible to estimate the dollar value of damage at inland warehouses. However, it is not thought that there is any large amount of such damage, and Commodity Credit Corporation has protection under the warehouseman's bond in the event of damage to cotton while in storage.

7 and 8. Section 383 (b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 reads as follows:

"Cotton held as security for any loan heretofore or hereafter made or arranged for by Commodity Credit Corporation shall not hereafter be reconcentrated without the written consent of the producer or borrower."

This section was amended by the act approved June 16, 1938 (Public, No. 660, 75th Cong.), copy of which is attached hereto.

Very truly yours,

JOHN D. GOODLOE, Vice President.

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION, WASHINGTON, July 26, 1939.

Hon. FRED L. CRAWFORD,

Hon. Fred L. Crawford,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Crawford: Responsive to your inquiry of even date, you are advised that prior to the enactment of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, the producer's note and loan agreement, employed in connection with all loans on cotton contained a provision whereby the producer authorized Commodity Credit Corporation to reconcentrate the pledged cotton and charge the costs of same against the cotton.

Enclosed is a specimen copy of the form of producer's note and of same against the cotton.

Enclosed is a specimen copy of the form of producer's note and loan agreement employed in connection with the 1937-38 loans, your attention being directed to section 6 of the loan agreement. Enclosed also is specimen copy of the 1938-39 producer's note and loan agreement, your attention being called to the provisions of section 6 of the loan agreement. The 1938-39 loans are the only loans made upon cotton by the Corporation since the enactment of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

The other questions you asked will be answered in the order stated in your letter:

1. Based on the information available, it is estimated that not stated in your letter:

1. Based on the information available, it is estimated that not more than 200,000 bales of the cotton now stored at ports, upon which advantageous shipments can be made, will meet the requirements of the British Government.

2. The estimate of from 250,000 to 350,000 bales of cotton now stored at ports which would probably meet the British specifications is reasonably accurate, considering all ports. However, the California and Atlantic ports should be eliminated because of higher freight rates from California and the proximity of the Atlantic ports to domestic mills. The exchange agreement recently ratified by the Senate provides for a flat price at New Orleans or any other Gulf or Atlantic port agreed upon.

3. The English Government has not officially specified the exact grades and staples desired and has indicated they will not do so until the agreement comes into effect. Informally, however, they have indicated the grades and staples.

have indicated the grades and staples.

4. The foregoing information is based upon such informal and unofficial specifications of the English Government as to the grades and staples desired and estimates made in the records of this Corporation.

Corporation.
Commodity Credit Corporation has not yet acquired title to any of the loan cotton, and it is possible to answer your last inquiry only by explaining generally the procedure we propose to follow, based upon the information now available. We enclose memorandum showing by States, the amount of 1934—35 and 1937—38 loan cotton-securing loans held by Commodity Credit Corporation and stored at interior and port locations.

The 1934—35 loans, by their terms, matured July 31, 1935, were extended to February 1, 1936, and have since been carried by the Corporation as past due. The amount which the Corporation has invested in such cotton, including the original amount of the loan invested in such cotton, including the original amount of the loan plus accrued interest and all charges, is approximately 15 cents per pound. In connection with the exchange agreement, it is proposed that the Corporation acquire title to this cotton and make delivery out of same to the British to the extent the grades and staples required by the British can be supplied out of this stock. Since approximately 2,257,000 bales of the original stock of 1934.35 cotton have been released and the British Government.

stock. Since approximately 2,257,000 bales of the original stock of 1934-35 cotton have been released, and the British Government has informally indicated it will desire cotton grading middling %-inch or better, it is probable that not more than 100,000 to 150,000 bales of the 1934-35 loan cotton can be used.

The 1937-38 loans, by their terms, matured July 31, 1938, and were extended to July 31, 1939, pursuant to the provisions of section 382 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. With few exceptions, the amount the Corporation has invested in this cotton, including the original amount of the loan plus accrued interest and all charges, is in excess of its present market value. This cotton has not been classed, the loans being made upon the certification by the warehouseman that, in his opinion, the cotton fell within certain classification groups. For example, to be eligible for the maximum loan authorized under the 1937-38 loan program, the warehouseman was required to certify that in his opinion cotton was middling %-inch or better. According to our records, approximately 2,000,000 bales of 1937-38 loan cotton were certified by the warehousemen to have been middling %-inch or better. approximately 2,000,000 bales of 1937-38 loan cotton were certified by the warehousemen to have been middling %-inch or better, although the experience of the Corporation is that such determination by warehousemen is only reasonably accurate. Thus, to complete delivery of the required amount of cotton and of the grades and staples tentatively indicated to be desired by the British Government, it will be necessary for the Corporation to acquire title to the 9-cent loan cotton under the 1937-38 program and complete delivery out of this stock.

Very truly yours,

JOHN D. GOODLOE, Vice President.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein certain statistics from which I have quoted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I believe there is no objection to the adoption of this rule giving consideration to this bill. There was no objection I heard in the Rules Committee either to the rule or to the bill itself. The only controversy, I believe, is with respect to the amendment which the gentleman has just been discussing, but I have asked for this time to discuss a different matter, which is in the nature of a question of personal privilege.

Mr. Speaker, in the recent debate on the resolution to investigate the National Labor Relations Board the lady from New Jersey allowed herself to be diverted from the subject under discussion in order to make a personal attack on me. She said:

Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal of respect for the gentleman from Virginia, but certainly he is the last man in the world to pass on labor legislation. I have taken the trouble to investigate his labor record, and I have yet to find a single labor bill for the benefit of the workers of the country that he has ever voted for.

Of course, the lady did not mean that she has complimented me by personally going through the long record of my votes for the past 9 years. She meant that someone else had allegedly done so and supplied her with the information. I had hoped, after the heat of the debate had subsided, that she would herself have corrected the misstatement. As she has not done so, it becomes necessary for me to make the correction.

I do not desire to criticize the lady from New Jersey. I have never criticized any Member on the floor. We are all here to do our duty as we see it. We all make mistakes, and it does not lie in the mouths of anyone of us to condemn another. I know that with rare exceptions the Members all pursue the course that they sincerely and honestly believe to be in the best interests of the country.

But the charge that the lady from New Jersey has been induced to make against me is so contrary to the facts that I cannot permit it to go unchallenged.

She speaks as the mouthpiece of a group that could never be elected by the suffrage of a people to come here and speak for themselves.

It is a mere repetition of the charge that was the theme song of the base purge campaign against me in the primary of 1938. The overwhelming vote of confidence given me by my people at the polls in answer to the charge should have sufficed to silence their guns. But their sniping campaign has never ceased. Conducted from behind the scenes by pusillanimous Lilliputians, who, embittered by the knowledge that they could never hope to hold office by the suffrage of the people, and with no conception of, or sympathy with, the fundamental principles of the Democratic Party, have fastened their vampirelike clutches upon its body and are seeking to suck its lifeblood.

In the late purge campaign against me the same charge was made, and both charges bear the earmarks of the same source. I replied to and refuted that charge in my campaign, citing my actual votes on bona fide labor measures, and no one thereafter in that campaign attempted to challenge the accuracy of my statement. I mentioned that I had voted for the Anti-Injunction Act, the Social Security Act, the longand-short-haul bill, the Railroad Retirement Act on every occasion when it was before the House, and other measures of vital interest to labor. And yet the lady from New Jersey is induced to state that I never voted for a measure in the interest of labor.

I voted against the Guffey Coal Act, which did not affect a single laborer in my district except to raise the price of every ton of coal he bought, and incidentally raise the price to every other consumer of coal. That vote is justified by the fact that after a brief and useless existence the Board has been abolished and such minor functions as are now being performed have been transferred to another bureau. The whole act was admittedly a dismal failure, and the country and the industry would have been better off had it never become law.

I voted against the wage-hour law, knowing that it would work untold injustice and hardship on small industries, on unorganized workers, and on many branches of agricultural pursuits. The overwhelming clamor in this body today for amendments to the act, after less than 1 year of operation, more than justifies the fears I expressed in speaking against the measure.

I do not claim a record of 100-percent obedience to the demands of labor or of any other special group.

Members of this body come here to represent the interests of all of the people.

To boast of utter subservience to the demands of any minority pressure group is to boast of failure to perform

When I leave this place I would rather have it said of me that I had the fortitude to resist the pressure of all such interests than to have it said that I stood, ever faltering and fawning, ready to "bend the pregnant hinges of the knee" at the nod and whim of any group that might threaten me with political reprisal. [Applause.]

I know that is not the philosophy of the little group of self-appointed, self-anointed liberals. I believe in a liberal government but of the kind exemplified by the doctrines of Jefferson; a liberality that accords to all groups an equal opportunity under the law, to work out their own destiny, with special privileges to neither the rich nor the poor, to neither organized minorities of voters, nor to organized wealth-demanding special privileges. I believe in the Jeffersonian liberality that included a broad and liberal tolerance of the views of others with whom we may not agree; according them the same freedom of thought and action which we claim for ourselves.

I do not care to aline myself with that school of liberal thought which manifests itself solely in a prodigal liberality with other people's money and with other people's liberties, and which denounces as reactionaries and Tories all who dare to disagree.

In my service here, I try to reflect as best I can the sentiment and the philosophy of the great people of my district who send me here. Those people spring from an ancestry whose roots are imbedded in the very foundations of the Republic.

Reared in this background, my constituents and I find it difficult at times to break away from the moorings which have held so firmly and securely through the storms and and vicissitudes in the past.

It is idle today to debate the question of which philosophy is right and which is wrong. Only in the distant perspective of time can the true answer be written.

Only the generations that are to follow us, shackled with the burdens we have placed upon them, or, if you please, freed from the chains of an antiquated system of government, can properly appraise the work of this and preceding Congresses.

I am content to rest my case with the assertion that while here I shall continue to exercise the best judgment that I possess in advocating what I believe to be in the best interest of the whole people, and to—

Let historians of tomorrow say Who best served God and man today.

[Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Colmer].

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr Brown].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the real issue here is with respect to the 600,000 bales of cotton to be delivered to England when England calls for it in exchange for rubber. So the argument presented by the distinguished statesman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford] is not germane. The question of storage rates is not a problem for us to consider in connection with this measure. The warchouse rates were fixed in the laws passed by the Congress last year and, I believe, in 1935. These bills came from the Committee on Agriculture, the proper committee to consider legislation of this type.

Mr. Speaker, it is necessary that this bill be enacted into law to enable the Government to carry out the treaty obligation entered into with Great Britain for the exchange of 600,000 bales of cotton for rubber. Therefore it is necessary to give to the Commodity Credit Corporation authority and powers to effect the exchange of agricultural commodities produced in the United States and held by it for strategic and critical materials produced abroad.

Conditions have arisen in many countries in connection with the production of substitutes for cotton that make it highly desirable for this Government to enter into barter agreements such as covered by this bill. The cotton-producing States are therefore thoroughly in accord with and heartily embrace the purpose back of this bill. We have lost a great deal of our export trade in cotton and have a large surplus of cotton on hand now. This barter agreement and others to follow will materially assist us in regaining our foreign markets for cotton.

The actual operation of the Government loans has for its purpose to stabilize the price for the producer, and has not resulted in any substantial loss to the Government. The Banking and Currency Committee of the House reported favorably the bill S. 2697, with the following amendment:

In determining specific cotton to be exchanged under this act, the determination shall be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton is stored on the date of enactment of this act, and no cotton shall be exchanged which, after such date, is transported to another place and there sampled and selected.

This amendment is not intended to hamper the barter agreement in any particular and was adopted by the committee for the reason that it is definitely known now that it is the plan and design of the Commodity Credit Corporation to move at least 2,000,000 bales from the present interior locations prior to any knowledge as to whether or not such cotton will meet the demands of England or will be suitable for exchange under the barter agreement or whether or not the port location will be the one agreed upon by England.

In order to show the necessity for this amendment, I desire to briefly analyze the barter agreement. It requires:

First, that delivery of the cotton compressed to high density must be made on board ship.

Second, the delivery must be made at New Orleans and at other Gulf and Atlantic ports to be agreed upon between the two governments.

Interior cotton is uncompressed and located close to domestic mills, where it has a greater value, whereas port cotton in most cases is compressed to high density.

The mere statement of the terms with respect to the port of delivery should indicate to any reasonable person that the cotton should not be moved from its present locations until some information is available to this Government as to what ports England might suggest or desire to use.

Article 1 (C) of the barter agreement obligates this Government to make delivery at the warehouse at the port of sailing with free delivery on board ship within 15 days after inspection and acceptance by England. From my knowledge of the cotton business, I know that the port of sailing will change with the shipping needs and demands of the English Government. I also know that cotton in its present interior locations can be handled to any port of sailing after inspection and acceptance within 5 days after shipping orders are given to the interior warehouses. I therefore say that the only safe way for this Government to undertake to fulfill the terms of the barter agreement is to class the cotton at its present locations and to use the samples thus obained for inspection by the Government of England. After acceptance the cotton will then be available for immediate shipment to any port of sailing designated by England, without involving this Government in the wasteful and uneconomic practice of forwarding the cotton to one port without regard for whether or not that will in fact be the port of sailing.

This amendment will require the Commodity Credit Corporation to ascertain the grade and staple of cotton at its present location so that these contingencies may be met prior to a blundering movement of the cotton to just any port when the Corporation might desire to favor some port warehouse with some storage business.

Article 1 of the barter agreement provides for the exchange of 600,000 bales of raw cotton for rubber and specifically provides that the grades and staples will be specified by the Government of England. The proposition to move 2,000,000 or more bales of cotton to port locations prior to the specification of the grades and staple by the Government of England is unsound, unreasonable, and very expensive. [Applause.] Therefore, the committee adopted this amendment which requires the Commodity Credit Corporation to ascertain the grade and staple of the cotton at its present locations and then, when they learn what grades and staples will be specified by the Government of England, they may with all the freedom in the world move adequate quantities of that grade and staple to such port locations as England may designate for delivery on board ship.

Your particular attention is directed to article 1 (B) of the barter agreement. It is there stated that experts representing the Government of the United Kingdom will inspect and determine the classification of the cotton in accordance with the universal cotton standards for grade and the official standards of the United States for staple. All Members of Congress familiar with the handling of cotton know that this inspection will be on samples taken from the actual bale of cotton. This is the universal practice in the marketing and handling of the cotton. This amendment requires the Commodity Credit Corporation to ascertain the grade and staple, which they will do from samples. Those samples will then be available for inspection by the representatives of England. When England has made its selections from the samples thus made available, there will be ample opportunity to move the cotton from its present locations to the ports designated by England. This is the way a cotton merchant would handle his business. It is certainly the way the Government should handle its business.

Article 1 (B) of the barter agreement provides that experts appointed by the Government of the United Kingdom will accept the cotton. This, too, will be done on samples, and therefore it is important for the Commodity Credit Corporation to not only have the cotton graded and stapled, but it will be necessary to have the samples available for such acceptance by the experts representing the United Kingdom.

This amendment not only will provide for such method of handling the cotton but will require the Commodity Credit Corporation to immediately prepare itself so that the exchange may be made according to the terms and provisions of the barter agreement.

I particularly direct your attention to the provision of article 1 (B) of the barter agreement that disputes will be determined by boards of referees. This Government should have its own official classification of the cotton prior to the inspection and acceptance of the cotton by Great Britain so that it may be in position to protect itself with respect to any such disputes that might be submitted to a board of arbitration.

I understand it has been said that this Government cannot class the cotton because the period of time is too short. To that objection I answer that it will not take this Government any longer to classify the cotton than it would some independent agency other than the Government.

Article 1 (C) of the barter agreement provides that samples will be made available covering the grades and staples specified by England. What this Government is proposing to do, in order to meet that requirement, is to move 2,000,000 or more bales of cotton to port locations prior to any knowledge as to whether or not the port location will be the one desired and prior to any knowledge as to what grades and staples might be specified by the Government of England.

The amendment requires the Commodity Credit Corporation to sample the cotton at its present locations, grade and staple the cotton, then to tender the samples to the representatives of England on the grades and staples which they do specify, and then to handle only the cotton which is accepted by England under the exchange agreement.

The inspection and acceptance is to be during a 6-month period beginning 15 days subsequent to the effective date of the barter arrangement with Great Britain. The effective date, of course, will be after the President has completed the treaty arrangement with Great Britain. In the meantime the Commodity Credit Corporation should be prepared to meet the terms of the agreement, and this amendment requires them to obtain the essential information that will make certain that this Government will be in position to meet the terms of the agreement.

The amendment will not in any way interfere with the exchange agreement. To the contrary, it will facilitate and make possible the orderly exchange of cotton for rubber and in this connection I desire to call your attention to the following facts:

The first loan was the loan made during the season 1934-35, which had as a basic loan value 12 cents per pound for Middling seven-eighths cotton. The Government received into that loan 5,008,000 bales of cotton. There were no loans during 1936 and 1937. The loan stock for the season 1934-35 was by the 1937 season reduced to 1,665,000 bales of cotton. Most of the cotton was sold by withdrawals from the loan without loss to this Government. Substantial quantities were delivered to the relief agencies of the Nation. There are only 1,662,710 bales remaining of the old 1934-35 12-cent-loan cotton. The remainder of the 11,419,000 bales now held in Government loans is the cotton placed in the loan during the 1937-38 season and the 1938-39 season. The 1937-38 loan was on the basis of 9 cents per pound for Middling seven-eighths cotton. The 1938-39 loan was fixed at 8.30 cents per pound for Middling seven-eighths cotton. The average market value today at the 10 spot markets in the United States is 9.35 cents per pound for Middling seveneighths cotton. It is therefore obvious that the Government is not going to dispose of any cotton at a loss under the barter arrangement. As a matter of fact, cotton is being rapidly withdrawn from the loan by producers and sold at a small profit over the loan value.

There are 6,943,011 bales held by the Government in the 1934-35 and 1937-38 loans, located as follows:

	Bales
At ports	1, 247, 405
At interior locations	5, 695, 606

I am definitely informed that this is the cotton that will be involved in the exchange agreement. Your particular attention is called to the fact that the barter agreement specifies New Orleans, La., as the preferred port of delivery, and lists other Gulf ports and Atlantic deep-water ports as secondary ports of consideration. For your information, there are now available for the immediate classification by the Commodity Credit Corporation 199,462 bales at the port of New Orleans. There are located at the nearby Texas ports 687,701 bales; and at Mississippi ports 37,449 bales, making a total of 924,612 bales within the immediate territory where the delivery will probably be effected. The remainder of the 1,247,405 bales at port locations is located at ports scattered from California to Norfolk, Va., as follows:

	Bales
California	93, 218
Georgia	122, 174
Florida	3, 118
North Carolina	7, 829
South Carolina	24, 463
Virginia	21, 107

It ought to be obvious that, should the barter agreement be made effective in the morning, there are 924,000 bales immediately available to the Commodity Credit Corporation for immediate tender to the British Government.

The amendment requires the Commodity Credit Corporation to immediately place itself in position to properly handle the exchange agreement. It does not in any way prohibit the reconcentration of cotton or require the proration of it as between territories and communities.

Why would any representative of this Government desire to move cotton to the ports which is not suitable for exchange under the agreement? Why would any representative of this Government want to move quantities to the ports which are not necessary to complete delivery?

We should not permit the issue of storage rates to confuse the real matter confronting us in connection with the movement of this cotton. I submit that the amendment provides the machinery whereby the Government may properly equip itself to perform the terms of the agreement, and any objection to the amendment must therefore be founded upon grounds other than the obligation to meet the terms of the exchange arrangement with England. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I wish to say just one word further. It is true that a great deal of this cotton is now compressed, and it does not cost as much to store compressed cotton, which makes a package about one-third the size of the average bale of cotton. The average price today, I would say, or the average warehouse fee, is 18 cents per bale per month, including insurance. Years ago the price was as much as 30 cents, or even more. It has been reduced from 25 cents to 18 cents within the past year in the interior points, and at port locations you have a charge, I believe, on the average of 13 cents. The price there is lower for the reason that most of the cotton they handle is compressed.

Besides, we want to supply North Carolina as her mills take 1,666,000 bales annually; South Carolina with a smaller amount; and Georgia and the other States of the South that have manufacturing enterprises at this time.

It is not necessary to take this cotton from the interior warehouses until it is needed.

The producer of cotton has a right to look at his cotton whenever he desires, as the title is in him, and he should not be deprived of this right by sending the cotton a thousand miles away to some other warehouse when the cotton is not needed to carry out the barter agreement. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question. The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 2697, to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 2697, with Mr. Sparkman in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this bill is to provide for the delivery of 600,000 bales of cotton now covered by Government loans in settlement of a treaty agreement with Great Britain by which we are to exchange this amount of cotton for rubber of equivalent value? In considering the bill, the Banking and Currency Committee approached the matter with a view of accomplishing the purpose of the bill-to provide for the delivery of the cotton under the treaty contract. There are stored throughout the country in the various warehouses 11,000,000 bales of cotton, plus. Such loans were made by the Government on cotton, the question of storage has been one to be considered by the Commodity Credit Corporation, and by the farmers who produced the cotton and by the legislative branch of the Government. Because of controversy betwen interior and port warehousemen, I do not wish to be understood as approaching this subject from the standpoint of the controversy between the two groups of warehousemen. It was the purpose of the Banking and Currency Committee to avoid entering the controversy with reference to the storage of this cotton. If we could have done so, we would have reported this bill without the slightest reference to the matter of concentration in warehouses or any remote reference to that matter, but here is the situation. The controversy over the storage of the cotton reached the point where the Congress decided to pass legislation on the subject and various measures were enacted. It was the purpose of the Committee on Banking and Currency to leave the law on the subject of cotton storage as nearly as might be precisely as we found it, but it became manifest that under the provisions of the bill requiring the delivery of cotton to Great Britain, the matter of storage had to be dealt with, if we were not to risk repealing or setting aside the existing law on the subject of the storage of cotton, upon which the Government had made loans.

I shall trace that controversy briefly in order that Members may understand its history. This cotton, of course, was originally stored in warehouses in the cotton-growing sections of the country and in interior warehouses—some of the warehouses are owned by cotton farmers and farmer cooperatives. It developed that a limited number of large cotton exporters and warehousemen sought to secure the concentration of cotton in the larger warehouses and at maritime ports. Naturally the interior warehousemen and cotton growers felt that the cotton should be left where it was produced, where the farmers who grew the cotton could see it and inspect it in person whenever grading and classification and stapling were to take place. Finally the Congress passed an act providing that the cotton could not be moved from concentration in the port warehouses without the written consent of the growers producing the cotton. Following the passage of that act it developed that the Commodity Credit Corporation adopted the practice of including in contracts of loans to individual borrowers an agreement in writing that the cotton might be reconcentrated. Later the Congress passed an amendment to that act providing that cotton could not be reconcentrated without the written consent of the cotton growers and such to be given, in a separate contract agreement in writing, permitting its transfer for reconcentration. Another amendment was adopted by providing that the Corporation might reconcentrate cotton when local warehouses did not have adequate storage facilities, or where cotton was not insured or in cases where substantially lower storage rates were offered, unless such rates were met by local warehouses. It is this law that the Banking and Currency Committee is trying to preserve.

It is our desire to prevent the use of the pending measure, the sole legitimate purpose of which is to accomplish the transfer of this cotton to Great Britain, to be employed as an instrumentality by which the former enactment of Congress may be nullified, and that is all there is in this controversy. That legislation was passed, after the matter had been in controversy for years, and represents deliberate and repeated action by Congress. Not only is that true, but in 1935, as I remember-I am not so sure at the moment as to the date-an act was passed by the Senate to prevent reconcentration of this cotton. The measure was approved by the House and the bill went to conference. The conference was dragging into the closing hours of the session, and a one-man filibuster in the Senate prevented the final adoption of the conference report embodying that legislation as it had been passed by both Houses. But notwithstanding the action of both Houses on that matter, notwithstanding the specific declaration of the legislative purpose with respect to reconcentration of cotton, the authorities in charge of the matter continued their practice of reconcentration, in the face of the express will of both Houses of Congress as contained in the legislation which finally failed of passage because of failure to adopt the conference report in the midst of a filibuster.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes; I take pleasure in yielding to the gentleman.

Mr. RICH. What is the object of Congress trying to tell the farmer how much cotton he can grow, what price he is going to get for his cotton, where he is going to store the cotton, who is going to be responsible for storing it? Does not the gentleman think the farmers of this country who raise the cotton ought to have something to say about what is going to happen to their product, instead of Congress trying to regulate everything, even to the movement of a bale of cotton and what happens to it?

Mr. STEAGALL. If the gentleman would like to have the answer, I would gladly give it to him. We are fighting now to preserve to the farmers of the cotton-growing sections the right to have a little say about where their cotton shall be stored until it is finally classed and ready for final disposition.

Mr. RICH. Well, it seems that with all the regulation we are going into now, as far as the Government is concerned, that we are going away beyond the pale of common sense and good business, and we are never going to help the cotton farmer the way we are trying to regulate not only the farmer himself but everything the farmer does.

Mr. STEAGALL. If the gentleman will follow his philosophy when he votes on this bill he will vote for it as reported by the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, because it is not our purpose in dealing with this matter to legislate further about where cotton shall be stored or where it shall be reconcentrated. What we are fighting for is to leave that matter where it has been settled by repeated acts of the legislative branch of the Government.

Now, let me answer the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD], my friend, for whom I have an affectionate regard. The gentleman has a brilliant mind, but let us not allow him to get too keen for us on this bill. The gentleman says he wants to deal only with cotton that is owned by the Government. I call attention to the fact that under the contracts entered into between the farmers and the Commodity Credit Corporation, the day loans become delinguent the Commodity Credit Corporation has the power to declare them in default, and automatically vest title in the Government. It would be possible, if the gentleman's amendment were adopted, for the Commodity Credit Corporation to declare all of these loans in default except the 1938 cotton that we have on hand, and automatically vest title in the Government, and in that way they would be able to move some seven or eight million bales of this cotton to port warehouses for reconcentration. I do not charge that this would be done, but it could be done.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. STEAGALL. Let me proceed a little further. You will have more time when the bill is reached for amend-

That is the situation. They have the power to declare the ownership of the cotton in the Government when they get ready. The gentleman offered an amendment in the committee which restricted its application to cotton to be delivered under the provisions of this bill. But the amendment which the gentleman read to the Rules Committee. and which I apprehend he will offer here, would fully nullify existing law in every requirement and permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to reconcentrate all of this cotton, to which they could acquire title automatically by declaring the loan in default and reconcentrate it in port warehouses.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Did I understand the gentleman to say that I offered an amendment which applied only to the 600,-000 bales covered by the agreement?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I did not offer any such amendment.

Mr. STEAGALL. I think the gentleman is mistaken. If the gentleman will remember, upon reading his amendment at first I questioned that its application would be limited to cotton to be delivered under this bill, but upon rereading I agreed that it referred to cotton to be delivered under this act. I then agreed that it applied only to cotton under this proposal and I so stated to the committee. But the amendment the gentleman read in the Rules Committee left out the language "this act," so that if the gentleman offers that amendment here it will apply to all cotton in all warehouses upon which the Government has loans and then the Corporation can automatically foreclose and acquire title and reconcentrate. That is unquestionably true.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. BROWN. I think the gentleman from Alabama is mistaken. The gentleman so understood it and stated it, but the amendment which the gentleman from Michigan offered before the committee is the same amendment he is offering today.

Mr. STEAGALL. I am in error, if the gentleman is correct. It is a matter of recollection. If the gentleman from Georgia has the same recollection as the gentleman from Michigan. I will not insist upon my recollection as against both of my friends, but my understanding of the gentleman's amendment was as I have stated and in its consideration we did give it that interpretation.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I accept the Chairman's statement in correcting his previous statement and I was just going to let the amendment speak for itself, because it is the exact amendment I offered in the committee.

Mr. STEAGALL. Pardon me, the gentleman means he has the exact amendment he offered in the committee?

Mr. CRAWFORD. The exact amendment, a copy of which I offered in the committee; and in no way do I want my amendment to apply to cotton owned or held by any other than the Government of the United States or its agencies, now or at any other time. I am dealing strictly with cotton the ownership of which is held by the Government.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is what I understood. Under that provision the Government can automatically acquire title to all the 11,000,000 bales of cotton tomorrow, except loans on 1938 cotton, because the loans are past due and under the gentleman's amendment it could be reconcentrated in port warehouses, and I expect that that is what the gentleman favors.

We should not go back to revise the law and set aside the former enactments of Congress in order to pass a bill for the delivery of cotton under this barter agreement.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. STEAGALL. I have more points I want to cover. I cannot yield now, if my friend will pardon me.

Mr. Chairman, when this matter was first brought to our attention we were confronted with the argument that Great Britain would send representatives to select this cotton and participate in its classification, and that if we required this cotton to be classed and selected from interior warehouses they would have to go to the warehouses in the interior section of the country and examine every individual bale of cotton.

I do not understand that that argument has been submitted here so far, but if it is I want to answer it now. That is contrary to the universal practice in the marketing of cotton that has obtained throughout the lifetime of every man within the sound of my voice. Cotton is always sold by samples. This is the provision of the treaty dealing specifically with the manner in which transactions are to be conducted. Not only is that true, but I read subsection (c) of article I of the treaty itself. Listen to this:

Samples representing the cotton of the grades and staple specified by the Government of the United States will be made available for inspection and acceptance during a period of 6 months beginning 15 days after the entering into of this agreement, and such inspection shall be made within a reasonable time after the cotton is so

The Corporation has 6 months within which to deliver this cotton. Let me say to anybody who does not know how cotton is marketed in rural communities that farmers in Georgia or Alabama do not come to town with cotton on wagons and drive up to a buyer to show the cotton in bales.

They take samples from either side of the bales of cotton. The samples are taken through the towns to the different buyers, and the cotton is sold on such samples. There are criminal provisions in the statutes of the various cottongrowing States making it a crime for a farmer to exhibit a sample that is not genuine; and, of course, in the export of cotton it is sold on the basis of certain classifications and staples. The cotton is handled on that basis, and if it does not come up to the grades or the staples or the weights, reclamations are made upon the shipper and the matter is adjusted. All this is carried on under the customs of the trade.

Let me say further that Great Britain stipulates in this agreement to keep this cotton in storage for 7 years unless it is needed for war purposes. If it is not needed for war purposes, of course, they are not going to burn it in order that more cotton may be sold from the cotton-growing sections of the world; so when Great Britain takes this cotton she is going to take cotton that is marketable under the customs of trade with the spinners of Great Britain. That means that when they come here to get this cotton they are not going to take 600,000 bales of cotton of one grade, or classification, or staple. They have intimated, so I am told, that they want cotton that measures up to seven-eighths staple and Middling grade. As those know who are familiar with the handling of cotton, there are many grades. They are not going to say they want all above a certain grade. They have many grades from which to select if they do not go below seven-eighths staple and Middling cotton. So there is no likelihood that Great Britain will come here demanding 600,000 bales of cotton of one staple and one grade; and I do not believe that any sane man expects that to be done. Unless this cotton that she takes is actually used for war purposes, it will be turned back into the markets of the world, just as has been done for 100 years by the people of this country. This being the case there is not any reason for the view that we have got to take four or five bales of cotton in order to get one bale of a specified grade, and then take four or five more bales to get another bale of that same classification and staple. Not a man here believes that in order to get 600,000 bales of cotton it will be necessary to move 2,500,000 bales. That is not the case. There is not a man here who understands anything about the cotton business who does not know that what I am stating is the truth. It is not going to happen, that is not the way the cotton trade of the world is carried on.

They have in the port warehouses 1,250,000 bales of cotton, in round numbers. From that cotton the officers of the Commodity Credit Corporation tell us they can get something like 250,000 to 300,000 bales. Later on I think they said they could get 100,000 bales, but they stated to me that if they went to the interior to get cotton to replenish the supply out of which to get the proportion necessary to make up the 600,000 bales they would move cotton from the interior to the port warehouses. To fill the other 500,000 bales called for under the treaty they would move from the interior to the port warehouses 1,500,000 bales. This would mean that after the 500,000 bales were reconcentrated to fill the contract the other 1,000,000 bales would have to be stored in the port warehouses. This is not necessary. It is all foolishness to talk about that. They simply will not have to do it.

Mr. Chairman, there is not the slightest danger that the Corporation will be unable to deliver the cotton necessary to fill this contract. Nobody need be alarmed about that. We Members who have these matters to deal with understand these things. The officials want unlimited discretion, but we do not have to give it to them when it is not needed.

Mr. Chairman, do not be misled by the argument that this is nothing but a quarrel between warehouses. I am pleading for the right of the farmers who grow the cotton not to be entirely ignored and forgotten in this legislation. Unless they want the cotton moved and so long as they have at least nominal title to it, they should have the right to say where it shall be stored and have an opportunity to take part in its inspection and classification. They are the people who were considered by those who enacted this legislation, so that this cotton cannot be concentrated at the maritime ports of the country without the consent of the farmers.

I want to discuss one other point in answer to the gentleman from Michigan. The gentleman talks about the cost of the storage of this cotton, and I call his attention to the present law. This goes to the heart of the whole proposition. It provides for the written consent of the farmer, and so forth, and then has the following proviso:

Provided, That in cases where there is congestion and lack of storage facilities, and the local warehouse certifies such fact and requests the Commodity Credit Corporation to move the cotton for reconcentration to some other point—or when the Commodity Credit Corporation determines such loan cotton is improperly warehoused and subject to damage, or if uninsured, or if any of the terms of the loan agreement are violated, or if carrying charges are substantially in excess of the average of carrying charges available elsewhere, and the local warehouse, after notice, declines to reduce such charges, such written consent as provided in this amendment need not be obtained.

I want to ask the gentleman from Michigan who is to blame if cotton is being stored under this law at charges substantially higher than those that can be obtained elsewhere? It is purely a matter of administration under the law. If the Commodity Credit Corporation can find a warehouse properly equipped to store the cotton and insure it that will carry a substantially reduced rate, it is the duty of the Corporation, and economic management requires under existing law, that it reconcentrate the cotton in warehouses that offer the reduced charges, unless the original warehouseman will reduce his charge to meet the competitive rate. So, if the gentleman is so insistent upon vesting unrestricted authority in the Commodity Credit Corporation, a power that would permit them to set aside the solemn act of Congress in dealing with this matter of reconcentration, I call his attention to the fact they have the power under existing law to reconcentrate this cotton in order to meet a competitive charge.

Mr. DARDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.
Mr. DARDEN. The thing that troubles me about this amendment is this: If cotton is once moved, does it not become ineligible under the terms of this act for delivery to Great Britain? I mean if it moves from one point to another?

Mr. STEAGALL. I get the gentleman's point. Here is what we have undertaken to do under the bill. They said they were going to deliver 250,000 or 300,000 bales of cotton from the ports. In undertaking to deal with the matter and to prevent nullification of existing law-and that is all we had in mind—we have provided that they should not use in delivery any cotton that is not graded at the warehouse in which it is stored at the time of the passage of this act. That means that in order to get the additional cotton needed to supplement what they have at the ports, they may go to the interior warehouses, but they cannot remove cotton from there to the port warehouses to be selected for delivery, but must grade, sample, and select it in the interior warehouses. Some of this cotton is stored in warehouses that are bonded. They are bonded not only for the delivery of the cotton but they are bonded to guarantee the weight, the staple, and the grades, and the warehouses are not going to risk liability on their bonds by overvaluing, overgrading, or overstapling the cotton that they certify under their bonds for Government

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time,

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I suppose contemporary history ought to be studied much as one solves a jigsaw puzzle. You take a part here and you take a part there and put them all together and ultimately it makes a design. I want to do that briefly with reference to this whole matter of barter agreements rather than deal with the mechanics of the pending bill.

It is only normal, of course, when we have a surplus supply of lard, cotton, wheat, grain, and other agricultural commodities, that there is a great urge to find a market for them, and, as a result, the country has been giving some attention to the barter agreements. But what interests me about the whole barter system, as we are seeking to apply it, is the genesis of the deal.

In April 1939 you will remember that the mythical White House spokesmen denounced all forms of barter agreements. That is only 4 months ago. At the same time the Secretary of State denounced the German system of barter as destructive of all forms of foreign trade. Then on April 10 came the announcement from Senator Byrnes of a proposed barter agreement, whereby we would swap cotton for English rubber and, oddly enough, the President of the United States, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of State fell in with the idea, despite the denunciations we had had only a few days before. The barter arrangement was consummated by a treaty which has been confirmed by the Senate and the pending bill merely provides the authority for carrying out the details of the agreement.

An interesting thing about this barter agreement is section 4. It recites the following:

The intention of the Government of the United States and the Government of the United Kingdom being to acquire reserves of cotton and rubber respectively against the contingency of a major war emergency, each Government undertakes not to dispose of its stock (otherwise than for purposes of replacing such stocks by equivalent quantities insofar as may be expedient for preventing deterioration) except in the event of such an emergency

That can be modified only by consultation, and in no event can it be changed for 7 years.

I remember the announcement of this so-called barter deal in April. People heralded the idea everywhere. They thought it was going to have a great impact upon the farm economy of the country. I wonder if anyone can demonstrate what value there is in this kind of a barter agreement, when you take rubber out of an English warehouse and put it in a warehouse over here and take cotton out of a warehouse here and put it in a warehouse over there. You have not in any way diminished the visible supply. The overhang and the depressant effect of the overhang is still there. If the producers of and dealers in cotton still believe there is going to be great virtue and agricultural benefit in this barter deal, let me quote from a trade brochure dated July 21, 1939, and issued by Laird, Bissell & Meeds, cotton brokers, of New York:

Among the recent developments has been the closing of the barter arrangement with the British Government calling for the interchange of 600,000 bales of cotton for rubber. It probably will require the passage of the Byrnes measure to make the cotton available, and, while there has been some opposition to this, administration circles are confident of its adoption. In view of the fact that the agreement commits both Governments to withhold the release of these commodities for 7 years, the trade in analyzing the effect of the barter arrangement, has discarded this as an important price influence.

The cotton trade has therefore discarded the effect of this barter arrangement as a price influence because the agreement prevents the liquidation of these stocks for at least 7 years unless a major war contingency should intervene. A barter arrangement whereby there might be liquidation and consumption of the commodities which are exchanged might, and probably would, have a salutary price effect. Such, however, is not the case with respect to this agreement.

In April of this year the President and the Secretary of State, after first denouncing the barter system, shortly thereafter gave assent and approval to a limited barter system with countries which were not affiliated with the so-called totalitarian powers nor with the totalitarian or axis countries. This means, of course, that no barter agreements would be negotiated with Italy and Germany. That is most interesting and significant. It is interesting because a group of Members of this House from the South, the West, and the North have been meeting together to determine on some plan that might aid the distressed farmers of the Nation and find a market or outlet for our vast surplus of farm commodities.

In that connection may I say that only on Saturday night of last week a group of Members met at the Raleigh Hotel in the interest of the farm problem and falling prices and adopted a resolution. This is the language of the resolution, which memorializes the Secretary of State:

That the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to permit the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities for German goods now on the free list without the imposition

How far would that proposal get in the light of what the President said—that he was in favor of a barter agreement so long as it did not take place between this country and a totalitarian country or one affiliated with the axis countries?

Here were a score of Members of Congress sitting in solemn conclave on Saturday night of last week at the Raleigh Hotel, hoping fervently that we might divorce this whole problem of barter from diplomacy, from statecraft, and all the other things in which it is enshrouded, and find trade and business anywhere it might be found. With vast supplies of corn and pork coming on to be added to the already burdensome supply and low prices, our farmers are more interested in markets than they are in hating people. It is a rather expensive kind of hate when it is realized that these countries could use two hundred or three hundred million pounds of our fats and oils and that they do not now purchase any of these from this country.

What did the Secretary of State say about it? On the 27th of July the New York Journal of Commerce indicates him as taking the stand that one of the suggestions of export sales to Germany has been definitely rejected. If barter is good for one country, it is good for another. I do not care where they find markets. If an axis country is willing to take 100.000.000 pounds of lard, which is quoted on the Chicago market today at 51/2 cents, the lowest in 70 years, then neither the President nor the Secretary of State should adopt such an unneutral attitude as was expressed in the April statement by the mythical White House spokesman that they are willing to barter with other countries for the disposal of our surplus commodities from this country, but they must be selected countries, and the barter must be done on a basis that prevents the use and consumption of these surplus farm commodities. For the moment, markets are the important thing, and if other nations will not relent in their trade practices, then we must meet their competition with whatever weapons are at our command. In this connection, let me insert the article which appeared in the New York Journal of Commerce this morning, because it is most apropos and significant:

[From the New York Journal of Commerce of July 27, 1939] PROGRAM IS SOUGHT TO REMOVE SURPLUS OIL AND FAT STOCKS— CONGRESS BLOC SEEKS AID FROM BUREAUS—REICH BARTER DEAL BARRED

Washington, July 26.—With tremendous surpluses of domestic oils and fats building up in the United States, the Washington Government was today seen faced with a most serious situation necessitating some sort of Federal aid to the producers in the finding of additional markets, as legislators explored various approaches with officials of the Departments of Agriculture, State, and Treasury.

Several conferences were held at the Department of Agriculture and the Capitol, and tomorrow Secretary Wallace will take up with his experts the various plans that have been outlined as providing means for dealing with the situation. They also will report back to the congressional oils-and-fats bloc tomorrow afternoon.

One of the suggestions—that of export sales to Germany—was definitely rejected by the administration today. State Department officials turned thumbs down on any barter deal with the Reich, despite the fact that it was declared to them that this was perhaps the only way by which that Government could take the additional large quantities of these products.

HULL SILENT ON PROPOSALS

Members of the bloc admitted that prospects for the expansion of export trade were not very bright, following the conferences, but they did feel that there might be some increase in lard shipments to Cuba and the United Kingdom this year.

Secretary of State Hull, at his press conference this noon, while avoiding comment upon the propositions presented to Secretary Wallace, gave newspaper correspondents the impression that he considered export subsidies justifiable in emergencies, while pointing out that so long as there is political unrest in Europe, situations now complained of will continue.

The attention of officials was called to early afternoon reports that Secretary Hull was opposed to emergency use of subsidies to influence our exports. It was declared that there was nothing in the brief, although rather confusing statements of the State Department head, that would justify such an interpretation.

He explained that he had only then heard of the meeting of the congressional delegation with Mr. Wallace, adding that he preferred to await the presentation to him of such plans as the legislators may have in mind before expressing himself publicly. In passing he declared that "we will continue for an indefinite time to have serious repercussions, especially from Europe, on our domestic situations."

USES FUNDS FOR ARMS

He reiterated that Europe is using all the money that can be acquired for the purpose of increasing armaments and for further preparations for war, all of which, he commented, constitutes an unproductive process and keeps business in suspension in Europe and in this country. It dries up the purchasing power of Europe and in this country. It dries up the purchasing power of Europe for necessary subsistence commodities such as oils and fats.

It was apparent that he considered that no matter what is done, even to meet a temporary situation, the disruptions to our trade and the ill effect upon our price structure and consequently upon our whole domestic economy, will continue until such time as Europe reaches a more normal condition where it can once more above our expects. more absorb our exports.

Commenting on the conference he held this morning with close to 40 Congressmen from Southern States, Secretary Wallace said that he had no idea at this time what will be done in an effort to relieve the situation because of its magnitude. He said that while relieve the situation because of its magnitude. He said that while the group that called were interested in the price of cottonseed oil, they felt that the solution to the problem would come in a large degree through removal of lard stocks.

The Secretary explained that indications pointed to a surplus of edible oils and fats in the United States this year of about 500,000,000 pounds. He added that it would take several removal plans to take care of these large stocks, and stated that a program would not necessarily concentrate on lard alone.

Suggestions broached to the department, Mr. Wallace said, included export subsidy for lard, surplus purchases through the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, placing the product on the surplus list for purchases under the stamp plan and barter agreements with Germany and any other countries.

FUTURES ADVANCE

Both lard and cottonseed oil futures have advanced sharply within the past 2 days on rumors that the Government intends to purchase large quantities of lard and cotton oil for relief purposes, grant a subsidy to encourage exports to Germany and other European countries, and possibly store quantities of cottonseed and the oil.

and the oil.

Prices on cotton oil rocketed 21 to 29 points shortly after the opening yesterday on short covering for domestic and foreign account. A large proportion of the gains were maintained until the end of the session. The majority of traders appeared to be awaiting developments in Washington before making commitments in either direction.

Lard futures were also firm and advanced 22 to 25 points during the early part of the session on active covering prompted by the news from Washington. Closing prices were 22 points higher on the active deliveries.

It is not so long ago that we had a reorganization bill on the floor. Do you remember when we had the reorganization bill here, and we transferred the Bureau of Foreign Commerce from the Department of Commerce to the State Department? I stated at that time that I did not like to see it go into the State Department, because international trade and international barter will very definitely be hooked up with considerations of diplomacy. Here we have it now in the form of a barter agreement made in the face of a possible military contingency, not to be changed in any respect until there has been mutual consultation, and then not for a space of at least

Finally it is provided in the barter agreement that if there should be anything that is in the nature of an export subsidy on cotton before the delivery under this agreement has been completed, we have to give to Great Britain the proportionate share that would be represented by the export subsidy. Examine that barter agreement and see whether it does the same thing for us with respect to rubber. You will not find it there. As a result, I am not so sure that we are going to find the full measure of benefit in a barter system unless we receive a complete measure of reciprocal treatment and find markets wherever we can, ranging through the world, for every commodity that may be regarded as surplus.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from California. Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Is the gentleman in favor of giving the Nazi government the advantage of an agreement such as this?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am in favor of finding a market for 500,000,000 pounds of oils and fats that are surplus in this country today. I do not care where we find it. [Applause.]

If we are to venture into the field of barter, let us divorce it from all considerations of diplomacy and attack the matter in a manner that does credit to the commercial shrewdness of this Nation. A little less hating and a little more bargaining may go far toward repairing the ruinous prices which now stare our farmers in the face on their surplus products. I am sure that such is the sentiment of a large number of members of this House from half the States of the Union, who are greatly disturbed by tobogganing prices, diminishing exports, curtailed markets, and new crops in the making.

We are not at war with these countries. We have a surplus. They have a shortage. Shall we permit our disapprobation of the things they have done stand in the way of an exchange of commodities which might be mutually advantageous and expand the export market for our vast surplus?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I have lengthy correspondence in my office, extending over several years, in an attempt to get for New England a little share of this cotton for storage. It has been shown today by previous speakers how shrewdly the people of the South have monopolized this storage. It is a strange thing, indeed, that where the cotton is to be actually consumed, where small amounts at a time are desirable to be of immediate availability, they have been unable to get a proper share of storage.

This bill is more important than appears on the surface. The Commodity Credit Corporation owns no cotton. It holds only the notes of the farmers and must take possession, although, as the chairman says, quite "automatically." I suppose there must be a little something done before seizure can be made, but they have lived under this pretense for a long time, holding the notes at par value, representing them to the country as assets in the full amount. Now, they say in their explanation that they will probably take over the 1934 cotton, the notes for which were at first renewed, but lately have been carried as overdue. They would take possession of that particular cotton and attempt the proposed exchange. Will the losses then be ascertained?

The point I wish to make is the proponents of this bill wish to take from the maritime ports what they have already in storage, and make doubly sure that none is taken from the interior to replace the amount so taken.

They may be very much mistaken. In view of the demands of the British people for the kind of cotton they will desire, we hardly think they will find half as much or one-third as much in the maritime ports as may be required. Can we not urge upon you southern people some little consideration for New England in these matters? We are drawing further and further apart in trying, apparently, to rob one section of the country for the benefit of the other.

Startling truths have appeared in the last few days in the papers of this country because of the speech made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Bates]. It is having its reverberations. While much of that story has often been told before, today the country was greatly informed by that speech and is awakening to what is being done to our part of the country to the great advantage of so many so-called backward States unable or unwilling to bear their proper share of public expense.

I plead for a decent regard for New England in the matter of this storage racket and ask that attention be paid to the amendments that will be offered by Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts providing that those places where cotton is consumed have a reasonable amount of storage granted to them.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman understand that in view of this barter agreement and its effectuation the Commodity Credit Corporation is now forced to take over title to approximately 6,346,000 bales of cotton?

Mr. GIFFORD. I do not; but, of course, they tell us they will go back to the first loans made and try to get rid of that particular cotton. Under this language, I want to say to the gentleman from Michigan, they "can procure, convey, transport, handle," and I do not know but that under this bill they may pay the cotton farmers a price that will take care of not only what they owe but even pay them a higher price and also assume all the expenses hereinbefore incurred. There seems to be a blanket authority here. The Commodity Credit Corporation does not yet own cotton, and you do not say that they must foreclose in order to get it. They may recover or they may purchase of the farmer at such prices as they may determine.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Thomas].

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I am not unmindful of the feeling that exists here on the floor of the House toward port warehouses. I think that feeling is based upon a misapprehension and upon misinformation. I think it is generally believed that, perhaps, the port warehouses have more or less received an unfair advantage in receiving more than their share of this loan cotton.

Mr. Chairman, that is not true. They have not received their fair share. Let me give you some figures: In the 1934–35 crop, for every bale that the port warehouses received, the interior warehouses, I want to say to my distinguished and genial friend from Georgia [Mr. Brown], received two bales; and in the 1937–38 crop, for every bale that the port warehouses received, the interior warehouses received seven.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. And is it not true that there are 25 times more interior warehouses than there are port warehouses? We have only a few port houses owned by big corporations.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Now, in a spirit of candor and frankness, without criticizing anybody, just let me give you the facts.

I do not like to disagree with my good friend from Alabama [Mr. Steagall], the chairman of the great Committee on Banking and Currency, but in my humble judgment the farmer has nothing to do with this. He is not interested in this matter as a practical matter. He has already lost title to it, and he is not going to redeem it; and to be perfectly frank about it, this is a fight between two strong groups, both subsidized right now by the Government. They are being subsidized at the expense of the farmer. Those two groups are the port warehouses and the interior warehouses. The cotton compressing and storage business is controlled throughout all of the Cotton States by a small handful of men.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Not at this time. Let me give you the picture that existed on this compressing and storage business in Texas prior to the time when the A. A. A. was heard of. In Texas, in the port towns of Houston, Galveston, Beaumont, Corpus Christi, and Brownsville, there had been built with private capital not subsidized by the Government warehouses that handled 75 percent of all of the cotton produced in Texas, because it was the cheapest way to handle it. Competitive business dictated it. The interior warehouses handled about 80 percent of compressing, not the storage, because they could compress it more cheaply in the interior; but when it was compressed it came on down for storage to the port towns, about 75 or 80 percent of it. That was under normal competitive conditions before the Government started subsidizing either group; but now since the Government is subsidizing warehouses, what is the picture? Instead of the port towns getting 75 or 80 percent of the storage they are getting only 20 or 25 percent of it, and the interior is getting 75 or 80 percent of it. All I want to do is to see it become even.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. Thomas F. Ford].

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, this seems to have simmered down to a battle between warehousemen, but what this House is interested in is the shipping to Europe 600,000 bales of cotton to relieve the present surplus. I hold no brief for either the interior or the port warehousemen, and when the matter came to our committee we undertook to place an amendment on the bill that would equalize the situation between the two of them. Under this bill 300,000 bales of cotton will be taken from the port warehouses and 300,000 bales of cotton from the interior warehouses. It is a 50-50 proposition, and I hope gentlemen will pass the bill and give us this perfectly fair measure to the cotton growers of the United States. We do not give a darn about the warehousemen but we are interested in the fellow that raises the cotton and is trying to sell it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. August H. Andresen].

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this bill and hope that it will pass without a great deal of opposition. I rose to make a few observations on how the cotton farmers can get rid of the other 11,500,000 bales, and also how the hog farmers and the other farmers growing surplus commodities may also get rid of their surpluses.

Six hundred thousand bales of cotton is just a drop in the bucket. We have around 12,000,000 bales of cotton under Government loans. By January 1 of next year I predict that if we have not disposed of some of our cotton in the export market, we will have at least 15,000,000 bales under loans. It costs the Government better than $45,000,000 a year to carry that cotton. What we representing the agricultural sections of the country are interested in, is to secure a price level that will restore the purchasing power to the farmers of the country. We cannot do that for either cotton or any other farm commodity if we have large visible supplies in this country overhanging the market and depressing domestic price levels.

Do you know that if we had passed an amendment which I offered to the monetary bill in April, we could have gotten rid of every bale of cotton at the market price, without any additional cost to the Government?

For the past 4 years the New Deal has fixed and maintained the world price on gold at $35 an ounce, as against the old historic price of $20.67 an ounce. The higher price fixed by the President has only been paid to foreign gold speculators and for newly-mined gold in this country. The result has been an accumulation by the United States Treasury of sixteen and a quarter billions of dollars worth of gold, nearly all of which is buried in the ground down in good old Kentucky. Of this large amount of gold, nearly 70 percent of the world's supply, more than $9,000,000,000 represents foreign gold purchases for which the Treasury has paid a premium of nearly $4,000,000,000—an outright gift to foreign gold speculators in 4 years' time.

Since the first of May our Federal Treasury, under orders of the President, has purchased $1,200,000,000 worth of foreign gold. We have paid foreigners a premium of $480,-000,000 for that gold. All of that premium, all of that money has gone to foreign gold speculators and international bankers. The amendment that I sought to have adopted as a part of the devaluation bill was to earmark the subsidy and compel these foreign speculators to use that subsidy of $14.33 an ounce to purchase manufactured and farm commodities produced in this country. If the foreign speculators did not use the gold subsidy for the purchase of American farm and manufactured products, they would only receive the old price of $20.67 and no subsidy. Four hundred and eighty million dollars in 4 months' time would have taken 80 percent of the cotton that we now have under Government loans, and we would have gotten rid of virtually all of it and raised the price of cotton for southern farmers.

The administration opposed my amendment because it was contrary to the good-neighbor policy of the United States, which policy consists in giving away our American market to foreign producers, and which further consists in playing Santa Claus to the people of other countries of the world and neglecting American farmers, laborers, and other producers in the United States.

It is about time we woke up and protected our American market for our own people. The condition for cotton, the condition for the rest of agriculture is lamentable. It will be worse tomorrow than it is today, because as long as we pursue a policy of giving advantage to foreign producers, foreign speculators, and international bankers, and are not taking care of our own people, we will find that the day of reckoning will bring the American producer down to the lowest standard in the history of this country.

I favor this particular bill because it helps remove a small portion of our domestic surplus, but it is only a drop in the bucket. However, we should discontinue to play Santa Claus to the rest of the world and pass legislation which will benefit American producers, instead of continuing a program for the sole benefit of foreign speculators and international bankers. [Applause.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Brown] took the position that the amendment which I propose to offer is not germane to this bill. It is germane for this reason: Prior to the effectuation of the barter agreement 6,943,000 bales of cotton, we must assume, were in the name of the cotton grower. Ipso facto and ipso jure the cotton becomes owned by the United States Government, and at that point the savings to the taxpayers of this country, through Government operation, becomes germane, whether agreed to by the gentleman from Georgia or the gentleman from California. Here is a shift in ownership of this cotton which is tied into the barter agreement.

Mr. Goodloe, vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, advises me under date of July 26 that the title to all of this cotton, 6,943,000 bales, is being taken by the Government. Therefore, as our friends have stated that only 600,000 bales are in controversy, that is not according to the facts set forth in Mr. Goodloe's letter.

Mr. Goodloe further says—and I call the Committee's attention to this interesting statement, because this statement which I am about to read runs contrary to the statement which is included in the report of the Committee on Banking and Currency on this bill.

Mr. Goodloe says:

The British Government has informally indicated it will desire cotton grading middling seven-eighths inch or better, it is probable that not more than 100,000 to 150,000 bales of the 1934-35 loan cotton can be used.

Therefore you have to go into the 1937-38 cotton, and that is conclusive evidence from the Commodity Credit Corporation that you cannot find 300,000 or 350,000 bales of cotton in port warehouses which will meet requirements of the British Government.

Furthermore, the Commodity Credit Corporation says:

The estimate of 250,000 to 350,000 bales of cotton now stored at ports which would probably meet British specifications is reasonably accurate, considering all ports. However, the California and Atlantic ports should be eliminated because of higher freight rates from California and the proximity of Atlantic ports to domestic mills.

The warehouses located in California will be protected by the terms of the agreement, and of course the gentleman from California is quite satisfied to have the situation remain so that those will be protected.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. But let me go back to this-

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. The gentleman has mentioned my name. Will the gentleman yield? If you are an honest man, you will yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. May I inquire if the gentleman said if I was an honest man I would yield?

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I resent that statement. I emphatically insist that he had no right to make such a statement.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Then why do you not yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield. I insist that I be protected from the gentleman's interference. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan will proceed.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The chairman of the committee has pointed out that the language of the law of June 16, 1938, reads:

Or if carrying charges are substantially in excess of the average for carrying charges available elsewhere, and the local warehouse, after notice, declines to reduce such charges.

Now, may I ask, Mr. Chairman, suppose you were operating a warehouse and the Commodity Credit Corporation steps up to you and says: "Mr. Warehouseman, your rates are too high;" and you would say in all truthfulness: "My rates are not substantially higher than the rates charged by other warehouses," and I submit the schedule showing the uniformity of rates of cotton warehouses over the United States. Here are the schedules. The rates are substantially uniform throughout. I take the position that the Commodity Credit Corporation, under existing law, cannot protect the taxpayers of this country on the storage of 6,900,000 bales of cotton, the title to which the Government has now taken. If we want our bureaus to be honest and protect the taxpayers, our citizens, then why do we not give them a law under which they can operate and thus give us that protection? If we want the warehouses protected, that is a different proposition, and here I am pleading for the savings of $12,000,000 or $15,000,000 per annum on storage of cotton owned by the Government, and I make no reference to cotton owned by the farmer. If it is to remain in storage 5 years, that means a possible savings of say $75,000,000, or if it is to remain in storage 10 years, it means, say, $150,000,000. Who on this floor will say this cotton is going to be disposed of within the next 3 years, or the next 5 years? You know as well as I do that cotton stocks will increase instead of decrease. You know that unless we check warehouse charges, storage rates will go up instead of down; and the schedules showing these contractual obligations on the part of the Commodity Credit Corporation in which schedules are set forth warehouse rates charged, substantiate the statement I have just made. Private industry, of course, will run up the price on the Government unless we check them. Do you mean to say that the Commodity Credit Corporation has not carried out the instructions of Congress? If so, Mr. Chairman, we had better look into that situation. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, has concluded a treaty involving the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States which are held under loans made or made available by the Commodity Credit Corporation for stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized, upon terms and conditions prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, to accept such strategic and critical materials in exchange for such surplus agricultural commodities; and for the purpose of such exchange the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Interior, acting jointly through the agency of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, shall determine which materials are strategic and critical and the quantity and quality of such materials. In order to carry out the provisions of this act the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized, upon terms and conditions prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, to procure, convey, transport, handle, store, maintain, or rotate such surplus agricultural commodities, and such reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials, as may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of this act.

Such reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials shall be stored on military or naval reservations or in other locations approved by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy. The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to transfer such reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials, upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary of Agriculture shall approve, to any other governmental agency. Such reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials shall be made available or disposed of by the Commodity Credit Corporation or other governmental agency only upon order of the President in accordance with the terms of the applicable treaty; when necessary to prevent deterioration, the Commodity Credit Corporation or other governmental agency is authorized to replace those quantities of the reserve stocks of such strategic and critical materials subject to deterioration with equivalent quantities of the same materials. The funds now or hereafter made available to the Commodity Credit Corporation are hereby made available to carry out the purposes of this act. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such additional sums as may be required to carry out the provisions of this act. All funds for carrying out the provisions of this act shall be available for allotment to bureaus and offices of the Department of Agriculture, and for transfer to such other agencies of the Federal Government as the Secretary of Agriculture may request to cooperate or assist in carrying out the provisions of this act.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 2, line 16, after the period insert the following: "In determining specific cotton to be exchanged under this act, the determination shall be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton is stored on the date of enactment of this act, and no cotton shall be exchanged which, after such date, is transported to another place and there sampled and selected."

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, in listening to the debate on this bill I have been very much amused. My good friend from Michigan ran all around over the lot and made a fine statement, but barely touched on the question now pending before the Committee. The real purpose of the bill that we are now considering is to permit the exporting of 600,000 bales of cotton, and all this question about where the cotton is located, where it should be located, or just how you are going to move it, or whether or not it ought to move, are questions far removed from the question pending before the Committee.

In 1936, I believe it was, the Commodity Credit Corporation under rules and regulations of their own decided to move the cotton from the warehouses out in the country, mostly farmers' warehouses, into the central part of the States. There was so much kicking about this unfair move on the part of the Commodity Credit Corporation until they put a stop to that program.

Later they agreed to turn the cotton, or lots of it, back to farmers, and farmers have to sell from receipts, in that their cotton had been moved.

In the Sixty-seventh Congress, during my first term, I introduced, and there was passed, what is known as the United States Cotton Standards Grading Act. Later on every foreign country in buying our cotton accepted our standards, and today it is a universal standard in the grading of cotton. In other words, we now have licensed graders and they grade this cotton in every State, in every port, and in many of the larger warehouses and cotton centers, certifying the grades. Today, as stated, these certified grades are accepted in every foreign country. Of course, they have the right to reject and call for an arbitration.

As to the 600,000 bales of cotton we are talking about, you do not have to take a bale of it to any port for the purpose of sampling and grading. This cotton will be sold on sample, and the 600,000 bales can be located in any State or in any warehouses where it can be properly graded and certified to. These grades are sent to the representatives of Great Britain by sending the actual samples taken from the cotton.

They have the right of passing upon the grade of the cotton, accepting or rejecting any part of it, as stated. Think about it, my friends, for that is the actual practice in exporting cotton. The Anderson Clayton Co. is the largest exporter in the United States or perhaps in the world, located in Texas. They are exporters in all of the cotton pools. Do you think that an exporter would have to go out and buy

2,000 bales, having same shipped into Charleston, S. C., for instance, for the purpose of selecting 1,000 bales to be exported? That is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of.

What the gentleman from Michigan wants to do, and what the Commodity Credit Corporation wants to do, is to have complete control and do as they please about it, just as they did after we passed the agricultural bill. We said in that bill that they could not move the cotton unless the farmers agreed to it, for the cotton belongs to the farmers, and a lot of it is in the farmers' warehouses.

What did they do? They wrote in the application for a loan a release, and the farmer had to sign it to get his loan, and in doing so he was signing away his rights. had to pass another bill amending the act to further protect the farmer and the warehouseman. Mr. Chairman, the only question before the House this afternoon is in reference to the passage of a bill permitting this country to barter with Great Britain 600,000 bales of cotton. All of this talk about having to ship in 3,000,000 bales for the purpose of getting 600,000 bales, so that some agent from Great Britain can come over here and examine and agree to it is nonsense. That statement was made for the purpose of getting complete control of the cotton, so that the Commodity Credit Corporation, under the influence of people who own the large warehouses, can take it wherever they please. I hope you will vote down every amendment that is offered, and vote for this bill as amended by the committee amendment, which will give them the right to export 600,000 bales of cotton. They can get it in my State, just as in Texas or anywhere else. They may ship it to those ports for export. They do not have to take a bale from the ports of Texas or any other port. If the other matter is an important question, let that come before the Congress in the proper way so that it can be properly debated. [Applause.]

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, we have just heard a very illuminating statement on the real facts involved in this controversy. What the United States is trying to do is export 600,000 bales of cotton and thus reduce the terrible overhanging surplus of cotton that we now have. Of course, there has been injected into this controversy a battle between the port warehouses and the inland warehouses. As to that battle I have no interest one way or the other, but the Banking and Currency Committee in its wisdom, or otherwise, as you may see fit to designate it, undertook to append to this bill an amendment that would balance the controversy between the ports and the inland warehouses. Therefore that element is out.

What we are interested in at the present time is the exportation to Great Britain of 600,000 bales of cotton, and to take therefore an equivalent amount of rubber that this country would need in case of an emergency. I plead with you not to permit the warehouse proposition or the ridiculous proposition that some Members will try to inject as to rates, and so forth, to enter into the consideration of this bill. I tried to get the gentleman from Michigan to yield to me on a matter that was before the committee. He stated that I was not fair with him when I asked him to do that. The proposition that he has put before this House has no bearing whatever on the present situation. He is attempting to amend existing law that has no place in this particular bill.

Mr. Chairman, I do not come from a cotton country. I have no interest in cotton so far as my particular district is concerned. What I am interested in is to have this 600,000 bales of cotton shipped from the United States to some other country and that we get in exchange for that an equivalent amount of rubber that this country may use in case of an emergency. I plead with you not to let these fellows muddy up the waters with extraneous matters. I ask you to vote for this bill as it stands. [Applause.]

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I am going to speak about money.

Theoretically we are trading cotton for rubber, but we are actually exchanging these commodities for gold credit. Before going off the gold standard, our dollar was worth 25.8 grains of gold. It is now worth 15.521 grains of gold. England abandoned the gold standard before, but did not tie the pound to a fixed gold content. So we may assume that prices on commodities in England are still based upon the old valuation of the pound.

Rubber is now worth $16\frac{1}{2}$ cents a pound while cotton is worth 9 cents a pound. In order to demonstrate this, I shall assume that cotton and rubber are worth the same, namely, 10 cents a pound. If we ship a thousand pounds of cotton to England, it will be worth approximately 20 pounds sterling in English money. In our money it will be \$100, or 1,552 grains of gold. The rubber which amounts to the same in dollars will be, according to the old valuation, worth 2,580 grains of gold, for we must assume that commodities in England are still sold on the old standard of gold to the dollar, namely, 25.8.

When this product reaches England, we will find there will be a difference of 40 percent in the grain gold value. In other words, our 1,000 pounds of cotton will represent 1,552.1 grains of gold, and 1,000 pounds of rubber will represent, on the old gold standard, 2,580 grains of gold. In order to balance the difference in grains of gold it will be necessary for us to furnish an additional 400 pounds of cotton. For example, we give England 1,400 pounds of cotton to balance the international exchange on this trade or barter.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. How many pounds?

Mr. THORKELSON. Fourteen hundred pounds.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Fourteen hundred pounds?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. That is an awful amount, I am

Mr. THORKELSON. That is a very intelligent remark, I would say. I am dealing with this thing as an example and I do not think the gentleman understands it.

Mr. MASON. He did not recognize the fact it was an example the gentleman was using.

Mr. THORKELSON. This simply means we will have to give an additional 40 percent in value as a subsidy to England, because international trade balances are settled on a gold basis. In other words, we will be paying 23 cents a pound for the rubber that we could buy for 16.5 cents a pound, which is now the prevailing market price, or we will sell the cotton to them for 5.4 cents in American money. The people who will pay the difference will be the taxpayers of the United States and the people who will receive the benefit will be the people of England. You are giving them in this transaction 40 percent in value, because the English money is not tied to a fixed gold standard. This, of course, is a possibility. It would have been much better for the United States had we gone off the gold standard entirely, for international transactions would then have been conducted on the old valuation, namely 25.8 grains of gold. The fact that we have tied our dollar to a fixed gold content of 15.521 grains of gold may prove very embarrassing to us at some future date. If the President devaluates the dollar to the point allowed, namely, 12.9, it will probably end in a muddle, because there is danger in playing with the gold content of money. Had we gone off the gold standard entirely, all international transactions would still be carried on the old valuation, which would mean that 1 ounce of gold would buy only $20.67 of credit, as it did before 1933. It is the taxpayers in the United States who pay the difference, and it is they who pay all the losses. It is the taxpayers who are going to set it right when they realize the manner in which business is handled today. I do not believe the people of the United States or the taxpayers are willing to donate to Great Britain or any other foreign country 40 percent of the value of any commodity, because it can only end in poverty and bankruptcy for ourselves. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Crawford to the committee amendment: On page 2, line 20, after the word "selected", change period to a colon and add "Provided, That in determining specific cotton to be exchanged as set out above, preference shall be given to cotton drawing the highest storage rate, to the extent same may be done effectively and efficiently."

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment is to effect a saving for the taxpayers of this country in that the Government is taking title to this cotton, and this amendment would enable and authorize the Commodity Credit Corporation to draw cotton for the filling of the English barter agreement from those warehouses where high storage rates are being charged the Commodity Credit Corporation by the warehousemen. It is a direct approach to the problem of the cotton, which is actually to be delivered in filling the barter agreement between the United States and Great Britain.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia. Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Of course, the gentleman understands that compressed cotton is carried at a much lower rate than the baled cotton because the package is only about one-third as large. This amendment would mean that you would not take any of the cotton at the port where the cotton is now ready to go. You would go inland and take it all from the inland warehouses, and the transaction would be much more costly to the Government. The gentleman's amendment is not practical at all.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, the terms of the barter agreement as set forth in the Senate document is available from the clerk of the Senate. This cotton must be compressed. Those who are familiar with ocean shipping, and particularly with the bulkiness of cotton, know that it must be compressed and reduced in physical volume before the British Government will accept it in the barter deal. This is specifically provided for in the terms of the barter agreement. Of course, all of this cotton is going to be compressed before it is delivered, and it will be compressed at the expense of our people, and not at the expense of the British Government. If the Commodity Credit Corporation has the power to effect reduced rates or reasonable rates on the storage of cotton, this is one way to proceed to do it; and I ask that the amendment be adopted.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, storage charges on cotton have varied from time to time. They run all the way from 12 cents in some instances to 18 cents. The highest rate being paid is 18 cents, until the last crop was stored. I am advised that on the last crop a charge of 25 cents is being paid. This information comes from the Commodity Credit Corporation officials.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. FULMER. May I say to the gentleman that the 25-cent charge has reference only to certain small warehouses. Today, with a new crop, they still charge the regular price of 12, 15, or 18 cents per bale, depending on where the cotton is located.

Mr. STEAGALL. In any event, if large quantities of the 1934–35 crop should be drawn in supplying the 600,000 bales provided for in the bill, the provisions of the amendment before the Committee would seriously interfere with the administration of the act in accordance with the purposes disclosed by the officials of the Commodity Credit Corporation. They have stated to me repeatedly that it is highly desirable and it is their purpose to supply the 600,000 bales of cotton from the cotton on hand accumulated from the 1934 and 1935 crop to the extent that it can be used to meet British specifications and the balance from the accumulated stock of the 1937–38 loan cotton as must be used. For that reason, it seems to me, the gentleman's amendment would be confusing and render very difficult the administration of the act, as contemplated by the officials of the Corporation.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentle-man yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Cali-

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Is not the gentleman trying to amend existing law that has no reference to this particular project whatever?

Mr. STEAGALL. The whole controversy here is whether we shall permit this bill to be used for the purpose of nullifying the former action of Congress on repeated votes of the two Houses of Congress. We departed from it only in our efforts to remove every possible ground of complaint against the action of our committee in the adoption of the committee amendment. Under the committee amendment, the Commodity Credit Corporation could go into the interior warehouses and grade and sample and select the entire amount of 600,000 bales of cotton to be delivered under the contract with Great Britain, but they could not deliver more than that. Certainly it cannot be said that such a provision as that is discriminatory against the large warehouses in which a large portion of this cotton is stored. The Commodity Credit Corporation has stated that for whatever portion of the cotton they take from the interior they will take three bales for one. The last estimate of the amount at the port warehouses is only 100,000 bales. If that is true, they would get 1,500,000 bales from the interior, when only a third of that is required for delivery under the contract with Great Britain.

Mr. Chairman, the pending amendment should be voted down, unless we desire to raise here and now the old controversy about the storage of cotton and nullify the former action of the Congress.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Jones of Texas as a substitute for the committee amendment: On page 2, line 15, after the word "Act", strike out the period and insert colon and the following: "Provided, That in effecting delivery under any exchange agreement, preference wherever practical shall be given to cotton already at port locations, and only such quantities of cotton shall be reconcentrated from interior points to port locations as are reasonably necessary to replenish such port stocks and such additional amounts as are reasonably necessary to carry out such exchange agreements effectively and efficiently."

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones], says that my amendment would wreck existing law. I call the attention of the House to section 383 of the Agricultural Act approved February 16, 1938, subsection (b). That subsection refers to cotton owned by growers. In no way does my amendment refer to cotton owned by growers. If the gentleman will refer to Public, No. 660, of June 16, 1938, he will find that deals with cotton owned by growers. I am not dealing with those two acts. That is what constitutes existing law, and the chairman is well aware of the fact that that law deals with cotton owned by growers, who have put their cotton in the loan. My amendment was not what the chairman of the Agricultural Committee offered. It is this simple language which a high-school student can understand, namely:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as preventing the reconcentration of cotton owned by the United States Government or any of its agencies, where a saving in carrying charge can thereby be effected.

But, what right have we to maintain existing law if existing law prevents the Commodity Credit Corporation from saving money for the taxpayers of the country? They talk about the power of the port fellows. It is the power of the interior as well as of the port fellows who hold up these storage rates. Let us look at the storage rates in the warehouses in the State of South Carolina, referring back to the statement the gentleman from that State made. Here are the documents of the Commodity Credit Corporation which show that warehouses in South Carolina are charging 25 cents per bale per month on the 1938–39 loan cotton. Out of that entire colossal group of warehouses there are some 10 warehouses I believe which are charging about 18 cents per bale per month. The others charge 25 cents per bale per month. Warehousemen inform me that they can make a profit of 4 or 5 or 6 cents per bale per month on an 11-cent-per-bale storage rate, to say nothing about the 25-cent rate.

My simple amendment provides that the Commodity Credit Corporation shall be permitted to effect a savings on cotton owned by the Government. Furthermore, the committee amendment offered by the Committee on Banking and Currency was injected into this bill. Why did they inject that storage proposition into the bill? Why did they not accept the Senate bill? It is entirely acceptable to me. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones] is acceptable to me, provided he will add this:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as preventing the reconcentration of cotton owned by the United States Government or any of its agencies, where a saving in carrying charges could thereby be effected.

Why are we not willing to save fifty or one hundred million dollars to the taxpayers?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Does not the gentleman realize that under the present law, if the rates are substantially lower at the port location, they can now require them to modify or reduce their rates?

Mr. CRAWFORD. No, sir; I do not realize that, because I hold a copy of the present law in my hands, and it carries no such provision. It says if the carrying charges are substantially in excess of the average carrying charges available elsewhere. What are they? Twenty-five cents per bale per month. That is the hook in this thing. You cannot go out and show that charges elsewhere are any less, substantially—and we disagree on that word "substantially." When 80 or 90 percent of the warehouses are charging an average rate of 25 cents per bale, you cannot say that substantially the carrying charges are less than 25 cents.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I am only going to take a minute or two. I dislike very much to oppose my chairman, because I am usually with him. But he mentioned a while ago the trouble we had when the Commodity Credit Corporation had full power to do as it pleased. When they reconcentrated cotton at the expense of the farms and small warehouses, much of it had to be shipped back. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] would permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to ship to the ports perhaps 5,000,000 or more if they wanted to. Under the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones] they will pass on what will be the reasonable and necessary amount to ship. They could decide three or five million bales just as easy as one million. They do not have to take a bale of cotton from the ports. They can take every bale of the 600,000 bales from any warehouse in the Cotton States. We have numerous warehouses with over a million bales. They have every grading facility there you have at the ports or anywhere else. It is graded and passed upon by a Federal grader, and certified by the Federal Government, and accepted in every foreign country. The United States standard grades today are universal grades. Every year they send delegates from the various cotton countries, and they come here and pass upon the standards to be used. All cotton is graded, based on United States standards agreed upon as indicated. There will not be anybody here from Great Britain to look at the cotton, but they will look at it over there, and if it is not the proper grade or color, in line with samples submitted or set forth in the invoice, they can refuse any part of it, and the United States Government will have to make it good if a mistake has been made in grading.

I regret that many Members are taking the time in debating everything else except the real purpose of this bill. I hope that both of these amendments will be voted down.

[Applause.]

Mr. THOMAS S. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I understand that my distinguished friend from Michigan [Mr. Crawford] objects to my use of the word "honest" in my statement. I want to modify that to the word "fair." Thank you.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, this bill gives authority to the Commodity Credit Corporation to carry out the terms of the barter or exchange agreement recently entered into between the United States and Great Britain, and I sincerely hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan will be defeated and that the bill will be passed as reported by the committee.

It has been a long and difficult effort to complete this exchange agreement with Great Britain, whereby that nation agrees to accept 600,000 bales of cotton and we agree to accept in exchange an equal quantity in value of rubber. Both countries agree that this cotton and this rubber will be permanently stored away, taken off the market, and to be used only in case of war. This means that 600,000 bales of our surplus cotton will be disposed of; and as the Government now has over 11,000,000 bales under loan, I think such exchange is very much in the interest of the cotton farmers of the South.

Realizing the benefits to our cotton farmers, I became deeply interested in this subject of barter or exchange of surplus agricultural commodities some time ago. In early February we had under consideration in the Committee on Military Affairs, of which I was then a member, a bill to secure some very necessary metals and materials which are not produced in this country—such as rubber, tin, tungsten, and manganese—and which are very vital to our defense in the event of war; in fact, we could not successfully carry on a war without them. The War Department estimated that we should purchase at least $100,000,000 worth of these necessary materials.

Having some concern over the rapidly increasing national debt, being anxious to save this $100,000,000 if possible, and also realizing the fact that we have an enormous surplus of cotton on hand, which naturally tends to keep down the price, I then suggested to the committee and questioned witnesses on the proposal of exchanging surplus cotton for these materials. Dr. Feis, economic adviser in the Department of State, testified that such a plan was possible, and I think a great deal of the credit for the negotiation of this agreement is due to him and Secretary Hull. They are now at work on similar agreements with other countries, in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture, and I hope we can soon complete other agreements which will remove more of this surplus cotton.

It is most unfortunate that the gentleman from Michigan should offer his amendment, which injects a very controversial question and might endanger the entire program. His amendment proposes that a great portion of the loan cotton be moved from the small inland warehouses and stored at the ports. There are two very serious objections to his proposal.

First, it would mean that our local warehousemen would be deprived of the privilege of keeping this cotton on storage in our home warehouses and denied the benefit of the storage charges paid by the Commodity Credit Corporation. Many of these warehousemen are farmers themselves and produced some of this cotton. Many of them advance money to the cotton farmers in order for the farmers to plant and harvest their cotton crop. It will, therefore, be seen that these warehousemen have a deep personal interest in the cotton. In addition, a great majority of these warehousemen have constructed additional warehouses at considerable expense in order to store this cotton for the Commodity Credit Corporation, and certainly it would be most unfair to take the cotton away from them and store it in port warehouses, which are owned by large corporations and which have had no part in producing the cotton or in cooperating with the farm program. These port warehouses are, for the most part, owned by one or two big cotton operators who have in the past shown very little consideration for the welfare of the cotton farmers. while our local warehousemen are among the best friends the farmers have ever had.

In the second place, it would be unfair to the farmers themselves to invite immediate foreclosure on the cotton loans. Right now the farmers are picking up a few dollars—from $1 to $5 per bale—on the sale of their loan contracts. Some of the cotton mills are in need of some grades of cotton, and they are paying the farmers these small amounts for their loan contracts. They then pay off the loan with the Commodity Credit Corporation and take over the cotton.

The Commodity Credit Corporation should not foreclose the cotton loans until they have a sale for the cotton, nor should the cotton be removed from the locality where it was produced as long as it is under loan. The farmer wants to know where his cotton is, and if he has an offer for sale he wants to be there when it is sold. That could not be if his cotton was stored in some port warehouse hundreds of miles away.

I want to see our small inland warehouses given a square deal and I insist that they be given the consideration to which they are entitled. But most of all, above everything else, I want to see the farmer who produced the cotton get every single penny he can out of it. For several years he has not received as much as it cost him to produce the cotton, and I think the Government should carry these loans until there is an opportunity to dispose of some of the cotton, as under this exchange agreement with Great Britain, or until there is a chance of sale at a fair price. The farmer is entitled to first place in our consideration of these questions.

And with a new crop coming on the market within a few days, it is most important that this loan cotton be handled with great care and not dumped on the market. That would wreck the price for this year's crop.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit a unanimous-consent request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, in an attempt to effect a compromise I offered my amendment, but since it is not agreeable to those who are supporting the amendment of the minority side I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Thomas] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I am informed by the Commodity Credit Corporation that the present cost to the Government for handling this cotton is approximately $45,000,000 per year. This goes into storage charges, interest, and general expenditures. They also tell me that the Corporation is now paying a general average of approximately 20 cents per bale per month for all the cotton it has for storage.

I am also informed by the Corporation that it has recently sent out to the port warehouses throughout Texas asking those warehouses to bid competitively on the handling of this cotton. It is my judgment that the committee amendment will stop this competitive bidding. I am told that the warehouse people, both interior and port, can make a reasonable return upon their investment on a charge of 12 cents or 14 cents per bale per month for the storage of this cotton.

I ask: Why stop competitive bidding and pay 20 cents per bale per month when we can get it for 12 cents or 14 cents? I cannot by the wildest stretch of the imagination believe that in doing this we are helping the farmer. All we are doing is to subsidize two powerful, competing groups; and I might add—although some think to the contrary that the interior warehouses are the most powerful and the wealth-lest—the records of the Commodity Credit Corporation show that the biggest warehouse in the United States is located in Memphis. It is the Federal Compress Co., and it now has 2,500,000 bales of cotton in storage for which it is receiving approximately 20 cents per bale per month. This is twice as much cotton as any other warehouse in the United States has received from the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Commodity Credit Corporation informs me that the Federal Warehouse and Compress Co., of Little Rock, will, within a few days, be paid $5,176,000 for storage on the period now about to end, estimated to be paid from August 1, 1938, to July 31, 1939; and that one of the concerns at Memphis, the Union Compress Warehouse, will be paid $794,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. THOMAS of Texas. I prefer not to yield, if the gentleman will pardon me.

Here is an opportunity to save the Government some money, if you want to do it. Here is an opportunity to give it to people who need it. By competitive bidding we can save $10,000,000. Now, let us give it to the dairy farmers, let us give it to the potato farmers, let us give it to the cotton farmers. If you want to save some money, here is the opportunity to do it.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. THOMAS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Does not the gentleman know that the large interior warehouses, few in number, own and control all of the port warehouses and one of the number I refer to controls more than 50 percent of the port warehouses?

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. No: that is not correct. The biggest company in the United States is an interior warehouse, the Federal Compress Co. I got these figures from the Commodity Credit Corporation, and they are available. They have 2,500,000 bales of cotton now, which is twice as much as any other corporation has.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I want to read two lines of existing law adopted in the form of an amendment to a former bill. This amendment was written and offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones]. Here it is:

If carrying charges are substantially in excess of the average of carrying charges available elsewhere and the local warehouse, after notice, declines to reduce such charges, such written consent as provided in this amendment must not be obtained.

That means that the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized under existing law to seek the lowest storage rates obtainable and there is nothing to keep them from doing it. There is no reason to change this law in order to export 600,000 bales of cotton under the provisions of this bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment to the committee amendment may be again read.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk again read the Crawford amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, in 1937 my congressional district produced more cotton than any congressional district in the United States. Warehouses were already in existence in that district to take care of a part of that cotton, but in order to take care of the tremendous amount of cotton that went into the 1937 loan, a large number of additional warehouses were erected within the interior of my district. I take it that this is about what happened throughout the Cotton Belt.

Many of these warehouses were constructed by the people locally and with local capital. Any attempt to empty these interior warehouses to swell the income of the port warehouses is wrong in principle. If the ports had produced the cotton in the first place, the ports would have the first claim upon it. But the cotton was produced in the interior and since this cotton is being held in storage we should not concentrate at port any more than is needed for the purpose of exporting cotton. [Applause.]

I should like to make my position clear. I do not want to hamper in any way the execution of the barter agreement with Great Britain. I would like to see every warehouse in the interior and at port emptied if we could transport this cotton abroad and sell it in the markets of the world. My primary interest is not in the warehouseman but in the farmer.

In carrying out the exchange agreement with Great Britain, I should like to see all parts of the Cotton Belt contribute a reasonably proportionate share of the cotton. This would be fair both to the ports and the interior. I firmly believe that the great majority of warehousemen would approve this course. It would not be fair to empty the interior warehouses, shipping the cotton to port, when there is no need to do so under this little barter arrangement with Britain. All I want is a fair deal for the interior cotton farmer and warehouseman. The ports do not have the first claim on this cotton, yet the port warehouses have some rights, too, and they ought to be respected.

It has been argued that the warehousemen are being paid an excessive charge for storing this cotton. The farmer made no great profit on this cotton and not for one moment would I urge that the warehouseman receive an excessive storage fee from the Government. I do not know what a fair storage charge would be, but that should have nothing to do with reconcentration of this cotton at port. The ports should be paid a fair storage charge and the interior warehousemen should be paid a fair storage charge. Certainly the Commodity Credit Corporation can work out a storage rate based upon past experience that will be reasonably satisfactory to all parties concerned, including the Government.

The committee amendment may not be perfect, but if there is anything radically wrong with it, this can be worked out in conference with the Senate. The Jones amendment, now withdrawn, has some good features, but I think we ought to stay with the committee and the committee amendment. In conference with the Senate the matter can be given further consideration and something that will be equitable and workable for the ports and the interior and the Government can be arrived at.

Mr. HOBBS. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. HOBBS. I agree with the gentleman 100 percent and I wish he would explain that a large part of the charges is not warehouse charges but is insurance which is paid by the warehouseman.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Conditions in your district and in mine are very similar. Is it the gentleman's judgment that the committee amendment will meet the gentleman's desires?

Mr. MAHON. I think the committee amendment will meet the situation, but let the conferees work that out. Why not let the committee go to conference with this bill and work out something that will be agreeable and fair to the interior warehouseman and the port warehouseman?

Mr. THOMASON of Texas. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMASON of Texas. Is it not true many of the small warehouses were erected and are owned by farmers and local people?

The legal title to much of this cotton is still in the farmers. The farmers and the local warehousemen are pleased with present arrangements and local storage, and ought to be left alone. Of course excessive charges should not be tolerated by interior or port warehousemen. But I want it understood I oppose the transfer to port of any unnecessary amount of this cotton.

Mr. MAHON. I thank the gentleman. Many of the warehouses in my section are owned by these local individuals. The same is true throughout the interior. I dare say that practically all the port warehouses are owned by big interests. Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi. Mr. WHITTINGTON. Something has been said about the Federal Compress Co. I call attention to the fact that those institutions own compresses throughout Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and the other Southern States; so all the money does not go to one compress located at one place.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAHON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Many of these local warehouses are owned by the farmers themselves?

Mr. MAHON. Many of these local warehouses are owned by the farmers themselves, and if there is any money to be made out of the farmers' cotton why should it not go to the communities that produce the cotton?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close now.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL]?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] to the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Crawford) there were—ayes 98, noes 121.

So the amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Martin of Massachusetts: On page 2, line 15, after the period following the word "act", insert the following: "The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized and directed to provide for the warehousing, in or near cotton-manufacturing centers in New England, of such reasonable amounts of facturing centers in New England, of such reasonable amounts or cotton held as security for loans as the Corporation deems necessary to meet current local manufacturing needs. The amount so warehoused shall not at any time be less than 300,000 bales. In carrying out the two preceding sentences, the written consent of the producer or borrower to reconcentration, as provided under subsection (b) of section 383 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended and supplemented (relating to the manner of securing consent to reconcentration of cotton), shall not be required."

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the bill and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I sincerely hope that when the vote comes upon this amendment it will be as enthusiastic as your reception.

Seriously, I believe this amendment should commend itself to the Committee. There are 12,000,000 bales of cotton held in storage in this country. All New England is asking is that less than 3 percent of this great amount, or 300,000 bales. should be kept in the warehouses of New England. We desire this volume may be available for immediate supply to the textile manufacturers of that great section of our country.

There is no question but the textile mills have been passing through very hazardous times. They do not have the money today that they had previously with which to make long commitments in the purchase of cotton. I honestly believe the keeping of this limited amount of cotton in New England would be of benefit to the cotton farmers of America, because it would definitely mean that the cotton consumed in the New England mills would be cotton grown in the South.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. New England will buy that cotton if it is stored there.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes. Such an arrangement would be as much a stimulant to the sale of cotton as will the barter agreement provided for in the bill now pending. If you have goods to sell, it is generally well to have them placed where there are purchasers.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. It would also mean that the New England mills would have a normal supply of cotton on hand at all times to take care of local needs.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Exactly.

I wish to point out, too, the cost of storage of cotton in New England would be only approximately 12 cents per bale per month, whereas, as has been stated on this floor this afternoon, the average charge paid today by the Government is 20 cents.

We hear about a warehouse monopoly. I do not know whether or not it exists, and I hope it does not exist. However, if it does exist, it should command the attention of Senator O'MAHONEY, who is now conducting an inquiry into monopolies. The Government should first put its own house in order.

Mr. Chairman, in order to aid the cotton farmers of the South retain a valuable market, to save money in storage charges to the Government, and to help the textile industries of New England, which are in a dire plight, I ask this amendment be adopted. This small amount of cotton stored in New England, where it will be quickly available to the textile manufacturers of that section of the country, will be extremely helpful and will be an aid to business. [Applause.]

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, it is seldom that I find myself in accord with the gentleman from Massachusets [Mr. Martin]. Of course, when I say "in accord" with him, I mean on political matters. Personally, the entire delegation from Massachusetts, whether we be Republicans or Democrats, has always had the greatest feeling of love and affection for him. We are very happy to know that the feeling which has existed among both the Democratic and Republican Members of the delegation from the State of Massachusetts is shared by the entire membership of the House. [Applause.] I am very happy to have this rare privilege of agreeing with my friend on a matter that is purely political.

I do not see any reason why New England should not have its share of the storage of this cotton. We have a great deal of space up there that was formerly occupied by cotton machinery. Cotton mills have moved out of New England but there still remain mills that are in the cotton business. This would be a great help to the cotton factories that use your cotton and make it into the finished product. For the life of me I cannot see why New England should not have its share of storing this surplus cotton. New England can store this cotton just as cheaply if not more cheaply than any other section of the country because of the vast available storage space there.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Does not the gentleman believe that since our foreign market for cotton is badly knocked out a greater proportion of our cotton will hereafter be milled in the mills of the United States?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I believe that is perfectly true. If that is so, I believe New England will do its share of milling that cotton. Historic New England has the mills. The storage of this cotton in New England will accelerate cotton manufacturing and thereby help the cotton industry.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] is adopted by this Committee. It is a fair and equitable one which calls for a proper apportionment in the storage of cotton.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. PACE. The amendment provides that the farmer's consent shall not be necessary. Does the gentleman seriously contend that you should take a farmer's cotton while he owns it, merely having a loan on it, and haul it 1,000 miles away before he sells it, where he would have no jurisdiction over it?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I do not believe the gentleman rightly interprets that section or the amendment.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. This language refers to cotton to which the Government has already taken title.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. This is cotton which the Government owns and the title has passed from the farmer. So the application as expressed by the gentleman from Georgia is not accurate. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the gentleman's amendment that after the words "New England" insert "and North Carolina," and I will not ask to be heard on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not in proper form, not having been submitted in writing.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. KERR. I will reduce it to writing.

The CHAIRMAN. The time has come to vote on the amendment.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Just what is meant by "New England"?

The CHAIRMAN. That is not a parliamentary inquiry. Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I demand

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may have time within which to put my amendment in writing.

Mr. BOLLES and Mr. ANDREWS objected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Crawford), there were—ayes 148, noes 109.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the Committee rises. Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Sparkman, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the Committee having had under consideration the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, pursuant to House Resolution 273, he reported the same back to the House, with sundry amendments adopted in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, my remarks are addressed to my Democratic colleagues. I know that my Republican colleagues will understand the situation. As chairman of the Democratic caucus I am announcing to my Democratic colleagues, as they have been advised by the printed notices, that there will be a Democratic caucus tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Due to the brief period in which the notice is sent I take this opportunity to make this brief statement and to inform my colleagues that some important matters will be taken up at the caucus and to urge all Democratic Members present who are in town tomorrow night to be sure to attend.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I likewise address myself to the Democratic Members of the House, stating to them that it is the wish of the Speaker and of the leader that all of our Members attend that caucus tomorrow evening.

VICE PRESIDENT JOHN NANCE GARNER

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Texas delegation of the House, and acting upon authority vested in me by the unanimous consent and agreement of all Texas Members in Washington, I rise to read for the information of the House the following statement which reflects the sentiments of the Texas delegation:

The Texas delegation in the House of Representatives has been informed of the bitter personal attack made upon Hon. John Nance Garner, our distinguished Vice President, before the House Labor Committee today by John L. Lewis.

We who know him best cannot refrain from expressing our deep resentment and indignation at this unwarranted and unjustified attack on his private and public life.

The Texas delegation has complete confidence in his honesty. integrity, and ability.

[Prolonged applause, the Members rising.] APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, resuming the colloquy with the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], interrupted this morning by expiration of the brief time allotted, the statement of the gentleman from New York is entitled to especial attention. In effect it concedes the accuracy of the figures which I gave this morning, and the inaccuracy of the figures published on Tuesday, unless there are included in both estimates the reappropriations made at the two sessions of Congress. To include reappropriations in such statements is both illogical and misleading, and is at variance with the practice both of the House and the Treasury Department. Never in any similar statement made either by the Secretary of the Treasury or by the committee, have reappropriations been included. Secretary Mellon, frequently referred to on this floor as the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton, in none of his statements included reappropriations, and no chairman of the committee, from Thaddeus Stevens down to the present time, including Chairmen Randall, Cannon, Madden, or Wood, or the ranking member of the minority, in making their annual résumés of appropriations at the close of the session, included reappropriations in their statements. The reason is obvious. To include such funds is to count them twice. They are counted the first time when appropriated and they are counted the second time when reappropriated. In fact, in some cases where expenditure of appropriations extends over several years, as in case of aviation, and so forth, the effect of including reappropriations would be to count them three or four times. I trust that in the future, estimates will adhere to the only tenable method, the method practiced by all Treasury and committee officials from the beginning of the Republic.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

PERMISSION TO FILE REPORT

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Labor have until midnight tonight to file a report on a bill.

The SPEAKER: Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NAUTICAL EDUCATION

Mr. BLAND submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 5375) to promote nautical education, and for other purposes.

AMENDING MERCHANT MARINE AND SHIPPING ACTS

Mr. BLAND submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 6746) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American Merchant Marine, and for other purposes,

ADMINISTRATION OF UNITED STATES COURTS

Mr. CELLER submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (S. 188) to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes.

CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT ACT

Mr. RAMSPECK submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (S. 281) to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930.

PROPAGANDA IN THE CAPITOL

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes on a matter that will interest the entire House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, there is a man who walks the halls of this Capitol Building by the name of Aled Davies. Mr. Davies is an employee of Frank Gannett, the notorious tory publisher. Mr. Davies is the Washington representative of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government. He boasts that he and Frank Gannett "are the committee." Mr. Davies has an office in the Munsey Building in downtown Washington, but he seems to carry on most of his work here in the Capitol. He operates in this manner: From downtown he calls his New York colleagues and requests them to call him at different places in the Capitol Building.

Yesterday at 3:45 p. m. Mr. Davies took one such call on an office phone here in the Capitol Building. To someone at the other end of the line bearing the title of doctor—could it have been Dr. Rumley, whom Senator Minton's lobby investigation revealed to be Frank Gannett's tool in the operation of the Committee to Preserve Constitutional Government? To this doctor he revealed the following:

A certain Senator [naming him] was pleased with the telegram, and it will be in tomorrow's RECORD. He [the Senator] states that there is confusion among the new dealers. They are split on the prevailing-wage amendment. Some want to hook it on the spendlend bill but fear the House would block that.

He then mentioned a circular letter and stated that 51,000 had already been sent and that the printer was being pushed for the rest. He then stated that more than 351,000 letters would be sent out if the debate on the spend-lend bill lasted until the middle of next week.

Mr. KELLER. I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, was the gentleman present in the Labor Committee this morning when John Lewis made that statement?

Mr. KELLER. Yes, I was.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Did you offer any objection?

Mr. KELLER. I did not.

Mr. HOFFMAN. You thought it was true, did you?

Mr. KELLER. I did not ask you for that, or anybody else. Mr. HOFFMAN. No, but I am asking you. [Laughter.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Reserving the right to

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Davies stated after the telephone conversation closed that these letters urged the recipients to write their Senators a letter protesting against the spend-lend bill.

He further stated that they were trying to get Father Coughlin to speak against the bill this coming Sunday.

He further stated that the letters would be sent under the auspices of the National Committee to Preserve Constitutional Government.

When chided about using Father Coughlin to this end, he replied, "Hell, I would use a rat to put over my ideas."

It seems to me that a lobbyist who gets so bold as to carry on his nefarious work right under the noses of the Members of Congress ought to be kicked out of the Capitol Building.

This little incident should demonstrate the need for the lobbyist registration law we passed in 1936 here in the House, but which the Senate failed to pass. I shall introduce a bill to at least limit such form of propaganda.

Most important of all, however, here is clearly revealed the way in which the "public" is inspired to protest against legislation; here is the source of these "floods" of telegrams and letters; here stands revealed the iniquitous scheming in high places to discredit democracy.

Who are these men? Where does this money come from to finance these hundreds of thousands of letters? What is their object? Do they tell? Not if they can help it. But I am going to tell.

It was this same outfit who by this same method brought about the first defeat of the reorganization bill, causing a large expense to the Government and a long and unnecessary delay in putting into effect many efficiencies and savings.

THE FARM MACHINERY TRUST

Mr. GOSSETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOSSETT. Mr. Speaker, the Seventy-fifth Congress by joint resolution created the Temporary National Economic Committee. To the $500,000 appropriated for the use of the committee by the Seventy-fifth Congress, this Congress has added $600,000, making a total of $1,100,000 to be used by this committee to investigate monopoly and the concentration of economic power in this country. This committee is charged not only with the duty of investigating the existence of monopoly but with the additional duty to report proper legislation for the destruction of such monopolies. When its labors are finished, I am sure the committee will have done a good job, a badly needed job. That many harmful and vicious monopolies exist in this country, I am sure will be admitted. It is my purpose to call to the attention of the committee and of the Congress one especially harmful trust and monopoly which the committee must not overlook in its proposed action.

In an effort to assure and to speed the destruction of this particular trust, I last week introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, etc., That the Temporary National Economic Committee created by Senate Joint Resolution 300 of the Seventy-fifth Congress for the purpose of investigating monopoly and the concentration of economic power, be, and is hereby instructed to report and recommend to the Congress at its next session legislation to effectively and permanently break up and destroy the trust and monopoly now existing in the agricultural implement and machinery industry of this country, the existence of such trust and monopoly, and its destructiveness to the farmers of this country, being well known, and also having been conclusively established by an investigation of the Federal Trade Commission pursuant to Senate Joint Resolution 277 as adopted by the Seventy-fourth Congress. The report of this investigation is available to the committee and to the Congress as House Document No. 702, third session, Seventy-fifth Congress.

I wish to call the attention of the Congress to this report of the Federal Trade Commission and to a few well-known facts about the Farm Machinery Trust. Most of this 1,200-page report is evidence furnished by the machinery companies themselves. In the light of their own testimony, they stand convicted of maintaining a monopoly through which the farmers of this country are charged exorbitant and unreasonable prices for the machinery they are compelled to buy. In the Commission's report we find this language:

The prices of farm machinery rose in far greater proportion from 1916 to 1929 than did the prices of farm products. * * * * There was a general increase in the price of farm machines from 1933 to 1935. * * * The general upward trend in the price of farm machines continued through 1936, 1937, into 1938.

What happened to the price of farm products during these years is well known to all. We have witnessed in the economic life of this country a startling situation. While prices of farm commodities have gone down, the prices of farm machinery have gone up. While the prices of many other commodities, such as automobiles, have gone down, the prices of farm machinery have gone up. At this time in the terms of farm commodities, many farm implements cost the farmer several times what he paid for them 10 and 15 years ago. In fact, the family-sized farmer can no longer buy machinery necessary to run his farm. If present trends continue, family-sized farmers, if they continue to exist, will be forced to the dangerous, undemocratic necessity of pooling their resources to buy community machinery.

In the above-mentioned report by the Federal Trade Commission, we find that some five machinery companies, among which there unquestionably is a trust combination, probably do better than 90 percent of the farm-machinery business of this country. One company, the International Harvester Co., does better than 50 percent of all the farmmachinery business of this country. This company pretends to make only a reasonable profit, but to its cost of production is charged exorbitant salaries for many executives, the cost of maintaining tremendous and unnecessary sales and promotion forces, and other items unfair to charge to the cost of the machine. In 1927 the International Harvester Co. paid a total compensation per officer of $142,940 to each of 11 officers, $147,524 to each of 12 officers in 1928, $161,193 to each of 13 officers in 1929. The president of International Harvester Co. in 1927 received $353,386; in 1928, $405,909; in 1929, $412,860. The Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. for years has carried on its books "goodwill and patents valuation" at an average valuation of $12,000,000. Deere & Co. carried "Trade names, trade-marks, patents and goodwill" from 1910 to 1929 at a valuation of $17,904,000. And notwithstanding such methods of calculating its production costs and profits, taking its own figures, the Commission found that the profits of Deere & Co. were as much in 1937 as in 1929. That was largely true of the other

I wish to quote further from the Federal Trade Commission's report, as follows:

The practice of merging competitors followed by various farm-machinery companies with respect to different lines has been going on for half a century and has tended to a constantly increasing concentration of economic power. It has also facilitated price control and price understandings among competitors, either by following a leader or by price agreements or both.

In a publication by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration of the Department of Agriculture entitled "Briefly Speaking," on July 18, 1939, there is quoted with approval the following:

Prices of farm machinery in 1938 were close to the highest figures in nearly 30 years of Government record. Prices declined somewhat from 1929 to 1933, but then rose sharply, and in 1938 prices of farm machinery other than motor vehicles were 58 percent above the 1910–14 level. The peak for the 30-year period was in 1920, approximately 65 percent above pre-war. Prices of motor vehicles—automobiles, trucks, and tractors—also rose rapidly from 1933 to 1938 after a small decline in the great depression.

The courts have been unable to break up the farm-machinery trust under present laws. Legal proceedings were instituted against the International Harvester Co. in 1912 for a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. This case terminated in 1918 after running the gamut of the courts with little accomplished. The case was reopened in 1923, and again the International Harvester Co. escaped unharmed and continued its domination of the farm-machinery field.

The situation demands new and effective legislation in order to destroy this trust and monopoly that has for years preyed upon the farmers of this country.

A free and prosperous agriculture is essential to a free and prosperous nation. The farmers of America must not become economic slaves. When the farmers can sell for a fair price and when the farmers can buy for a fair price, Government subsidies will not be necessary. Let us hasten this day by the destruction of the farm-machinery trust, [Applause.]

REPLY TO CRITICS

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, just a few moments ago we saw a display of apparent affection and confidence on the part of Members of the House for the distinguished Vice President of the United States. The occasion for that was caused by the fact that some statements regarding the Vice President had been made by a member of a labor organization.

I am wondering, from a Democratic standpoint, why on July 13, 1939, the Members of this House sat supinely and listened to a Member of the opposition make a number of statements about the President of the United States, one of which was:

Only an egocentric megalomaniac would have the nerve to ask for such a measure.

What this House was being asked for at that time was to accept the library the President is presenting to the United States; and I think it is poor Democratic philosophy to let that go by and then arise in wrath over an attack on another Democrat. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein a couple of excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

EVEN THE PATIENT, LONG-SUFFERING DONKEY CAN BE KICKED INTO MILD RESENTMENT

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 or 3 minutes, whatever the rules permit.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from Michigan is recognized for $2\frac{1}{2}$ minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the donkey is meek, patient, submissive, long-suffering; does little, if any, thinking for himself; usually follows unerringly not only the commands but the suggestion of his master. He is a loyal beast, thinking no thoughts for himself but content to follow the slightest whim of his driver, even though it lead him away into the desert where there is little, if any, water and no pasture, and an intelligent beast would see that at the end of the journey was starvation and a flock of vultures.

Hence, it is that the donkey, during the past 6 years has been the emblem which most accurately depicts the lack of method, of purpose, the blind allegiance to the commands of the chance master, and the utter disregard of the certainty of national bankruptcy and the probability of communistic stable mates awaiting it at the end of the President's present term of office.

It is more than surprising that the Democratic leadership has at last been prodded into audible resentment because of the lashings which its Vice President today received from

John L. Lewis.

We all remember that Lewis' organization contributed $470,000 to the New Deal campaign fund. Lewis seems to feel, and at times has acted, as though his $470,000 had bought him a President of the United States and twice he has demanded, after his organizations had called strikes, that the President come to his assistance.

You on the Democratic side let this conduct, insulting in the highest degree to the President of the United States, pass unnoticed, unrebuked, probably on the theory that it was not worthy of an answer. Nevertheless, some of Lewis' followers, because it was undenied, were encouraged in their lawlessness, in their assumption that he was the "big boss" and could give orders to a President.

Lewis himself probably assumed that he was immune from those rules of conduct which govern the utterances of the ordinary citizen; that, having for so many years imposed his will upon workers, he had a license to vilify even high Government officials.

This morning, making a statement before the House Labor Committee, whose chairwoman and some of whose leading members just the other day assured us that it was fully capable of taking care of all matters which came before it, unrebuked by any member of that committee, John Lewis, appearing for the purpose of aiding it in arriving at a decision as to whether the wage-hour law should be amended, what scope those amendments, if adopted, should cover, without any justification, wholly out of order, made the statement that a Republican minority of the House—

Aided by a band of 100 or more renegade Democrats, have conducted a war dance around the bounden, prostrate form of labor.

This false and malicious statement was followed by another equally false, equally malicious and vindictive, scurrilous, and slanderous attack upon the personal character of the the Vice President of the United States.

Lewis' attack upon John N. Garner could in no conceivable way aid the committee in determining any question which was before it. It could not possibly add force to any argument which Lewis might make concerning the inadvisability of amending the wage-hour law. It was nothing less than the verbal vomiting of a putrid mind, the vaporizing of the warped soul, and the wicked heart of an individual whose greedy, grasping, evil designs upon the pocketbooks of the workers of America had been in part thwarted, according to Lewis' idea, by the activities of the Vice President of the United States.

The mass murder at Herrin, Ill., on June 21, 1922, rests squarely upon the shoulders of John L. Lewis, and from that day to this his activities have been followed by coercion, intimidation, bloodshed, and death. Yet he has the effrontery, the impudence, to come before a committee of Congress and to make an unjustifiable, an unfounded, a dirty, lying assault upon the personal character of the Vice President of the United States, and to our shame, be it said that the chairwoman of that committee, at the conclusion of his statement, said:

Thank you, Mr. Lewis, for your very fine contribution to this meeting.

Some unthinking persons have suggested that Lewis' unprecedented outburst grew out of some suggestion made to him during his visit to the White House last week and that it is an attempt to kill the Garner boom for President. Whatever its source, whatever its purpose, it has no place in the records of this body and should be expunged.

Between June 1, 1935, and June 1, 1937, Lewis' United Mine Workers collected from the paychecks of the workers of this country more than $7,000,000. Organizations with which he is affiliated, or similar in some degree, have made political contributions, while a like privilege is denied to business corporations.

Lewis assumes to be the spokesman of labor. He pretends to be the friend of labor. He sheds crocodile tears over the want, the misery, the privation suffered by workingmen, while he himself enjoys the princely salary of $25,000 a year. He rides in a conveyance fit for a king, for a millionaire, while those who pay for his gas, his clothes, his automobile, and his chauffeur delve in the bowels of the earth to eke out what he says is a miserable existence.

He is a fraud, a hypocrite, who would deny employment, unless tribute be paid to him, to the poorest, the humblest worker in our land.

Let the House support House Resolution 196 which I offered on May 18. Let it support the resolution which I will offer, to investigate John L. Lewis, his C. I. O., his and its sources of income and the manner in which it is spent. Then and only then will we deflate, break the bubble of egotism from which this man is suffering. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a radio address I delivered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER]?

There was no objection.

DISABILITY ALLOWANCE FOR WORLD WAR VETERANS

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Green].

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask recognition at this time only for the purpose of making an announcement. On the Speaker's desk is petition No. 19. The bill covered by that petition would restore the disability-allowance pensions for World War veterans, which was repealed through the Economy Act. Those who are friends of that cause should sign petition No. 19.

RULES COMMITTEE

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Rules Committee may have until 12 o'clock tonight to file reports on rules.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the Rules Committee in the last few minutes has reported three important rules, one on wages and hours, one on the housing bill, and one on the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill. If this consent is granted, will the gentleman from Texas tell us which one will be taken up first?

Mr. RAYBURN. It has been the intention to take up the housing bill first.

Mr. MAPES. How long will it take? The rule provides for 4 hours' general debate.

Mr. RAYBURN. We hope to complete that Saturday.

Mr. MAPES. Then the other bills will be taken up?

Mr. RAYBURN. The other bills will be taken up in order. I have not discussed this with the Chairman of the Rules Committee, nor have I discussed it with the Speaker and the Members with whom I usually consult about the program.

Mr. MAPES. My understanding is that the Committee on Labor this afternoon reported a bill and instructed its chairman to ask the Speaker for recognition Monday to make a motion to suspend the rules and pass it without coming to the Committee on Rules for a rule. Can the majority leader tell us whether the procedure voted by the Committee on Labor will be followed or whether the rule reported by the Committee on Rules a few minutes ago on that subject will be called up?

Mr. RAYBURN. I would be assuming, because the power of recognition rests with the Speaker, and I have not discussed it with him; therefore I do not know.

Mr. MAPES. I may say that some of us in the committee did not support the closed rule that was reported by the Committee on Rules to consider labor legislation but on the contrary voted against it.

Mr. RAYBURN. I say I would be presuming if I should say what the Speaker might do. I have not consulted with him whether or not he will recognize anyone to suspend the rules on a matter of that kind on Monday.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the majority leader a question about the wage and hour rule. Is that on the Norton bill?

Mr. RAYBURN. I understand so. Mr. SACKS. Or on the Barden bill?

Mr. RAYBURN. There was a bill before the committee known as the Norton bill, as I understand it. Some member of the Rules Committee may be here to answer the question. It reported a rule making in order amendments to the Wage-Hour Act.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, in view of the explanation made by the majority leader that the housing bill will be brought up first, may I comment on the fact there has been a great deal of uncertainty during the week concerning what the Rules Committee would do on applications for rule. The Banking and Currency Committee has been busy considering another very important piece of legislation, the so-called lending bill. Speaking for myself, I know I have had little or no time within the last few days to give very much consideration to the merits or demerits of the housing bill. I think it only fair under the circumstances to give this House an opportunity to study that bill in anticipation of bringing it up at a definite time. I see no reason why the housing bill should not be brought up Saturday or Monday, which will give us ample time to get our wits together and present it intelligently to the House. In view of the fact that this gives us a very limited time in which to get our case together, I will have to object to the request of the gentleman from Texas that the Committee on Rules may file a report by 12 o'clock tonight.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Casey of Massachusetts, Mr. Shanley, and Mr. Myers asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a letter from the Sino-Korean People's League.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a letter from an editor of a paper in Iowa.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the House is at the present moment stalling for time in order that the Committee on Rules may file a report. It is not my purpose to keep the House in session unnecessarily. If it is the purpose of the leadership to hold the House in session to afford the Committee on Rules an opportunity to file the report before we adjourn, then, of course, nothing can be gained by my objecting to the filing of the report tonight. I should like to know if that is the purpose of holding the House in session.

Mr. RAYBURN. I may say to the gentleman that we will not do more than complete the general debate on the bill tomorrow. There will be an hour of debate on the rule and

4 hours of general debate. We certainly could not read the bill tomorrow. I believe it is fair to the House that Members have the benefit of the general debate, with a night to go

Mr. WOLCOTT. May we have the distinct understanding that we shall not have a vote on final passage of the bill tomorrow, providing the rule is adopted?

Mr. RAYBURN. We will not. I say that to the gentleman because I do not believe we can do more than complete general debate tomorrow.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Then, if the gentleman will renew his unanimous-consent request, I shall not object.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend in the RECORD the remarks I just made. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend in the RECORD the remarks I made today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the adjournment of the House the Speaker may be authorized to sign the enrolled bill (H. R. 5407) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory and supplementary thereto.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 18. An act authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for the lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896, and reopening such lands to mineral entry;

S. 522. An act to provide pensions to members of the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard who become disabled by reason of their service therein, equivalent to 75 percent of the compensation payable to war veterans for similar service-connected disabilities, and for other purposes; and

S. 2482. An act authorizing the President to present a Distinguished Service Medal to Rear Admiral Harry Ervin Yarnell, United States Navy.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, July 28, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1053. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill for the relief of J. Frank Kuner, private, uniformed force, United States Secret Service; to the Committee on Claims.

1054. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to amend laws for preventing collisions of vessels; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

SENATE

FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1939

(Legislative day of Tuesday, July 25, 1939)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Reverend Duncan Fraser, assistant rector, Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O God, the Father of all men, who hast taught us through Thy Son to judge not lest we too be judged: Create and make in us new and contrite hearts, that, in courtesy and fair play, in peace and justice, the affairs of this Nation may be forwarded without that animosity and bitterness of heart which warp our judgments and destroy our souls. Through Jesus Christ Thy Son our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Barkley, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, July 27, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

RIGHTS OF LABOR

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference a letter from the Litchfield County, Conn., League for Peace and Democracy, and I ask unanimous consent for myself and on behalf of my colleague that it may be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW MILFORD, CONN., July 18, 1939.

Hon. F. T. MALONEY, Hon. J. A. DANAHER,

Senators from Connecticut.

Dear Senators from Connecticut.

Dear Senators: At an open meeting of the Litchfield County League for Peace and Democracy, held in New Milford last Saturday, I was instructed to advise you that the members and friends of the league passed unanimously the following resolutions, and to ask that you have them inserted in the Congressional Recomp

1. We heartily endorse and support the National Labor Relations Act (Wagner Act) as a step toward fair and good relations between labor and industry, and we stand unalterably opposed to any amendments that might cripple or weaken the act. (We call your attention to the contracts signed by United States Steel and the consequent peace and harmony as contrasted with the violence and bitterness in companies that have refused to obey the act.)

2. We approve the work of the La Follette committee investigat-

2. We approve the work of the La Follette committee investigating violations of civil liberties in industry, and urge an immediate additional appropriation of $100,000 for the continuation of this important work (S. Res. 126).

3. We support the Oppressive Labor Practices Act (S. 1970), and urge that it be enacted into law at this session, in order to end the vicious and antidemocratic attacks upon the rights and liberties guaranteed under the Bill of Rights of the Constitution.

The gathering expressed its hope that you, our Senators, are in agreement with us on these points and that you will work for their realization.

Respectfully submitted.

RUTH C. ERICKSON. Secretary.

POSTHUMOUS ENSIGN'S COMMISSION FOR ARTHUR MORTIMER FIELDS, JR.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, from the Committee on Naval Affairs I report favorably, with an amendment, Senate bill 2879, and I submit a report (No. 1019) thereon. I ask that the bill be taken up for immediate consideration, as I think there will be no opposition to it. I request that the bill be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received, and the clerk will read the bill by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 2879) to authorize the posthumous appointment of the late Arthur Mortimer Fields, Jr., to be an ensign of the United States Navy.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts for the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, Arthur Mortimer Fields, Jr., was a midshipman for 4 years at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, and on June 1 of this year he received the degree of B. S. from the academy and a certificate of graduation. Some days before his graduation he became ill and at the time of his graduation he was in the Naval Academy Hospital. Because of his physical condition at graduation, it was not possible to commission him an ensign in the United States Navy, which honor was bestowed at that time upon his classmates.

The day before graduation, Prize Day, he was awarded several prizes because of his leadership in several of his academic studies. He sat with the officers and visitors, because his illness prevented him marching and standing in line during the ceremonies. I met him on this occasion and talked with him about his illness and his fine record at the academy. He stood fifth in his class of over 600 midshipmen.

He died at the Naval Hospital at Brooklyn, N. Y., July 19, 1939. This bill authorizes the President to issue post-humously to him a commission as an ensign in the United States Navy with date of rank as of June 1, 1939. The Navy Department interposes no objection to the enactment of this bill. The passage of this bill at this session may serve to provide some slight comfort to his sorrowful parents. Through his death the Navy Department has suffered the loss of a promising naval officer, and his parents, a son of outstanding ability. His brilliant record at the academy should be a source of real pride to them, and this act of Congress, we hope, will convey to them the sympathy of the American people, the Navy, and the officials of the Naval Academy.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I desire to join in the request of the able Senator from Massachusetts for the immediate consideration of Senate bill 2879 introduced by me to authorize the President to issue posthumously to the late Arthur Mortimer Fields, Jr., a commission as an ensign of the United States Navy. I want to thank the Senator and the committee on behalf of myself and the heartbroken family of this noble young man. I know that words can bring little consolation to the grief-stricken family, but I hope this unusual and well-deserved recognition by the Congress of the United States will bring them some measure of solace.

The late Arthur M. Fields was an exceptional young man. Not only was he attractive and of high character but he was also a brilliant student. He won first honors in mathematics, in history, physics, in English, in gunnery and ordnance. By young Fields' untimely and unfortunate death the country was deprived of a great career.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The amendment of the Committee on Naval Affairs was, in line 6, after the numerals "1939", to strike out the period and insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That no back pay, allowances, gratuities, or pension shall accrue due to the passage of this act.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted etc., That the President is authorized to issue posthumously to the late Arthur Mortimer Fields, Jr., a commission as an ensign of the United States Navy with date of rank as of June 1, 1939: Provided, That no back pay, allowances, gratuites, or pension shall accrue due to the passage of this act. The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mr. TRUMAN (for Mrs. CARAWAY), from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on July 28, 1939, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 18. An act authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for the lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896, and reopening such lands to mineral entry;

S. 522. An act to provide pensions to members of the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, who become disabled by reason of their service therein, equivalent to 75 percent of the compensation payable to war veterans for similar service-connected disabilities, and for other purposes; and

S. 2482. An act authorizing the President to present a Distinguished Service Medal to Rear Admiral Harry Ervin Yarnell, United States Navy.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SMATHERS:

S. 2911 (by request). A bill for the relief of Lodovico Marot (or Lewis Marrow), Daniza Marot, his wife, and their two children, Giuditta and Giovanna Marot (or Marrow); to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. BANKHEAD:

S. 2912. A bill to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. DAVIS:

S. 2913. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the General State Authority, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the city of Millersburg, Pa.; and

S. 2914. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the General State Authority, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the city of Middletown, Pa.; to the Committee on Commerce.

(Mr. O'Mahoney introduced Senate bill 2915, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. SLATTERY:

S. J. Res. 178. Joint resolution authorizing the selection of a site and the erection thereon of the Columbian Fountain in Washington, D. C.; to the Committee on the Library.

AMENDMENT OF OIL-LEASING ACT

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, for several months I have been conducting negotiations with the Department of the Interior in the effort to obtain a modification of certain provisions of the Oil and Gas Leasing Act and of the regulations thereunder. There are several instances in which it seems desirable, in the interest of developing the public domain, to secure not only a modification of the present regulations, but also a change in the law itself. I am happy to be able to announce that today the Interior Department has advised me of its willingness to agree in certain of the proposals which have been made. I am therefore introducing a bill intended to carry out a modification of the present rule with respect to rentals and rental bonds. The bill which I am now about to introduce would waive the rental on all oil and gas leases issued subsequent to August 21, 1935, on lands within the geological structures of nonproducing fields, for the second- and third-lease year. The Department is of the opinion that lessees should pay a rental for the firstlease year as an evidence of good faith.

The bill also provides that no bond shall be required for the first 3 years of any such lease unless drilling should be commenced. In that event a drilling bond would be required. The effect of the bill will be to eliminate the necessity for filing rental bonds.

Mr. President, I therefore ask consent to introduce the bill to which I have referred, and request that it be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Land and Surveys.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received, printed in the RECORD, and referred as requested by the Senator from Wyoming.

The bill (S. 2915) relating to rentals in certain oil and gas leases issued under authority of the act of February 25, 1920, as amended, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, in the case of lands not within any known geological structure of a productive oil or gas field, shall waive the rentals stipulated in oil and gas leases issued subsequent to August 21, 1935, under the authority of the act of February 25, 1920 (41 Stat. 437), as amended, for the second- and third-lease years; and, except as otherwise provided by law, no bond shall be required for the first 3 years of any such lease: Provided, however, That a bond shall be required before permission to drill under any such lease shall be granted. be granted.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES—AMENDMENT

Mr. BONE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

TAPS FOR THE PROFITEER-ARTICLE BY SENATOR BONE

[Mr. Lundeen asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Senator Bone from the June 1939 issue of Foreign Service, entitled "Taps for the Profiteer," which appears in the Appendix.]

CREDIT FOR SMALL BUSINESS-ADDRESS BY SENATOR LA FOLLETTE

TRUTH IN FABRIC

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under a special order of the Senate the Senate now takes up for consideration the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 162 was passed, the time to be equally divided between the Senator from Oklahoma and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Schwartz].

The question is, shall the vote be reconsidered? All in favor will say "aye;" opposed "no." Apparently, the vote is not reconsidered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The unfinished business comes before the Senate. There is no amendment pending and the Chair has agreed to recognize the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler]. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] asked the Chair this morning if he would recognize him or the Senator from Montana to offer an amendment. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Mon-

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may be furnished a copy of the proceedings of this body in connection with the motion to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 162 was passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. What is the request?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator restate the request?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I ask unanimous consent that I may be furnished a copy of the proceedings of this body in connection with the motion to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 162 was passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BARKLEY. Does it take unanimous consent to have the Senator furnished with a copy of the proceedings?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The official reporters will furnish the Senator a copy, if he desires it, without an order of the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I want it by 12 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] and myself be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Montana on behalf of himself and the Senator from Wisconsin will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following new section:

FARM MORTGAGE REFINANCING

SEC. 21. To remove the depressing economic effects of excessive farm mortgage debts and prevent the further increase of farm tenancy due to mortgage foreclosures, the Secretary of Agriculture shall be authorized, out of such funds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation as he finds available therefor, to refinance farm mortgages on which the payments periodically due exceed the normal farm income available for debt service. Such loans shall be made at a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation for not more than the cost to it of the capital required for any expenditure under be made at a rate or rates which may reasonably be expected to reimburse the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation for not more than the cost to it of the capital required for any expenditure under this section plus an amount not to exceed one-half of 1 percent per annum of such cost, but in no event shall such combined rate be in excess of 3 percent per annum; and such loans, to the extent not inconsistent with this section, shall be subject to titles I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, but may be made without regard to the provisions of section 4 of said act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall administer the provision of this section, and all repayments on account of such loans shall be credited to the account of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation. An annual examination similar to that required by section 12 of this act shall be made of the refinancing program provided by this section, and if any such examination discloses that the probable recovery of the amounts of the loans under this section is less than the principal amount of such loans with interest thereon, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to such Corporation a sum equal to the amount of such difference, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year commencing with the fiscal year 1941, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum equal to such payment.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President. I might say to the Senate

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I might say to the Senate that this amendment has the same objective as the Austin amendment, which passed the Senate some time ago by nearly a two-thirds vote and was stricken out in conference. Its purpose is to prevent farm owners from becoming farm tenants.

The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation has something over $612,000,000 in unused credit at the present time. This amendment seeks to permit the Secretary of Agriculture to do exactly for farm owners what is now being done under the Jones-Bankhead Act for farm tenants, except that under the Jones-Bankhead Act the authorities help the farmer become an owner after he is a tenant.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President-

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Is this proposal being offered as an amendment to the pending bill?

Mr. WHEELER. It is.

Under the Jones-Bankhead Act we have provided that the Government of the United States may put a tenant farmer on a farm and set him up in business. What this amendment seeks to do is to see to it that the farmer who is already on a farm, and who is running the farm at the present time, may remain on the farm, if he is a good farmer, under practically the same conditions that are provided in the Jones-Bankhead Act. It seems to me, as a matter of fact, that it is a much better thing to keep the farmer on the farm rather than to throw him off, and then say to him that we will find a place for him after he has become a tenant.

The amendment would meet the problem in the following way:

First. The Secretary of Agriculture would be authorized to refinance farm mortgages on which the payments periodically due exceed the normal farm income available for debt service. These loans would have the same terms as the tenant-purchase loans under titles I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. Each loan would have to be approved by a county committee of three farmers in the county, would be for 40 years, and would bear interest as provided in section 13 of Senate bill 2864; namely, the highest yield to maturity on the longest-term outstanding Government obligation.

The only provision of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act which would not apply is section 4, which requires that funds be allotted among the States on the basis of farm population and the prevalence of tenancy. This provision obviously is inappropriate as applied to refinancing loans, since the amount of mortgages requiring refinancing is high even in States with a small number of tenants.

In these respects, the amendment would have the same effect as the amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] to the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, adopted on June 28, 1939, but which died in conference. That amendment authorized the use of 10 percent of the funds annually available under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act for refinancing distressed farm mortgages.

Second. The chief difference from the Austin amendment is that the proposed amendment would not divert any of the $300,000,000 now provided for tenant-purchase loans. Instead, the Secretary of Agriculture would be authorized to use such idle funds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporationwhich was transferred to the Department of Agriculture by section 401 of reorganization plan No. I-as he finds available. This Corporation has authority to issue bonds totaling $2,000,000,000 for the purpose of making Land Bank Commissioner loans. However, the maximum amount of bonds heretofore issued is $1,651,559,000, of which $263,799,100 have already been retired by reason of the steadily decreasing number of Commissioner loans being made. There is, therefore, at present $612,240,100 available to the Corporation for which there is no longer any need and which, under the amendment, would be made immediately available for refinancing loans.

As I said at the outset, it seems to me that when a farmer is not able to pay his present loan by reason of the depressed economic condition, it is much better to keep him on the farm by making him a Government loan on this basis than to throw him off the farm and then find another place for him, if it can be found, under the Jones-Bankhead Act. So I am extremely hopeful that the amendment will be adopted; and I desire to call attention to some figures which have been compiled for me by the Department with reference to the amount of farm tenancy in the United States, and also as to the number of farms in the United States that are mort-

Mr. President, at this point I desire to have printed in the RECORD a brief memorandum, including statistics as to farm tenancy in the various States of the United States.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

1. The amendment will enable the Secretary to make loans not only to aid present tenants in becoming owners but also to save present owners from being reduced to tenancy through foreclosures.

2. On two occasions during this session, the Senate has recognized the urgency of this problem and has attempted to give

- 3. While the proposed amendment has the same objective as the Austin amendment, twice approved by this body, it has two features which meet any possible basis of objection.

 4. The amendment is directly germane to the purposes of the
- 5. The time to provide refinancing is now.
- 1. THE AMENDMENT WILL ENABLE THE SECRETARY TO MAKE LOANS NOT ONLY TO AID PRESENT TENANTS IN BECOMING OWNERS BUT ALSO TO SAVE PRESENT OWNERS FROM BEING REDUCED TO TENANCY THROUGH FORECLOSURES
- (a) Forty-one and five-tenths percent of all owner-operated farms in the country are now mortgaged, and, in particular States, the percentage runs between 50 and 70 percent.
- These high percentages are found in States with a high percentage of tenancy as well as in those States which, up to the - present time, have not had a serious farm-tenancy problem.

 Thus, in States with over 50 percent of farm tenancy:
 Alabama, with 64.5 percent tenancy, has 40 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.
- Arkansas, with 60 percent tenancy, has 40.4 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- with 65.6 percent tenancy, has 33.2 percent owner-Georgia,
- operated farms mortgaged.

 Louisiana, with 63.7 percent tenancy, has 35.6 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

 Mississippi, with 69.8 percent tenancy, has 41.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Oklahoma, with 61.2 percent tenancy, has 50.6 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged.
 South Carolina, with 62.2 percent tenancy, has 34.3 percent
- owner-operated farms mortgaged.

 Texas, with 57.1 percent tenancy, has 41 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- In States with from 40 to 50 percent of farm tenancy: Illinois, with 44.5 percent tenancy, has 41 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Iowa, with 49 percent tenancy, has 57.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Kansas, with 44 percent tenancy, has 53.9 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Nebraska, with 49.3 percent tenancy, has 61 percent owner-
- cperated farms mortgaged.

 North Carolina, with 47.2 percent tenancy, has 28.1 percent
- owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- South Dakota, with 48.6 percent tenancy, has 64.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- owner-operated farms mortgaged.

 Tennessee, with 46.2 percent tenancy, has 26.5 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

 In States with from 30 to 40 percent of farm tenancy:
 Colorado, with 39 percent tenancy, has 48.3 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

 Delaware, with 34.8 percent tenancy, has 35.1 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- operated farms mortgaged.
- Indiana, with 31 percent tenancy, has 44.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Kentucky, with 37.1 percent tenancy, has 25.4 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged.

 Minnesota, with 33.7 percent tenancy, has 53 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged.

 Missouri, with 38.8 percent tenancy, has 45.2 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

 North Dakota, with 39.1 percent tenancy, has 68.9 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- In States with from 20 to 30 percent of farm tenancy: California, with 21.7 percent tenancy, has 49.8 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged. Florida, with 28 percent tenancy, has 25.3 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Idaho, with 28.5 percent tenancy, has 53.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Maryland, with 27.2 percent tenancy, has 35.6 percent owner-
- operated farms moitgaged.

 Montana, with 27.7 percent tenancy, has 48.9 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Ohio, with 28.9 percent tenancy, has 35.2 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged. Oregon, with 21.7 percent tenancy, has 49.8 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged.

 Virginia, with 29.5 percent tenancy, has 23.4 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Washington, with 20 percent tenancy, has 47.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- West Virginia, with 25.8 percent tenancy, has 18.5 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Wisconsin, with 20.7 percent tenancy, has 59.2 percent owner-
- operated farms mortgaged.

 Wyoming, with 23.3 percent tenancy, has 51 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

 In States with from 10 to 20 percent of farm tenancy:
- Arizona, with 17.8 percent tenancy, has 28.9 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.
- Michigan, with 19 percent tenancy, has 45.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
- Nevada, with 14.4 percent tenancy, has 47.8 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

New Jersey, with 17.8 percent tenancy, has 50.4 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

New Mexico, with 19 percent tenancy, has 19 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

New York, with 14.2 percent tenancy, has 45 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.
Pennsylvania, with 17.7 percent tenancy, has 33.7 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

Rhode Island, with 13.8 percent tenancy, has 36.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Utah, with 14.9 percent tenancy, has 48.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Vermont, with 10.9 percent tenancy, has 50.9 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

In States with less than 10 percent of farm tenancy:
Connecticut, with 7.3 percent tenancy, has 47.8 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

Maine, with 6.9 percent tenancy, has 36 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Massachusetts, with 6.2 percent tenancy, has 53.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. New Hampshire, with 7.3 percent tenancy, has 39.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

(b) Furthermore, the ratio of mortgage debt to value of the mortgaged owner-operated farms has risen for the United States as a whole from 39.6 percent in 1930 to 50.2 percent as of 1935.

Thus, in States with over 50 percent of all owner-operated farms mortgaged, the ratio of debt to farm value increased between 1930 and 1935, as follows:

Idaho, with 53.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 18.9 percent.

Iowa, with 57.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 33.3 percent.

Kansas, with 53.9 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 40.5 percent.

Massachusetts, with 53.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 22.3 percent.

with 53 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 36.6 percent.

Nebraska, with 61 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 38.5 percent.

New Jersey, with 50.4 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 21.2 percent.

North Dakota, with 68.9 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 27.8 percent.

Oklahoma, with 50.6 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 36.1 percent

South Dakota, with 64.7 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 50 percent.

Vermont, with 50.9 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 12.4 percent.

Wisconsin, with 59.2 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio in-wisconsin, with 59.2 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 22.2 percent.

Wyoming, with 51 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 16.4 percent.

In States with from 40 to 50 percent of all owner-operated farms mortgaged, the ratio of debt to farm value increased between 1930 and 1935 as follows:

Alabama, with 40 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased

Arkansas, with 40.4 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 22.8 percent.

California, with 49.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 20.3 percent.

Colorado, with 48.3 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 17.5 percent.

Connecticut, with 47.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 22.1 percent.

Illinois, with 41 percent of farms mortgaged, the radio increased by 27.4 percent Indiana, with 44.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased

Michigan, with 45.7 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 16.9 percent.

New Mexico, with 19 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 15.8 percent.

West Virginia, with 18.5 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 39.3 percent.

(c) The value of farms operated by tenant farmers and the value of farms represented by mortgage debts on owner-operated farms, compared to the value of all farm real estate, has grown from 41 percent in 1890 to 61 percent as of 1935. In the Middle West and Northwest the percentage of the value of farm real estate not belonging to the farm operator ranges from 60 to 80 percent. not belonging to the farm operator ranges from 60 to 80 percent.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, so far as the pending piece of legislation is concerned, there is nothing in it which will be of any particular help to the farmers of this country.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. GILLETTE. As I read the amendment, there are only two limitations to the mortgages which could be refinanced. It applies to any mortgage anywhere, carried by anyone, and the only two limitations are that the mortgage must be in the category where the income is not sufficient to meet the service charge, and as to the amount of funds that are available from the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. GILLETTE. With those two limitations, mortgages could be refinanced anywhere the Secretary of Agriculture chose, in any amount he chose, for any creditor, with that Mr. WHEELER. That is my understanding.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I should like to add, if the Senator will permit, in response to the inquiry of the Senator from Iowa, that titles I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act apply.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not had time to study the amendment, but my attention has been called to the fact that under the present plan of making loans of the type intended to be covered by the amendment only 75 percent of the appraised value of the farm is loaned.

Mr. WHEELER. That is, at the present time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. WHEELER. The Federal land banks can lend only up to 50 percent of the farm value, and the Commissioner loans can amount to an additional 25 percent, making it 75 percent. This amendment is intended to provide that there can be 100-percent loans. It is intended for a case where a man is about to lose his property by reason of the fact that either the Federal land bank is going to foreclose or an insurance company or private bank is going to foreclose. They can compromise the debt with the creditor for a certain amount, and leave the man upon the farm on exactly the same terms on which they would put a new man on the farm under the Jones-Bankhead Act.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act also I understand full 100-percent loans are not made

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.
Mr. BARKLEY. But loans are made up to 75 percent of the value of the farm.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. Mr. BARKLEY. I am wondering whether it is sound policy to set up one type of loans for farmers, where one can get only 75 percent of the appraised value of his farm as a loan, and then, under this amendment, set up another category, so that an adjoining farmer, who is not making enough money to carry his indebtedness, could borrow 100 percent of the value of his farm.

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly the same thing is being done under the Jones-Bankhead Act. In other words, they are taking a tenant and putting him on a piece of land, and giving him a 100-percent loan.

Mr. BARKLEY. The loans being made by the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which the Senator would set up as the agency to carry out the provisions of the amendment, are not 100 percent. They are making only 75-percent loans.

Mr. WHEELER. Go into Montana, or Utah, or Kansas, or any other State of the Union, and distressed farmers will be found, men who have loans, and this would amortize the loans over a period of 40 years. If a committee of three farmers says a farmer who has his farm mortgaged is a good farmer, one who can work his debt out over a period of 40 years, instead of having to meet it in the short period of time he otherwise would, we ought to make him the loan, and extend the period 40 years. Or where there is a farmer who has a good farm and is going to lose his place because of the fall in land values, or economic conditions, we would say to him, "We do not want to drive you off your farm, we are going to leave you on the farm and give you a chance to pay out, because this is your home." And we are going to say to the insurance company, or the bank, to whomever it may be, "You have a loan of $7,500 on this farm. If you foreclose the mortgage, you can get only $5,000 and you get the farm. We will give you $5,000 cash, and let this man stay on the farm and work out the debt over a period of 40 years."

What has the Farm Mortgage Corporation been doing? They foreclose a mortgage and then put the borrower off the place. They buy the farm in; and do they let the farmer come back and take it? No; they will take some other tenant and put him upon that piece of land, on exactly the same basis with the man who had been farming it over a long period of time and wanted to stay on it. They will not give him a chance, but will take some other man who may not have been a farmer and may not have had any experience in farming in that locality, and put him on the piece

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. How does this relate itself to the Federal land banks and to the joint-stock banks? Does it attempt to bail them out?

Mr. WHEELER. Not at all.

Mr. BAILEY. Suppose I were a farmer and owed a Federal land bank; could I get money under this amendment and pay the Federal land bank off?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes; the Senator could get it and pay the Federal land bank, provided he owed the Federal land bank and they were about to foreclose his mortgage. We would say to the Federal land bank, "You cannot raise that amount of money by a sale of this piece of land; permit the debt to be compromised," the same as we would with some insurance company or some private owner. We would keep the farmer on the farm and give him a chance, not drive him out of his home and into the city to compete with city workers.

Mr. BAILEY. The consequence is to bail the Federal land banks or the joint-stock land banks out of their loans.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not agree with the Senator at all. The purpose of the amendment-

Mr. BAILEY. That may not be the purpose; I am speaking of the consequence.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think that is accurate. It is not the purpose to bail anybody out. The purpose is to keep the farmer on the farm.

Mr. BAILEY. I should like to keep the farmer on the farm, and all that, but I am saying that the consequence of the enactment of this amendment would be to bail the jointstock banks and the Federal land banks out with respect to their bad loans.

I will take my seat after one remark. I think the phrase "a 100-percent loan" is a contradiction in terms. There is no such thing as a 100-percent loan. If it is 100 percent, it is either a grant or a sale; it is not a loan. We are going into that business, and, of course, it means that we are either buying somebody's bad mortgage, the Federal land bank's bad mortgage, or the joint-stock bank's bad mortgage, or we are buying the farmer's land. A 100-percent loan on a horse is a purchase of the horse, and it is a gire to the borrower of the equity, if any. It is not a loan.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not intend to argue that point with the Senator, but, call it what you want to call it, if the farm situation in this country is not relieved and the farmers cannot remain on their farms, there is no telling what will happen to the country. There are millions of farmers all over the country who are going to have to leave their farms under the economic conditions which exist in this country, they are being driven off the farms by the hundreds all over the West and the Middle West, and if the farmers are driven off the farms, what is going to happen to this country? We have to look at it from a social and economic standpoint. The Senator may call it a loan or a purchase. but I say to him that we would be doing a better job by keeping on the farm the man who is a good farmer, who wants to stay on the farm, than taking a tenant farmer and putting him on a place and giving him a 100-percent loan. I submit that it is far better to keep a good farmer on a farm, a man who has raised a family and lived upon the place, than to throw him off and put on the place someone who has been a tenant farmer.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. GILLETTE. I am fully in accord with what the Senator has just stated. But there are a number of things in his proposal which disturb me. Is there anything in the proposal that would serve as a guide to the Secretary of Agriculture as to what composition shall be made with creditors on a particular mortgage? The best composition that can be made, or 100 percent? Is there any limitation whatever?

Mr. WHEELER. I assume the composition which would be made would be the best one that could be made by the Secretary of Agriculture. He would follow the standards provided by titles I and IV of the Bankhead Act.

Mr. GILLETTE. The second question I wish to ask is if there is any possibility or reasonable probability that the funds which are available could begin to meet the demand for refinancing mortgages?

Mr. WHEELER. Let me say to the Senator that I do not think all the farm mortgages should be or could be refinanced.

Mr. GILLETTE. No. I mean the mortgages that would come within this category.

Mr. WHEELER. I cannot say that, and I do not think anyone else in the world can say that. But this provision is intended only to take care of the purely distress cases in the United States. I am not prepared to say how many cases there are, but I do know that in some States there are a great many such cases.

Mr. GILLETTE. If that be the case, is there not a possibility that the first creditors who come in with a bunch of shaky mortgages will be the first ones who will be able to make a composition and to be refinanced?

Mr. WHEELER. The same question might just as well be asked in respect to the operations under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. Under that act there is not enough money provided to take care of all the tenant farmers who desire to acquire a farm. The only thing that can be done at this time, in view of the present economic conditions, is to endeavor to reduce the debt of the farmer and thus keep him on the farm. We have not increased the price of agricultural products in the last 7 or 8 years in such way as to give the farmer any real or substantial increase in purchasing power. Today the farmer is worse off in many instances—with the exception of the money he is getting from the Treasury of the United States—than he was in 1933.

Today, as in the past, the farmer buys at retail and sells his produce at wholesale.

Here is what is being done under the terms of the pending bill. It is proposed to make 100-percent loans to the railroads. The Congress is saying to the railroads, "We will buy equipment for you, and we will turn it over to you. For the money we furnish you we will charge you only one-half of 1 percent more than it costs the Government to obtain that money." But is any complaint made by Senators because it is proposed to make loans to the railroads, furnishing the money to them at one-half of 1 percent more than it costs the Government? Yet the Congress says to the little farmers of this country, "We are not going to buy equipment for you. We are not going to make it possible for you to stay on the farm. We are going to let you suffer farm foreclosures. But we are interested in protecting the railroads. We are more interested in protecting the banks, we are more interested in building toll roads, and doing this and doing that, than we are in keeping the farmers upon their farms." If Democratic Members of Congress went to the country and presented such a philosophy they would soon see where the Democratic Party would land.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. With the Senator's permission, I should like to add one word more to his assertion in regard to the loaning of money to the railroads 100 percent, as against loaning money to farmers 100 percent. Let us see what the security in each case is. The farmer's security is the land.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. NORRIS. The railroads' security is personal property in the way of engines and cars which will wear out, which will be destroyed in a comparatively short time, especially when they are not operated by their owners.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. NORRIS. So it seems to me that should be taken into consideration when a comparison is made.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. I hope the Senator will move to strike out the provision in the bill in regard to loaning 100 percent on personal property to the railroads. I would like to see that part of the bill go out.

Mr. WHEELER. I may say to the Senator that I intended to do so.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. CAPPER. The proposal of the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Wisconsin for refinancing western farmers is absolutely sound and highly desirable. Farmers of the West were never so greatly in need of help as now. A real emergency exists. Drought conditions in the Plains States over a period of several years have made it impossible for many farmers to meet their mortgage obligations. Foreclosures are increasing through no fault of the farmers. Many farmers are unable to meet either principal or interest payments. More than 45 percent of the farms of my State are being operated by tenants, and the number is steadily increasing. The Government is making loans to railroads and is spending billions to help the big cities with their municipal projects to provide work for the unemployed. It is equally important that the Government should assist the distressed farmers in remaining on their farms. It will not be long until many of these unfortunate farmers will be on relief unless we tide them over their difficulties and make it possible for them to stay on their farms by setting up a refinancing program along the lines proposed in the Wheeler-La Follette amendment. I hope the amendment will receive the approval of the Senate.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator permit me to ask a question?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. KING. Is not the Senator somewhat in error? Keep in mind the fact that we have Mr. Wallace at the head of the Department of Agriculture, and that he has tried half a dozen schemes and plans, and the more he has expended—and he has expended about $7,000,000,000 in the past few years—the worse off the farmers are. Are we to continue to put more money into the hands of Secretary Wallace in order that he may carry out his foolish plans which have proved so disastrous to agriculture?

Mr. CAPPER. All I know is that foreclosures are increasing steadily. Farm tenancy is increasing. It is true, as the Senator from Montana said, that in Kansas 45 percent of the farms are now operated by tenants, and that percentage is increasing every year. There never was a time when the farmers were so greatly in need of help as they are now, and I sincerely hope that the Senate will take favorable action on the proposal of the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. It may have no bearing on the amendment, but I cannot let the observation of the Senator from Utah go unnoticed, in which he states that under Mr. Wallace the condition of the farmer is worse than it has ever been.

Mr. KING. I think so.

Mr. BARKLEY. No one will contend that the farmer today is not getting more for his products than he received in 1932. No one will contend that the value of farm property in the United States has not increased from a little over $4,000,000,000 in 1932 to about $7,000,000,000 now. So that the observation of the Senator from Utah is, I think, not accurate. Regardless of how anyone votes on this amendment, certainly Mr. Wallace ought not to be criticized for his effort to help American agriculture, and I think American agriculture has been helped. Of course, the farmers are not out of the hole; they are not out of the woods; neither are any of us out yet, but the farmer has certainly been making progress under the present administration. And without in any way impugning the statements made by the Senator from Montana. I think it ought to be stated that as a whole agriculture is in a much better condition than it was 6 years

Mr. WHEELER. Let me say a word with reference to Mr. Wallace. I have not always agreed with him, but I say this about him, that there was never a more sincere, conscientious person than the Secretary of Agriculture. No one has tried harder to help the farmers of the United States than Henry Wallace. He is an able Secretary of Agriculture.

Now let me speak of the bill. What is the use of building roads, what is the use of building schools, what is the use of building swimming pools, auditoriums, or armories all over the United States, which are not going to be of any use whatsoever unless we can keep the farmers on the farms? We have spent millions of dollars building armories and roads, and so forth. I voted for such appropriations. But I say to the Senate there is going to be no need for these roads unless we can keep the farmer on the farm. There is no need for the schoolhouses or courthouses unless the farmer farms his land. There is no use of spending money for all these purposes unless we first get the farmer back on his feet.

The question is raised about the security that the farmer could give. The farmer gives his home as security, that home where he reared his children, which means everything to him, to his wife, and to his little children. A mortgage will be taken on that farmer's home, because it is said it is necessary if the farmer is to have a loan of 100 percent. Then that home may be taken from him.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. WHEELER. I vield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Does not the Senator see a distinction between a horse and that farm home and the farm upon which the farmer intends to make a living for himself and his family? When the Senator from North Carolina talks about a 100-percent loan on a horse, that is different than a 100-percent loan on a farm.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. There is all the difference in the world. Here is a man who has a farm home. He has raised his children on that farm. It means everything under the sun to him. Under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act the tenant is given a 100-percent loan, but he is also being given a home. That never had been his home before. What we are seeking to do is to keep over his head the farm home that the farmer has.

Let us speak of the railroads. See what is being done with them. The railroads can get loans. There is no difficulty about the railroads of this country getting loans on equipment trusts. They can get all the money they want in that manner. Any railroad in the United States, I do not care whether it is in bankruptcy or out of bankruptcy, can borrow all the money it wants on equipment trusts, because the equipment is taken as security.

We say to the railroads of the country, "We are going to build equipment for you, we are going to build it for you as you want it built, and we are going to lend you the money at one-half of 1 percent more than it costs us to obtain it." We are taking the engine and the cars as security. That engine and those cars, however, are constantly being worn out. But it is not proposed to do the same thing for the farmers. It is not proposed to take sowing machines as security. It is not proposed to take farm equipment. It is proposed to take land.

If we were to treat the farmer on the same basis as the railroads every time he wanted to buy a cow, or some horses or engines, or a threshing machine, or whatever it was, we would say to him, "We will lend you the money at one-half of 1 percent, and we will give you 20 years to pay for it. We will take your plow, your mowing machine, your thresher, or your binder as security for a 100-percent loan."

Mr. President, in my judgment, the amendment which I have offered would be one of the most forward steps ever taken in behalf of the distressed farmers of this Nation. It will at least stop the present dangerous trend toward a modern agricultural feudalism. We must do something for the distressed farmers of the country in this session of the Congress.

I am not talking about the poorer class of farmers. In Wisconsin we find the richest land in the world and the best farmers in the country-German farmers. When we go into North Dakota and Minnesota we find the best type of farmers to be found anywhere in the world. I refer to the Scandinavian farmers. I challenge anyone to find a better class of farmers than those people. The same thing is true of the farmers in Montana and other sections of the country.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I might not entirely agree with the comparison which the Senator draws as to the ability of farmers, because I think we have good farmers in every section of the United States.

Mr. WHEELER. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am very much interested in the objective which the Senator seeks to attain by his amendment. Unfortunately I did not hear all of his statement. Did the Senator advise the Senate as to the amount of money which would be available for the proposed refinancing program?

Mr. WHEELER. My understanding is that the amount available would be something over $600,000,000.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The administration of the fund under the provisions of the amendment would be in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. As the Senator knows, the Farm Credit Administration and the Farm Mortgage Corporation were transferred to the general supervision and direction of the Secretary of Agriculture under one of the reorganization orders. The amendment provides specifically that the Secretary shall use so much of the funds which the Corporation has the power to borrow for this purpose as he finds available therefor.

Mr. RUSSELL. What is the ceiling on the total amount? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The total unused borrowing power of the Farm Mortgage Corporation is about $614,000,000.

Mr. RUSSELL. There is a limitation on the total amount of funds available.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That limitation exists because of the limitation put upon the total borrowing power of the Farm Mortgage Corporation at the time it was created in 1934.

Mr. RUSSELL. There is a ceiling on the amount of money that would be available for this purpose. At the present time it amounts to approximately $600,000,000.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course, as repayments are made on other loans other funds would in turn become available, in the nature of a revolving fund, to assist in refinancing other farm loans.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. KING. I am asking for information. I am interested in trying to ascertain where the funds are coming from, and what organization would make the advances required under the provisions of the Senator's amendment. I find that on April 30, 1939, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation had a note-issuing power of $2,000,000,000, and that it had already issued notes which were held by the public amounting to $1,379,400,000. So if the limit were reached, there would be available the difference between $1,379,400,000 and $2,000,000,000. Is that correct?

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. KING. Under the Senator's amendment would resort be had to the $2,000,000,000 authorization to the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation?

Mr. WHEELER. I forget the exact figure, but I think the amount available would be about $612,000,000.

Mr. KING. It is the difference between the two figures I have stated.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Together with such commissioner loans as may be repaid from time to time, which go back into the Corporation and are thus available to retire its outstanding obligations.

Mr. KING. The ceiling would be $2,000,000,000.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Of course, there would not be $2,-000,000,000 available for this purpose, because part of it has already been utilized for other purposes; but insofar as any of those loans were repaid, additional funds would be available.

Mr. KING. I should like to ask one other question, if I may.

Mr. WHEELER. The amount available could not be $2,000,000,000.

Mr. KING. What I meant was that the loans could not exceed the $2,000,000,000 authorized.

Mr. WHEELER. The amount available could not possibly be that much because of the fact that bonds of the Federal land banks were bought with some of the money, to the extent of about $700,000. I do not believe the amount available would be $600,000,000. I doubt whether the funds used would amount to $600,000,000. I think the limit would be not more than $500,000,000.

Mr. KING. One other question. The bill provides for a $600,000,000 additional credit, money, or appropriationwhichever term one desires to employ-to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. WHEELER. The amendment does not provide for additional funds. It simply authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to utilize available Farm Mortgage Corporation credit to refinance farm mortgages.

Mr. KING. Could not the $600,000,000, or some part of it, be made available to accomplish the end the Senator has indicated?

Mr. WHEELER. I am not familiar with the $600,000,000 to which the Senator refers.

Mr. KING. It was for tenant farmers.

Mr. WHEELER. That activity comes under the Bankhead-Jones Act, to which I called attention. I think I am correct in that statement. If I am not, I can be corrected. The Bankhead-Jones Act provides for the purchase of land and equipment for tenant farmers, to put them on farms, and the making of 100-percent loans. What we are proposing is much more sound than the Bankhead-Jones Act, because we are saying to the farmer or the stockman, "The price of your cattle has dropped, and economic conditions are bad. You have a mortgage, and you cannot meet the amortization of that mortgage, so we will lend you the money under this provision and give you 40 years to pay it back," just as we do on reclamation projects. On reclamation projects we allow 40 years for repayment. We say to the farmer, "We will reduce the amount of money you have to pay each year, so that you may stay upon your farm."

Mr. KING. On page 5 of the bill under consideration, in section 4, subsection (5), I find the following:

To the Department of Agriculture: $600,000,000 for loans for facilities for farm tenants, farm laborers, sharecroppers—

Could any part of that sum be made available for the purposes indicated by the Senator?

Mr. WHEELER. Not under this amendment.

Mr. KING. Why could not part of the $600,000,000 be made available to attain the objects indicated by the Senator? It seems to me there is much merit in what the Senator has been arguing for; and it occurs to me that it would be much wiser to divert a portion of the $600,000,000 to the accomplishment of the end which the Senator seeks than to carry out the plan in the manner which he has suggested.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. Would the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation be able to make Commissioner loans as it has in

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. The truth is that the Commissioner loans have been going down. The Corporation has been collecting much more money than it has been lending.

Mr. ELLENDER. Under the terms of the amendment, the Farm Mortgage Corporation could use all the money available for the purpose indicated in the amendment.

Mr. WHEELER. It could do so if it desired; but only in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. Under the reorganization plan, the Secretary of Agriculture is also the boss of the Farm Credit Administration.

Mr ELLENDER. Does not the Senator think it might be well to set aside a certain percentage of the amount to be used to continue such loans?

Mr. WHEELER. We did not want to freeze the amount. We wanted to leave the matter in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. We feel sure that the Secretary of Agriculture, having the administration of both funds, would not do anything to jeopardize one fund while he was doing something with the other.

Mr. ELLENDER. I notice that the purpose of the amendment is to refinance farm mortgages on which the payments periodically due exceed the normal farm income available for debt service.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. ELLENDER. Does that provision cover any mortgages, whether made privately or with the Government?

Mr. WHEELER. Any mortgages, whether made privately or otherwise.

Mr. ELLENDER. I notice that there is a yardstick in the amendment. If the income of the farmer is not sufficient to meet his payments, then refinancing may take place.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.
Mr. ELLENDER. What yardstick is the Secretary of Agriculture to use in making new loans? Is he to take into consideration the farm income?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes: I think so. The Secretary would make loans through the procedure provided by the Bankhead Act. If a farmer has a large ranch, he may want a loan, but if his financial condition is not a distressed one, or if he was not facing foreclosure, he would not be eligible.

The purpose of the amendment is to meet the situation of the distressed farmer who is about to lose his farm because of the fact that his income is not sufficient to meet his payments. We seek to give him a longer period in which to repay his loan, reduce the amount of his annual payments, and amortize the principal.

Mr. ELLENDER. In amortizing the loans the Secretary of Agriculture will certainly have to take into consideration the income of the farmer and so arrange the loan that the amount to be paid back by the farmer will be about what the farm can bear.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President-

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. MILLER. I merely wish to say to the Senator that I proposed in the committee when this bill was under consideration an amendment which the Senate had at one time adopted when it was offered by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin]. Under the proposal that was before the committee we were considering taking a part of the $600,000,000 authorized on page 5 of the bill for this purpose. We had Mr. Baldwin, of the Farm Security Administration, before the committee. He pointed out some reasons which, to my mind, were sufficient to indicate that it would be unwise to undertake such a plan in this bill. But the amendment now being proposed, I believe, removes the stated objections of the Farm Security Administration.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. So I see no reason why it should not be adopted, though I wish to make a suggestion in connection with it. I know the Senator does not want to make it possible for the farmers to clamor for loans when there is no possible way of their repaying such loans.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. In other words, if a man is bankrupt, he is bankrupt.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. MILLER. And it is useless to call the doctor after a man has died. I suggest to the Senator that he give consideration to placing in this amendment the word "amortize" immediately following the word "finance."

Mr. WHEELER. I do not catch exactly the Senator's suggestion.

Mr. MILLER. I suggest that the Senator give consideration to the placing in this amendment the word "amortize" after the word "finance." The purpose of the sentence, as I understand, is to give the farmer a greater spread and thus enable him with his reduced income to meet these payments and pay the loan back without loss to the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct. As a matter of fact, under this bill I think that the Secretary is bound to do that very thing, because the other provisions of the bill specify that the loans must be self-liquidating.

Mr. MILLER. That is true; the other provisions of the bill do so specify.

Mr. WHEELER. So as a matter of fact what the Senator is suggesting seems to me is not necessary in view of the other provision.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I can see some objection to the idea of the Senator from Arkansas. I should like to illustrate it by a practical example. As the Senator knows, we have two major apple-producing sections in the State of Washington. One is the Yakima and the other is the Wenatchee. When the depression came many of the business interests of the Yakima Valley got together and provided guaranties for a fund for a debt-adjustment program. As the result of that fund it was possible to get a scaling down of debts by the holders of the various mortgages, because they realized that the mortgages were not worth the amount of their face, and they realized that the funds available would take care of 50 or 60 percent of them.

In the Wenatchee Valley they did not have that sort of businessmen in the valley, and they were unable to do what had been done in the Yakima Valley. I have been after the Farm Credit Administration ever since I have been here to take that position in the Wenatchee Valley. They have refused, because they said under the law they were not able

It seems to me that it goes back to the question asked by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE]. It seems to me that if we give this authority it is going to be possible for the Mortgage Administration to go into places such as that, take the leadership in a debt-adjustment program, and accomplish results with the use of a very small amount of money. If the mortgagees realized that there was someone who would be willing to give them 50 percent or 60 percent cash, then they would be willing to cut down their mortgages.

If we used the word "amortize," I am afraid it would apply to the total amount of the mortgage, and those holding the mortgage would think that they would be able to obtain 100 percent cash on their mortgages, and it might defeat the very beneficial effect of the Senator's amendment.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator very much, because he stated it better than I could have, and I shall keep that point in mind. For instance, some insurance companies hold mortgages. They do not want to foreclose. They have been ruthless, in some instances, in foreclosing. Other insurance companies have not been ruthless, and have done some very splendid work in keeping the farmer on the farm and giving him a chance to pay out. Others, however, have been rather ruthless in foreclosing. If they could say "If you will take this farm you can have it for, say, 50 percent in cash of what the mortgage calls for." Consequently, the mortgage indebtedness on that farm would be cut down.

I am afraid if we use this language that they will say, "Give me the full amount and I will amortize it over 40 years"; the debtor can pull out, and we will not take the cut.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield

Mr. WHEELER. I yield. Mr. MILLER. What the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Washington say may be true. It is not my purpose to prevent the readjustment of the debts, but under the act creating the Corporation, it has a specific duty to perform—it is the refinancing corporation of the Farm Credit Administration and the land banks—and all I am seeking to do-and I am just as much interested in this debt-adjustment program as is any other man-is not to give the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation an alibi or an "out" to say, "Our hands are bound by virtue of the act creating us, we cannot go further than do what the act provides." That is the point I am getting at.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator. I know the Senator is interested as much as is any other Member of the Senate in doing the same thing as some of the rest of us are seeking to do, and he has been fighting for that for a long period of time.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. May I suggest that instead of substituting the word "amortize" for "financing"-

Mr. MILLER. I should not want to substitute it; I merely want to add "amortize."

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Would the Senator make it "or amortize"?

Mr. MILLER. Oh, yes; that would be all right. I think it would make the bill better.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.
Mr. GILLETTE. I notice that the Senator's amendment proposes an annual examination the same as that provided in section 12 of the bill. The examination provided for in section 12 of the bill is by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Loan Administrator. I wonder if it is explicit enough? Certainly those funds come from a definite source: and, the loans having been made to various farmers, an examination to check up whether or not there is a probable loss. to be charged back on the Treasury, certainly should not be made by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Federal Loan Administrator, but should be made by the loaning agency.

Mr. WHEELER. I am inclined to agree that that is correct.

Mr. President, I have concluded.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I desire to discuss for a few moments the amendment which the Senator from Montana and myself are offering to this bill. I agree fully with his statement that the incorporation of this amendment will assure benefits flowing from this large extension of the credit facilities of the Government to the farmers. Without it, I doubt if the farmers will receive very much benefit from this large increase and utilization of the credit facilities of the Federal Government.

In order that this amendment may not disturb those who are concerned about the ceiling of authorization for the utilization of Government credit contained in the pending bill, we have proposed that the funds available to the Secretary of Agriculture for the refinancing of distressed farm mortgages shall come from already authorized borrowing power held by the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

This corporation was established by an act known as the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, approved January 1, 1934. The directors of the corporation are the Secretary of the Treasury, or an officer of the Treasury designated by him, the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and the Land Bank Commissioner. The Corporation was given a capital stock of $200,000,000 and was authorized to issue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, bonds in an aggregate amount not exceeding $2,000,000,000.

The powers of the Federal Mortgage Corporation may be summarized as follows:

First. Until February 1, 1940, the Land Bank Commissioner is authorized to make so-called commissioner's loans on behalf of the corporation.

Second. These loans, which may be secured either by a first or second mortgage, shall not exceed 75 percent of the normal value of the mortgaged property.

Third. Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation is also authorized to exchange its bonds, upon application of any Federal land bank, for consolidated farm-loan bonds of equal face value issued by such Federal land banks.

Under section 401 of reorganization plan No. I, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation was transferred to the Department of Agriculture. I quote the pertinent language of the order, as follows:

SEC. 401. (a) Transfers to the Department of Agriculture: The Farm Credit Administration, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corpora-tion, and the Commodity Credit Corporation, and their functions and activities, together with their respective personnel, records, and property (including office equipment), are hereby transferred to the Department of Agriculture and shall be administered in such Department under the general direction and supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, who shall be responsible for the coordination of their functions and activities.

The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation having been transferred to the Department of Agriculture to be administered under the general direction and supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, the amendment provides that the Secretary of Agriculture may utilize such of the funds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation or such of its borrowing power as he finds available for the purpose of refinancing distressed farm mortgages. We have purposely not indicated in the amendment any definite portion of the remaining borrowing power or funds of the Corporation, because we believe that the Secretary of Agriculture now being the over-all supervising authority of the Farm Credit Administration and the Farm Mortgage Corporation, and being charged, as he would be if this amendment were adopted, with this refinancing program, it was better to leave it within his discretion to say how much of the funds and borrowing power of the Corporation he would utilize for this purpose, rather than to submit a specific proposal segregating or fixing a limitation upon the amount of money which could be used for this purpose.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the Senator from Wisconsin knows that I am always sympathetic with any effort to help produce farm owners or to retain farm owners. As I understand, the Farm Credit Administration, formerly an independent agency, has now been transferred to the Department of Agriculture; and under the Reorganization Act and under reorganization plan No. I, which was submitted by the President and is now in force, the Farm Credit Corporation is somewhat in the same situation.

My attention has been called by Governor Hill, the Administrator of the Farm Credit Administration, to the possible difficulty in administering the language of this amendment, because it sets up two different kinds of bond issues—one according to the practice they have already had in vogue, under which they have used about $1,400,000,000 of the borrowing authority that was conferred upon the Corporation, the other being the possible use of the six-hundred-and-odd million dollars of reserve borrowing power under this amendment.

I think, as a matter of fact, the Farm Mortgage Corporation would like to get entirely out of this feature of the program and turn it over to somebody else. Therefore, the suggestion has been made that still retaining the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture to make these loans according to the amendment which, as I understand, is 100 percent possible refinancing of existing farm mortgages, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be authorized to issue this exact amount of bonds and make it available for the Secretary of Agriculture, in order to get the Farm Mortgage Corporation out of the double position of issuing two different kinds of bonds.

What is the Senator's reaction to that suggestion?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. My reaction to the suggestion is, first, that I do not think it is necessary, with all due respect to the president of the Farm Mortgage Corporation, because as the Senator knows, the borrowings of this Corporation are made by and with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. In the second place, I do not think we are in such a position that we can definitely say just exactly how much of this borrowing power shall be available to the Farm Mortgage Corporation for the powers and purposes it has under existing law, and how much should be made available for the purposes of this amendment. The securities of the Farm Mortgage Corporation are guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Federal Government. Therefore, I can see no practical difficulty in any of their financing operations, because in any case they will be governed by the desires of the Secretary of the Treasury as to whether the money shall be obtained by the Corporation in one form of security or in another.

I will say to the Senator that we did not make this decision without careful consideration. It would be unwise for us at this time to fix the limitation, for, by implication, that might be a direction or certainly an indication of the fact that Congress thought a definite sum of money could be made available for this purpose. Personally, I think it is the wiser course to permit the Secretary of Agriculture, who is now responsible for the general administration and supervision of all these agencies, to make that decision as time and experience demonstrate to be wise.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. GILLETTE. I should like to ask the Senator what the sponsors of the amendment have in mind as to the method of administering the amendment. Take, for instance, the case of myself as a farmer out in Iowa: If I desired to take advantage of this amendment in case it should be adopted, where would I go? What machinery would be used by the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of appraising my property and negotiating these loans?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Of course, that responsibility will devolve upon the Secretary of Agriculture; but he now has under his jurisdiction and general administrative supervision the Farm Credit Administration, the Farm Mortgage Corporation, and the Farm Security Administration; he has, in addition, all the facilities of the Department of Agriculture; and it does not seem to me that there will be any real difficulty in providing, out of the already existing machinery of the Department of Agriculture, the administrative set-up for this amendment.

Mr. GILLETTE. The Senator, I am sure, will have in mind, in suggesting the use of the Farm Credit Administration and the Farm Security Administration, that they are dealing in an entirely different class of security and an entirely different class of loan.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Exactly; and by mentioning them and all the other facilities of the Department I am not suggesting any particular method or the agency that the Secretary would utilize. I am pointing out the vast facilities of the Department of Agriculture now augmented by the Executive order. It will be a relatively simple matter for the Secretary of Agriculture to set up an appropriate organization to administer and carry out the purposes and intent of the amendment.

Mr. GILLETTE. The Senator feels that it would not be necessary to set up an additional organization of any magnitude?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am satisfied it is not necessary.

Mr. President, I want to say further that it was our purpose to avoid any possible conflict with the making of Land Bank Commissioner loans and the other existing powers of the Farm Mortgage Corporation; therefore the amendment which the Senator from Montana and I are tendering does not earmark any of the funds, but charges the Secretary of Agriculture with utilizing for this purpose only such portion of the funds of the Corporation as he finds available therefor.

This amendment is so drawn as to provide that loans made thereunder must comply with the provisions of title I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. The provisions of these titles which now apply to tenant purchase loans, and by our amendment would be extended to the refinancing loans which it provides, are as follows:

First. Section I of title I would prohibit refinancing loans to any person who is not a citizen of the United States, and would prohibit any loans to be made for the acquisition of any farm unless such farm is of a size sufficient to constitute "an efficient farm-management unit and to enable a diligent farm family to carry on successful farming in the locality."

Second. Section 2 of title I would prohibit any farmer from being refinanced unless a county committee consisting of three farmers residing in the locality find that by reason of his character, ability, and experience he is likely successfully to carry out his undertakings, and that the farm with respect to which the loan is made is such that there is a reasonable likelihood that repayment will be made. The committee would also be required to certify the reasonable value of the farm. No refinancing loan could be made with respect to any farm in which any member of the committee, or any person related to such member within the third degree of consanguinity or afflinity has any property interest.

Third. Section 3 (a) of title I would require that the refinancing loans be repaid within a period of not more than 40 years; contain covenants to protect the security and assure that the farm will be maintained in repair, and waste and exhaustion of the farm prevented; provide that, upon the borrower's disposition of the farm without the approval of the Government, the unpaid balance may be declared immediately due and payable.

In the fourth place, section 42 of title IV provides for the appointment of a county committee composed of three farmers residing in the county.

Section 48 of title IV authorizes the Secretary "to provide for the payment of any obligation or indebtedness to him under this act under a system of variable payments under which a surplus above the required payment will be collected in periods of above-normal production or prices and employed to reduce payments below the required payment in periods of subnormal production or prices."

In short, the effect of the reference in the amendment to titles I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act would be to permit the Secretary of Agriculture to make refinancing loans to farmers about to lose their farms and become tenants, on exactly the same basis, with the same safeguards, as loans which he is authorized to make to present tenants to enable them to become farm owners.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. HILL. As I understand, each and every one of the conditions to which the Senator has called the Senate's attention will and must apply with reference to each and every loan made under the Senator's amendment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator from Alabama is absolutely correct, and it seems to me that there can be no successful and logical argument made against the proposal contained in the amendment, namely, that we will apply the same terms and conditions to farm owners who in many, many instances, as I am sure the Senator from Alabama well knows, are about to lose their farms through no fault of their own, that we will apply to those under the Jones-Bankhead Act who are now tenants and whom we seek to make farm owners.

Mr. HILL. I agree thoroughly with everything the Senator has said. One of the most acute and fundamental problems confronting this country today is the problem of farm tenancy. We made a great step forward when we passed the Bankhead farm-tenant law, sponsored by my distinguished colleague from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead]. But to do that and stop there is not to go forward. We must do everything we can to prevent other farmers from slipping back into the farm-tenant class. Sixty-five percent of all the farmers of Alabama today are farm tenants, but 79 percent of all the farms in Alabama are under mortgage, and we must prevent the farmers who today still own their homes from slipping back into the farm-tenant class. I congratulate the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Montana on the amendment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I appreciate very much what the Senator has said. In passing, I wish to pay tribute to the statesmanship of the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] and Representative Jones of Texas, the chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, both men whom I personally admire very greatly for having broken the ground and established this policy of checking farm tenancy, which I hope will be carried on and enlarged to the point where we will shrink down this menacing growth of farm tenancy in the United States.

In addition, I should like to say that it is one of those inexplicable inconsistencies in governmental policy, to see farmers on farms, where their families, in some instances, have lived for two or three generations, and who made mortgages in perfectly good faith at the time of high farm prices and high land values—to see those people foreclosed and turned away from their homes, and put out upon the highways. After they have been stripped of all they possess, have them ground down through the cruel process of pauperization, they then become eligible under a Government program which seeks to rehabilitate them and put them back on some other farm.

In the meantime, the agency which foreclosed has taken a loss on the mortgage, in almost every instance, at the foreclosure sale, and permitted some other person, who did not have the farm as a home, to come in and to occupy it, and to farm the land, and in many instances make a success of it.

Here is a proposal which I regard of vital importance, and I do hope that it will become a part of the bill as it passes the Senate, and I hope that it will become a part of the bill if it becomes the law of the land.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to add to what the Senator has just said, this statement that there can be no solution of the farm problem in this country unless in some way the farm mortgages are liquidated. What we have spent in various ways in an effort to relieve agriculture during the last 6 years would have gone far toward the actual extinction of farm mortgages in the United States, although they may total yet something like $8,000,000,000. Enormous sums have been spent, which passed with the spending annually, without greatly improving the condition of agriculture or the farmer, and the real crying need of the American farmer is a way out from his mortgage indebtedness.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I appreciate the statement of the able Senator from Georgia, and I may say that until we do something effective with this farm-mortgage situation we can go on pouring these hundreds of millions of dollars out of the Treasury in an effort to bolster the farmer's income, and he will still be in the same position in which he was before we started.

Mr. GEORGE. I thoroughly agree with the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Unless we find some way to handle this farm-mortgage situation, unless we find some way to scale down the farm mortgages so that the farmers of the country may start again upon this lower basis of valuation and prices, we shall continue to see the onward march of farm tenancy, and the menace which it presents to the preservation of democratic processes in these United States of America.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I am not asking for an expression from the Senator, but we have some recollection of giving a moratorium on debts a short time ago to foreign nations. If it is all right to do that for foreign nations, what about a little moratorium in this country? That is merely my own expression.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his statement. I wish to hurry on, because I do not desire to detain the Senate longer.

The Senate has twice at this session gone on record for the principle contained in the pending amendment in adopting two amendments offered by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin]. The only difference is that this amendment does not take funds out of those made available for the Jones-Bankhead Farm Tenancy Act, as the two amendments offered by the Senator from Vermont did, and I was very happy to support those amendments. But unfortunately those amendments, because of parliamentary developments, did not become law. Now, in the pending amendment, we are merely utilizing the same principle involved in those amendments, and we are utilizing an already existing authorization, given in 1934 to the Farm Mortgage Corporation, to issue securities.

Mr. President, I have no words with which I can paint effectively the plight of the farm owner threatened with foreclosure. But it is a plight which we should not and cannot in good conscience temporize with longer in this country. Delinquencies and foreclosures are steadily increasing. In 1936, 14.9 percent of mortgages held by the farm land banks were delinquent. In 1937 the percentage had risen to 15.9 percent, and in the calendar year, ended in December 1938, the percentage had risen to 20 percent.

As of December 31, 1938, the land banks owned 24,000 farms, with a carrying value of $78,514,000. Those farms had been acquired through foreclosure, due in most instances, in my judgment, to no fault of the farm owner. This figure does not include thousands of additional farms which had previously been acquired through foreclosure, and had been disposed of to new purchasers.

If to those figures are added the even greater number of delinquencies and foreclosures which have of necessity occurred in the case of private lending agencies, the magnitude and urgency of the farm-mortgage problem can be appreciated by Members of this body.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at the conclusion of my remarks certain data relating to this

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

[See exhibit A.]

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the State which I have the honor in part to represent in this body is a great agricultural, as well as a great industrial State. In anything like normal times about 50 percent of the income of the people of Wisconsin is produced from agriculture, and about 50 percent from manufacturing, industry, and business. It is a healthy economic unit in normal times. We were fortunate in the stock of the people who came to Wisconsin and afforded it its original citizenship-thrifty, hard-working men and women from the Scandinavian countries, as well as men and women from Germany who had a great liberal spirit, and who, after the failure of the revolution in 1848, began their migration to Wisconsin, where they hoped they might establish a liberal democracy. I venture to say, Mr. President, that they are as effective, as efficient, as intelligent, and as hard-working a group of farmers as exist in the United States.

In addition, Mr. President, we have had the influence of the agricultural college of the great State University of Wisconsin, which has helped to bring to the farmers of our State modern scientific methods of production.

Yet, Mr. President, I know farmers, some of whom I have known since I was knee high to a grasshopper, men in many instances who are the second and third generation, on their farms, men who have used power machinery, men who have high-grade or pure-blood dairy stock, men who use scientific methods of feeding and production, men who work from dawn until dark, not only by themselves, but with every member of the family old enough to contribute anything in the way of labor on that farm, who, because of the high valuation and the high prices that existed at the time that farm was mortgaged, now find themselves sinking, sinking under this weight of absolutely unpayable principal

Mr. President, it is in behalf of farmers in Wisconsin, it is in behalf of farmers all over the United States, which the statistics produced by the Senator from Montana demonstrate are in as dire need as are the farmers of Wisconsin, that I appeal for the adoption of this amendment.

I want to say here and now, Mr. President, that this is no pro forma fight so far as I am concerned. If the amendment goes in the bill I want to see it in the bill when it comes back from conference, and for that reason I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

EXHIBIT A

Forty-one and five-tenths percent of all owner-operated farms in the country are now mortgaged, and in particular States the percentage runs between 50 and 70 percent.

These high percentages are found in States with a high percentage of tenancy, as well as in those States which, up to the present time, have not had a serious farm-tenancy problem.

Thus, in States with over 50 percent of farm tenancy:
Alabama, with 64.5 percent tenancy, has 40 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

Arkansas, with 60 percent tenancy, has 40.4 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Georgia, with 65.6 percent tenancy, has 33.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Louisiana, with 63.7 percent tenancy, has 35.6 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Mississippi, with 69.8 percent tenancy, has 41.2 percent owner-

Oklahoma, with 61.2 percent tenancy, has 50.6 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

South Carolina, with 62.2 percent tenancy, has 34.3 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Texas, with 57.1 percent tenancy, has 41 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.
In States with from 40 to 50 percent of farm tenancy:
Illinois, with 44.5 percent tenancy, has 41 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Iowa, with 49 percent tenancy, has 57.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Kansas, with 44 percent tenancy, has 53.9 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Nebraska, with 49.3 percent tenancy, has 61 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

North Carolina, with 47.2 percent tenancy, has 28.1 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

South Dakota, with 48.6 percent tenancy, has 64.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Tennessee, with 46.2 percent tenancy, has 26.5 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.
In States with from 30 to 40 percent of farm tenancy:

Colorado, with 39 percent tenancy, has 48.3 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Delaware, with 34.8 percent tenancy, has 35.1 percent owner-

Delaware, with 34.8 percent tenancy, has 35.1 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Indiana, with 31 percent tenancy, has 44.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Kentucky, with 37.1 percent tenancy, has 25.4 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Minnesota, with 33.7 percent tenancy, has 53 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Missouri, with 38.8 percent tenancy, has 45.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

North Dakota, with 39.1 percent tenancy, has 68.9 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

operated farms mortgaged.

In States with from 20 to 30 percent of farm tenancy:
California, with 21.7 percent tenancy, has 49.8 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

Florida, with 28 percent tenancy, has 25.3 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Idaho, with 28.5 percent tenancy, has 53.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Maryland, with 27.2 percent tenancy, has 35.6 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

Montana, with 27.7 percent tenancy, has 48.9 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Ohio, with 28.9 percent tenancy, has 35.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged

Oregon, with 21.7 percent tenancy, has 49.8 percent owner-oper-

Virginia, with 21.7 percent tenancy, has 49.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Virginia, with 29.5 percent tenancy, has 23.4 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Washington, with 20 percent tenancy, has 47.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

West Virginia, with 25.8 percent tenancy, has 18.5 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Wilsonship with 20.7 percent tenancy, has 50.2 percent aware.

Wisconsin, with 20.7 percent tenancy, has 59.2 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

Wyoming, with 23.3 percent tenancy, has 51 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

In States with from 10 to 20 percent of farm tenancy: Arizona, with 17.8 percent tenancy, has 28.9 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

Michigan, with 19 percent tenancy, has 45.7 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

Nevada, with 14.4 percent tenancy, has 47.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. New Jersey, with 17.8 percent tenancy, has 50.4 percent owner-

New Jersey, with 17.8 percent tenancy, has 50.4 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

New Mexico, with 19 percent tenancy, has 19 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

New York, with 14.2 percent tenancy, has 45 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

Pennsylvania, with 17.7 percent tenancy, has 33.7 percent owneroperated farms mortgaged.

Rhode Island with 13.8 percent tenancy.

Rhode Island, with 13.8 percent tenancy, has 36.7 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.
Utah, with 14.9 percent tenancy, has 48.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Vermont, with 10.9 percent tenancy, has 50.9 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

In States with less than 10 percent of farm tenancy:
Connecticut, with 7.3 percent tenancy, has 47.8 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Maine, with 6.9 percent tenancy, has 36 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged. Massachusetts, with 6.2 percent tenancy, has 53.8 percent owner-

operated farms mortgaged.

New Hampshire, with 7.3 percent tenancy, has 39.2 percent owner-operated farms mortgaged.

(b) Furthermore, the ratio of mortgage debt to value of the mortgaged owner-operated farms has risen for the United States as a whole from 39.6 percent in 1930 to 50.2 percent as of 1935.

Thus, in States with over 50 percent of all owner-operated farms mortgaged, the ratio of debt to farm value increased between 1930 and 1935 as follows:

Idaho, with 53.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 18.9 percent

Iowa, with 57.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased

Kansas, with 53.9 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 40.5 percent.

Massachusetts, with 53.8 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 22.3 percent.

Minnesota, with 53 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 36.6 percent.

Nebraska, with 61 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 38.5 percent.

creased by 38.5 percent.

New Jersey, with 50.4 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 21.2 percent.

North Dakota, with 68.9 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 27.8 percent.

Oklahoma, with 50.6 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 36.1 percent.

South Dakota, with 64.7 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 50 percent.

Vermont, with 50.9 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 12.4 percent.

Wisconsin, with 59.2 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 22.2 percent.

Wyoming, with 51 percent of farms mortgaged, the ratio increased by 16.4 percent.

In States with from 40 to 50 percent of all owner-operated farms mortgaged, the ratio of debt to farm value increased between 1930

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] offered on behalf of himself and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette], on which the yeas and nays are demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I should like to say a word before the vote is taken. I do not rise to oppose the amendment, but I wish to make a brief statement.

Perhaps it is unfortunate that this question has not received attention in the committee. This is not said by way of any criticism. It is a matter of such vital importance that it would have been wise if a committee could have considered it, and there may be some administrative difficulties because of the double type of bonds which may have to be issued under it. It may be that that can be worked out so far as the language is concerned, and if the amendment is put in the bill-and I am of the opinion that it will be adopted-I will say to both Senators who have sponsored it that it may be necessary to perfect the language in such a way as to cure any administrative defects which may be found in it.

I wish only to say, in response to a remark made by the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] a while ago, when he stated that the farmers were in worse condition now than they have ever been, that in the 5-year period from 1926 to 1930, both years inclusive, an average of 16 farms were foreclosed out of every thousand in the United States. In the single year 1932, 39 out of every thousand farms were foreclosed in the United States. In the single year 1938, 14 farms out of every thousand were foreclosed throughout the United States.

I mention that in refutation of the statement made a while ago that farmers are in worse condition today than they have ever before been. Not only are they getting better prices than they received in 1932, not only has the value of their products increased since 1932, but the actual foreclosures of mortgages on their farms have decreased since 1932.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I wish to speak briefly to this amendment. In my opinion the adoption of the amendment is as important as is anything involved in this entire piece of legislation. We hear much these days about danger to American institutions of Government. There is no way by which we may protect American institutions of government more efficiently or more effectively than by legislation which will assist in the solution of the agricultural problem.

Under the present administration many things have been done in an effort to be of assistance to those engaged in agriculture. I agree with the statement made by the Senator from Kentucky a few minutes ago that we cannot criticize the Department of Agriculture, as was done by the Senator from Utah. But very largely the efforts which have been made were along one line, the line of attempting to increase commodity prices in order that those engaged in agriculture might secure more for the things which they produce and sell

Many Members of the Senate are interested in securing for the farmer the cost of production. It is as important to bring down the cost of production which the farmer must pay to produce his crop, as it is to increase the price upward. So long as the debt load which is borne by the farmer is so great that it does not make very much difference what he gets for his products, as he cannot pay his interest charges and the amortization of the loans against his farm and his equipment, any effort to increase the amount which he secures must necessarily be futile.

A few minutes ago, in interrupting the Senator from Montana, I made reference to the situation in the apple industry in my State, in particular reference to the Wenatchee Valley, where we produce a very large percentage of the total apple production of the country. The indebtedness against the land in that area is something in excess of $800 per acre. The farmers in that area are met with this situation: If they charge a sufficient price for their apples to take care of their cost of production, taking into consideration the amount they must pay in interest and amortization on their debts, then nobody in the country can afford to buy the apples which they produce. The result is a vicious circle from which they cannot escape, and so the task which is of most importance is to make it possible to bring about a reduction of that debt level, so as to bring it down to a point where that portion of the cost of production can be paid without entirely crippling the industry.

As I said a few minutes ago, I have tried ever since I have been a Member of this body to interest the Farm Credit Administration in taking leadership in that valley for the purpose of making possible a debt-reduction program. Frankly, I am entirely critical of the attitude of the Farm Credit Administration upon that problem. They have always taken the position that the apple producers of that valley could come into their office and make their loans in the same way that they could go to a private bank to make their loans. When we set up a Federal governmental credit institution I think the attitude of that institution should be to assume leadership in attempting to lead the people in the industry to a solution of their problems. But at every turn of the road I have been met with the statement by the Farm Credit Administration of the limitations of the law.

The amendment before the Senate presents the first opportunity I have seen whereby the funds which are available can be used for the purpose of giving to the Federal Government an opportunity to supply leadership in a debt-adjustment program.

Mr. President, what concerns the apple producer also concerns every other type of farmer in the United States. We must recognize the fact that from a period shortly after the war, year by year the farmers have been adding to their They had their first basic mortgage upon indebtedness. their land. That mortgage has been increased by a second mortgage and a third mortgage. Any refinancing they have been able to bring about has been upon a basis of simply adding all of them together, still compelling the farmers to carry that entire amount of mortgage indebtedness. The amendment to the bill which the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Wisconsin sponsor is, in my opinion, the most important step that has been taken toward the solution of the fundamentals of the agricultural problem of today. It will not do us any good to raise prices if, in order to obtain for the farmers a sufficient amount to enable them to carry their debt load, they have to charge so much for their products that the people of the country cannot afford to buy them. This amendment reaches directly at that problem and makes it possible for the Federal Government to be of assistance in the refinancing and the reamortization of their loans.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. As I understand, the amendment does not involve any increased authorization.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. That is true.

Mr. WAGNER. The funds which are now available could be used for this purpose.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. It is my opinion that the amendment does just one thing; and it is because of that that I am so much interested. It takes away from those who have had charge of the credit agency the argument they have always used, that "We cannot do it because our funds are so mixed up with private funds that we must operate on the same basis as any private bank."

Mr. WAGNER. So far as I am concerned, I shall vote for the amendment. I think it is very meritorious.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I desire briefly to state my reasons for the vote which I intend to cast against this spending-lending bill. I think I can truthfully say that I am not a narrow partisan and that I have frequently voted for measures which have been proposed by the administration when I thought they were right. Moreover, I am perfectly free to admit that the Republican Party has made mistakes; but I have no sympathy with the argument that because the Republicans have made mistakes the majority party should go ahead and make even greater mistakes.

The more I study the bill the more I believe it would be perfectly futile as a producer of prosperity. It is also dangerous insofar as the fiscal condition of the Government is concerned. Of course, we must appropriate funds for unemployment relief so long as we have unemployment; and I have always so voted. Of course, as a government, we must construct public works, because we need public works and we must have them. However, to assert that the construction of public works or the appropriation of money for unemployment relief will produce prosperity is to indulge in a very dangerous form of self-delusion.

Mr. President, I think the bill is both dangerous and futile. I think its main motive is political; and I believe the American people will regard it as an example of the complete intellectual bankruptcy of the present administration.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I desire to address myself to the pending amendment.

The statement has been made that the amendment ought to go to a committee for consideration. I can state from experience that an amendment of this character would have very little consideration by the committee to which farm mortgage refinancing proposals have been referred.

Early in the session I introduced a bill of this character, and it was sent to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. Before the committee could act, the leader of the majority [Mr. Barkley] called attention to the fact that it ought to go to the Committee on Banking and Currency; and upon his assurance that it would have fair consideration and action, I consented to that course. As a matter of fact, we were given an hour one morning, and since that time it has been impossible to obtain any consideration for the bill from the Committee on Banking and Currency.

PRIVATE LENDERS BAILED OUT

The history of farm mortgages has to a large extent been the history of bailing out the commercial banks. The record will show that during the World War the farmers of the United States borrowed on their notes and collateral something like three and a half billion dollars. When the crash of 1920 came, the banks had to have their money; and, as the result, the farmers were induced to borrow money on mortgages on their farms in order to pay the banks, so that the banks could obtain their money. However, the farmers still carried the loans which they had been encouraged to incur during the war to increase production.

The War Finance Corporation was created to make loans to farmers in order that they could pay the banks. Later, the Farm Mortgage Corporation was created to unload chattel mortgages upon a Federal instrumentality in order that the commercial banks of the country might be able to obtain their money, which the farmer had borrowed in order to increase production. So we find that the history of this legislation, which is said to have been for the benefit of the farmer, shows that it has been for the purpose of bailing out the commercial banks. So far as improving the condition of agriculture is concerned, I point out the fact that in the past 10 years 30 percent of the farmers, or one in every three, have been sold out under foreclosure.

The idea is quite generally held that we are making good progress in solving our economic problems, particularly those of the farmer. It would be ridiculous to contend that some improvement has not been apparent in the past year or two as compared with 1931 and 1932. What we are likely to forget is that such a comparison only contrasts faltering hopes with black despair.

There are those who would have us believe that the farm problem is rapidly moving to a solution. Here, again, we are dealing with a situation in which we are asked to compare a little of something with a great deal of nothing. Despite the fact that the Federal Government increased its payments in agricultural subsidies and benefit payments by 34 percent in 1938 over 1937, the American farmer had 11 percent less income in 1938 than he had in 1937.

Much has been made of the fact that the farm-mortgage indebtedness has been reduced by $2,400,000,000. But how has it been reduced? It has been reduced by foreclosing on farm mortgages and depriving the farmer of his home. When a farm mortgage is foreclosed and the farmer is taken away from the land, the debt is wiped out. That is how farm-mortgage indebtedness has been reduced.

In its 1938 report the Farm Credit Administration discloses

Total farm-mortgage debt dropped approximately $2,400,000,000 in the 10 years ending January 1, 1938, due to foreclosures, to less borrowing by farmers and to refinancing after scale-down of indebtedness had been made.

As a matter of fact, the scaling down of the indebtedness has been about $210,000,000, which is about 2 percent of the entire farm debt of the country.

Mr. Norman J. Wall, senior agricultural economist for the United States Department of Agriculture, in a publication prepared for the Department in September 1938, called A Graphic Summary of Agricultural Credit, accounts for the sharp reduction in the farm debt largely in terms of mortgage foreclosures. Mr. Wall said:

From January 1, 1930 to January 1, 1935, the mortgage indebtedness of farmers decreased sharply from $9,214,278,000 to $7,645,- 091,000. The reduction of 17 percent during this period resulted largely from foreclosures and other acquirements of mortgaged properties by mortgagees.

In another report Mr. Wall declares:

The chief factor accounting for the decrease in total farmmortgage indebtedness has been the liquidation of debt through foreclosures or assignment of title to the mortgage holder.

The 17-percent reduction in the debt which we hear so much about was accomplished by assignment of properties without foreclosure, and the foreclosure by the Federal land bank and other lenders foreclosing upon farm mortgages.

Let us look at some ancient history, starting with 1910, when the total farm-mortgage debt was $3,300,000,000. At that time it amounted to less than 10 percent of the $36,000,000,000 at which all farm lands and buildings were valued. The peak of the farm-mortgage debt load was reached in 1928, when it was $9,468,000,000, or 20 percent of the value of the farm land and buildings. In 1933, when land property values were at their depression low, the debt represented about 28 percent of the value of land and buildings. Despite the sharp cut of $2,400,000,000 in the farm-mortgage debt following 1928, which brought it down to about the $7,000,000,000 level at the end of 1938, this smaller debt still represented 20 percent of the value of all farm lands and buildings.

The total farm-mortgage debt today is about what it was in 1920. In 1937 it was $7,254,000,000, and in 1920 it was $7,800,000,000. But in 1920 land and buildings were valued at $63,000,000,000, and the mortgage debt represented about 12 percent of that amount. There was a great deal of difference between conditions in 1920 and 1937. By 1937 the value of all farm lands and buildings had been cut almost in half, and they were then valued at about $35,000,000,000; but the mortgage debt, instead of being 12 percent of the value of the land and buildings, was now 22 percent. In terms of underlying values the smaller debt of 1937 is almost twice as hard to carry as one somewhat larger in 1920.

In terms of the farmer's income the difficulties which confront him when 1920 is compared with 1938 or 1937 are shown to be even more serious. In 1920 the farmers' gross income was $13,500,000,000. In 1938 it was $8,882,000,000, and of this sum $482,000,000 were Government benefit payments to farmers. The exchange value of the farmers' produce is not as favorable today as it was in 1920.

I desire to call attention to another situation. We have subsidized by Government appropriations the payment of farm mortgages and Federal land bank notes to about $130,-000,000 in the last 4 years, and still, during those 4 years, 65,000 farms in the United States have been sold out by the Federal land banks on foreclosures. So far as the farm mortgage and farm situation is concerned, we are approaching a period when we will be sitting on the top of a volcano that will explode with devastating effect.

ONE-THIRD OF OUR FARMERS SOLD OUT

But to return to the subject of the reduction of the farm debt. There are those who point to it as an accomplishment. Since 1934 some 110 farms out of every 1,000 have been sold at forced sales. In other words, 1 farmer in every 10 has been dispossessed. In the 7-year period before that, taking us back to 1926, some 200 in every 1,000 were dispossessed by forced sales. Over a period of a decade almost one-third of the farms in the country have changed hands through forced sales. It is in this manner that the farmmortgage debt of the country has been cut down.

Another result of these foreclosures is that the five principal lending agencies of the country held land valued at $1,000,000,000 at the end of 1938. This represents about 125,000 farms or 28,000,000 acres of farm land. This is about equal to the entire farming area of the State of Minnesota.

What has been the effect of this policy? Since 1920 the percentage of farms operated by tenants has risen from 37 to 42 percent, and the farmers now constitute only 25 percent of the total population, instead of the 30 percent they represented in 1920. These figures can only suggest the human tragedy that lies behind them. Lost homes and savings, poverty and pauperization, relief and nomadism, have been the only answer that we have apparently been able to give to the most serious economic problem we have ever faced as a people. More rapidly than almost any other country in the world we are creating a vast landless class. Sixty-four percent of the present total farm-mortgage debt is on farms that are owner operated. Obviously, if we are to save owner operation of farms we will have to meet the mortgage problem on the farm.

Let us examine in a little more detail the changes that have taken place in the distribution of the farm debt by lenders and more particularly the activities of the two Federal farm loan agencies—the Federal land banks and the Land Bank Commissioner. In 1930, 12.9 percent of the total farm-mortgage debt was held by Federal lending agencies; today about 40 percent of the total farm-mortgage debt is so held. Most of this increase has come since 1933. See table 3. In 11 States these 2 Federal agencies now hold more than 50 percent of the farm-mortgage debt and in 40 States they hold 20 percent or more. See table 4. At the end of 1938 the Federal land banks and the Land Bank Commissioner had $2,735,074,803 in loans outstanding.

Since May 1, 1933, the two Federal farm lending agencies have made loans totaling more than $2,500,000,000. What was this money used for? Almost all of it, 87.8 percent of it, went to refund outstanding debts. Taking the period from May 1, 1933, to January 1, 1937, the latest for which percentage figures are available, we learn that 70.8 percent of the proceeds of Federal land bank and Commissioner loans were used to refinance previously existing farm-mortgage indebtedness. An additional 17 percent was used to refinance indebtedness other than mortgage obligations that farmers owed to commercial banks, private individuals, and to tax agencies. Only 4.9 percent went for the purchase of land and redemption from foreclosure, and not more than 3.3 percent was used for buildings and improvements on the farm. It cannot be said that the farmer was borrowing money for any expansion. As a matter of fact, the farmer was borrowing money with which to pay his creditors, to relieve the banks and the lending agencies that had loaned money to the farmers on a constantly decreasing farm income.

FARMER BORROWS TO FEED WORLD

Once more the farmer was refinancing and recomposing his debt, converting short-term into long-term loans. That is a process with which he has become very familiar. During the period of the war and immediately after the farmer heavily increased his short-term borrowing at his local bank. He was told he must feed the world, and he did. He was told it was his patriotic duty to produce more food. He did not have the cash, so he borrowed it from the banks. By 1918 he owed the local bankers a total of $2,500,000,000 on his open or collateral notes. This was $400,000,000 more than he had owed the bankers in 1914. By 1920 these short-term loans reached the peak at $3,869,000,000. By 1931 they had been cut in half, and in 1934 the farmer's notes at local banks totaled $807,613,000. All this short-term debt was in addition to the farmer's mortgage debt.

What reduced the short-term loans of the farmers? How were they reduced? Not by payment out of production. They were reduced by borrowing on their farms; in other words, on farm mortgages.

When the banks began to call for a payment of farm loans in 1920 the depression began. Farm purchasing power was drastically curtailed by the forced collections. Farmers who had any credit were encouraged to slap a mortgage on their farms and take up the short-term paper. Those who could not supply the cash were foreclosed. Country banks with "frozen assets" began to close in the farm areas and loans were canceled.

For the most part the evil day was postponed by refinancing. Let us see what happened. From 1920 to 1931 the short-term farm credit held by commercial banks decreased by $1,932,531,000. From 1920 to 1930 the farm-mortgage debt rose by $1,383,690,000.

During the period from 1920 to 1927, when most of this earlier rewriting was being done, the farm-mortgage holdings of insurance companies and Federal and joint-stock land banks increased at the rate of $377,000,000 annually for all three combined. From 1920 to 1928 these three agencies increased the amount of their loans by $2,622,000,000. This increase was a billion dollars greater than the actual increase in the total farm-mortgage debt. Commercial banks and private lenders were moving out of the agricultural lending business, and the short-term debt incurred by the farmer to win the war was being written into a long-term debt by new agencies and old ones that were expanding because of funds dumped into their hands through war profits that could not find an outlet.

Obviously, this change for the farmer from one lender to another after the war, and again in the thirties, did not solve his debt problem. He still had to meet the interest and principal just as before. The effect was to save the original lenders and give the borrowers a breathing spell. The lenders were bailed out, but the farmer was left with his debts; he was left to carry the burden.

In the thirties banks were going broke all over the country. The Federal refinancing of farm mortgages helped the banking situation.

Insurance companies were heavy lenders on farm real estate. They were getting land instead of income, and their contracts to policyholders were seriously threatened. They too were bailed out, but the farmers still carried the load, which was put on them in the name of helping them. As a matter of fact, the result was to help the lender to get his cash and leave the burden of debt on the farmer.

Mortgage companies and private individuals were also bailed out with Government bonds, and their losses were slight. This rescue work was undoubtedly necessary. But let no one tell you, Mr. President, that it saved the farmer. If he has not already lost his farm, he still has the same debt to pay back. True, he is getting longer term mortgages and slightly lower interest rates, but his income has been falling still lower, and he is no better off.

In 1920, when the farm-mortgage debt was $7,800,000,000 and the farmers' gross income was $13,500,000,000, he was paying out 3.5 percent of that income to meet an annual interest bill of $479,000,000. In 1938, with a total mortgage debt of $7,000,000,000, the farmer was paying out 4.1 percent of his $8,800,000,000 in gross income to meet an interest burden of $365,000,000. It should not be overlooked that in 1938 about $37,000,000 was paid out of the United States Treasury to subsidize a lower interest rate. Since 1933 a total of $137,000,000 has been paid out of the Treasury to maintain a 3½-percent interest on federally held farm mortgages—see tables 5 and 6. And still, with that subsidy of $137,000,000 out of the Federal Treasury to reduce interest rates to the farmer, paid by the taxpayer, farm foreclosure sales are going on at a faster pace than ever before.

SAVING THE MONEY LENDER

But to return to the distribution that was made of the money loaned by the two Federal lending agencies, who got this money? The proceeds of loans made by the Federal land banks and the Land Bank Commissioner from May 1, 1933, to January 1, 1937, were distributed in the manner shown by table 7.

Over $876,000,000 went to refinance debts held largely by private lenders against farmers. This amount represents 41.3 percent of the total amount of this refinancing during the period covered.

Commercial banks received $479,500,000, or 22.5 percent, of the money loaned by these Federal agencies to the farmers during this period.

Life-insurance companies got $305,800,000 or 14.4 percent of the money loaned the farmers over this 3½-year period. The joint-stock land banks received $142,500,000, or 6.7 percent of the money; $84,000,000 of the loans went to buy stock in local loan associations and to pay bank and loan fees. Out of a total of $2,123,000,000 loaned in this period, only $172,-000,000 went for the purchase of land and redemption of farms from foreclosure or for general agricultural improvements. Out of the last amount only $69,000,000 was used for agricultural improvements. A total of $61,000,000 was used by the farmers to pay up the taxes on their farms.

From 1933 through 1938 Federal land banks and the Land Bank Commissioner received approximately 1,275,000 applications for loans of a total of $5,775,000,000. During this period 857,000 loans were made for a total of more than $2,500,000,000 by these agencies. Over $3,000,000,000 in applications were rejected.

Out of the $2,500,000,000 in loans closed, it is estimated that over the period from 1933 to 1938 scale-downs have been effected totaling $211,000,000. This represents a cut of about 8 percent on the total involved. This sort of reducing comes in the class of those blessings which are a little better than nothing. (See table 8.)

From these figures alone it is obvious that farmers who were refinanced by these Government agencies are still saddled with about the same debt they always had. Distributed among the 857,000 loans closed since 1932 by these agencies, the average scale-down amounts to $246 per applicant. So far as the farmer is concerned, the chief benefit he has received in this process has been an exchange in lenders. That has been the only change. He owes a different institution now than he owed before.

What has been the experience of the Government and the farmer with cooperative and public lending since the beginning, and more particularly in the last 6 years?

Since 1924 the Federal Land Bank System has foreclosed 95,997 farms, representing an investment of $380,000,000. The Farm Mortgage Corporation, which makes Land Bank Commissioner loans, has, since its creation in 1933, foreclosed on 13,946 farms, representing an investment of $34,291,000. (See tables 9 and 10.)

Between these two Federal agencies 110,000 farms have been foreclosed, with an investment in them of $414,700,000. Sixty thousand of these foreclosures have been made since

EXORBITANT INTEREST RATE

Over this period from 1924 to 1938 the Federal land banks have sold 82,500 whole and part farms, in which they had an investment of $282,655,000, for $221,000,000. This meant an aggregate loss of 23 percent. In the past 3 years the losses have been running higher. In 1936 they were 25.2 percent, in 1937 23.4 percent, and in 1938 they were 27.6 percent; and although selling the farms at these tremendous losses, the Federal land banks still have a surplus of profits in the Treasury, because of the exorbitant interest rates they have charged the farmers.

The Farm Mortgage Corporation, on the other hand, has disposed of 6,000 whole or part farms for a consideration of $8,800,000, in which farms it had an investment of $14,200,000. This means a loss of 38 percent of its investment. This substantial reduction in the mortgage debt was lost to the original owner of the land.

You see, when the Government instrumentality started lending to farmers, it was for the purpose of paying the farmers' creditors. When the creditors had been paid, and the money had been furnished by the Federal Government to pay the creditors, the farmer was foreclosed, causing a loss to the Farm Mortgage Corporation of 38 percent of its investment; but the farmer got no benefit. He was sold out just the same. The lender got his money, and the instrumentality created by the Federal Government and furnished money by the Federal Government took the loss.

These two Federal lending agencies dealing with the farmer came to the first of this year with 32,000 farms still on their hands, which are being carried on their books at a value of $132,000,000. (See table 11.)

What are the fundamental aspects of the farm-mortgage problem? They are two—the amount of the debt now being borne by the farmer, and the income he is able to earn out of which this debt must be paid. The opportunity for the farmer to earn an income that will enable him to maintain a decent standard of living after clearing the overhead charges which he must meet, among which the farm mortgage and its burden are absolutely inescapable, is a minimum essential.

As a matter of fact, after all these years of paying benefit payments to the farmers they are still being driven to the wall and made into a landless class, made into paupers to go into the cities to go on relief, to increase the tax burden of the great population of taxpayers in the United States. The benefit payments so far have merely prolonged the agony of driving the farmer into pauperdom. The system has the same effect on the farmer as cutting off the tail of a dog. If you cut it an inch at a time, it takes a little longer. If it is going to continue to be the policy of the Federal Government so to conduct our economic policies as to make all farmers propertyless and landless and paupers, let us do it at once, so that the farmer shall not have the continuous agony of failing to be able to sleep at night because he can hear the roar of the mortgage which he sees no chance of being able to pay.

From 1924 to 1929 the farm debt stood at a figure above $9,000,000,000. During the same period farm cash income was relatively stable, averaging over $11,000,000,000 annually. Farm real estate values were fairly stable, but still mortgages were being foreclosed at the rate of 20 out of each 1,000. Despite the relatively high level of farm income, the rate of mortgage foreclosures was high. The drop in cash income was followed by a correspondingly sharp increase in the rate of forced sales, rising to a high of 55 per thousand in 1932, when farm income was at its low. Farm income was at the $6,000,000,000 level, on the average, for most of the latter period.

Real estate values have been falling consistently since 1924. They were only 60 percent of the 1924-29 index figure in 1933, and have risen only 10 points from that low at the present time. Cash farm income was only 75 percent of the 1924-29 level in 1938.

It does not take a prophet, on the basis of the experience shown in the two periods from 1924 to 1929 and 1930 to 1936, to tell what will happen in the years immediately ahead unless there is a change for the better. The downward trend in farm income shown in 1938 predicts its own consequences unless something is done to relate the farm-debt burden to farm income.

Forced sales in 1937 were slightly below the 1929 level, but they were high at 17 per 1,000 farms when one considers all that has supposedly been done to relieve the situation.

The $2,400,000,000 cut in the total farm mortgage debt does not relieve the burden on the individual farmers who are still trying to carry on with unmanageable debts. The fact that my neighbor has lost his farm by foreclosure and thereby effected a reduction in the total farm-mortgage debt, does not make it any easier for me to pay off my mortgage. As a matter of fact, ousting my neighbors from their farms has tended to increase the onerousness of the debt I am trying to pay off, by depressing values. If a fire destroys my neighbor's house, and he is left penniless and homeless, does that make it any easier for me to pay the mortgage on my home? That is the kind of reasoning one must use if he is to convince himself that by reducing the total farm mortgage debt through foreclosure we have improved the position of the remaining mortgagors.

VICIOUS DEFLATION

While we are dealing with the subject of deflation it might be well to give some thought to the argument that scaling down mortgages to the appraised value of the underlying real estate would be deflationary as far as all farm real estate in general is concerned. Obviously, the immediate effect of this process in the individual case is deflationary. It is the debt burden that has been deflated, however, and not the land value. The effect is to bring the debt down to the level to which the land values themselves have already been deflated.

As a matter of fact, the existing policy in dealing with farm mortgages is a viciously deflationary one. Fore-closures are depressing land values not only through distressed selling, but through the accumulation of farm real estate in the hands of corporate and governmental lending agencies. In commenting on the more than 28,000,000 acres of farm land held by leading lending agencies, Norman Wall, of the Department of Agriculture, points out that this large volume of farm acreage—

Will be a factor tending to hold down any possible rapid rise in farm-land prices. These farms, acquired either through fore-closure or assignment, represent an addition to the supply of farms for sale, over and above the supply of farms that are normally offered for sale by individual owners. In addition to the farm land held by lending agencies awaiting sale, it is pertinent to point out that the period of declining farm-land prices since 1920, and more particularly since 1929, retarded the sale of many individuals who otherwise would have sold their properties.

It is more than likely that a proposal of the kind I am making would tend to stabilize farm-land values. It would bring debts, so far as possible, into relation with values, and would facilitate the return of farms to operators, and diminish appreciably the number of foreclosures.

Farm income in 1938 was $3,000,000,000 below what it was in the period from 1924 to 1929. Farm real-estate values have been cut $15,000,000,000. The prices the farmer receives for the goods he sells are out of line with the prices he has to pay for the goods he buys.

The period from 1924 to 1929 was not a particularly prosperous one for the farmer; so when one compares the present with that time it should be kept in mind that the boom that came to industry then was shared only to a slight extent by agriculture. As a matter of fact, the prices on goods the farmer has to buy were raised so high during these years that he was worse off.

So the farmer stands in this relation to the 1924-29 period: His income is 25 percent below what it was then; realestate values are 30 percent lower; he is producing 10 percent more now than he was then.

With this kind of a situation, how long can the existing set-up be maintained? The farm income in 1938 was about the same that it was in 1931. In 1931, farm-mortgage foreclosures stood at 33 to the thousand. In 1938 they were somewhat below that figure. The fact that the rate of mortgage foreclosures per thousand was lower in 1938 than it was in 1931 is not difficult to understand. Since 1931. many of the top-heavy farm mortgages have been foreclosed. The epidemic of foreclosures that has gone on before makes a reduction in the rate per thousand inescapable. Refinancing the farm mortgage debt in 1933 and 1934 has temporarily slowed the foreclosure avalanche. Every indication now is that the foreclosures will once more be accelerated. Declining income is already reflected in increased delinquency, and an increase in foreclosures is inevitable. There need be little doubt as to what a continuation of the present trend in farm income for even a short time is likely to produce. It means more foreclosed farms, more misery, and more dispossessed farmers.

By 1937, income from manufacturing had returned to 98 percent of its 1924–29 level, the prices of industrial stocks were 10 percent over the 1924–29 level, and manufacturers' bankruptcies were at their lowest level since 1924. There were only a little more than half as many bankruptcies among manufacturers in 1937 as there were in 1929. The prices of industrial stocks in 1938 declined to 82.8 as against the 1924–29 period.

In 1937 the farmers' cash income was 84 percent of the 1924–29 level, farm real estate values were 70 percent of that level, and the number of forced sales per thousand was but slightly under the 1924–29 average.

DELINQUENT LOANS INCREASE

As further evidence of the precariousness of the agricultural situation at the present moment, we turn to a statement from the Farm Credit Administration showing the number of delinquent loans at the beginning of 1939.

In the case of the Federal land banks, 20 percent of their loans were delinquent as of December 31, 1938. A total of 125,891 loans out of 628,781 were delinquent as of that date.

The Land Bank Commissioner loans were even in a worse state of delinquency, with 28.2 percent of these loans in that category at the end of last year; 126,167 loans out of a total of 448,080 were behind in their payments.

A consolidated statement of these two agencies would show 252,000 loans out of 1,076,000, or 25 percent, delinquent. Although mortgages foreclosed were not as numerous in 1938 as in 1937, the increase in delinquency last year, plus a sharp decline in farm income, means an early increase in foreclosures.

The percentage of delinquency has been steadily increasing in the past 3 years as far as Federal lending agencies are concerned. In the case of the Federal land banks, at the end of 1936, 14.9 percent of their loans were classed as delinquent. In 1937 this percentage figure had risen to 15.9, and at the end of 1938 it was 20.

In the case of the Land Bank Commissioner loans, prior to 1938 delinquencies amounted to 5.4 percent. At the end of 1938 the Land Bank Commissioner classified 28.2 percent of his loans as delinquent.

This trend toward delinquency should be warning enough to anyone that the refinancing of the farm debt that has taken place has not solved the problem. No sharper warning than this should be necessary as to the serious trouble that appears to be ahead of us.

There is another aspect of the foreclosure of farm mortgages that is of fundamental importance and that should be carefully considered. I refer to the practice of mortgagees of establishing deficiency claims and judgments against borrowers once they have been foreclosed. Very little research work has been done in this field, and information on this subject is difficult to obtain. So far, this is all that is available.

What happens to the farmer who loses his farm through foreclosure? Not only does he lose his home and a means of earning a living for his family, not only does he lose his life savings as represented by his equity in his farm, but in many instances he also finds himself saddled with a deficiency claim that may pauperize him for life. As long as it is outstanding against him he can own nothing of value. The old debtors' prison held few terrors more crushing than this.

Information with regard to deficiency judgments is not easily obtained, for reasons best known to those who take them. The Farm Credit Administration informs me that these judgments once obtained are not considered an asset but are carried simply as "memos" by the separate banks. No effort is made to keep this information available in Washington for the operation of the lending systems throughout the country as a whole. This classification suggests their dubious value.

THE DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT

So far, however, I have been able to obtain the statement of one Federal land bank in a single district for a period from 1934 to the present time, covering the subject of deficiency judgments. A close study of the experience of this one bank suggests that the money collected through the deficiency-judgment system is probably not sufficient to cover the cost of collection. (See table 13.)

Out of the 575 deficiency judgments and claims, valued at $573,100, held by the Federal land bank in the St. Paul district on December 31, 1938, and acquired for the most part from 1934 to 1938, only $3,300 was collected on 13 of them. In the 5-year period alone the St. Paul Federal Land Bank foreclosed 6,634 loans, with an investment at the date of acquisition of $30,329,800, in connection with which 487 claims or judgments were taken, amounting to $449,100. During the same 5-year period 13 judgments, valued at $11,-900, were settled for a consideration of $3,300. In 5 years the bank had squeezed out of the farmers judgments which it valued at about half a million dollars, and collected a total of $3,300. At the end of last year the bank still held deficiency judgments and claims which it thought to be worth about $600,000.

What does this record show? Misery for hundreds of farmers to collect one-half of 1 percent of an assumed value. What can we say about debtors' prisons and harassment?

These 13 claims were valued at $11,900 but they were settled for the princely sum of $3,300, or about 27 cents on the dollar. No wonder the Farm Credit Administration does not care to advertise them further than to carry its deficiency claims as "memos."

The total value of the deficiency claims and judgments held by the St. Paul bank on December 31, 1938, was $573,-100. Fifty-nine of these were in Michigan, 196 in Wisconsin, 130 in Minnesota, and 190 in North Dakota. Out of these 575 deficiency claims in this district for this 4-year period, only 138 had been reduced to judgments.

In the case of the St. Paul district, 7.3 percent of all mortgages foreclosed ended with deficiency claims and judgments, and on December 31, 1938, about 96 percent of these were still unreleased.

The experience of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation during the same 5-year period (1934-38) is very similar. The only difference appears to be that in the case of the Corporation a larger percentage of its foreclosures end with a deficiency claim than was true with the St. Paul bank. The Farm mortgage Corporation makes a deficiency claim in 18.6 percent of the farm foreclosures it has executed in the past 5 years.

In this 5-year period the Farm Mortgage Corporation has foreclosed 3,500 loans, representing an investment of $14,-884,800 at the date of acquisition. Deficiency claims or judgments were taken in 651 cases, for $681,100. During this period, 21 deficiency claims or judgments valued at $15,800 were released for a consideration of $5,900. Out of a total "memo" value of $680,000, the Corporation was able to sweat out of the farmer $5,900.

In defense of the deficiency judgment, the Farm Credit Administration argues that it is necessary in order to enforce personal liability for loans. The record fails to establish any such value.

I have so far given some statistics with reference to the history of the lending program of the Federal Government which is supposed to be for the benefit of the farmer. The record will show that it is entirely for the benefit of the money-lenders. The idea that the farmer is foreclosed and made homeless because of economic conditions over which he has no control, and because of the lending policies of the Federal Government instrumentalities, apparently operated solely for the benefit of the farmer's creditors in order to bail them out, but leaving the farmer still carrying the burden, is a record that is a disgrace to a civilized country. Constantly our farmers are going on relief or are becoming tenants. Constantly we are increasing the payments for relief, and increasing taxes. We have had 6 years in which to test out the theory that the less we produce, and the less farmers we have, the more wealthy we shall be. As a matter of fact, the farmers are not in a better condition as the result of these activities, as the records will show.

This amendment provides for the readjustment of farm debts and a lower interest rate. Legislation of this character, in my opinion, is absolutely imperative. The amendment will give some merit to the bill if it is adopted by the Senate and by the House. Without this provision I can see very little merit in the bill. I hope the amendment will be adopted by the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask permission to have printed in the RECORD some tables from various lending agencies of the Government verifying my statements as to the history of farm lending. These tables are referred to in my remarks.

There being no objection, the tables were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1996) to amend the National Stolen Property Act.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 1996) to amend the National Stolen Property Act, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

EXCHANGE OF SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR FOREIGN MATERIALS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad.

Mr. WAGNER. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Townsend conferees on the part of the Senate.

TRUTH IN FABRICS

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma obtained the floor.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield so that I may call a quorum?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I thank the Senator from Vermont, but I do not think that is necessary.

Mr. President, immediately upon the convening of the Senate today my motion to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 162 was passed was disposed of.

The bill is known as the truth-in-fabrics bill and deals primarily with fabrics and products made of wool.

The bill deals with wool, a product of sheep; hence, wool is an agricultural product. It has developed that the bill will, if enacted, materially affect cotton, and cotton likewise is an agricultural product.

Although the bill deals with and affects two major agricultural products, wool and cotton, the measure was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The record further shows that in considering the bill, the committee gave no attention to the relationship between wool and cotton, although evidence has been produced showing that some 500,000,000 pounds or some 100,000 bales of cotton are used annually in the worsted- and woolen-goods industry

The bill, if finally enacted into law, will have a vast effect upon cotton and the cotton industry. The nature and extent of the effect of such a law upon cotton and the cotton industry cannot now, from the information available, be appraised and determined.

Yesterday I submitted some data in support of my motion to reconsider the bill. Such data may be found on pages 10190 to 10192, inclusive, of the Congressional Record.

I stated yesterday that I would have at least one other message or letter to submit for the RECORD today. The letter arrived by special delivery just about the time of the reconvening of the Senate, and I now tender the letter for the RECORD, and ask unanimous consent that the communication referred to on yesterday, the one just received, be printed at this point in the RECORD in connection with my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? There being no objection, the communication was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

National Association of Wool Manufacturers, New York City, July 27, 1939.

The Honorable ELMER THOMAS

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR THOMAS: Upon receipt of your telegram our sta-DEAR SENATOR THOMAS: Upon receipt of your telegram our statistics department immediately set to work upon the problem thereby presented. A survey broad enough to adduce the information desired could readily be classed as a major undertaking and would require more time than the form of your inquiry indicated available. Hope of successfully collecting current information either by postal or telegraphic questionnaire was therefore abandoned and recourse was had to available information relating to taxtile fiber consumption. to textile fiber consumption.

In attempting to arrive at the amount of cotton in products made from mixtures of cotton and wool that will be covered by the proposed labeling bill, numerous gaps are encountered in the data now available, although in some particular products and for some mill classifications the data are rather adequate. The situation is not surprising in the least when one considers several forters involved in the problem.

factors involved in the problem.

First, combinations of cotton and wool are found in innumerable products. In clothing there is a wide variety of products for men, women, and children including hosiery, underwear, suits, dresses, trousers, shirts, neckties, sweaters, snow suits, coats, hats, gloses, scarfs, shoes, slippers, bathing suits, and robes. In 1935 knitgoods mills reported the manufacture of about 50,000,000 pairs of hosiery and 20,000,000 units of underwear and sleeping garments combining wool and cotton. In household articles there are blankets, draperies, and upholstery. During 1937 there was produced almost 40,000,000 pounds of wool and cotton blankets. Then cotton-wool products are found in the upholstery of automobiles and railroad cars and in a variety of industrial uses.

Secondly, the combination of cotton and wool in products may have occurred anywhere from the raw stock down through any number of manufacturing processes that may have carried the materials through many stages of ownership and through many types and classes of mills. Mixtures of cotton and wool may be types and classes of mills. Mixtures of cotton and wool may be spun into yarns or cotton and wool may be blended in the manufacturing processes prior to spinning or at the spinning operation on all kinds of spinning equipment, although cotton system machinery is somewhat more limited for this purpose than woolen and worsted system machinery. Cotton and wool may be combined at the yarn stage by twisting a yarn of cotton with one of wool, or may be combined in the weaving or knitting operations themselves, where yarns of the different fibers are brought together in a product.

Accordingly, in ascertaining a figure there must be considered not only so-called wool mills, but also cotton mills, knit-goods mills, felt mills, and other classifications. It is our estimate that the annual production of cotton-wool products that fall within the scope of the labeling bill contain as a minimum over 100,-000,000 pounds of cotton, and the actual amount might be considerably greater.

We have by means of telephone, telegraph, and personal interviews, endeavored to get a cross-section expression of opinion from men acknowledged among the leaders in their particular spheres in the textile industry. It is surprising to note that without exception, each one indicated that it was his opinion that S. 162, enacted into law, would diminish the consumption of cotton in cotton, well combinations. This upper interest of consumption of cotton in cotton-wool combinations. This unanimity of opinion should have a great deal of weight, particularly when it is recalled that cotton export subsidies are presently in the news spotlight.

Millard D. Brown, president of the Continental Mills, of Philadelphia, Pa., among the outstanding manufacturers of men's overcoatings, has authorized us to state his opinion as follows:
"In reference to your request that I state what I think the enactment of S. 162, commonly known as the 'Wool labeling' bill would have on the consumption of cotton, I state unhesitatingly that it would trad to diminish the use of cotton in woolen revisites.

would have on the consumption of cotton, I state unhesitatingly that it would tend to diminish the use of cotton in woolen textiles. "Our company uses raw cotton and cotton yarn in several of our best selling fabrics. The use of cotton by us is primarily to make a better wearing and more satisfactory fabric for the consumer. One such cloth made by us sells to clothing manufacturers at $2.75 per yard. Surely this is not a cheap price.

"If the wool-labeling bill becomes a law it would place, by inference, the stamp of Government approval on wool as the only fiber that will make satisfactory cloth, and at the same time infer fiber that will make satisfactory cloth, and at the same time infer that cotton is a cheap and inferior fiber. Such is not the case. The tendency would therefore be for consumers to appraise fabrics as respects value, durability, or other value only on the basis of their wool content.

"Many very high-class fabrics that contain cotton would be wholly unsatisfactory for consumer use if made entirely of wool."
We have a letter from the president of the Peerless Woolen Mills, which states in part: "Can say without hesitation that any labeling bill that required percentage statements of the raw material contents, would tend to decrease our use of raw cotton." (A photostatic copy of the letter was attached.) The significance of this statement is that it comes from one of the largest manufacturers of boys' suiting and trousering materials, a field in which union fabrics, that is, fabrics made of wool and cotton combined are of utmost importance.

are of utmost importance.

On top of this statement by one of the leading manufacturers making union goods on wool and worsted equipment, we find a statement of Mr. Fred K. Nixon, sales manager of one of the largest cotton mills manufacturing apparel cloths composed of wool and cotton. Mr. Nixon save:

wool and cotton. Mr. Nixon says:

"We are among the leading manufacturers of textile apparel materials composed of wool and cotton in combination, processed principally on cotton machinery. The bulk of our production is made up of these combination cloths, so our operations will be made up of these combination cloths, so our operations will be affected by the pending legislation.

"The words 'wool,' 'woolen,' and 'worsted' have always had a plus appeal with the purchasing public, and it is my opinion that if this concern was required to label its cotton and wool products, revealing the percentage content of each, a new and meaningless area of competition would be opened up. The lay mind is very apt to conclude, particularly since so much misleading propaganda has been disseminated in support of this bill, that a boy's trousering containing 30-percent wool is of necessity 5 percent superior to a similar trousering containing 25-percent wool or relatively inferior to a similarly priced trousering containing 40-percent wool. Technical experts know there is no basis for such a conclusion. In these various trouserings the qualities of the wool used may differ tremendously. By the same token, the qualities of the cotton may be dissimilar.

"Anyone with broad experience in textile fields (and I might say that I have had experience, not only in the sale of union goods, but also in the sale of luxury woolen fabrics) knows that the quality of the raw material is only one factor affecting the final quality of a fabric. Skill and thoroughness in workmanship are even more essential in the production of high-quality merchandise than the grade of the raw material. In other words, a good craftsman could achieve a higher quality fabric out of poor materials then could a prove conference using good materials.

than could a poor craftsman using good materials.

"However, it is only natural that we should make every effort to meet competition or a consumer demand for a higher wool content. If the consumer is going to favor the higher wool content, regardless of the wool quality, we are going to cater to this demand. Naturally such a trend would considerably diminish our use of raw cotton.

our use of raw cotton.

"Any legislation, rule, or regulation which would require percentage indications of the raw materials used in the manufacture of textiles, in my opinion, would lead to consumer delusion rather than consumer protection, if for no other reason than the vast variation in the qualities to be found in all such fibers."

The concern represented by Mr. Niven is not unique in the

The concern represented by Mr. Nixon is not unique in the cotton textile industry, but has many competitors in both the cotton and wool textile industries.

In the household furnishings field we have gotten similar indications. Mr. P. J. Torchiana, of Collins & Aikman, an automobile and furniture upholstery manufacturing concern of national repute states the effect of S. 162 might readily be detrimental to the sale of some types of pile fabrics containing cotton. It is to be noted that this concern does not manufacture tapestries or brocades to a major degree, if at all. The labeling burdens imposed by S. 162 would be greatly magnified in this field where fiber combinations have been the rule rather than the exception.

Mr. C. W. Poor, of the Chatham Manufacturing Co., cited actual experience in the blanket field resulting from the general adoption of labeling standards in 1932. He points out a steady trend to increase the wool content of blankets at the expense of cotton.

There has been some trade paper observers who have held that the promulgation of the rayon rules by the Federal Trade Commission encouraged the displacement of rayon by cotton in mixed fabrics. If this view has any validity and it becomes necessary by law to label cotton-wool mixtures, rayon may well gain an advantage over cotton in wool mixtures. The rate of rayon's absorption of another fiber's market is best illustrated in the field of silk. Today we find former silk manufacturers operating principally on rayon. In some cases the only silk in their plant is under glass—like a museum piece.

Respectfully submitted.
THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF WOOL MANUFACTURERS.
Per EDWIN WILKINSON.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, inasmuch as the Senate bill will now go to the House of Representatives for the consideration of that body, I desire to summarize the reasons upon which I based my motion for reconsideration:

First. A vast amount of cotton is used in connection with wool in the manufacture of cloth. The census department estimates the amount for 1935 to be 20,000,000 pounds, or some 42,000 bales. The Department of Agriculture reports that the total quantity of cotton consumed in worsted and woolen goods annually is probably in excess of 50,000,000 pounds, or the equivalent of about 100,000 bales of cotton.

Second. Although the bill will affect a vast amount of cotton, yet no consideration whatever was given by the committee relative to the effect the bill would have upon cotton. Representing, in part, the State of Oklahoma which produces upward of 1,000,000 bales of cotton annually, I am deeply interested in any legislation which affects the demand for this major agricultural product of my State.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association, after making an analysis of the bill and suggesting possible effects that such a law would have upon the cotton industry, summarizes their observations as follows:

This law would without question tend to largely nullify all the combined efforts of the Department of Agriculture and members of industry to promote the increased use of cotton.

The Department of Agriculture, in an official communication of yesterday, July 27, reported in part as follows:

If passage of this bill should result in increased consumption of virgin wool, we do not see how this increase could fail to be at the expense of reclaimed wool and other fibers, among them cotton, now used in the wool and woolen industries. What the extent of this effect on cotton might be it is impossible accurately to estimate, but that there would be some decrease in the use of cotton seems probable.

The further communication from the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, just placed in the Record, contains the following pertinent conclusions:

First

Combinations of cotton and wool are found in innumerable products. In clothing there is a wide variety of products for men, women, and children including hosiery, underwear, suits, dresses, trousers, shirts, neckties, sweaters, snow suits, coats, hats, gloves, scarfs, shoes, slippers, bathing suits, and robes. In 1935, knit-goods mills reported the manufacture of about 50,000,000 pair of hosiery and 20,000,000 units of underwear and sleeping garments combining wool and cotton. In household articles there are blankets, draperies, and upholstery. During 1937 there was produced almost 40,000,000 pounds of wool and cotton blankets. Then cotton-wool products are found in the upholstery of automobiles and railroad cars and in a variety of industrial uses.

Second

It is our estimate that the annual production of cotton-wool products that fall within the scope of the labeling bill contain as a minimum over 100,000,000 pounds of cotton, and the actual amount might be considerably greater.

If 100,000,000 pounds of cotton are used in the making of cotton-wool products, then such 100,000,000 pounds means 200,000 bales of cotton.

Third. From the communication just received, Mr. Millard D. Brown, president of the Continental Mills, of Philadelphia, referring to S. 162, is quoted as follows:

I state unhesitatingly that it would tend to diminish the use of cotton in woolen textiles.

Mr. Brown is quoted further as saying:

If the wool-labeling bill becomes a law, it would place, by inference, the stamp of Government approval on wool as the only fiber that will make satisfactory cloth, and, at the same time, infer that cotton is a cheap and inferior fiber. Such is not the case.

Fourth. In the communication just referred to, the president of the Peerless Woolen Mills is quoted as follows:

Can say without hesitation that any labeling bill that required percentage statements of the raw-material contents would tend to decrease our use of raw cotton.

Fifth. From the communication, Mr. Fred K. Nixon, sales manager of one of the largest cotton mills manufacturing apparel cloths composed of wool and cotton, is quoted as follows:

We are among the leading manufacturers of textile apparel materials composed of wool and cotton in combination, processed principally on cotton machinery. The bulk of our production is made up of these combination cloths, so our operations will be affected by the pending legislation.

Sixth. The manager of the Collins & Aikman factory, makers of automobile and furniture upholstery, testified as follows:

The effect of S. 162 might readily be detrimental to the sale of some types of pile fabrics containing cotton.

Seventh. In addition to the letter just referred to, I have a communication, of date July 26, from the Peerless Woolen Mills, located at Rossville, Ga., in which the manager states:

Can say without hesitation that any labeling bill that required percentage statements of the raw-material contents would tend to decrease our use of raw cotton.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point the entire letter received from the Peerless Woolen Mills Co., of Rossville, Ga.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> PEERLESS WOOLEN MILLS. New York, July 26, 1939.

Mr. EDWIN WILKINSON.

National Association of Wool Manufacturers,

386 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Wilkinson: In reply to your telephonic inquiry, as one of the principal manufacturers of boys' sulting and trousering material, can say without hesitation that any labeling bill that required percentage statements of the raw material contents would tend to decrease our use of raw cotton.

While I recognize the desirability of knowing what kinds of fibers are in a textile product, statements alleging to give the exact percentage contents would only mislead and confuse the consuming public.

Yours very truly,

PEERLESS WOOLEN MILLS. J. L. HUTCHISON, Jr.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the Washington Post of this morning carries a short news story, and I ask that it be read at the desk by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

[From the Washington Post of July 28, 1939]

The House Rules Committee deferred action yesterday on a request that the Martin wool-labeling bill be given legislative right-

Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, said no clearance would be given until further hearings could be held. Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, a member of the committee, commented that the measure was "highly controversial," and that Members of Congress were being "propagandized from every source" concerning it ting it.

The bill, approved by the House Interstate Commerce Committee, would require that labels show the percentages of virgin, reprocessed, and reused wool, as well as the quantities of other fibers in

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, if the news story just read is a correct reflection of opinion in the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives, it is obvious that the bill will not be enacted finally at this session of Congress. If that is a correct assumption, the opponents of the bill will have ample time between now and January to ascertain the probable effect upon the cotton industry of the enactment of such a bill.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I assume from what the Senator has saidand I want to know if my assumption is correct—that his study of this question when the measure was under consideration indicated to him that its passage would result in some injury at least to the cotton producers and to the cotton manufacturers.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is no doubt that such a law would be injurious to the cotton industry, I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts. Of course the intent of the bill is to help the wool growers. In the event it does help the wool growers by increasing the demand for wool it will decrease the demand for cotton and thereby injure the cotton industry, because the bill seeks to make gold out of wool and dross out of cotton. The bill seeks to glorify virgin wool and to condemn reclaimed wool as shoddy, and by inference the bill places cotton in the same class with shoddy.

Mr. WALSH. The bill does not require that the labels contain a statement of the amount of cotton that may be interwoven with the wool in the production of a given product, does it? I am asking this preliminary to another question.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The bill as it came from the committee to the Senate sought to define wool. Wool was defined as-the fiber from the fleece of the sheep or lamb or hair of the Angora or Cashmere goat and may include the so-called specialty fibers, namely, the hair of the camel, alpaca, llama, rabbit, and vicuna

Mr. WALSH. What I am trying to develop is that if the label should say that 75, 80, or 60 percent virgin wool was embodied in a particular product coming from a manufacturer or a store, the inference would be, would it not, that some of the remainder of it was cotton?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Either that or shoddy. Cotton and shoddy would be placed on a par. One would be just as much discredited as the other.

Mr. WALSH. And is not the bill based upon the fact that there would be a prejudice in the purchaser's mind against shoddy with wool, and also against cotton intermingled with wool in the production of a fabric?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I share the opinion held by the Senator from Massachusetts, and I share his interpretation with respect to the effect of the measure. The bill is intended to help the wool growers, and I favor helping the wool growers, but not at the expense of the cotton growers, because my State produces wool. Oklahoma produces a million bales of cotton per year, and I do not want to help the wool growers of my State at the expense of the cotton producers of my State, and in my judgment that will be the effect of the measure.

Since there has been absolutely no consideration of the relation of cotton to wool, I object to the bill becoming a law until the question of this relationship shall have been thoroughly investigated.

Mr. WALSH. I observe in reading the RECORD that evidently some of the Senators from the southern cotton-producing States share the Senator's opinion. Though the opponents of the bill cast a small number of votes-23-5 of those came from the cotton-producing States of the South. I share the view which the Senator from Oklahoma has expressed, that the result of this legislation is apt to be injurious to the cotton producers and to the cotton industry.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is not a doubt about it, because if the bill helps the wool growers it will promote an increased demand for wool products, and to the extent that more wool is used, to that same extent less cotton will be used. That is injury No. 1.

The second injury is that cotton is placed in the same class as shoddy. I object to such a classification and for such reasons I have objected to the bill.

Mr. WALSH. I assume the Senator recognizes that it is probably impossible for him to obtain a reconsideration of the vote by which the bill was passed, but I want to take this opportunity to commend him for the service he rendered in his speech of yesterday and in his speech of today by calling attention to the fact that the enactment of this legislation may be much more far reaching than was expected or contemplated, and that there should be a further study of the subject along the line of its effect on the cottonproducing States and the cotton industry.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for his pertinent suggestions.

Mr. SCHWARTZ subsequently said: Mr. President, the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] has expressed what he had expected to say in reference to the truth-infabric bill for the benefit of the RECORD, having in mind that the bill would come up in the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, it having been asserted in the Senate that S. 162 and H. R. 944-truth-in-fabric bills-were urged solely in the interest of wool growers, I introduce in the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD a partial list of letters and resolutions from the leading farm, labor, consumer, and other organizations, cloth and garment manufacturers and others urging the Congress to enact this legislation.

I offer a letter from the American Farm Bureau Federation dated July 22, 1939, signed by W. R. Ogg, director, endorsing Senate bill 162, and expressing the opinion that its enactment will not affect cotton.

I offer a letter from the National Cooperative Council, dated July 24, 1939. The National Cooperative Council has cooperatives in every State in the Union, including, among others, the American Cotton Cooperative Association, with headquarters in New Orleans. The letter states that they have adopted resolutions unanimously endorsing Senate bill 162, and that, in their opinion, the bill will not injure cotton.

I offer a letter from the Federal Trade Commission, dated July 28, 1939, expressing the opinion that the bill will help

I offer a table prepared by the Census Bureau, showing the quantity of cotton, recovered wool, and raw wool used during the year in industry from 1914 to 1935, showing, among other things, that from 1914 to 1935 the amount of cotton used decreased from 6 percent to 3 percent; that the amount of recovered wool fiber, which is a substitute for cotton, increased from 19 percent in 1914 to 25 percent

I offer a statement by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, reciting in some detail the struggle during the past 20 years to have a labeling bill enacted, and stating the reasons why that great farm federation endorses Senate bill 162.

I offer a statement from Frederick Brenckman, representing the National Grange, which, by the way, is the oldest farm organization in the country, having been established over 72 years ago and having approximately 800,000 members in 36 States, specifically endorsing Senate bill 162.

I offer a statement by Mr. Edward E. Kennedy, of Washington, D. C., representing 10 Farmers' Union State organizations, specifically endorsing this bill, and stating the reasons why, in his opinion, it should be enacted.

I present a letter signed by I. M. Ornburn, secretarytreasurer of the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, specifically endorsing Senate bill 162 and advising that his department has the active sympathy and support of 4,500,000 members of the American Federation of Labor, and 2,000,000 women members of the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor.

I offer a statement by Mrs. Ernest William Howard, presenting resolutions adopted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs in convention assembled May 1938, asking for legislation which will assist the Federal Trade Commission in bringing about full informative labeling which will permit the consumer to identify what she is buying. The general federation is an organization throughout the country of club women and has some 2,000,000 members.

I present a letter dated March 3, 1939, addressed to Senator Burton K. Wheeler by Glenn T. Stebbins, executive secretary of the United States Livestock Association, setting forth a resolution endorsing Senate bill 162 from the standpoint of the stockgrower and also the consumer.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I present a list of the great national organizations which have endorsed Senate bill 162, and others which, while they have not endorsed the bill, have adopted resolutions endorsing a labeling measure. There is also attached a list of the names of labor organizations, local farm organizations, and various corporations and individuals, numbering more than 300 and coming from 46 States in the Union, favoring the proposed legislation. I ask that all the documents I have presented may be printed in the RECORD at

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the matters presented by the Senator from Wyoming will be incorporated in the RECORD.

The matters referred to are as follows:

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION, Washington, D. C., July 22, 1939.

Hon. H. H. SCHWARTZ,

Hon. H. H. Schwartz,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senators: I note in the debate on the truth-in-fabric bill in the Senate a question was raised as to whether this bill would result in decreasing the consumption of cotton.

Such a fear is entirely unwarranted. From my investigation of this matter I am convinced that it will probably result in increasing the consumption of cotton, rather than decreasing it, if it has any effect at all in this respect.

Without this legislation manufacturers of woolen goods can purchase rags and other second-hand materials, tear apart these fabrics, and use them in the manufacture of clothing which is sold to the public as all wool. Thus the public gets an inferior article under the false impression that this is made of new wool. This bill merely requires the manufacturers of woolen goods to tell the truth as to the content of such goods. They can no longer sell goods made of second-hand wool as virgin-wool articles. The manufacturers can still use shoddy, or cotton, or silk, or rayon, or any other materials in mixture with wool, provided they tell the consumer the truth about what the article contains.

While no one can predict with certainty changes in consumer while no one can predict with certainty changes in consumer demand, it seems reasonable to conclude that if the manufacturers have to tell the truth about mixtures with wool, the consumer will be more likely to prefer a garment composed of all new materials, such as wool and cotton, to a garment made out of wool rags and other second-hand materials whose fibers have been damaged by pulling and tearing apart of the fabric in the process of remanufacture.

The American Farm Bureau Federation has supported such legislation since 1920. Its policies are determined by voting delegates from State Farm Bureaus in 40 States, representing approximately one and one-half million individual farm people. We are just as one and one-half million individual farm people. We are just as vitally interested in the welfare of the cotton farmer as the welfare of the wool grower. We see nothing in this legislation to injure in any way the welfare of the cotton grower, but, on the contrary, it may have some indirect benefit to the cotton industry. Again may I emphasize that all the bill does is to require manufactures of weeler goods to tell the truth concerning the content.

Again may I emphasize that all the bill does is to require manufacturers of woolen goods to tell the truth concerning the content of their goods. They are at perfect liberty to use any kind of materials they desire, but they can no longer deceive the public concerning such goods. This is a fundamental principle of common honesty comparable to what has already been accomplished concerning such goods. This is a fundamental principle of common honesty comparable to what has already been accomplished in other fields through the Pure Food and Drugs Act.

It carries out the fundamental principle of fair competition as stated by the late Justice Cardozo in the case of the Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Co. (291 U. S. Supreme Court 67), "Fair competition is not obtained by balancing a gain in money against a misrepresentation of the thing supplied. The courts must set their faces against a conception of business standards so corrupting in its tendency. The consumer is prejudiced if upon giving an order for one thing he is supplied with something else * * *. In such matters the public is entitled to get what it chooses, though the choice may be dictated by caprice or by fashion or perhaps by ignorance. Nor is the prejudice only to the consumer. Dealers and manufacturers are prejudiced when orders that would have come to them if (they) had been rightly named are diverted to others whose methods are less scrupulous."

The Senate is to be commended for its decisive vote in approving this bill yesterday. We sincerely hope that this action will not be reconsidered. It is too bad such legislation was not passed long ago to end the flagrant abuses in the sale of woolen goods.

Sincerely yours,

Sincerely yours,

W. R. Ogg. Director.

NATIONAL COOPERATIVE COUNCIL, Washington, D. C., July 24, 1939.

Hon. ELMER THOMAS,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.
My Dear Senator Thomas: The Congressional Record of July 21 indicated that you had moved to reconsider the vote on the truth-in-fabrics bill which had passed the Senate by a vote of 48 to 23.

We know of your long service to agriculture and your coopera-tion in matters of vital interest to the farmers of the United States. It is because of this fact that we appeal to you on be-half of the 1,700,000 farmers that are members of the National Cooperative Council that you do not request a reconsideration of

The council is made up of some 4,000 farmers' cooperative marketing and purchasing organizations with membership in every State in the Union. For a number of years our organization has been interested in truth-in-fabrics legislation and at the 1939 annual meeting held in January reaffirmed its position by passing the following resolution:

The National Cooperative Council at its meeting in January 1938 endorsed the fabric-labeling bill, and the bill, though passed by the Senate, failed to be reported in time to get on the House calendar. The council, therefore, reaffirms its position and urges calendar. The council, therefore, reaffirms its position and urges the passage of new fabric-labeling bills, S. 162 and H. R. 944."

You raised the question whether the Schwartz bill, S. 162, would injure the cotton farmers. We are unable to see how this type of legislation would injure the producers of cotton. We feel that truth-in-fabrics legislation would tend to benefit the entire cotton industry. As a matter of fact, one of the strong federations that make up the membership of this council is the American Cotton Cooperative Association with headquarters at New Orleans. This organization is made up of some 12 State cooperative This organization is made up of some 12 State cooperative associations of cotton growers. The American Cotton Cooperative Association is supporting this truth-in-fabrics legislation and were represented at our annual meetings when resolutions favoring this legislation were adopted.

Our council operates on a unanimous-consent basis, and for that reason never passes any resolutions that are not approved by all of its member associations.

We respectfully urge that you lend your support to the passage of this important measure and assure you that we will greatly appreciate your efforts.
With every good wish,
Sincerely yours,

EZRA T. BENSON, Secretary-Treasurer, National Cooperative Council. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, Washington, July 28, 1939.

Hon. H. H. SCHWARTZ,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR SCHMARTZ: I have received and presented to the Commission your letter of July 27, 1939, referring to the wool-products labeling bill, S. 162, and propounding two questions: First, as to whether the bill adversely affects cotton; and, second, whether the provisions of the bill will be effective with respect to imports from foreign countries.

The Commission has considered the matter in the light of its many years of experience respecting commercial practices in the sale and distribution in commerce of fabrics and fabric merchandise; and, responding to your first question, it is the opinion of the Commission that the legislation under consideration will have the Commission that the legislation under consideration will have no adverse effect upon the sale or use of cotton.

As a textile fiber, cotton has distinctive qualities and intrinsic merits, and the bill, requiring truthful disclosure, would undoubtedly tend toward having these meritorious qualities of cotton brought to the attention of the buying public. Moreover, in mixed fabrics, those not composed wholly of virgin wool, cotton may reasonably be expected to be employed in place of cheap shoddy or low-grade second-hand wool fibers which are at present used in such mixed products without disclosure of such fact to the consuming public. Under all the circumstances, it appears quite possible that as a result of the legislation the trend will be toward a greater use of cotton in mixed goods in lieu of certain toward a greater use of cotton in mixed goods in lieu of certain types of shoddy.

The bill does not prohibit the use of any fiber, but is aimed at having the respective products marketed under nondeceptive conditions of truthful disclosure in the interest of maintaining fair competition and consumer protection. Experience has demon-competition and consumer protection. Experience has demonstrated that honest disclosure of a meritorious fiber does not hurt, but on the contrary helps its sale. Cotton with its many distinctive and desirable properties could not, in our opinion, be adversely affected in such situation.

Respecting your second question as to whether the bill will be effective in the matter of imports from foreign countries, the measure is applicable to such foreign imports as well as to domestic wool products. In addition, the bill provides means for excluding from the country foreign merchandise misbranded under its terms. from the country foreign merchandise misbranded under its terms. It also provides for sworn declaration of contents on so-called consular invoices as required in the act of June 17, 1930; also the falsification of or the failure to set forth such information in such invoices is made an unfair method of competition under the Federal Trade Commission Act. If done with willful intent, it is also punishable as a misdemeanor. Moreover, the guilty party may be prohibited from importing or participating in importations of wool prohibited from importing or participating in importations of wool products into the United States except upon filing bond with the Secretary of the Treasury in the sum double the value of the wool products and the duty thereof, conditioned upon compliance with the provisions of the act. Upon general administrative procedures through treaty arrangements, information may be obtained from the original sources in the country of origin of the goods. Likewise, through scientific tests, the presence of the most objectionable types of shoddy in the fabric can be sufficiently detected for purposes of enforcement.

one types of shoddy in the fabric can be sufficiently detected for purposes of enforcement.

Upon consideration of the matter as a whole and in answering your question specifically, it is the opinion of the Commission that the provisions of the bill will be effective with respect to imports from foreign countries.

By direction of the Commission.

Yours very sincerely,

R. E. FREER, Chairman.

STATEMENT OF EDWARD A. O'NEAL, PRESIDENT, AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION

For nearly 20 years the American Farm Bureau Federation has For nearly 20 years the American Farm Bureau Federation has consistently urged action by Congress to protect wool growers and consumers against misrepresentation and deception in the sale of woolen goods. In 1920 the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation adopted the following resolution:

"We demand of Congress the prompt enactment of a law which will compel clothing and fabrics containing shoddy or other substitutes for virgin wool to be plainly marked as such."

Again and again since that time our organization has reiterated this appeal to Congress. In the meantime conditions have grown worse, until in recent years the wool-manufacturing industry has been using more shoddy and substitute fibers than all the virgin wool combined. When such mixtures are sold to the consumer as "all wool" or as "pure wool," "virgin wool," or other representations which lead the consumer to believe that the product is made of virgin wool, such deception of the public is indefensible. It is too bad that such practices have not been outlawed long ago.

The Schwartz-Martin bill merely seeks to protect the public against deception in the sale of woolen articles. It does not prevent the manufacturer from using any kind of substitute fibers and the manufacturer from using any kind of substitute fibers and mixing them with woolen goods in any way that he desires and to any extent that he desires. All he is required to do is to truthfully label his products so that the consumers will know the truth about what he offers for sale. The consumer can then make an intelligent label his products so that the consumers will know the truth about what he offers for sale. The consumer can then make an intelligent decision in purchasing such goods. If the consumer wants the cheaper goods made of shoddy, he or she can select such goods with full knowledge of what the article really is, instead of being sold an inferior article containing shoddy under the pretense that the article is all virgin wool, as happens all too often now.

The problem is not complicated and difficult as the opponents of this legislation contend. The issue is really quite plain; it comes down to a simple question of common honesty and fair dealing with the public. The honest manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer who wants to tell the public the truth about the products which he sells should welcome this legislation to protect them against competitors who want to take an unfair advantage by selling goods under misrepresentation. It is gratifying to note that some of the manufacturers and some retailers are supporting this legislation.

It seems unfortunate that such flagrant and widespread deception of the public should have been allowed to continue. A great deal of progress has been made in other fields. We now have the Pure Food and Drug Act to protect the public against adulteration and deception in the sale of food and drugs; we have the Commodities Exchange Act to outlaw unfair and fraudulent practices and to protect against excessive speculative manipulations of commodity markets; the Securities and Exchange Commission to protect against misrepresentation and fraud in the sale of securities. It required many, many years of agitation before action was obtained to correct these abuses. many, many years of agitation before action was obtained to correct these abuses

The wool industry has had more than ample time to voluntarily correct the abuses in the sale of woolen goods, but has not done so; instead the situation has grown worse over the years. The farmers and consumers whose interests are adversely affected by the widespread deception in the sale of so-called woolen goods have no other recourse than to come to Congress and ask for protection. The remedy proposed is fair and reasonable and should provide effective protection to all legitimate interests.

There appears to be no need for further extended argument or investigation of this matter, as it has been before Congress for a great many years. The opponents today are pursuing the same tactics and offering almost identically the same excuses as to why nothing effective should be done that they did 15 years ago. These threadbare objections have been answered over and over again; the opposition of certain groups with selfish interests involved still continues.

yet the opposition of certain groups with selfish interests involved still continues.

Now, as then, they are favoring inadequate substitute legislation such as S. 1496, introduced by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts. In 1924 the opposition favored an inadequate substitute bill introduced by Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts.

Meanwhile the situation grows worse. Therefore the primary need at this time is for prompt and effective action by Congress to enable the Federal Trade Commission to end these abuses.

As to the need for action to correct abuses on the sale of woolen goods, I want to quote from an address by Commissioner R. E. Freer, of the Federal Trade Commission, before the International Association of Garment Manufacturers, Chicago, May 26, 1938:

"This widespread interest in the labeling of textile products is a logical result of the rapid technical changes in the textile industries in recent years. Rayon has been developed to the point at which rayon fabrics can be made indistinguishable from silk, cotton, or wool. The reclaiming of used wool has been so systematically worked out that the amount of reclaimed wool used each year in textiles is approximately half the amount of the scoured new-wool crop. The arts of blending cotton with other fibers for use in garments have been so perfected that such mixed fabrics are often more handsome than unmixed ones. Special processes of finishing, weighing, and preshrinking fabrics have been worked out.

"No doubt a part of these innovations has come from unscrubeen worked out.

"No doubt, a part of these innovations has come from unscru"No doubt, a part of these innovations has come from unscruroo doubt, a part of these linovations has come from unscruppulous producers who see a chance to sell an inferior product under false pretenses. Much of the development, however, reflects the versatility of the makers of fabrics and garments in providing a variety of uses for a textile fiber and a variety of appearances and qualities in textile fabrics.

"Unfortunately, however, even the best of new products have tended to make the consumer's buying skill obsolete, and thus to create a condition in the market which has been the despair of the intelligent buyer and of the scrupulous seller.

the intelligent buyer and of the scrupulous seller.

"It is still basically true that cotton, wool, silk, and synthetic fibers have different properties, are best applied to different uses, and require different types of care if they are to give satisfactory service. Because of this fact, the product which is bought without proper knowledge is likely to be found unsatisfactory, no matter how good it may be of its kind. At the extreme, an occasional owner of a synthetic fiber dress may have it cleaned by a process which dissolves everything but the buttons. Much more frequent, however, are the cases in which an improperly washed fabric shrinks, an improperly dyed fabric crocks, a garment which is bought for hard service wears out too soon, and the like.

"The returned-goods department of retail stores are the most tangible evidence of the economic waste involved in this process, but they cannot measure the extent of the disappointments consumers nor of the ill will and distrust engendered toward those who make the goods and sell them.

"But in addition to the problem created by the inappropriate purchase or treatment of good merchandise, there has been a serious problem of competition by the unscrupulous. When the buyer cannot tell the difference between one fiber and another, it is easy for the dishonest seller to supply a fabric which is cheap to make, regardless of whether it is appropriate to its intended use, and to sell that fabric by flagrant misrepresentation of its character.

"A few such concerns are enough to throw a whole industry into confusion. They can destroy the goodwill which attaches to a fiber or a type of cloth. They can establish prices on the basis of a skimped product, and thereby offer their more scrupulous rivals the option of losing money or of vying with them in the degradation of quality and the use of deceptive-sales tactics. They can subject a market to unpredictable shifts of demand, as consumers turn from one type of product which has been insufferably degraded to another in which they still have confidence."

I would like to quote also from the address of Mr. Henry Miller.

I would like to quote also from the address of Mr. Henry Miller, assistant director of trade-practice conferences, Federal Trade Com-assistant director of trade-practice conferences, Federal Trade Commission, before the meeting of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, January 18, 1939:

"In recent years there has developed a singularly aggravated situation of confusion, misrepresentation, and deceptive concealment in the merchandising of fabrics, clothing, and other textile products in the channels of trade and to the consuming public. False and often deliberately deceptive representations in labels and advertisements were resorted to in an increasing extent. In addition, the development of new textile fibers and new or advanced tion, the development of new textile fibers and new or advanced methods of fabrication brought (with their many desirable features) new problems of confusion and sharp practices, of which the unscrupulous immediately took advantage. As a result, complaints coming to the Commission from businessmen and from the public increased. The unfair competition made it difficult for honest competitors to survive or maintain the high quality of their product and service. Deception of the buying public was rapidly undermining consumer confidence, so essential to sound and prosperous business. Little reliance could be placed by the consumer perous business. Little reliance could be placed by the consumer in many of the labels and the advertising matter. In scores of cases it was necessary for the Commission to enter corrective proceedings against individual offenders. Indeed, on the record there are perhaps more stipulations and orders to cease and desist outstanding in the case of misrepresentation of textile merchandise standing in the case of misrepresentation of textile merchandise than in the case of any other comparable class of consumer goods. "Dishonest practices in the marketing of any commodity, whether it be a textile or anything else, have a destructive effect upon business, and unless checked will reduce the industry to a chaotic and demoralized condition, besides injuring and defrauding the buying public. In the textile field such a condition was fast developing. The need for protection of industry and trade and the consuming public became most pressing. Something had to be consuming public became most pressing. Something had to be done.

"A general investigation and study of the situation was made by the Commission. It is apparent that much of the deception was rooted in the concealment or nondisclosure of the fiber content of fabrics in face of new processes whereby the well-recognized appearance and feel of the basic textile fibers are widely simulated or imitated in yarn or fabric of a totally different fiber. For example, imitations of silk, wool, and linen in fabrics containing no silk at all, or no wool, or no linen, were developed to such extent as to deceive even the experienced. The art of manipulating fabrics, of combining different fibers, has advanced to where the eye and the sense of touch are no longer reliable guides to any purchaser as to what the fabric is composed of.

"Under the circumstances it is quite evident that the disclosure of the character of the fiber content affords the only adequate corrective for the confusion and misunderstanding so harmful to the buying public and to business. Misstatements by sales clerks, the buying public and to business. Misstatements by sales clerks, though in some instances apparently deliberate or inexcusable, are in many instances made through ignorance and lack of knowledge, in many instances made through ignorance and lack of knowledge, coupled with the natural desire to say that which will help make a sale. Through disclosure of the essential facts on the label, those who deliberately misrepresent would have their falsehood exposed. Those inclined to misrepresent through ignorance or lack of knowledge would have the information necessary to prevent the misrepresentation. Those fabrics and articles which have the appearance or feel of that which they are not would have their true nature made known and thus be marketed for what they are and on their own respective merits.

"In the development of new fibers and new types of fabrics, with a plethora of trade descriptions, much confusion and mis-understanding has also developed as to what kind of labeling and what kind of disclosures are deemed to be proper and reasonably required for the prevention of that type of deception which the present law prescribes. It became apparent in the situation that it would be a great help if rules were provided which could serve as a guide to the manufacturer, the jobber, the dealer, and to everybody—convenient and officially sanctioned provisions by which all might be informed and advised as to the practices to be avoided as harmful and as to what types of labeling are deemed proper rules which may be followed with assurance that they will keep one within the straight and narrow path where he may conduct his business freely and without fear of having his labeling subject to question as being in conflict with the law. In such rules the many who desire to conduct their hadrons on a bind ing subject to question as being in connict with the law. In such rules the many who desire to conduct their business on a high ethical plane would have a uniform specification of fair practices to which they could voluntarily adhere and on which they could cooperate with their competitors in the maintenance of a condition of clean and wholesome competition."

The American Farm Bureau Federation strongly supports the Schwartz-Martin bill and urges its speedy enactment by this Congress. We oppose amendments that will weaken and injure the effectiveness of this measure. We likewise oppose inadequate substitutes such as S. 1496.

We hope the Schwartz-Martin bill will have the early approval of the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and of the Congress.

Respectfully submitted.

EDWARD A. O'NEAL, President.

STATEMENT OF FREDERIC BRENCKMAN, REPRESENTING THE NATIONAL GRANGE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. Brenckman. Mr. Chairman, my name is Frederic Brenckman, and I am the Washington representative of the National Grange. The Grange is the oldest farm organization in America. It was established 72 years ago, and we have approximately 800,000 members, distributed among 36 States.

bers, distributed among 36 States.

For more than a generation the National Grange has demanded legislation that would compel the labeling of woolen fabrics and garments in such a manner as to designate approximately the percentage of virgin wool and substitutes, such as reclaimed wool, cotton, and rayon, used in the manufacture of these products.

We are heartily in favor of the enactment of Senate bill 162. In our opinion, this legislation would prove beneficial both to wool producers and consumers. It should be welcomed by honest manufacturers and dealers.

ufacturers and dealers.

The enactment of this legislation would extend the principles underlying the national Pure Food and Drugs Act to the manufacture and sale of woolen goods and fabrics. The Grange was the ploneer in advocating national legislation to protect the people against fraud and deception in the manufacture and sale of processed foods and drugs. The Pure Food and Drugs Act was passed in 1906, and scarcely any other piece of legislation enacted by Congress during the last generation has more abundantly justified itself. This legislation protects the health and the very lives of the people. It works no hardship on honest manufacturers and distributors.

When the fight for the enactment of this legislation was in When the fight for the enactment of this legislation was in progress, the late Dr. Harvey Wylle, who became the outstanding individual figure in the crusade, used to say, "Put it on the label!" "Put it on the label!" Let the people know whether they are buying clothing and fabrics made of honest virgin wool or whether they are getting shoddy made from reclaimed wool and old rags picked up from the ash heaps of America and Europe by scavengers. There is no dispute whatever as to the relative merits of virgin wool and scale in the relative merits of virgin wool and scale in the relative merits of virgin wool are scale in the relative merits of virg

There is no dispute whatever as to the relative merits of virgin wool and reclaimed wool. Virgin wool is a new, unused fiber having qualities of warmth and of wear which no other fiber possesses. Reclaimed wool is an inferior, second-hand, previously manufactured or used substitute for virgin wool. Reclaimed wool never makes a product as good as if it were made of virgin wool. Reclaimed wool, grade for grade, is sold to the wool manufacturer as a substitute in competition with virgin wool at from one-third to one-half the price of virgin wool. The very qualities of warmth and of wear which make virgin wool the most valuable and necessary fiber used by mankind are either greatly diminished or entirely lost in reclaimed wool. Yet, under conditions as they exist today, the American public is being deceived through the use of this substitute fiber in clothing and other articles they buy for themselves and their families, under the impression that they are made of virgin wool.

Surely the purchaser or the consumer is entitled to know whether Surely the purchaser or the consumer is entitled to know whether he is buying a new or second-hand article. Is there any better way of providing this information than by affixing stamps, tags, or labels to the products offered for sale, as provided in the pending bill? This legislation will in no way interfere with the manufacture and sale of shoddy or reclaimed wool, but it will protect the purchaser by giving him information as to what he is buying. Let me relate a little personal experience I had in buying clothing: I bought a suit from a first-class store on F Street and took it for granted that it would wear well. In a very short time I discovered a hole near the lapel of the coat. It did not seem reasonable to me to suppose that the moths had already begun to devour the suit, so I was a little bit perplexed. * * * Pretty soon cracks and vents began to appear in various parts of the coat, and it was literally falling apart, after I had worn it a week or so. And it was shoddy, pure and simple. I was so aggravated that I sent a letter to the store where I had bought it, and where I had an account, and told them to take my name off their books, that I did not want to deal any further with a store handling goods of that description. Now, by way of comparison, Mrs. Brenckman bought a winter coat. It was made by Forstmann Woolen Co., and it was made of virgin wool. It wore for years and looked splendid all the while and gave her the warmth and protection that she wanted.

There is an example of the difference between shoddy and virgin wool. Now, how many thousands of our people throughout the wool. Now, how many thousands of our people throughout the United States have been victimized in recent years as I have been I do not know. But, at any rate, I do not think it is a fair way of selling merchandise.

Viewing this legislation from the standpoint of the wool grower, official figures show that during the past 6 years more than 600,-000,000 pounds of reclaimed wool or shoddy have been used by woolen manufacturers as an undisclosed substitute for virgin wool. We even import millions of pounds of rags from Europe each year because the supply of discarded rags of the American people is insufficient to meet the demands of woolen manufacturers for shoddy in the great game of fraud and deception that, under prevailing conditions, is being practiced upon the consumers of the United

I understand that in the recent trade agreement with Great Britain we reduced the duty on rags in order to furnish more abundant materials and supplies for the manufacturers of shoddy. In the meantime we have plenty of virgin wool in this country that the wool growers would be glad to sell.

The time must come to put an end to this disgraceful condition of affairs. At the last session the Senate passed a bill similar to the one now pending. A companion bill was favorably reported by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It only failed to pass the House because Congress adjourned before it could be brought to a vote.

We trust that there may be speedy and favorable action on the pending bill.

STATEMENT OF EDWARD E. KENNEDY, WASHINGTON, D. C., REPRESENTING 10 FARMERS' UNION STATE ORGANIZATIONS
Mr. KENNEDY. My name is Edward E. Kennedy. My office here is 109 First Street SE. I represent 10 farmers' union State organizations in the Middle West and the Eastern States; I also represent farmers' union local and county organizations in a total of 24 States in the Union.

in the Union.

Senator Schwartz. You may now proceed with your statement.

Mr. Kennedy. Mr. Chairman, I come here this morning to make a brief statement in favor of the passage of S. 162, providing for the labeling of wool products in interstate and foreign commerce. This matter, as the chairman has so well stated, has been before the Congress for the last several years, a similar bill having passed the Senate last year, but which failed of passage in the House of Representatives, I believe, only because the time was so short the House was unable to get action on it before adjournment.

House was unable to get action on it before adjournment.

I am very glad this matter is now up in the early part of the session so it may receive consideration and be enacted into law.

I think, perhaps, one of the best suggestions as to why this legislation is before the Congress is contained in a few words I would lation is before the Congress is contained in a few words I would like to read from a speech of Mr. Henry Miller, assistant director of trade-practice conferences, made before the National Retail Drygoods Association on January 18, 1939. He explains it very fully. Mr. Miller said in part:

"In recent years there has developed a singularly aggravated situation of confusion, misrepresentation, and deceptive concealment in the merchandising of fabrics, clothing, and other textile products in the channels of trade and to the consuming public. * * * On the record (of the Federal Trade Commission) there are perhaps more stipulations and orders to cease and desist outstanding in the case of misrepresentation of textile merchandise than in the case of any other comparable class of consumer goods.

"Textiles may be said to be as essential as food and shelter to the existence of every man, woman, and child. The sale and distribution of such essential commodities under conditions of honesty and tion of such essential commodities under conditions of honesty and competitive fairness is a matter of vital concern to business and to the buying public. It must be of deep concern to the Commission, as the agency which is charged by law with the duty of protecting both from the inroads of unfair competitive methods and deceptive practices."

Mr. Chairman, I think that explains fully why this legislation is Mr. Chairman, I think that explains fully why this legislation is before the Congress. When I go to buy a suit of clothes, or any article of wool clothing that is supposed to be wool, I have very little opportunity as a consumer to know what the fiber content in that article is, whether it is virgin wool, whether it is shoddy, or how much is virgin wool, or how much is shoddy. And that situation is true of the most of the consumers in the United States. I notice that since the last Congress some manufacturers are beginning to put some labels on woolen goods sold in the channels of commerce. These labels will say, for instance, not less than 50 percent virgin wool. Some manufacturers are doing that now. Other labels will say not more than 20 percent.

Other labels will say not more than 20 percent.

But that still does not reveal the fiber content in the wool.

This demonstrates to me that it is entirely possible and practicable for a reputable manufacturer to tell the consuming public what the content is, whether virgin wool or shoddy, or cotton, and what percentage, as provided in this bill.

and what percentage, as provided in this bill.

Now, from the standpoint of the farmer, we are growing wool in every State in the Union, but we are not growing enough wool in the United States for our own needs. We are importing into the United States substantial quantities of wool and wool manufactures every year. Wool manufactures are coming into this country, produced by manufacturers of other nations, of almost every nation in the world; and it is very essential, not only essential but entirely just, that a manufacturer, whether in the United States or outside and expecting to have a market in the United States, should tell the consuming public what kind of fiber is in the woolen product that he offers to the consuming public in the United States.

I might also say this, that I have heard it testified by some manufacturers at the last hearing in the way of glorifying the qualities of shoddy or reclaimed wool.

Now, I agree right off the reel that shoddy and reclaimed wool Now, I agree right off the reel that shoddy and reclaimed wool have their uses in the making of articles of merchandise manufactured and sold in the United States; but if shoddy or reclaimed wool and other fiber content that goes into the manufacture of woolen products is useful, and if it is good, which it is in some instances, I think what they ought to do is to be perfectly willing to say so, to see this bill enacted into law, and be willing to tell the public that we have so much fiber content by weight in this article of merchandise, and it is good, and tell them why it is good. I think that is only good merchandising, and it is good advertising.

advertising.

Mr. Chairman, I think you have stated the substance of this bill very well, and I want to assure you I appeared before the Federal Trade Commission during their hearings last fall and urged the adoption of the rules which the Federal Trade Commission promulgated. And as I understand the situation, this bill is to remove any question of the authority or the right of the Federal Trade Commission to promulgate the necessary rules and regulations in order to enforce the provisions of the labeling of woolen products according to their fiber content, whether it is virgin wool, or whether it is reclaimed wool, or whether it carries other fiber content.

other fiber content.

Now, Mr. Chairman, that is all the statement I care to make here this morning. I am making it not only in the interest of our people as wool producers, but also in the interest of our people as consumers who are also farmers.

consumers who are also farmers.

The subcommittee met again on March 2, 1939, at 10 a. m., pursuant to call, in room 412, Senate Office Building, Senator H. H. Schwartz, chairman of the subcommittee, presiding.

Present: Senators Schwartz and Austin.
Senator Schwartz. The subcommittee will come to order. At the conclusion of our last session Mr. Besse filed a memorandum in which he said he desired that we recall Mr. Kennedy for information as to the organization he claims to represent.

I will now call Mr. Kennedy to learn what he has to state in reference to that matter.

Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee.

I will now can Mr. Kennedy to learn what he has to state in reference to that matter.

Mr. Kennedy. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, my name is Edward E. Kennedy. I represent 10 of the farmers' union State organizations, and these State organizations that I have been representing here for the last 2 years were in the process of reorganization at the time I made my statement last week. On the 23d day of February this group of State organizations formed a national union, or a national organization known as the National Farmers' Guild. This was done at Goshen, Ind., on February 23 of the present year.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I do not care to dignify Mr. Besse's statement entirely too much for the very obvious reason that during the past 10 or 12 years I have been representing the farmers' union and its affiliated organizations here in the capacity of its national secretary, in favor of legislation that would aid and help the farmers of the Nation, and I have not been in the habit of making "shoddy" representations. So beyond that I have no more to say, except that I should like to suggest for the record here that at this meeting of the National Farmers' Guild the following resolution was unanimously adopted. The resolution is as follows:

is as follows:

"Be it resolved, That we support and favor the adoption of the wool-labeling bill, Senate bill 162."

The 10 State organizations that I represent here, Mr. Chairman, are the organizations of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Washington, Idaho, and California. Are there any further questions, Mr. Chairman?

Senator Schwartz, No.
Senator Austin. I want to ask Mr. Kennedy some questions.
Mr. Kennedy, are those 10 organizations, State organizations, subordinate organizations of this organization which you have spoken of as a national organization?

Mr. Kennedy. Yes, sir; they are, Senator.

Senator Austin. And the national organization is the one which adopted the resolution that you spoke of?

Mr. KENNEDY. It is.

Senator Austin. And was that meeting attended by a large number of representatives of the organization which adopted that resolution?

Mr. Kennedy. Yes, sir; it was made up of representatives on the basis of 1 representative for every 250 members.

Senator Austin. And is the membership of the national organization composed of the sum of the memberships of the various State organizations?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir; it is, Senator.

Senator Austin. And if you represent these 10 subordinate organizations it is by virtue of their being components of this national organization; is that right?

Mr. Kennedy. Both, Senator, because prior to the organization of the national organization my representation of them here in washington was both by a resolution adopted at the annual convention of the State organization plus a supplemental action of the board of directors of those respective organizations.

Senator Austin. Yes. So that your authority came directly from the local organizations, as well as from this national organization?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is right, Senator.

Senator Austin. And you are a permanent representative here of those organizations, are you not?

Mr. Kennedy. Yes, sir; I am, Senator.

Senator Austin. Do you represent any other farm organizations than those which you have named?

Mr. Kennedy. Except some of the cooperative organizations here, Senator, which have been a part of, and which are a part of the organizations. For example, the Farmers' Union Livestock Commission at Chicago, which is a selling agency belonging to the State organizations of Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, and so forth, and a number of other cooperatives along the same line.

and a number of other cooperatives along the same line.

Senator Austin. All of these cooperatives fit into the same organization which you first mentioned?

Mr. Kennedy. That is right, Senator.

Senator Austin. These resolutions that you have given us a true copy of—when were they adopted?

Mr. Kennedy. On the 28d dear of February, this lest month

Mr. Kennedy. On the 23d day of February, this last month. Senator Schwartz. Senator Austin, I do not know whether you had a copy of the previous hearing, or not.
Senator Austin. No; I did not.
Senator Schwarz. This witness was here before, and testified Senator Austin. I did not know that. Just one more question. When were the resolutions adopted by the subordinate, or, rather, the State, organizations?

Mr. Kennedy. At their annual conventions, which were held during the fall months of last year, and also at their annual conventions the previous year.

Senator Austin. Have these State organizations for several years been supporting this type of legislation which has been offered from time to time?

Mr. Kennedy. Yes, Senator; they have.

Senator Austin. Have you any other interest, that is financial interest, or any compensation from any other source, except this organization?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely none, Senator.

Senator Austin. Thank you.

Hon. H. H. SCHWARTZ,

Chairman of the Subcommittee on the Wool Products Labeling Bill, Committee on Interstate Commerce, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: My absence from Washington prevents a personal appearance before your committee. I am, therefore, requesting that the following statement be included in the record of the hearing on S. 162, the wool products labeling bill of 1939.

The union-label trades department of the American Federation of Labor urges the passage of this measure, as it has supported previous bills aimed at protection of the consumer, especially the provisions that would force disclosure of the reclaimed wool or provisions that would force disclosure of the reclaimed wool or shoddy content of wool products.

Our department represents 51 directly affiliated international unions of the American Federation of Labor with a membership of over 1,000,000, including the Sheepshearers' Union, which is directly interested in this legislation. In addition our department's activities have the loyal support of the 4,500,000 members of the American Federation of Labor. Furthermore, the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor, representing 2,000,000 women is organized under our department. women, is organized under our department.

It should be understood that ours is essentially the consumers' department of the American Federation of Labor, and as consumers we speak in behalf of this wool-labeling bill. We are, of course, primarily interested in identifying for the consumer commodities made under fair union conditions. But while the union label is a guaranty of fair wages and hours to workers, it does not pretend to constitute a guaranty that the ingredients of commodities so labeled meet any specified standard of quality. For the protection of workers as consumers, therefore, we have always supported private and governmental efforts for supplemental labeling that will give the buyer adequate information about the commodities he

Among the flimsy arguments recently made against this bill by those manufacturers and retailers who do not want the public to know the fiber content of garments sold by them is the contention that labeling adds greatly to the cost of a commodity and that the public will be confused by labels such as those indicated in the proposed Federal Trade Commission rules.

The use of labels to identify honest products goes back to antiquity. You are all familiar with the later example of hallmarks on silver and gold.

on silver and gold.

Aside from the use of union labels on commodities, there is a label-manufacturing industry in the United States producing between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000 worth of labels a year. Many of these labels are used by garment manufacturers to convey to the consumer the idea that he is buying all-wool products, but carefully covering up the fact that these wool garments may contain a large proportion of reclaimed wool or shoddy. It does not seem reasonable to assume that adding a few words of truth to the label will increase the cost of labeling. Nor does it seem reasonable to assume that the consumer will be confused by adding some truth about the fiber content. I can assure you that our 2,000,000 members of women's auxiliaries will be glad to know the truth as revealed by honest labels. It is their hope, and ours, that this bill will abolish the present widespread practice of deception.

I hope that the Senate will speedily pass this legislation strengthening the Federal Trade Commission in its enforcement of the proposed rules requiring disclosure of the reclaimed wool or shoddy content of wool products, and thus protect the public from the adulterants that threaten the very existence of the wool industry of the United States.

Very truly yours,

I. M. ORNBURN. Secretary-Treasurer.

STATEMENT OF MRS. ERNEST WILLIAM HOWARD, DEPARTMENT CHAIRMAN OF LEGISLATION OF THE DISTRICT FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS. WASHINGTON, D. C.

I should like to read into the record a resolution dealing with fiber identification. You have a copy of this resolution. All of the committees have a copy of it. It is Resolution No. 9, Fiber Identification

I might say here that the general federation and all federations sponsor not a particular bill but the principle of the bill. This resolution concerns itself with the principle of the matter. This is resolution No. 9, sent to me by the General Federation's national department chairman. I will read it.

"Resolved, That Congress be urged to supplement the powers of the Federal Trade Commission so that the Commission may extend further protection to the consumer by bringing about fuller informative labeling."

> UNITED STATES LIVE STOCK ASSOCIATION, Kansas City, Mo., March 3, 1939.

Hon. BURTON K. WHEELER,

Chairman, Committee on Interstate Commerce United States Senate.

Dear Senator Wheeler: I am executive secretary of the United States Live Stock Association, with offices at Kansas City, Mo. The membership of the association consists of some 85,000 livestock growers and feeders who reside mainly within the Corn Belt territory and the States immediately adjacent thereto, and who include producers of all three species of livestock—namely, cattle, hogs, and sheep a state sheep and sheep and sheep are sheep as the species of livestock—namely, cattle, hogs, and sheep.

On behalf of the membership of the association I wish to urge enactment of S. 162, known as the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, now pending before your committee.

The United States Live Stock Association has for some time favored legislation of this type as being in the interests of both producers and consumers. At the annual meeting of the association held at Kanasas City in February 1938 a resolution on this question was unanimously adopted, as follows:

"This association favors legislation designed to bring about truthful labeling and advertisement as to the wool content of goods and fabrics for the protection both of consumers and of wool producers."

Again at the annual meeting held at Omaha, Nebr., in February of this year, another resolution on this subject was unanimously adopted, as follows:

We recommend passage of the truth-in-fabric bill."

This, of course, refers to the legislation now before your committee, on which it is hoped favorable action may be had at an early date.

I regret the press of other business prevented me from appearing personally before your Interstate Commerce Subcommittee in support of S. 162.

Very sincerely yours.

GLENN T. STEBBINS, Executive Secretary.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes.

Mr. FRAZIER obtained the floor

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me so I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Danaher	King	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Wisconsin is a step in the right direction. The farmers need to have their existing indebtedness refinanced. There is no question about it. It must be refinanced if the farmers are to continue as home owners and landowners.

However, Mr. President, we need more than refinancing of farm indebtedness. We need prices for farm products which will give the farmers a profit. It would do little good to reduce the indebtedness of the farmer, or to give him a chance to borrow money at a low rate of interest, unless we should give him a price for his products which would allow him a profit, so that he could pay the interest on his debt. The farmer cannot hope to pay any rate of interest on 8-cent cotton, 50-cent wheat, 25-cent corn, and milk at $1.50 a hundred pounds. He simply cannot do it under those circumstances.

The majority leader [Mr. BARKLEY] made the statement that farm prices were now better than they were 6 or 7 years That is true: but we must not lose sight of the fact that the value of the dollar was reduced 41 percent. If we reduce 8-cent cotton by 41 percent, the result is slightly more than 4 cents a pound for cotton. It would mean less than 30 cents a bushel for wheat, and less than 15 cents a bushel for corn. Those are about the same sorts of prices we had 6 or 7 years ago. It is true that we are receiving some benefit payments. How are we getting them? We are receiving them from direct appropriations out of the taxpayers' money. They help to some extent, of course, but the farmer is still getting less than cost of production. We must have the cost of production and a profit for our products if we are to succeed and pay our indebtedness.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. What was the price the Senator quoted for cotton under the reduction?

Mr. FRAZIER. If the price of cotton were reduced 41 percent, it would be a little more than 4 cents a pound at the present time.

Mr. LUNDEEN. And wheat would be down to 30 cents? Mr. FRAZIER. Approximately 30; and corn about 15

Mr. LUNDEEN. Is that the "prosperity" we hear about? Mr. FRAZIER. It is not prosperity; no. The benefit payments have afforded us some additional price; but, as I say, they have been paid out of the taxpayers' money. Of course that condition cannot continue. It is simply an impossibility to continue contributing money for doles to the farmers in an effort to bring up the prices of their products to anything like cost of production.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I wish to say to the Senator that I join him in his ideas on the cost-of-production bill. There is such a bill before the Senate, which I heartily approve.

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; the Senator was one of the coauthors of the cost-of-production bill.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I think the American people owe a great debt to the able and distinguished Senator from North Dakota for his leadership in farm legislation.

Mr. FRAZIER. In my opinion the cost-of-production bill, which has been on the calendar since March, and which was reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry without a dissenting vote, is more important and would do more to restore normal conditions in the country than any other bill on the calendar, including the bill now before the Senate.

However, the cost-of-production bill is not an administration measure, and there is no chance even of obtaining a vote on it; so the authors of the bill have consented to let it go over until the next session. I serve notice now-and I know that those who joined me in introducing the bill and pushing it will join me in this statement-that at the beginning of the next session we intend to start a fight for the cost-of-production bill, and continue it until we at least bring it to a vote, so that the Senate may go on record as to whether or not the farmers of the country are entitled to the American market at a profit. If they are not entitled to the American market at a profit, they will continue to go broke. We must do one thing or the other. Either we must provide the cost of production, or we must let the farmers continue to go broke.

As I say, amendments such as the one now pending do not amount to very much unless we can obtain prices which will give us the cost of production and a profit on our products.

Mr. President. I do not intend to take more of the time of the Senate, because I am interested in this thing, and wish to see the bill disposed of.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, an old fellow in my part of the country bought a farm, or was talking about buying a farm. The seller was talking about giving him a deed to it. He said, "I do not want the deed. I want the mortgage. I had a deed once. The other fellow had the mortgage; and the fellow who had the mortgage got the farm." [Laughter.] There is something to that. More of those who hold mortgages get the farms than of those who hold the deeds.

As I understand, the amendment is to refinance farm mortgages, and to keep the fellow who has the mortgage from getting the farm, and to let the fellow who holds the deed keep the farm. Of course, I am for any legislation we can pass which will be helpful to the farmer in owning his own land. Let the man who tills the soil own the soil; and let us rehabilitate farm tenants. To me, it is quite as important to keep a farmer from becoming a tenant as it is to rehabilitate a tenant who has already lost his farm. An ounce of prevention is still worth a pound of cure.

I am for this amendment, and intend to vote for it.

Mr. LUNDEEN obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUNDEEN. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, after much consultation on both sides of the Chamber, I submit a unanimous-consent request.

I ask unanimous consent that during the remainder of the consideration of the pending bill no Senator shall speak more than once for longer than 30 minutes on the bill or any motion connected with it, or more than once or longer than 30 minutes on any amendment thereto.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the request applies, of course, to any new amendments?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct; it applies to all amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I very much regret that I am compelled to object to the request of the Senator from Kentucky. There are amendments pending which are of such vital importance, and will be so far reaching in their effect, if adopted by the Senate, that I fear the limitation suggested by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Georgia that I consulted the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], who is the author of one of the amendments, and the suggested arrangement is entirely agreeable to him.

Mr. RUSSELL. I understand.

Mr. BARKLEY. The suggested arrangement would give each Senator an hour.

Mr. RUSSELL. I understand; but in the event that amendment should be adopted in the form originally proposed by the Senator from Nevada, it would be so far reaching in its consequences that some of us could not express ourselves within the time limitation suggested by the Senator from Kentucky. After that amendment shall have been disposed of, and we see what shape it shall finally take, I shall have no objection to any limitation on debate.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator realizes that the question involved in that amendment has been frequently discussed, and we all understand what it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the adoption of the unanimous-consent agreement proposed by the Senator from Kentucky would not prevent any Member of the Senate from proposing any new amendment on his own behalf.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I think I understand the parliamentary situation. However, the fact of the matter is that if the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada were agreed to by the Senate in its original form it would strike down the provision in the work-relief bill which for the first time recognizes the grave injustice which has been done to employees on projects in the Southern States. I. for one, should wish to discuss the matter at considerable length if the amendment as originally proposed were agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia objects to the unanimous-consent request.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, the able Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] has just made a statement concerning farm prices which should command our attention. It certainly shows a serious condition of affairs in our country.

I have no intention of making any extended remarks, but I wish to quote from some tables in a pamphlet entitled "Regaining Our Foreign Market; a Challenge to American Statesmanship," by Louis B. Ward, 708 Fisher Building, Detroit, Mich. Mr. Ward is an able attorney in that city.

AGGRESSORS?

On page 8 of the pamphlet is a statement concerning the historic value of the so-called aggressors' trade, beginning with the year 1872. The table on page 9 shows the exports of the United States to the so-called aggressors—Germany, Japan, and Italy. The exports are tabulated from 1872 through the year 1937. I shall read the totals beginning with 1931: 1931, $376,590,056; 1932, $317,715,603; 1933, $344,-697,967; 1934, $383,796,344; 1935, $367,680,000; 1936, $365,-293,000; 1937, $491,731,000.

Those years were so-called peace years. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks the table and the preceding paragraph beginning with "Historic value of aggressors' trade," on page 8, to which I have just referred.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HISTORIC VALUE OF AGRESSORS' TRADE

From the standpoint of salesmanship it is usually considered

From the standpoint of salesmanship it is usually considered essential to know the history of accounts being cultivated. England voted the equivalent of $1,400,000 on or about July 12, 1939, for propaganda purposes. Most of that money will be spent within the United States to breed hatred against the so-called aggressors.

When a row of American cotton is plowed under, when the throats of little pigs are slit, and when millions of farmers are rewarded for curtailing agricultural production, it is obvious that some foreign nation steps in to plant a new row of cotton, to sow a new field of wheat or corn, and to increase the production of livestock

American normal trade with Germany naturally expanded after the Franco-Prussian War. Though the ports of Japan were opened in 1859, it is conceded that trade really commenced a decade later. Italy became a great world power after 1870.

For comparative purposes, then, we select the years 1872 to 1937, a period of the last 66 years, to show the historic value of the markets of the aggressors.

In the past 66 years our exports to the so-called "aggressors" have averaged annually $326,680,000.

In the past 57 years these exports have averaged $367,796,000.

In the past 47 years these exports have averaged annually $429,403,000.

In the past 37 years these exports have averaged annually $505,-156,000.

In the past 27 years these exports have averaged annually $581,-

In the past 17 years these exports have averaged annually $624,-925,000.

In the past decade, 1921-30, these exports have averaged annually $797,722,000. In the past 7 years these exports have averaged annually $379,- surpluses.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I invite attention to the enormous figures of this trade. In my opinion, Great Britain, France, and other countries could very well afford to expend several million dollars in propaganda to produce hate in America toward the so-called "aggressor" countries so that we may lose that trade, because people whom we denounce and hate will not trade with us. They will trade with somebody else.

We have raised a 25-percent barrier on trade with Germany; but Great Britain did not do so. We raised that barrier, but France did not do so. We are supposed to do all the hating and lose all that trade, while France and Great Britain take in the shekels. If that is statesmanship, I think we had better have a new definition of statecraft-certainly we should trade with all these nations.

It means the loss of jobs to hundreds of thousands of American workmen to cut off that trade. Here, for instance, are the figures for the years from 1931 to 1937, which show a total foreign trade of $2,700,000,000, while in the decade from 1921 to 1930, there were $8,000,000,000 of foreign trade.

Why we should pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the great British Empire, upon which the sun never sets, is beyond my comprehension. Nearly one-third of the wealth of the earth is under her flag; nearly 600,000,000 people are under her flag; she has enormous resources; yet our fleet is now supposed to protect her interests, together with our own I presume, in the Pacific.

TAKE CARE OF JAPANESE FOR US

When I was in London a few days ago, I was talking with high officials there and one of them said to me, "We might have a war almost any day-tonight or tomorrow morningand if we do have a war, I suppose you good people over there will take care of the Japanese for us." Very well. We abrogate the treaty with Japan. I presume next the State Department will try to place an embargo on our shipments to Japan. Are there to follow a series of incidents and then finally a break of negotiations and relations, with the unfortunate consequences which would then ensue?

ABROGATION OF TREATIES

Now, before it is too late, I register my protest against the conduct of foreign relations by the present administration. I do not know what heed will be given to my position, but, at any rate, I voice the protest.

In the midst of these conditions we find that our fourth greatest potential customer is Japan. The record shows that in 25 centuries, 2,500 years, Japan has never defaulted on an internal or external debt-a fairly good record, I would say. The table I now present, and ask to have inserted in the RECORD, shows only one nation is servicing its World War debt to us, and that is Finland. With an import potential of approximately $200,000,000; she owes us only $8,000,000. Great Britain is in default at the present time to the extent of over $5,000,000,000, and that represents but half the original debt, for half of it was canceled in 1926; so that, in reality, the debt is more than twice its present figure, an entirely fair amount since Great Britain has broken her debt agreement with the United States, and that brings us back to the original amount due before the cancelation of about 1926. But the British Empire will not pay even that amount.

France owes this country more than $4,000,000,000; Italy oves us over $2,000,000,000, and so forth, down the line. This debt situation is a singular impediment to American trade and commerce.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the table presented by the Senator from Minnesota will be printed in the RECORD.

The table is as follows:

OUR TRADE WITH GERMANY

Mr. LUNDEEN. When we consider our trade with Germany, Italy, and Japan, I think we might well have a revision of our attitude toward those great nations. It should be remembered that, so far as the German Reich is concerned, not only are there 90,000,000 people in that great nation but they have a dominant position in Central Europe. Do we wish to turn that trade over to nations that are defaulters on their debts to this Government, to the British and the French, who are not hampering their trade in those quarters? But they have the monumental gall to ask us to do so.

And are we, now, to take the lead in the Far East? Are we supposed to keep our gunboats up Chinese rivers and our fleets and battleships in Chinese waters? I am opposed to such a policy. I want our gunboats and fleet and battleships brought back to America. They were built to defend our coasts and not to interfere and meddle in Asia, Europe, and Africa. The American people understood that they were building their fleet for their home protection, and not for the purpose of meddling and interfering and getting into the range of gunfire wherever there is a fight.

WHEREVER YOU FIND A FIGHT-GET IN

Whenever and wherever there is a fight, our Navy is thrust into the line of fire. One of these days a regrettable incident may occur. Whenever there is conflict and war there is an invasion of treaty rights; there is a violation of national and international rights. Is not our present foreign policy increasing the probability of conflicts? Are we going to be drawn into war by our meddling and muddling and playing favorites? Are we going to go to war about every possible incident and breach of our treaties and rights? I certainly hope not. I hope that is not contemplated.

I do not know whether or not we are even going to be consulted. I refer to an editorial in this morning's Washington Post. This editorial states that the Senate has not been consulted and that it probably will not be consulted in the future in matters of this kind. I resent such an editorial. Apparently the Senate is supposed to be outside the ramparts in any discussion; we are outsiders, and questions concerning our relations with Europe are to be determined in the State Department, I presume. They are to be determined by someone else; we are not even to be consulted; nothing is to be said by us, and the threat is made by this great metropolitan newspaper that we are not going to be consulted the next time or at some time in the future.

LET THE SENATE STAND BETWEEN THE PEOPLE AND WAR

I hope the Senate will reassert itself in matters such as this. It is perhaps not for me even to endeavor to protest at any great length, but I hope that we shall be worthy successors of the great men who have stood here in years past and battled for the American policy of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and Lincoln, and every other worth-while statesman we have ever had, including Henry Clay, who, in conference with the Hungarian patriot Louis Kossuth at the National Hotel shortly before he died, took the same position. Normal trade with all is our right; we owe it to our unemployed; nor does that infer we must arm Europe against itself. "Friendship with all; trade with all, but entangling alliances

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, the favor with which this amendment is being received, and the arguments being made for it, are all in the nature of a confession of the bankruptcy of all our great plans for agriculture. We may consider this as the final act of voluntary bankruptcy with respect to agriculture so far as the Congress is concerned.

By way of supporting the argument, and in corroboration, I wish to have published in the RECORD an editorial from the New York Times of yesterday entitled "Collapse of Farm Planning."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the New York Times] COLLAPSE OF FARM "PLANNING"

It is a shocking picture that the world's agricultural "planners" look out upon when they survey the results of their handiwork in the crops that have been their particular concern. Let us begin with wheat. There is practically no important country in the world that has not got a government "wheat plan" of some sort. Statisticians have calculated that various governments are jointly spending more than $2,000,000,000 annually in an effort to hold up grain prices. After all their activities in recent years the prospective world supply of wheat for 1939-40 is placed at 5,290,000,000 bushels, the greatest on record, while wheat has fallen in the Liverpool market to the lowest prices reached since Queen Elizabeth's time. It is small satisfaction that by a tariff and Government loans we have kept American wheat from falling quite as low. September wheat at 60% cents on Monday fell within three-fourths cent of the lowest price at which any wheat future has sold since April 1933.

Some of our own Government policies have certainly made the plight of the American wheat grower worse. It is futile for a country that grows wheat for export in a competitive market to adopt an acreage restriction scheme. Our own restriction is not great enough materially to affect the world price, while it reduces farm income by reducing the amount of wheat we have to sell. It has not helped us to subsidize wheat for export. In combination with other countries doing the same thing, the result has merely been to push down the world price farther.

In the 12 months ended on June 30 the United States Government sold 93,754,000 bushels of wheat in the export markets at a loss to the Government of $25,700,000, or 27.4 cents a bushel. The foreign consumer in other worlds was able to get his wheat.

loss to the Government of $25,700,000, or 27.4 cents a bushel. The foreign consumer, in other words, was able to get his wheat cheaper at the expense of the American taxpayer. That is hardly the path to national enrichment.

Corn also is now selling at the lowest prices since 1933. For this Corn also is now selling at the lowest prices since 1933. For this our own governmental policy must again bear a large part of the blame. Last year and the year before the Government made "non-recourse" loans to enable the farmers to hold large stocks of corn off the market. The loan rate was made so attractive that it even paid farmers to build extra cribs to store on their own farms the corn under Government loan. So the farmers withdrew from the market and stored in their own cribs some 257,000,000 bushels of 1937 and 1938 corn.

1937 and 1938 corn.

No doubt this helped to keep prices up for a time. But these loans fall due on August 1, and farmers want to free their storage space to make room for the new crop. Fears that the Government will be forced to take 100,000,000 bushels or more of this grain in satisfaction of the matured loans and sell it have been depressing the market. The price can be kept up, perhaps, by new Government loans so high that it would be profitable for the farmers to build still more cribs to hold still more unsold corn. Is this to be the outcome of Mr. Wallace's "ever-normal granary"? At present prices the Government already has a loss of about 25 cents a bushel on the corn under the present loan. The prospective carry-over of corn on October 1 next is already estimated to be at a record high level.

For the present plight of cotton the direct responsibility of our Government's policy is a very heavy one. The crop-restriction policy iself is indefensible on several grounds, but much worse in practical effect has been the Government loan policy. Under that policy the Government has placed an entire year's American cotton crop in warehouses; the American price has been kept above the world price; and as a result, in the "cotton year" that ends with this month, the United States will have exported only about 3,400,000 bales, the smallest export in 60 years.

In the 1932 year the exports of cotton amounted to 8,766,000 bales. The difference is not to be accounted for by any decline in world demand. On the contrary, in the same period in which our exports fell off by more than 5,000,000 bales world consumption of all cotton rose by about 3,000,000 bales. Other producing countries have stepped into the place in world markets that we abandoned.

As a cure for this the Government does not propose abandonment.

As a cure for this the Government does not propose abandoned. As a cure for this the Government does not propose abandonment of either the restriction policy or the more damaging loan policy. Instead, and in spite of the bad results in wheat, Secretary Wallace announces that beginning today the Government will subsidize the export of cotton to the extent of 1½ cents a pound. In other words, having artificially and at great Government expense held cotton off the world market, we are now artificially and at further Government expense to try to force some of it onto the world market. market.

But the results will be much more serious than in the case of wheat. For cotton is a raw material that goes into manufactures. What we will be doing is to give foreigners cheaper raw cotton to compete against our own manufacturers in our own markets and in world markets. To compensate, Mr. Wallace will also subsidize exports of finished cotton goods, and suggests limitations on imports of cotton goods. But this leads merely to the building up of a whole series of bureaucratic controls. And we are doing all this at the very time when we have placed countervailing duties on importations of silks from Italy and a whole range of products from Germany, on the ground that these importations are subsidized. In other words, we are deliberately undertaking what we officially penalize as unfair and demoralizing competition when it is done by other nations.

This is the end result of the "orderly Government planning" that was to supplant the "chaos" of uncontrolled agriculture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered jointly by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler]. On that amendment the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary]; but I understand that if present he would vote as I intend to vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I understand, however, that if he were present he would vote as I have already voted; so I will let my vote

Mr. GREEN. I have a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], and will vote. I

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] is absent on important public business.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senators from Virginia [Mr. GLASS and Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] are unavoidably detained.

The result was announced—yeas 74, nays 7, as follows:

So the amendment offered jointly by Mr. LA FOLLETTE and Mr. Wheeler was agreed to.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have an amendment on the table which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill the following new section:

SEC. — Section 15 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, approved June 30, 1939, is amended to read as follows: "SEC. 15. (a) The Federal Works Administrator (hereinafter referred to as the 'Administrator') shall fix a monthly earning schedule for persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by section 1. Such monthly earning schedule shall be so fixed that the monthly earnings payable under such schedule to any class of workers shall not be less than the monthly earnings payable to such class of workers under the schedule of earnings of the Works Progress Administration in effect on June 30, 1939. After August 31, 1939, the monthly earning schedule fixed by the Administrator (1) shall not provide for differentials in the monthly earnings of workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area, and (2) shall not provide for differentials between cities or counties within the same wage area upon the basis of the degree of urbanization or any other factor that will tend to discriminate against the less urbanized areas.

urbanized areas.

"(b) The rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by this joint resolution shall not be less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality as determined by the Administrator and shall not be less than the current minimum wage required to be paid by private employers under the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938."

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. McCARRAN. Before I yield, I ask that a modification I desire to make in my amendment be reported from the desk

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. McCARRAN. I will, as soon as I have the modification reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the proposed modification.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 10, it is proposed to strike out the period and insert a comma and the following: "and (3) shall increase the monthly security wage in region 3 to conform to the monthly security wage rate in region 2."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be modified.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I promised to yield to the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. Van Nuys], after which I will yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Nevada should yield to me first in order that I may propose a unanimous-consent request, with respect to his amendment only. If the Senator will yield for that purpose, I should like to ask unanimous consent that no Senator may speak more than once or longer than 30 minutes on the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield for a suggestion?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator to withhold that request until a Senator who has stepped out for just a moment and who asked me not to consent to any unanimous-consent request in his absence returns.

Mr. BARKLEY. I withhold the request. Mr. VAN NUYS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield on one condition. Yesterday I noticed that the able leader of the majority seemed to be rather invoking the rule. If that be the case, may it be understood, or unanimously agreed to, or ruled, that if I yield to the Senator from Indiana to make a motion I will be recognized to have the floor immediately following the action on the motion?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not know what the Senator referred to in his suggestion that on yesterday I was invoking the rule. I have no desire to invoke any technical rule to deny any Senator the floor. Of course, under the technical rules any Senator who yields for the making of any motion or the offering of any amendment loses the floor. I know what is in the Senator's mind, I believe. I think he probably promised to yield to the Senator from Indiana to make a motion with respect to a vote taken yesterday, and, so far as I am concerned, it is entirely agreeable that the Senator may yield for that purpose without losing his right to offer his amendment following the vote on the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair will recognize the Senator from Nevada when the matter is concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Kentucky that the Senator to whom I referred has returned to the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont has advised me that he is at the moment prepared to accept the agreement I submitted a moment ago, and while the Senator from Nevada has the floor I renew the request that debate on his amendment be limited to one speech by each Senator and to 30 minutes in time.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I should like to make an inquiry. There may be amendments submitted to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada. Does the Senator from Kentucky mean that the agreement would restrict remarks to one speech?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; the request would include the amendment of the Senator from Nevada and any amendment

Mr. ADAMS. I shall be compelled to object unless opportunity is to be given for the discussion of amendments which may be offered as separate amendments to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BARKLEY. That would complicate the suggestion. and I withdraw it for the time being.

Mr. VAN NUYS. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the amendment offered by the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] yesterday was rejected be reconsidered. and I ask for the immediate consideration of the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Indiana that the vote by which the amendment of the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] was rejected yesterday be reconsidered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not wish to indulge in any debate on the motion, except to say that the motion involves a motion made yesterday to strike out the entire road section of the pending bill. We debated that proposal all day yesterday and finally got a vote on it, with a result which everyone understands. It seems to me that to reopen the matter now for further discussion and consideration would delay unreasonably final action upon the pending measure, and I hope the motion will not be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Van Nuys] to reconsider.

Mr. VANDENBERG and other Senators asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRAZIER (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNaryl. If he were present, he would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway]. Therefore, I am at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. NYE (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I understand that if he were present he would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] is absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Johnson], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] are unavoidably detained.

The result was announced—yeas 42, nays 39, as follows:

So Mr. Van Nuys' motion to reconsider was agreed to. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs on the amendment of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd], which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 3, it is proposed to strike out "the Public Roads Administration."

On page 2, line 22, it is proposed to strike out "$2,390,-000,000", and in lieu thereof insert "$1,890,000,000."

On page 3, beginning with line 16, it is proposed to strike out down to and including line 4 on page 4.

On page 6, beginning with line 10, it is proposed to strike out down to and including line 10 on page 9.

On page 11, lines 4 to 7, it is proposed to strike out the following: "the Public Roads Administration (after reserving when necessary sufficient funds to pay operating and maintenance expenses of any highway improvement)."

On page 15, lines 7 and 8, it is proposed to strike out "the Public Roads Administration."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the matter has been thoroughly discussed. The amendment of the Senator from Virginia involves striking out what I regard to be one of the best provisions of the bill. There is nothing in the bill, as it has been perfected, which provides for or means the establishment or the construction of toll roads in the United States. There is nothing in the bill, as it has been perfected, which permits the Federal Government to go into any State to build a bridge, or highway, or tunnel, or viaduct, or any other highway improvement, without the consent of the State authorities. I, therefore, hope, notwithstanding the fact that the motion to reconsider has been adopted, that the amendment itself will be defeated.

Mr. BYRD and other Senators asked for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRAZIER (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary]. If he were present and voting I am informed he would vote "yea." If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway]. I vote "nay."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before, I vote "yea."

Mr. NYE (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLass]. I am advised that if he were present and voting he would vote "yea." If permitted to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). Announcing my general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan] as on the previous vote; I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] is absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Herring], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Johnson], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] are unavoidably detained. The result was announced—yeas 42, nays 38, as follows:

So Mr. Byrd's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WALSH subsequently said: Mr. President, I desire to make a brief statement with reference to the recent rollcall votes of the Senate. I left the Chamber at 5 minutes past 2, when the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] had the floor discussing the Wheeler amendment. I understood he was to be followed by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] discussing the same amendment. It was necessary for me to visit one of the Departments to confer with officials with reference to an important appointment which is to be made in my State before the Senate adjourns. I returned to the Senate shortly before 3 o'clock. In my absence a motion was made to reconsider the vote of yesterday upon what is known as the Byrd amendment and which sought to eliminate the money available for loans for the purpose of constructing public roads, and I was not present to be recorded.

I wish to have it known clearly and distinctly that had I been present I would have voted against the motion to reconsider, and I later would have voted to sustain the position I took yesterday in favor of making this money available for loans for public roads.

Mr. President, I made this statement because to my mind it is an insinuation of weakness in a public servant to be thought of in terms of avoiding responsibility. I am willing to be criticized for taking a definite position, but I do not wish to be criticized for avoiding a responsibility when not intentional; and I certainly had no intention of avoiding my responsibility.

I wish to take this occasion to say what my approach is to this bill. I am in favor of, and shall vote for, those proposals in the bill which give assurances that loans made by the Government may be repaid. I have in mind loans which are referred to as self-liquidating loans, which do not involve the levy of any taxes upon the taxpayers. Yesterday I voted against two amendments which proposed grants or gifts from the Federal Treasury, and therefore a burden upon the taxpayers. I opposed those, and I intend to continue to oppose like proposals. However, I wish to have it clearly understood that I intend to approach in a favorable state of mind those provisions of the bill which provide for Federal loans when and where it is impossible for States and municipalities and private industries to obtain loans from banks and private financial institutions at reasonable rates of interest. In my opinion such loans will have a tendency to improve economic conditions and relieve unemployment.

I apologize to the Senate for taking the time to make this explanation but in view of the closeness of the vote, I believed an explanation should be made.

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I am limited in the purpose for which I may yield. I yield only for a question.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Will the Senator yield to me for the purpose of asking a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Missouri for the purpose of a question?

Mr. McCARRAN. I so yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Will the Senator yield so that I may give notice that as soon as I can obtain the floor I shall make a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I make the point of order that such a motion would be out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that only one motion to reconsider is in order.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a parliamentary

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That ruling is entirely satisfactory to me, although I think it is erroneous from a parliamentary standpoint. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is pleased that the Senator from Missouri agrees with the error. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President-

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. RUSSELL. Has the modification of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada become a part of his amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The modification has become a part of the amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I do not propose to take much of the time of the Senate, because the matter involved in this amendment has been so frequently discussed by the junior Senator from Nevada and by others on the floor of the Senate.

During the past 30 days the country has passed through a condition which to my mind should enlist the careful attention of the Congress. Both the House and the Senate should give careful consideration to the question of whether or not the wage structures, established over nearly half a century by those who must earn their livelihood by a wage, shall be torn down by the Federal Government through the use of Federal money.

Mr. President, apparently the trend is in that direction. In 1933, when for the first time the Federal Government engaged in public relief, some of us inaugurated a movement to make certain that that wage structure constructed on the blood of the toilers of the country should not be torn down, the result of which effort was afterward embodied in an Executive order. We are now interested in seeing to it that the mistake made by the conference committee having charge of the bill known as the relief measure is corrected. That conference committee struck out of the bill a provision which was adopted by the Senate of the United States and placed therein another provision which resulted in the tearing down of the rate structure of the country, and in causing discord, confusion, and unhappiness throughout the land.

I hope that by the adoption of my amendment the relief measure may be so amended as to overcome that mistake.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Massa-

Mr. LODGE. Is it not true that as the law now stands W. P. A. wages in the cold-weather States of the North and West will have to be reduced on September 1, and that the first part of the Senator's amendment intends to correct that condition?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for directing my attention to the matter by a specific question. His statement is exactly correct. In other words, it is proposed to tear down the wage structure of those regions in which higher wage standards have been maintained, so as to balance with the lower wage standards of other sections of the country.

I have had placed on the desk of each Senator a graph showing the three zones which have been established by a study pursuant to Executive order. Those three zones have, in the first instance, what is known as the prevailing wage for those particular zones, established after a study extending over months and years.

Secondly, the graph reflects what is known as the standard wage, or monthly wage, or so-called security wage. So the security wage would not be affected by the amendment, but the prevailing wage per hour would be sustained. That is the object and aim of the amendment, and nothing more.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. In other words, as the amendment stands, it contains two propositions: One is the prevailing wage and the other is the prevention of the cut which will come in September unless some action is taken.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is entirely correct; and if I had been talking for hours, I could not have expressed the situation more emphatically.

Mr. President, I again say that I shall not occupy much of the time of the Senate, because I have been through this question, and we have gone back and fourth on it for nearly 7 years. I contend that the wage structure which was established for the toilers of America, some of whom gave their lives to build up American wage standards, should not be torn down by the greatest employer of labor in all the world; in other words, that the United States of America, using the taxes of the taxpayers of the country to maintain those who may be on relief, should not thereby tear down a structure that has been established to maintain an American standard of wages.

Let us see how it has affected our condition up to this point. From the time when the conference report to the relief bill was adopted it has gone out broadcast that a continuous systematic reduction in the hourly wage would be effected; so much so that we have heard it declared that those on relief were going on strike. Nothing was more untruthful than that statement. But those who have been on relief, those who are dependent on relief, are brothers, if you please, of those who built a standard of wages in this country, and, naturally, they are not going to engage in a destruction of the wage structure, because they were a part of the great fabric that built it up. So we say the Federal Government, under the relief administration, having worked this thing out systematically, scientifically, and satisfactorily, let it be continued to the end, so that, first of all, that the toilers of America may hold their heads high and say that, though some of them were out of employment, some of them were on the relief rolls, unfortunately, yet not one of those who went on the relief rolls ever lent his efforts, by reason of his poverty, to the destruction of the American wage standard anywhere in any locality in the country.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder if the Senator will allow me to to make a brief statement and to ask him a question?

Mr. McCARRAN. Certainly.

Mr. PEPPER. No Member of this body was more anxious to see the prevailing wage become the wage that would be paid to the W. P. A. workers than was I. The question I wish to ask the Senator is if he is not excluding the possibility of the fixing of a prevailing wage for the whole month? In other words, the important thing is not to have the prevailing wage for 2 days out of a week, with no opportunity to work the other 3 days. Why can we not make this fight on the issue of fixing not less than the prevailing wage for the whole month's work and, at least, give the workers 130 hours a month work, as is provided for in the existing law and let the wage be not less than the prevailing wage for the whole 130 hours?

Mr. McCARRAN. I will say to the Senator from Florida that I encountered that very question here in 1933. I recall a question then propounded to me by a very able Senator on this floor. He cited the daily wage of a journeyman plumber and said to me, "Do you want to establish and maintain a wage of $12 a day for plumbers in this country?" When I brought to his attention the fact that the annual income of a journeyman plumber was approximately $1,200, we were confronted with the fact that while we established an hourly wage the Government, under the relief program, established a security wage. So the security wage was a ceiling under which we could work. If Senators will consult the chart or graph which has been placed on their desks they will see that for skilled labor the security wage was, say, $48 a month, $50 a month, or $60 a month, or whatever it may have been, in the respective wage zones. It was established, after long study, that in one zone the scale of wages was different from that in another zone, I take it, because the cost of living and the attendant circumstances were found to be different.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President-

Mr. McCARRAN. I should like to answer one question at a time.

Mr. RUSSELL. I merely wish to say that, in my opinion, the wages within the several zones were fixed arbitrarily and capriciously, but I have never heard anyone undertake to say that they were based on the cost of living. As a matter of fact, Mr. Hopkins, when I first raised this question in 1935, said they were not based on the cost of living, but more on the standard of living that obtained in the various zones.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am trying to answer the question of the Senator from Florida, and am glad to have the suggestion of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am afraid I did not make myself clear to the Senator from Nevada. I think this is a very vital question, and one that we might as well devote some little attention to now as at any other time. Heretofore there has been fixed what is called a security wage. My theory is that when a man is working on the W. P. A. he should not only get the prevailing wage for the time he works, but he should be allowed to work a reasonable number of hours per month. The law now fixes 130 hours a month. So, what I want to ask the Senator, as the security wage fixed by any outside authority cannot prevail against the provision that we may write into the law, why does not the Senator make his amendment provide that each worker shall be given 130 hours a month, as the law now provides and that for the whole 130 hours he shall get not less than the prevailing wage in the community in which the work is being performed?

Mr. McCARRAN. That was the identical thought that I had in the first instance in 1933, but I was confronted with the proposition that it was a relief measure, that it was not promulgated with the idea of going into competition with private enterprise, which is entirely true, because we should not use Federal money for anything save and except necessary relief. I am for that principle all the way down the line. What we sought to do then, and what we seek to do now is, first of all, to maintain the wage standard that has been established in this country—

Mr. PEPPER rose.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am going to answer the Senator as best I can, if he will be patient with me. Secondly, that the security wage or the ceiling determined the necessary limit to which the Federal Government should go to pay those who are on relief per month, and that ceiling should not be interfered with, as it was established after long study, in which perhaps the thought expressed by the able Senator from Georgia may have entered, though I am sorry if it did. I did not think that they would be guilty of capriciousness; I hope they were not; but a study was made of my section; it was made in my State; it was State-wide and broadcast. They went into every section of the 110,000 square miles of my State to determine what was the living standard, the necessities of living, within that particular locality.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the Senator asserted that they went into every section of Nevada. I think the Senator is confusing the security wage with the hourly wage rate. I do not think anyone undertook to come into any section of the country and fix the security wage. If the Senator will look at the chart, which he has so kindly furnished us, he will see that there are only three wage areas, and one of them only embraces four or five States. As a matter of fact, two-thirds of the Nation, about three-fourths of the population, and three-fourths of those on W. P. A. are embraced within the first wage area, and identically the same wage is paid in region No. 1. Certainly it was not necessary to go into every section of Nevada and every section of New Mexico and every section of California in arriving at the monthly wage.

I concede that the Works Progress Administration contend that they went into every community, and found out what was the prevailing hourly wage, but in fixing the security wage the States were arbitrarily, in view of their geographical location, brought within certain wage areas. As to the hourly wage, they did seek to find the hourly wage in every community, but no one can give any reasonable formula for the wide variations in the monthly security wages paid in the various areas.

Mr. McCARRAN. I may say, in reply to the able Senator from Georgia, that the so-called security wage must have been established after a study as to what was necessary, because the security wage, if I understand it correctly, means the essential accumulating wage for a period which is 30 days. Am I reasonably correct in that?

Mr. RUSSELL. I think the Senator is correct. It is the amount fixed by the Works Progress Administration for each W. P. A. worker to receive for 1 month, or for 30 days, without regard to the number of hours he might work, determined by the prevailing hourly rate.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is right, based on necessity, if I may amend the thought of the Senator from Georgia, because certainly we were not going to pay out of the Federal Treasury anything more than what was necessary to take care of one by relief payments.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. If the Senator is talking about mere subsistence, merely keeping body and soul together in the worker, why does he concern himself with the prevailing wage? If the Senator is going to let a man work just 1 day a week, and is going to pay him enough in 1 day to enable him to get his security wage, why do we not attack the thing directly, and get away from this foolishness of calling the job a relief job, and castigate persons who ever again refer to it as a relief job, and call it properly and honorably made work for American people to do?

The law now fixes 130 hours a month as the time we say a man ought to work. Let us fix the prevailing wage for 130 hours' work a month, and then we shall be giving the American workers at least approximately what he is entitled to receive.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if the doctrine of the able Senator from Florida would go forward I could not go with it, except to the extent that I should like to have private industry take hold of and absorb those who are on relief, and put them on an unlimited hourly wage in keeping with the rules and regulations established by the various employees' organizations throughout the country. In other words, if I may answer further, I hope the Federal Government will never step into a category where it will take over all the industries in the country, and thus deprive the private investor and the private industrialist of any hope of going forward. All we are trying to do, as I hope to understand the matter, is to take care temporarily of those who have been deprived of an opportunity to sustain themselves and their dependents because, forsooth, they have been unable to find employment in private industry.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I will yield in just a moment. If the Federal Government steps in and says, "We are going into competition with private industry; we are going to take all the unemployed and keep them unemployed as long as we can keep them at the prevailing wage with unlimited earnings," then private industry will say, "We cannot go forward." But the hope of every worker in America today is to get off relief. The hope of every worker in America today is to get where he can earn not only the security wage but a decent wage carrying out the prevailing-wage structure, the hourly structure, and eventually carrying out the monthly structure, if you please, where his efforts may earn what they deserve in private industry.

I now yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, does the man who works upon a P. W. A. job get only the security wage?

Mr. McCARRAN. The man who works on a P. W. A. job gets the prevailing wage; and let me say, if I may, that I say that to the credit of the Secretary of the Interior, who, as Administrator of the Public Works Administration, without a single word from Congress, incorporated into the P. W. A. the prevailing-wage standard. But the man working on P. W. A., as P. W. A. has gone on, not only earns the prevailing wage but is working under a system whereby the contractors of the country have entered into the life of the

P. W. A., and have become a part of it; and therefore he is not on relief. The worker who works on P. W. A. never has been on relief. He has been working for a contractor who has entered into the spirit of the Public Works Administration.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator make the matter of whether the worker works for a contractor or directly for the Government determine whether or not he is on relief? What does the Senator mean by "relief?"

Mr. McCARRAN. I am sorry we have to use that word; but when we enacted the law in 1933, and from then on, we have carried it on. It means to take hold of those who have not a job and give them a chance to support themselves in decency. That is what is meant by "relief."

Mr. PEPPER. What about the man in a shipyard, building ships that the Government is constructing? There, the Government puts up all the money. Is that man on relief?

Mr. McCARRAN. Not at all; but the system we are dealing with in the act which we passed appropriating $1,700,000,000 for relief is a different system, and applies to a different proposition than regular Government employment.

Mr. PEPPER. I will ask the Senator another question. When a man works for the Government in the construction of a post office, all the money for which is put up by the Government, and all the supervision of which is made by the Government, is that man on relief?

Mr. McCARRAN. But the post office is built by contract. I am not sufficiently familiar with the shipyard system of the country to say whether the Government builds the ships, or whether they are built under the contract system. Some one can correct me on that point.

Mr. PEPPER. When we build one of the dams that are built out in the West, where the Government puts up all the money for a reclamation project or an irrigation project, in that case the Government is putting up the money for construction, and the Government is taking care of the supervision. I will ask whether or not, in the opinion of the Senator, that is a relief job.

Mr. McCARRAN. Certainly not. Let me draw the Senator's attention to this fact: Take the greatest engineering project in all the world, located in my own State, known as the Boulder Dam. In all the world and in all the world's history there has never before been such a project. Every ounce of the cement that was laid there was laid under contract, under competitive bids; and the men who worked there worked under a standard of wages established by the workers of the country as the employees of private industry, and not of the Government.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; but I will ask the Senator if all the money is not being put up by the Federal Government?

Mr. McCARRAN. True.

Mr. PEPPER. So the question is not a substantial one as to the method by which the work happens to be executed, whether through a contractor or directly through the Government, but it is a question of who puts up the money.

The Senator will see that what I am trying to get at is the fact that I quarrel with the right of anybody—not the Senator from Nevada, because I know his opinion and how he feels on this general subject—I quarrel with the right of any man to say that when the Government builds a dam, such as the great Boulder Dam, when the Government builds a ship in a shipyard, when the Government builds a post office in a town or a city in America, when the Government contributes to the construction of a highway, or when the Government builds anything of that category, that is entirely different from the case in which the Government makes it possible to build a sewer system, a highway, a schoolhouse, or any of the public works that have been done by the W. P. A.

I ask the Senator, is it not time for us to abolish the distinction which seems to have grown up in the minds of some people of calling the worker on Boulder Dam, a man engaged in honorable employment in his life work, and calling the man who is building a sewer system or a highway or even a dam under the W. P. A. a failure in life, working on relief, with the limitations of a niggardly security wage?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am going to answer the Senator as best I can, trying to keep in mind the elements of his question.

First of all, there is nothing in the law, so far as I know, which looks down on the man who works in W. P. A. Everything possible has been done to do away with that idea. We only regard such a man as being temporarily out of employment, and we seek to encourage him so that the temporary unemployment shall not be permanent. In other words, if I understand the spirit of relief in America today—and I hope I understand it—it is that the man who, by force of circumstances, is put into relief, is there only momentarily. What we are seeking to do is to build up private industry and encourage private endeavor so that private capital will employ men, not for $48 per month, not for $60 per month, but for the entire month, at the wage structure and wage scale of the particular class of labor to which they belong.

Mr. PEPPER. I will ask the Senator if the P. W. A. worker is not in the same category. Do we regard him as a permanent worker? I thought the money appropriated to P. W. A. was just as much an emergency appropriation, just as much designed to take care of unemployment and to put people to work who are now unemployed, as the money appropriated for W. P. A. work.

Mr. McCARRAN. No, Mr. President; I will say to the Senator from Florida that the Public Works Administration was inaugurated for the purpose of constructing permanent national improvements. It might have occurred during the period of greatest prosperity. It should have occurred when the country was in its greatest prosperity. It would have been well for us if we had built some of those things to improve our national welfare and our national existence. The Public Works Administration projects are those in which the Government seeks first of all to encourage private money to come out of hiding, or to encourage private money to be invested in permanent works; while, on the other hand, the Works Progress Administration was established to take care of those who could not be absorbed in either the Public Works Administration or private industry, as private industry was so crippled under the depression.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, referring to the exact language of the Senator's amendment, I will ask him if the effect of the amendment is not to abolish the provision that was in the bill which is already the law he is seeking to amend, which would have raised wages in the South up to the same standard by which wages in the rest of the country were governed, with an allowance only for the difference in the actual cost of living?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am going to answer that categorically, no; then I am going to answer it further, if I may.

This amendment does not propose to tear down any wage scale. The amendment proposes and encourages the uplift of all wage scales. What we are seeking to do is to overcome that which seemed to be the result of the conference report, namely, to tear down from the top by perhaps building up from the bottom. We do not propose to destroy, and the amendment does not destroy, the possibility of the wage worker in the South having an elevation of his wages. We encourage that, and that is exactly the language of the amendment, and with that in mind I placed an amendment which I had read into a previous bill in my amendment today, so that the wage structure of the deep South could come up to that of the belt, or zone, between the deep South and the farther North.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator, then, if this is not a fair statement of the effect of his amendment, taken all together: Under the existing law there are three regions, the Northeast, the North, and the Northwest, region 1. Region 2 embraces the States of Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, and perhaps one other State in the West. Region 3 embraces the deep South and the Southwest, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia.

Under the existing law a man in Florida doing a certain job will get the same compensation for the work he does as a man doing the same work in Oregon, or in Maine, or in West Virginia, or in Georgia, or in any other State of the Union, with an allowance only for the difference in the cost of living in the different places, whereas under the Senator's amendment the most the worker in region 3, which is the deep South, could get for doing a given piece of work is the same wage or compensation a man doing the same work in the same length of time would get in region 2; but, under the Senator's amendment, he could never get the same compensation the man gets who does the same job for the same length of time in region 1, which is a majority of the whole United States. Is that fair?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I am going to answer that question specifically as best I can. It is a long question, but I will do the best I can with it.

First of all, let me go back a little in history, if I may deal with history. In 1933, when the first relief bill was pending in the Senate, I offered the first prevailing-wage amendment, which provided, in substance, that the prevailing wage in the several localities of this country should be maintained. I intend to go at length into this question, and I hope the able Senator from Florida will bear with me. I realize that the workers of this country had built a wage structure in the several sections of the country. They built that structure themselves. The workers of this country have never received anything from legislation. They made the structure themselves; they worked it out by hard experience; and then they came to the various legislatures, whether it was the Federal legislature or the State legislatures, and presented their problems as those problems had been worked out by them, and they had their ideas crystallized into law.

We tried then to have the prevailing wage structure maintained in this country. I may say to the able Senator from Florida that at that time this study had not been completed. Perhaps we might criticize and say we were voted down and lost; but that is water gone over the wheel. The idea is that since that time a study has been made, under an Executive order made by the President, made by the relief administration, made in conjunction with the wage workers, and that study reflects itself, I am advised, as best it can be, in the graph I have placed on the desk of each Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. Pardon me, and let me finish the answer to the Senator's question.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator does not mean to say that anyone has found that a man is entitled to less money for doing a given job in one State than for doing the same job in another State?

Mr. McCARRAN. If the man himself, or that class of toilers and laborers and workers to which he belongs, during a period of years, for himself and for those who unite with him in his brotherly efforts for the uplift of labor, has established a scale, then I say that no one should try to tear it

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I know the distinguished Senator from Nevada has perhaps dealt more with the prevailing-wage amendment than has any other Member of the Senate. I recall when the first large relief bill was pending, in 1934, the $4,880,000,000 bill, the Senator from Nevada for the first time introduced this proposal relating to the wage scale. But I cannot clear my mind of the impression that the Senator from Nevada is confusing the prevailing hourly rate with the monthly rate.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am not. I am trying to clarify the matter. Perhaps I am failing in what I have been attempting to do.

Mr. RUSSELL. I think the remarks of the Senator as to the building up of the hourly wage rate are entirely correct, but I still insist that the hourly wage rate has nothing whatever to do with the monthly wage rate.

I have before me data furnished by the Works Progress Administration, which show that within the same State a man will work in one city for 50 cents an hour as a common laborer and will receive a monthly wage scale of, say, $52. In another city of the same size another man will be working for 40 cents an hour, but he will receive a monthly wage rate of $52, or the same amount. The monthly wage has nothing to do with the facts related by the Senator from Nevada, but only the hourly wage, because within the same wage area, in region No. 1, whereas the W. P. A. workers in cities of the same size will receive the same monthly compensation; there are literally thousands of different rates of hourly wages. One worker will be compelled to work 120 hours a month to earn his maximum amount, and another worker in another city will earn exactly the same maximum amount, but will work perhaps 90 hours, because the hourly rate in that city will be much higher. So I say that the security wage which is fixed has no relation whatever to the degree of unionization or the efforts of the workers which have brought about a higher hourly wage. I concede freely that the hourly wage, the prevailing wage, does depend upon the prevailing rate paid for hours of toil in the class of toil within a city-

Mr. McCARRAN. Within a zone.

Mr. RUSSELL. No; within a locality, the hourly wage rate relates to a locality, down to the subdivisions of government. There will be two cities in the same county where a different hourly wage will be paid, in a number of instances, but the workers in the two cities will receive the same compensation for a month's work, the difference being that one will work more hours than the other at a prevailing rate which is lower.

Mr. McCARRAN. Taking up the thought of the able Senator from Georgia, I may say, in keeping with my first amendment, which afterward was incorporated into an Executive order, if the prevailing wage as incorporated in that first amendment had gone forward, probably we would not today be confronted with the situation which faces us. But those who executed the relief saw fit to make a study, and they did make a study; and it must be said that that study was made diligently and was made honestly. That study was not, as I understand it, to deal with the question alone of what was the prevailing wage in a particular section, but, together with that, what was the cost of living, and what were the attendant circumstances in a particular section. Out of that the three zones appear to have been worked out. If there is a desire to abolish the ceiling or the security wage. I do not suppose any W. P. A. worker in all the world would object to it. Certainly I would not object to it. But we are dealing with the taxpayers' money; we are not dealing with the question of what a worker should have, but what we can afford to give him to take care of him for the time being in keeping with his class of toil.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I agree with that conclusion of the Senator from Nevada. Of course, if we were undertaking to pay the prevailing hourly wage for 130 hours a month for every person upon the rolls of the Works Progress Administration, it would mean that either we would have to multiply the appropriation many times or there would be only three or four hundred thousand people who would be able to have employment.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct. What we are trying to do by relief is to take care as best we may of the greatest possible number who need relief. We are not trying to say to every man, "Make a career out of this line of endeavor." I want to say to the Senate that, so far as my individual effort is concerned, I would discourage such a suggestion to the last word.

But what we are trying to do is to say to the worker, "You shall not starve, and we will try to find the means to enable you to live decently during a period until industry can give you a proper income." So long as we say to industry that it is to be discouraged, just so long will we destroy the possibility of private industry absorbing the needy of this country. It is time for America first of all to say, "We are going to put our shoulder to the wheel of private industry. We are going to give it every opportunity to go forward. We are going to encourage it after it gets going."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator, to what language in the existing section 15 does he object, as the law now reads? What is there in the existing law which defeats the purpose the Senator has in mind?

Mr. McCARRAN. I have here before me section 15. The Senator has it before him.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish to say preliminarily to answering the Senator's question that he understands the amendment which I now offer does not apply to this bill.

Mr. PEPPER. Understand what?

Mr. McCARRAN. That my amendment does not apply to this bill specifically. That the amendment applies to the Relief Act.

Mr. PEPPER. Oh, of course. I have section 15 of the Relief Act before me.

Mr. McCARRAN. This amendment, in the identical language in which it is now presented, save and except the perfecting amendment I offered after having some consultation with the Senator from Georgia, is in language identical to that which was adopted by the Senate when the relief bill was under discussion. I take it the Senator is advised as to that.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, we have an existing law, of which section 15 is a part. The Senator has some objection to that. For some reason or other section 15 defeats the purpose which he has in mind, which is a worthy purpose. What I am getting at is this: Can we not achieve the Senator's purpose by changing the wording of the amendment which he has offered so as not to have the effect of lowering the wages in the South, which we are trying to pull up and keep up?

Mr. McCARRAN. First of all, the amendment would not lower the wages in the South.

Mr. PEPPER. That could not be avoided under the amendment as now framed.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will answer the question so far as I can. The administration has announced the plan, and under it the result has been a lowering of wages throughout the country under the present relief law as it now stands, that is lowering the hourly wages, so much so that we are now confronted with an unhappy situation. I say now, and I hope the Senator will bear with me, that I am sorry to see that situation arise. I have not been aided particularly by the fact that those on relief have been credited with striking. I am sorry that such a thing has taken place. I would rather have those within the relief administration come to Congress and say, "Here is a situation. Please remedy it."

Neither have I been aided by something which happened yesterday. I am sorry that a certain expression was made yesterday by an outstanding man who has been in the past apparently a great champion of labor. I have been greatly set back and my cause has been greatly impaired by that unfortunate statement. I regret it more than can any other man who might address the Senate today. I will go no further than that, but will return to the Senator's question.

It is better a thousand times that we maintain the standard of wages in this country as they have been established by the efforts of the toilers than to tear them down or to permit any administration to tear them down, either by misconstruction or misinterpretation. If we write my amendment into the bill, there can be no misinterpretation.

While I am on my feet, and in reply, I hope, to the Senator's question, let me read from the hearings of the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations in charge of deficiency appropriation, Seventy-fourth Congress, a statement made by that outstanding and very able man who is today the Secretary of Commerce of this country, who was then in charge of relief. I read from page 28, where he says:

Our experience has led us to believe that we should pay the hourly rate prevailing in the community and to continue to put a top limit on the amount we pay in a month.

It was out of that thought, it was out of that philosophy, it was out of that study that these zones were created, and that the security wage was established. Now it is desired to raise the monthly security wage of the South I do not know of anyone who has any objection. Certainly the Senator from Nevada has not.

Mr. PEPPER. Then, why does not the Senator change the wording of his amendment so that it will not so greatly affect the South? We do not want to pull down the scale of the wages in Nevada or in any State of the Union. The fight has been made in the South, particularly by the Senator from Georgia, the Senator from South Carolina, and the rest of us helping as best we could, to pull up the wage scale in the South. We voted for the wage and hour law, and some of us were severely criticized for doing so. We have now tried to abolish freight-rate differentials, and the Senate approved the abolition of that discrimination against the West and the South. Then we tried to abolish the W. P. A. differentials, so it might not be said to a man in one section of the country, "For a certain time of work we will give you a certain figure," and to a man in another section of the country, "For the same length of time, and for the same type of work, we will give you another figure." That is not democratic. That is not American. It is not consistent with any sound governmental policy. The Congress has abolished that W. P. A. differential except as it relates to the difference in the cost of living.

The Senator from Nevada is absolutely correct in his contention that we do not want to pull down the wage scale anywhere, but under the Senator's amendment our people in the South will not be able to get as much as the people in region 1 get for the same type of work, even after making allowance for difference in cost of living.

So, if the Senator will modify his amendment so as to provide that not less than the prevailing wage shall be paid to any worker on the W. P. A., and provide that no wage scale shall be lowered from what it was, we will support the Senator 100 percent.

We do not want to lose the little advantage we gained in bringing our people up to an approximate parity with the people of the rest of the country who are doing the same kind of work. I know that the Senator, sensitive and conscientious as he is in the cause of the people who labor, will be willing to make such change in the phraseology of his amendment, so that those of us who have the same objective which he has will not be brought to the necessity of differing with him on the amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I may say to the able Senator from Florida that my whole aim and object during my mature life has been to raise the earnings of the toiler, and especially the toiler in the lower classes, so to speak. I would never object to anything that would raise the earnings of the toiler in the most humble walk of life. But I am opposed to, and I will continue to oppose, anything that may be construed to tear down the earning of the toiler in any walk of life, when he by his efforts and his endeavors has built it up, even though in some instances some people may criticize it and say it is too high.

An incident stands out very vividly in my mind. When I was making the fight for the prevailing wage in 1933 a very able Senator said to me, "Plumbers demand $12 a day." But when I draw the fact to the Senate's attention, as I drew it to the attention of that able Senator, that the earnings of a journeyman plumber for a year are only $1,200, then the whole situation is made clear. The plumber receives $12 a day, but his yearly earnings are only $1,200, which is much less than the American standard of wage. He cannot support himself and his dependents on $1,200 unless his dependents, as they become mature, enter employment. His little girl from the time she is a tot must go out and get work in order to help support herself and the family. Those are the things we are trying to fight against, in order to maintain the structure, so that the wage scale of America shall not be torn down.

Mr. PEPPER. I will say to the Senator from Nevada that we all know that he has that high purpose, and we are in accord with him. Here is the Senator from Georgia who offered an amendment. He stated on the floor the other day that he does not want to pull down anyone's wages. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] and I made the same statement. We do not care to reduce wages paid in any section of the country. But does the Senator want to say to any people in the deep South, "No matter how worthy you are, no matter how faithfully you labor on any job in W. P. A., you can never get as much for that work as a man doing it no better in region 1 of the United States, even after making allowance for the difference in the cost of living"? The Senator does not want to hold those people back, does he?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I would not hold anyone back.

Mr. PEPPER. Will not the Senator be agreeable, then, to such a technical modification in his amendment that it will achieve what he wants to achieve and keep the wage scale up to the prevailing wage, but at the same time allow people in the South doing the same kind of work to receive not less than the same wage, with only a proper allowance for the difference in the cost of living?

Mr. McCarran. Mr. President, the Senator was present when I proposed a substitute for the then existing section in the relief bill. That substitute was adopted. The Senator from Georgia also was present. That very amendment offered as a substitute was taken into conference, and, to use a very homely expression, it was kicked out the window, and the language which is now in the law was substituted.

That language has resulted in tearing down the wage structure of this country. Why? Because of the 130-hour provision. If a man worked on W. P. A. for 130 hours and received the prevailing wage, he would receive much more than the security wage. Therefore, 130 hours at the prevailing wage was not acceptable, so it was decided that the only thing to do was to cut down the prevailing wage, so that although a man worked 130 hours he would not receive more than $48 a month, or $60 a month, or whatever it might be, in his respective class.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Nevada that neither the Senator from Florida nor myself was on the conference committee in dealing with the bill, so we could not have "kicked his amendment out the window."

The difference is—and I ask the Senator from Nevada to confirm this statement—that the change brought about in the language in the House bill as it originally came over to the Senate was to the effect that under the prevailing hourly wage amendment one worker would work, say, for 40 hours in a month, and at the hourly rate at the end of 40 hours he would have earned the full amount of his monthly security wage. The House language changed the relation of the worker from that of an hourly employee to that of a monthly employee, requiring him to work 30 hours a week for the same amount of security wage as had been paid before the passage of the bill. Is not that correct?

Mr. McCARRAN. That may be correct as a general statement; but we sought to correct the situation by the substitute which I offered, which was adopted.

Mr. President, I have occupied the time of the Senate for a much longer time than I had anticipated. I shall yield the floor. I ask for a vote on my amendment. I hope that the amendment in its present form, with the perfecting amendment, may be agreed to. The perfecting amendment was not in accord with all the views of the able Senator from Georgia, but I am glad to say that he thought my amendment was much better with the perfecting amendment. With that in mind I incorporated the perfecting amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder if the Senator would be agreeable, in the perfecting amendment, to striking out "region 2" and inserting "region 1"?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if we do that, we shall tear down the wage scale. I have made a study of that question. The suggested modification would tear down the wage scale, the daily wage, or the hourly wage, of region 1. That is the situation we now have. I have gone along with the Senator so that the deep South may receive the benefit of the wages of the middle region. I want to be fair; and I think the Senators from Georgia and Florida want to be We are entering into an experimental activity. I have hoped to provide some benefit in the South by this amendment. When I use the pronoun "I" I do not mean to say that I have that matter in charge. I do not mean to be presumptuous. However, I believe that those who are zealous in their desire to raise earnings in the South will accept the amendment and go forward with it. If the experiment is not well founded, I will be the first to try to improve it.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I wish to take only a moment. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] has offered an amendment, and I should like to offer, if it is in order, a perfecting amendment to that amendment, which does not deal with its philosophy but with kindred subjects. The amendment I should like to propose reads as follows:

That no dues, assessments, or fees paid by members of any That no dues, assessments, or fees paid by members of any organization, lodge, or group, whether said organization, lodge, or group is, or is not, incorporated, shall be contributed to any candidate for office, or to any committee or political party, in any political campaign unless said dues, assessments, or fees were specifically, solely, and directly contributed by the members of any organization, lodge, or group for the sole purpose of aiding a particular candidate, committee, or political party.

Any person violating the provision of this section shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned in the penitentiary for not more than 1 year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

more than 1 year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

I am told by the Senator from Pennsylvania that there is in Pennsylvania a manufacturers' association which is composed of various members and that money is collected in Pennsylvania by the manufacturers' association and is used by the officers thereof by way of contributions to political

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. GUFFEY. That amendment is different from the one drawn by the Senator which I first read. The amendment as now drawn would not affect the Manufacturers' Association of Pennsylvania.

Mr. TYDINGS. Why would it not?

Mr. GUFFEY. Because the amendment would not apply if the dues, "assessments, or fees were specifically, solely, and directly contributed by the members of any organization for the sole purpose of aiding a candidate" or party.

Mr. TYDINGS. How can I change the amendment?

Mr. GUFFEY. I have never seen the amendment since it has been changed. It is different than the first time I saw it. Mr. TYDINGS. I do not agree with the Senator at all, because the amendment provides-

That no dues, assessments, or fees paid by members of any organization or lodge or group whether said organization, lodge, or group is, or is not, incorporated, shall be contributed to any didate for office or to any committee or political party in any political campaign unless said dues, assessments, or fees were specifically, solely, and directly contributed by the members of any organization, lodge, or group for the sole purpose of aiding a particular candidate, committee, or political party.

If I did not put it in that way, it would not do anything because an individual can give money for political purposes.

Mr. GUFFEY. That would not affect the Manufacturers Association of Pennsylvania or prevent them from making contributions. It would not do that. I do not want the Senator to say that I am in favor of the amendment, for I am not.

Mr. TYDINGS. The amendment is intended to prevent any manufacturers' or other association in Pennsylvania or anywhere else in the United States from contributing the proceeds of dues, assessments, or fees paid by members of the organization unless the members of the organizations directly contribute the money for use in a political campaign. In other words, it would be impossible to take routine payments and hand them over to a political campaign committee without the consent of the members. That is all there is to this amendment.

Mr. GUFFEY. If the Senator from Maryland thinks that Joe Grundy, a former Member of this body, could not get around this amendment with his political organizations, the Senator is mistaken.

What the Senator from Pennsylvania Mr. TYDINGS. ought to do is to tighten it up more. Certainly it is not going to make it any worse, and, to that extent, is going to make it that much better. Under this amendment, if adopted, Mr. Grundy could not contribute for political purposes a single, solitary dollar without violating the law unless those who contributed to the fund did so for the sole purpose of aiding a particular candidate, or a particular party, or a particular committee. In other words, he could not take the dues that come in and hand them over without those who paid the dues knowing that their good money was being handed over to a political party.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Does the Senator have in mind any instances in the recent campaign of any association or organization, incorporated or otherwise, that made contributions that would be in violation of this amendment if it were

Mr. TYDINGS. Now that the Senator has suggested it to me, I will say that it would cover the case where the Democratic Party borrowed half a million dollars from one organization, and, so far as I know, the men who paid that half million dollars did not pay it as a political assessment in all cases—they may have done so in some cases—but they took the concern's money and handed it over. If any group in this country want to contribute their good money to political-party candidates or campaign, they have a perfect right to do so, but dues, fees, and assessments by Mr. Grundy or anybody else ought not to be collected under the supposition that they are going to be used for general purposes and then donated specifically to a candidate without the consent of the donor.

I hope the Senator from Nevada, my friend, will not object to this perfecting amendment, which is in the interest of fairer, bigger, and better elections.

Mr. McCARRAN. No; I cannot accept the amendment. Mr. TYDINGS. Then, at the proper time, I shall offer the

Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order to offer the amendment I have suggested as a perfecting amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is in order.

Mr. TYDINGS. If it is in order, at the proper place in the amendment, I shall offer it as a new section.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I urge the Senator from Nevada to accept the amendment and make it a part of his amendment, because if there is anything we want to do now it is to stop political financing, especially by those who have a selfish interest.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I am making a battle here for the toilers of America and not to make a muddle out of some political situation. I am fighting for those who work; I am trying to see to it that the wage structure of America shall not be torn down. I cannot and will not support the amendment of the Senator from Maryland as a part of my pending amendment. However, I think it might well have had a place on the Hatch bill which we passed some time ago, or it may have a proper place in legislation; but phases of legislation such as this have their proper place, and I certainly hope when and if the Senate votes on this particular proposal it will vote it down as applying to the pending amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I desire to discuss briefly the pending bill. I want to offer what I think is a perfecting amendment, and I inquire, as the pendency of the amendment of the Senator from Maryland would prevent my doing so, if the Senator from Maryland will withdraw his amendment?

Mr. TYDINGS. It would not hurt my amendment to do that. I am going to offer it in the best of faith. I have no objection if the Senator wants to offer a perfecting amendment that deals specifically with some language in the pending amendment; I think I would only be fair in temporarily withdrawing the amendment until that situation is met. Then, I shall offer it again as an additional amendment, when it will not be in the third degree.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. NORRIS. Is it possible for the Senator from Maryland, under the rules of the Senate, to offer an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada without first obtaining the floor? Can he offer such an amendment while the Senator from Nevada is occupying the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland had the floor, and while he had the floor he offered the amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not know that. I thought he did not have the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. I offered the amendment, and explained it. Now having control of my amendment, under the rules of this body, I temporarily withdraw it until the Senator from Colorado can offer his amendment and have it disposed of, when I shall again offer my amendment as a perfecting amendment to that of the Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Maryland is withdrawn.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I think it is necessary to say a word or two as to the existing situation and to go back to the conference report on the relief bill that has been mentioned in connection with the situation. The relief bill which passed at the end of the fiscal year wiped out the prevailing-wage legislation. That was done at the recommendation and in accordance with the argument of the Relief Administrator, Colonel Harrington. That amendment came from the House of Representatives. It was adopted by the Senate committee without any real controversy in the committee. It came on the floor, and the Senator from Nevada, cooperating with some others, secured the insertion of the prevailing-wage amendment. The bill went back to conference with a difference between the House amendment with the 130-hour provision and the prevailing-wage provision inserted by the Senate in accordance with the law then existing and in accordance with the law that had existed.

The conference committee on the part of the Senate earnestly endeavored to carry out the wishes of the Senate. Those Senators whose minds go back to that evening will recall the pressure that was upon that conference committee. It was necessary either to make concessions in order to reach an agreement with the House or there would have been two and a half million men and women on the streets the next morning. It was a question of accepting a situation perhaps unsatisfactory or accepting a situation unfortunately worse.

Speaking for myself, and I know for the other conferees, it is not fair to refer to the amendment of the Senate as being "kicked out the window." If Senators will go back and study the records of that conference committee, they will find that of one-hundred-and-thirty-odd amendments put on the bill by the Senate, in only four instances did the Senate conferees recede, and in only about 10 other instances did they recede from Senate amendments with amendments. In the neighborhood of 110 Senate amendments were accepted in toto. All Senators who are familiar with conference proceedings know that in a bill with a multitude of amendments no group of conferees representing one body can have accepted every single amendment which they present.

In the proceedings in the Senate committee an amendment restricting the differentials in wages between those employed in some lines of work in different sections of the country was offered by the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russell] and was incorporated in the bill. That amendment was accepted by the House. That presented this practical situation, which is the one that disturbs some of us today; and at this point I speak for no one but myself:

We have extended the hours of work of the man on relief from those which had existed, varying with the amount of his hourly wage, to a 130-hour period. Some protests were made against that extension. There was a definite increase in the number of hours that the relief worker was compelled to work to get his security wage. Then, in the amendment of the Senator from Georgia, coupled with a provision in the House amendment, there was a certain not inconsistency, but, to me, a somewhat unexpected result. The House amendment provided that in the change from the prevailing wage to the 130-hour wage provision there should not be any substantial change in the average monthly wage of relief workers in the country. The amendment of the Senator from Georgia was definitely intended to increase, and would have the effect of increasing, the hourly wage of some of the workers in the South. Consequently, when the two clauses were construed together, the Relief Administration said, whether rightly or wrongly, "If we are to carry out the provisions of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia and raise wages in certain areas where they are low, we shall be compelled to reduce the scale in some other sections."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder if the Senator has any figures to indicate how much additional appropriation would be required for the W. P. A. if the same number of workers now carried were continued in employment, and were paid not less than the prevailing wage for work that might be done in communities in which they are employed.

Does the Senator understand what I have in mind?

Mr. ADAMS. I do not.

Mr. PEPPER. What I mean to say is this:

Let us suppose that all the W. P. A. workers who are now employed should continue upon the W. P. A. rolls, but that instead of being paid the security wage which they are now being paid for 130 hours' work a month they should be paid not less than the prevailing wage for the 130 hours, and suppose the same rate of pay should prevail all over the United States, with an allowance only for the difference in the cost of living. The effect of that would be this:

The worker in the South, which is region 3, the worker in the region between the South and the North, which is region 2, and the worker in region 1, for the same type of work, would get the same wage, with only an allowance for the difference in the cost of living between the different sections; so that the worker in the North would really get, for the whole 130 hours per month that he worked, not less than the prevailing wage, and the workers in zone 2 and in zone 3 would get the same wage as the worker in zone 1, with an allowance only for the difference in the cost of living.

Mr. ADAMS. If I get the Senator's inquiry, it is, assuming that we continue the 130-hour requirement, and then pay the prevailing wage for the full 130 hours—

Mr. PEPPER. Pay the prevailing wage in the higherwage brackets, and then pull zones 2 and 3 up to the same level as zone 1, with an allowance only for the difference in the cost of living between zone 1 and zones 2 and 3.

Mr. ADAMS. I should say to the Senator that it would require easily double the relief appropriations now made.

Mr. PEPPER. So, in the opinion of the Senator, if we were to appropriate an additional $1,500,000,000, we will say, it would be possible for every W. P. A. worker now employed to remain in employment, to continue to work 130 hours per month, and for those in region 1, which is the North, to continue to get the prevailing wage, not for a part of a month but for the whole 130 hours, and then for the workers in regions 2 and 3 to get the same wage as the workers in region 1, with an allowance only for the difference in the cost of living between zones 2 and 3 and zone 1?

Mr. ADAMS. I say that it would take easily double the present amount, because we know that many of those on the relief rolls in the high hourly wage brackets do not work a full half month. If we carried those workers, they would have to be paid twice as much. But the Senator has in mind a somewhat different conception than the one which I think underlies the relief program. The relief program is strictly a relief program, with the idea of meeting the necessities of those upon whom misfortune has come without their fault. I have frequently heard the Senator say that he thinks the Government owes every man a full-time job at full-time wages.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I do not know whether or not I would use the word "owe." I should say that it is the duty of the Government, when private opportunity is not presented for a person who is able to work and is willing to work to get a job, to make it possible for that kind of person to get a job, and to receive for the work he does a fair wage which is not less than the prevailing wage.

Mr. ADAMS. That is an entirely different thing. The Senator believes the Government owes to every unemployed person the obligation to furnish him employment. I am not discussing that question. I am not arguing it. I am merely saying that what we are discussing is a bill founded upon the theory of meeting merely relief needs. We find persons in distress. Only a portion of the unemployed, a third of the unemployed, are in distress. We have gone to the extent of providing relief only in a meager way. That is the theory. Our bill specifically limits the expenditure to those who are in need. We have many unemployed who do not meet that test, and I do not care to discuss the obligation of general governmental employment. I simply want to talk about the relief situation.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, so far as I know now I shall interrupt the Senator with only one additional question, if I may; that is, to say, Is it not a fact that the persons who are now employed upon P. W. A., and the persons who are now employed upon many other governmental projects, financed partially or wholly with Federal money, would be in the same class with the W. P. A. worker if they did not have those jobs? Therefore, are we not discriminating without justification against the man who happens to be getting his job through the W. P. A. instead of getting it through the P. W. A. or some other agency of the Government which is doing just as much made work as is the W. P. A., and for the same purpose of providing employment and improving the economic condition of the country?

Mr. ADAMS. I am unable to see any discrimination when the Government liberally—not lavishly, but liberally—appropriates to meet the necessities of its unfortunate citizens. I am unable to see any discrimination, because in building a battleship we hire an expert draftsman. We hire an expert man to handle steel. He is employed not because of his necessity; he may have a million dollars in the bank; but he has a certain type of skill which we need in building our battleships. We are employing persons in those jobs upon the basis of services rendered.

The relief agency is a case of made work in order to meet two things: One, meager necessities; the other, to provide work so that the morale of the people will be maintained, and they may feel in their hearts, "We are not objects of charity. We are working for what we get."

As I say, I think they are entirely different fields.

Mr. President, the situation which was presented after the 30th of June was this: It has been brought to our attention rather acutely by some things that have happened; and some of us who have been watching the situation-notably, men like the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran]are apprehensive of what will occur on the first of September when the other amendment goes into effect. That is, by our acts men have had their length of service extended in order to obtain the same security wage—a thing well within our control, whether we agree to it or not. But now if we add to that, if we lengthen the period of their service and then cut their wages, some of us are apprehensive of the result. So on the first of September we shall have a situation, as it is presented to me-as I say again, I am speaking only of my own understanding-in which the application of the existing law means that we have extended the period of service to earn the security wage; we have taken out the prevailing wage; and then, without any increase in appropriations. under the restrictions of the act we have done this: In order to be accurate, let me read the act. It says:

The Commissioner shall fix a monthly earning schedule for persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by section 1 which shall not substantially affect the current national average labor cost per person of the Work Projects Administration.

Which means that the average must be maintained. If we increase the wages of the men working upon W. P. A. in Colorado, or Nevada, or Wyoming, or Georgia, we must take them down a corresponding amount in dollars in some other place or places.

I heard the speech of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY]. I am very much concerned. It seems to me this is a matter to be given serious thought and serious consideration. I am among those who voted for the prevailing wage when the proposal first came before the Senate, which I think was in 1935, and I voted for a similar proposal at other times. I am frank to say that I have wondered whether or not the maintenance of the prevailing wage in the relief scheme was as essential to the union wage outside as workers have thought; but I have accepted their judgment in the matter.

I have questioned whether or not damage was being done to the wage scale by extending the period of service to 130 hours. I have wondered whether having W. P. A. men work 130 hours in the place of working 60 or 70 hours might not be protecting the regular wage men not on relief from a competition which sometimes is unfair. But I am merely saying I have gone along, accepting the judgment of those who should be experts on the wage situation.

We now come to the present problem. An amendment has been offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] primarily to reestablish the prevailing wage scale. That is what the Senator has in mind. What is close to his heart is the reinstatement of the provision which he caused to be inserted in the law in 1935, 1936, 1937, and 1938. The other things which are sought to be added are accepted I think perhaps in a friendly and conciliatory spirit, rather than with enthusiasm.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I may say that they are incorporated in the amendment by reason of the study made pursuant to Executive orders made from 1935 on.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I move that subsection (a) of the amendment of the Senator from Nevada be stricken from his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado offers an amendment, which the clerk will state.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to strike out subsection (a) of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada, as follows:

(a) The Federal Works Administrator (hereinafter referred to as the "Administrator") shall fix a monthly earning schedule for persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by section 1. Such monthly earning schedule shall be so fixed that the monthly earnings payable under such schedule to any class of workers shall not be less than the monthly earnings payable to such class of workers under the schedule of earnings of the Works Progress Administration in effect on June 30, 1939. After August 31, 1939, the monthly earning schedule fixed by the Administrator (1) shall not provide for differentials in the monthly earnings of workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area, and (2) shall not provide for differentials between cities or counties within the same wage area upon the basis of the degree of urbanization or any other factor that will tend to discriminate against the less urbanized areas.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I desire to ask the Senator whether it is his desire by this amendment to eliminate that provision of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada which would prohibit the differentials in monthly security wages now made effective by the Works Progress Administration. Those differentials are such that there have been set up in the country three wage regions in which a different schedule of wages is paid to men on relief for the same work for the same time, a schedule under which discriminatory monthly wages are paid to workers within the same region for exactly the same work, the same type of work, and the same number of hours.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the amendment which I have offered will leave in the McCarran amendment the prevailing-wage provision as it existed in the law in 1936, 1937, and 1938, and which is the second subdivision of the amendment of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I appreciate the spirit of the Senator from Colorado, but let me say to the Senator that, in my judgment, if his amendment to my amendment should prevail, it would be a serious step backward, and one which would injure the cause we are trying to foster, because in the amendment as we have drafted it, and in the form in which we shall insist in trying to present it to the Senate, we have incorporated all the study which has been made and all of the differentials which have been worked out, and we have tried, by a perfecting amendment I have presented today in the way of a modification of my amendment, to meet as nearly as we could the differential of the lower zone with the differential of the higher zone. I really sincerely look upon the proposed amendment of the Senator from Colorado as a step backward, and I hope he will not persist in pressing it.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the first thing the Senator from Nevada and other Senators should keep in mind is that if the first section of his amendment should be adopted 250,000 people must go off the relief roll.

Mr. McCARRAN. Of course, I contradict that statement. If it were true, it would be disastrous, but it is not true at all.

Mr. ADAMS. I rely on a statement from Colonel Harrington, and I desire to read a letter from him on that point. He writes me as of today:

In accordance with your request, I am attaching a memorandum showing the effect of the amendment proposed by Senator Mc-Carran to section 15 (a) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 upon the wage scale of the Work Projects Adminis-tration and upon the amount of employment that can be pro-vided with the appropriation.

I am not discussing the second section of Senator McCarran's proposed amendment which restores the prevailing hourly rate, as I am sure you are perfectly familiar with the pros and cons of that question.

This is his memorandum:

JULY 28, 1939.

MEMORANDUM

Subject: Effect of amendment proposed by Senator McCarran to section 15 (a) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939.

Senator McCarran proposes that section 15 (a) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 be amended to read as follows. "Sec. 15. (a) The Federal Works Administrator (hereinafter referred to as the 'Administrator') shall fix a monthly earning schedule for persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by section 1. Such monthly earning schedule shall be so fixed that the monthly earnings payearning schedule shall be so fixed that the monthly earnings payable under such schedule to any class of workers shall not be less than the monthly earnings payable to such class of workers under the schedule of earnings of the Works Progress Administration in effect on June 30, 1939. After August 31, 1939, the monthly earning schedule fixed by the Administrator (1) shall not provide for differentials in the monthly earnings of workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area, and (2) shall not provide for differentials between cities or counties within the same wage area upon the basis of the degree of urbanization or any other factor upon the basis of the degree of urbanization, or any other factor that will tend to discriminate against the less urbanized areas."

The effect of this amendment would be that all monthly secu-

The effect of this amendment would be that all monthly secu-rity wages would have to be maintained at not less than those which were being paid on June 30, 1939, and that no differentials in such wages for workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area would be permitted. In other words, the wages of all workers in each of the four wage classes, namely, unskilled, inter-mediate, skilled, and professional and technical, would be raised to the highest wage which was being paid to that class within the wage region on June 30.

The fixing of a schedule of monthly earnings on the basis of

The fixing of a schedule of monthly earnings on the basis of the proposed amendment would mean that no consideration would be given to actual differentials in living costs, living conditions and

be given to actual differentials in living costs, living conditions and customs, and wages paid in private industry.

For example, in Wage Region No. 1, which comprises 30 States in the East, North, and West, and where 66 percent of Work Projects Administration employment exists, all unskilled wages would be raised to $60.50 per month, which was the unskilled wage being paid in New York City on the date mentioned.

A map is attached-

It is the same map to which the Senator from Nevada has referred in his discussion-

A map is attached which shows the three wage regions of the Work Projects Administration, and at the bottom of the map is a table giving the security wages fixed for these regions. In certain localities, such as New York City, for example, the rates shown in the table have been raised by as much as 10 percent to meet specific conditions. However, under the language of the amendment these highest wages become the controlling wages for the entire region.

The following table shows by regions the wages which would result under the operation of the amendment.

Schedule of monthly earnings

Wage region	Professional and technical work	Skilled work	Interme- diate work	Unskilled work
Region I	$98.70	$93. 50	$71.50	$60.50
Region II	86.90	79. 20	63.80	49.50
Region III	79.00	72. 00	57.00	40.00

A hasty estimate indicates that the effect of the amendment would be to raise the average national wage from $52.50 per month would be to raise the average national wage from $52.50 per month to approximately $62 per month. This, of course, would reduce in inverse ratio the amount of employment that could be given with the appropriation. In other words, instead of being able to provide employment for an average of 2,050,000 persons in the fiscal year 1940, it would only be possible to provide an average employment of 1,770,000, a reduction of 280,000.

With the subsequent amendment which has since been offered, the number to be let off would have to be increased somewhat, because we are now raising the wage scale of

Mr. President, we are not dealing with an appropriation bill. We are dealing with a situation as to which the appropriation has been fixed. We are dealing with a definite sum. If Congress should increase the wages it would result in reducing the number among whom the money can be divided. If we want to go back and change the appropriation that is another story, but we are now dealing with a fixed sum, and if we increase the wages in one area the result will be the reduction in another area of the number of persons who can be employed.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. So far as I am concerned I am willing to go back and increase the appropriations to meet the situation, and I want the RECORD to show that. We are still in session, and we have plenty of billions for wars across the great oceans. We can find the funds for all that, but we quibble about jobs for the unemployed. Why not appropriate the necessary amounts to do this job right? If we fail there will be labor trouble in America now and later. We can give a decent American standard of living to unemployed American citizens and thus save them from poverty, hunger, and destitution. Let the record show my position.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I may suggest to the Senator that perhaps we had better deal with this bill. In other words, here is a bill dealing with a lending program. It is not primarily a relief bill. I shall be very glad to see cured in this measure the unfortunate situation which has developed unexpectedly, but we cannot increase the appropriation in this measure, and I think before we start out and put into effect by this measure a provision which will put 280,000 or 300,000 people on the street, we had better give some thought to it.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is an outstanding and most efficient member of the Appropriations Committee. I have the honor to serve with him on that committee. And he can undoubtedly tell us what was the total relief appropriation for 1938, in the original bill, plus that in the deficiency bill. Can the Senator give us in round figures what it was?

Mr. ADAMS. Roughly, $2,200,000,000. Of course, the Senator understands I am not underwriting those figures.

Mr. McCARRAN. I understand that. Approximately $2,000,000,000. We have appropriated $1,700,000,000 for 1939. I do not think the Senator, from his experience-and we have served together in the Appropriations Committee-has any idea that $1,700,000,000 will be sufficient to take care of relief during 1939.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator that when it comes to the number of unemployed, as to their locality and their wages, I have no source of information other than the Works Progress Administration. I sometimes differ with them as to financial matters which are available in public records; I sometimes differ with them as to their conclusions, but the figures which were put into the relief bill which was passed very recently, are in accord with the recommendations of the President and of the relief Administrator, and furnished what they said would meet the needs. I do not underwrite their figures. As a member of the Appropriations Committee, like the Senator from Nevada, I have had to accept their figures, and have done so.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator recalls that we were called upon to appropriate money in a deficiency measure so as to take care of those who might be let off the rolls. That is correct, is it not? In other words, we were asked for $100,-000,000, and we gave $50,000,000. Am I correct?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes. The whole story is this: In 1938 at

Mr. ADAMS. Yes. The whole story is this: In 1938 at the time we were making the original appropriation, conditions had been getting bad in the country. Mr. Hopkins said to us, "I think it would be better to make the appropriations for 7 months rather than for the full year, and then we can adjust it." Then, upon further consideration we thought that the 7 months would expire about the 1st of February, and that we had better make provision until the 1st of March, by which time Congress would have been in session for 2 months, so we increased the appropriation sufficiently to cover that additional month.

Then a recommendation came in for an amount for the remainder of the year, and Congress did not see fit to accept the recommendation. Then a further request was made. The amount that Congress gave was $50,000,000 less than was requested. My own judgment is that the Congress was sustained in its action by the facts.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator recall the average security wage for skilled labor, as we considered it at the time we were making the additional appropriation—the average security wage, which means the monthly earnings for skilled labor?

Mr. ADAMS. No. I will say to the Senator that the figure that is in my mind as the average security wage in the United States is $52.50. That was the item that we were figuring on, and the incidental cost—materials and overhead—brought it to $61 per person. That was the figure we used in making our computations.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am probably in error, because the Senator had more to do with it than I had, since he was chairman of the subcommittee, but I thought it was in the neighborhood of $65 a month.

Mr. ADAMS. Sixty-one dollars a month.

Mr. McCARRAN. Sixty-one dollars a month. I accept the Senator's figures. With that in mind, with the present existing appropriation, there is no necessity, as I see it, for letting off any number of those who are in need, and of failing to maintain the present existing security wage in the respective three zones, notwithstanding the statement by Colonel Harrington, whose splendid ability and efficiency I recognize.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. In order to bring before the Senate the information which came before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations over which the Senator from Colorado presided when this matter was being heard, let me ask if it is not a fact that there are people certified as entitled to employment on the W. P. A. rolls who cannot be provided for by the appropriation that has already been made?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I do not pretend to know. As I just stated to the Senator from Nevada, the relief administrator will come to us and say, "We need a certain sum of money for the next year." The President sends a message in which he says, "We need a certain sum of money,"

And the Congress has granted that sum of money and some additional money. In other words, the Congress for the current fiscal year has accepted the figures of the President and Colonel Harrington.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is true, but the point I wish to make is that Colonel Harrington and others—I think it was Colonel Harrington-stated to the committee that there were people certified who would not be provided for under this appropriation, because, of course, to take care of all the millions out of employment would require a larger sum of money than this. I was only pointing out the fact to show that if fewer people divide the available money the greater will be the number of people who are certified for relief who will get no relief at all. I was simply drawing the comparison which the Senator was making, in a different way, that people certified for the relief rolls will get no money today as it stands, and the fewer people who get the money we have appropriated, there will be that many more, in addition, who will get no relief at all. I think that statement was brought out by Colonel Harrington.

Mr. ADAMS. I am glad to have the Senator's statement. Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. ADAMS. I could not refuse.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is always most gracious. It seems to me that much of the discussion is irrelevant to the issues which are really involved.

Mr. ADAMS. Well, does the Senator think there is anything unusual about that? [Laughter.]

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Perhaps not. But the purpose of that part of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada which would be stricken out by the perfecting amendment, or modifying amendment, I should say—

Mr. ADAMS. I think the Senator's first term was correct.
Mr. O'MAHONEY. "Modifying" is a better word—offered by the Senator from Colorado, was to eliminate certain discriminations in the present monthly wage scale—

Mr. ADAMS. Let me ask the Senator a question.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I was merely making a preliminary statement.

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, but let me ask him as to his preliminary statement. Does the Senator know of any sound reason why everyone in the United States, regardless of living conditions and living costs, should be put upon an exact equality as to the relief they are getting?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Certainly not. But in region No. 1, with respect to unskilled work we have the curious condition that in some cases those workers are permitted to earn $55 a month; in other cases in the same region $52 per month; in other cases $48 per month; in other cases $44, and in other cases $40. Those are discriminations within the same wage region in the amount of monthly wages paid to persons who are doing exactly the same kind of work, and who work exactly the same number of hours. The same discriminations exist in region No. 2 and in region No. 3, which includes the State of Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. If the Senator will permit me, I should like to point out to him that the discrimination he has shown by the chart does not really portray the extent of the discrimination, because in the city of New York wages have been arbitrarily increased by 10 percent. Therefore, in region No. 1, instead of the maximum figure being $55, as related by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney], it should be $60.59. Common labor in New York City receives $60.59.

Mr. ADAMS. The paragraph in the amendment which I am seeking to strike out provides for a certain schedule of earnings, which shall not provide for differentials in the monthly earnings of workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area. The wage area runs from Maine to California. In other words, this amendment exacts the same wage, and it practically means that the New York scale, of which the Senator from Georgia speaks, which is high, would be the scale which would have to be applied throughout the vast area running from Maine to Washington to California. That is what I think should be corrected, and what Colonel Harrington says will involve throwing off the relief rolls from 280,000 to 300,000 persons, because the money at hand will not pay the New York scale of wages throughout the country.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. My interest is only in developing some language which will reach the difficulty which is sought to be corrected. If the Senator will glance at the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada and will read that amendment, eliminating the words on page 2, in lines 5, 6, and 7, between the word "differentials" in line 5 and the word "between" in line 7, the provision would then read:

After August 31, 1939, the monthly earning schedule fixed by the Administrator shall not provide for differentials between cities or counties within the same wage area upon the basis of the degree of urbanization or any other factor that will tend to discriminate against the less-urbanized areas.

Would not that language meet the criticism of Colonel Harrington?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the two provisions, even as improved by the Senator from Wyoming, leave subsection (b), establishing the prevailing wage scale, in conflict with them. We had testimony before the Banking and Currency Committee to the effect that there is a certain scale of wages in the building trades in Chicago, accomplished as a result of the activity of labor in the protection of their interest. If we go 50 miles outside, we find a scale for the same work which is a half or a third of that in Chicago. The prevailing wage in the rural area of Illinois 50 miles from Chicago may be $4 a day for certain work, while in Chicago it may be $12 or $14 a day. What the Senator suggests would equalize those wages, and there is only one equalization possible; that is, to raise the rural rate up to the city rate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the Senator is mistaken. There is a distinction between the prevailing rate of wages and the monthly schedule. The prevailing rate of wages refers solely to an hourly scale, and the monthly schedule refers to the monthly pay check. The whole theory of the administration of W. P. A. down to this hour has been that where the prevailing rate of wage was paid the worker would be permitted to work only so many hours at the prevailing rate of wages, which would produce the monthly schedule fixed arbitrarily by the W. P. A. Administrator. So there is really no conflict between the two. If this amendment were modified as I have just outlined, it would merely mean that the arbitrary differential in the monthly schedule based upon the number of people in a particular county would no longer be the factor which would guide the W. P. A. in making the monthly rate. It would not affect the prevailing wage at all.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am quite conscious of the fact that there are unfair differentials which amount to discriminations. They can be readily picked out. On the other hand. I am apprehensive that in attempting, by an amendment to a lending-and-spending bill, to meet the situation in two or three lines we may produce a condition much worse than that which we are seeking to cure. In supporting the amendment, if it is amended, I am interested in meeting the acute situation which threatens us today, and will threaten us on the 1st of September. I think if we go afield in attempting to adjust the difference in wages between a certain community in Montana and a certain community in Wyoming we shall lose our way. I think if we will establish the prevailing-wage law as it was, under which we have operated for 3 years, we shall have done quite a job under a lending bill, without hearings and simply depending upon those things which we have previously heard.

I am submitting largely the views of the relief administration which has these matters to handle. I do not pretend to know the facts. I have read the letter of Colonel Harrington, who is much concerned about the matter. If the part which I have asked to have stricken out is not stricken out, we shall find 300,000 persons thrown off the relief rolls, the very last thing any Senator wants to see happen.

Mr. McCARRAN. May I say to the Senator while he is on his feet, if I may have his attention—

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly. The Senator can always have my attention, as he knows.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am very grateful for the Senator's courtesy.

The point to which I wish to invite the attention of the Senator is that, so far as taking persons off the relief roll is concerned, I have no apprehension; but I have grave apprehension when we start to tear down the wage structure of the country. There is no necessity for taking 280,000, or any number of persons, off the relief rolls.

Mr. ADAMS. If we should put the prevailing wage back, it would protect the wage structure, would it not? If we put back the original McCarran amendment, it would protect the wage structure.

Mr. McCarran. I think that is true; but together with the restoration and maintenance of the prevailing wage I should like to have the benefit of such a study as has been made and carried out by the administration under Executive order. It may make a difference, in that we may have to come back and appropriate more money. I am not worried about that at all. We did it before, and we can do it again. I would rather appropriate more money than to destroy the self-respect of the workers of America, who for half a century have builded and constructed a wage structure in keeping with American standards of living.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I know nothing as to the details. I have assumed that the great relief organization, especially during the years when Mr. Hopkins operated it and worked out the table for the three wage areas, did not do so arbitrarily and without study. I assume that the table represents a definite effort to meet certain conditions.

There are differences in living standards; there are differences in living costs; there are differences in necessities. In my judgment what the Government should do is to measure the relief needs. I have always felt that the one standard the Government should apply to each citizen is, "If you are in distress your need is what we will consider." Two men may be neighbors. The needs of one may be slight, and the needs of the other may be great. The obligation of our Government as to those two men as individuals is to meet their respective individual needs.

From the map and tabulations submitted, the Works Progress Administration evidently felt that living costs and living conditions in certain neighborhoods require relief, on the average, greater per month than in some other areas.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. In a moment. The Senator from Nevada has added as an additional sentence to his amendment the provision that all the monthly wage provisions applicable to region 3, which is designated as the deep South, shall be raised to conform to the monthly security wage rates in region 2. In other words, if there is anything that is arbitrary, it would seem to be arbitrary to lift the average monthly wage in a whole area.

I am not defending the figures. I merely say that the agency which we equipped and financed to obtain the information brought us certain figures. I for one have been inclined to act upon the judgment of that agency.

I now yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado is usually so logical that I must confess that I have been somewhat shocked to hear his argument this afternoon, in which he meets himself coming back. He has argued with great force and vehemence that the Works Progress Administration, in its omnipotent wisdom—

Mr. ADAMS. Now, now! I am willing to go quite a distance, but I will have to stop a little short of that.

Mr. RUSSELL. I shall modify the statement. The Senator from Colorado has argued that the Works Progress Administration, in its wisdom after an examination and after going into the facts, has fixed a wage scale in the deep South that is less than one-half of that in 30 States of the Union, in many cases for doing work of the same type; yet he says he believes that the present law should be changed because it depends upon a difference in living costs.

If the Senator from Colorado is correct, and the Works Progress Administration, in fixing these almost criminally low wages in the South, relied upon any difference in cost of living, language in the present law cannot possibly bring about the reduction of one dime in the monthly security wage that is paid in the area of the State of the Senator from Colorado, enjoying the highest monthly wages in the entire United States.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, if this amendment were presented under different circumstances, I should be very happy to vote for it. I believe in the principle incorporated in the amendment. I do not believe, however, that this is the place for the amendment, because of the peculiar situation which exists at the other end of the Capitol. Because of the peculiar situation over there I think this amendment, if attached to the bill, would defeat the bill, and we should have no bill at all.

Because I am anxious to see the bill passed and become a law, I shall be compelled to vote against a principle in which I believe, and vote against the amendment of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the question of wages is the most difficult problem with which the Works Progress Administration has had to consider.

In the beginning, the Congress adopted the proposal presented by the President, that of a security wage. Later, when the McCarran amendment was offered in the Senate, we all remember the controversy which resulted in a compromise amendment fixing less than the prevailing wage. Thereafter, in several of the States, the prevailing wage was established by the Executive; and, as a result, the following year the Congress established the prevailing wage.

As a result of the establishment of the prevailing hourly wage for W. P. A. workers, the W. P. A. had to adopt 4,000 different schedules. By the language of the act the Administrator had to determine the prevailing hourly wage of the professional and technical worker, the skilled worker, the intermediate and unskilled worker. We know that there was no reasonable way in which the Administrator could determine the hourly wage of the artist, the teacher, the doctor, and so forth, because they have never worked on an hourly scale of wages; so, as a result, 4,000 different scales of wages were established throughout the United States.

The result has been this: In the city of Washington a bricklayer is paid an hourly wage of $1.75. The security wage for a bricklayer in the city of Washington is $72.50 per month. Therefore, when a bricklayer in this city works 41 hours he has earned the security wage, and cannot be permitted to work any longer for the W. P. A. during that month. When he works 41 hours—that is, five 8-hour days—the rest of the month he cannot work for the W. P. A.

The normal bricklayer, under the circumstances, looks for another job. When he finds another job, he takes it at less than the prevailing wage; and the upstanding citizen who has not gone upon the relief roll has thereby lost a job, because the W. P. A. worker, having earned his security wage of $72.50, could go out and take that employment.

The Committee on Unemployment and Relief caused an investigation to be made, trying to get to the bottom of this trouble, in the hope that we might make some recommendation which would solve the difficulty. I had almost 8,000 men interviewed by representatives of the Unemployment Committee. They were sent to five large cities of the country-Omaha, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, Of the 7,982 men interviewed, 5,049, or 63 percent, when asked the question, stated that they had employment other than W. P. A. employment. Of the total number interviewed. 81 percent had been on the pay rolls continuously from January 1, 1937. Of 5,049 workers who admitted receiving outside earnings, 4,312, or 85 percent, had such employment during the same months for which they had already received pay from W. P. A. A little less than one-fourth-24 percent-were found to be working outside at the same occupations and at lower hourly rates of pay than they were paid by the W. P. A. Of the 4,312 who admitted outside earnings during the month, 2,389 gave the names of their employers: the others declined; and in the great majority of cases the outside earnings were discovered to be in excess of those stated.

The Administrator of W. P. A. has been making an honest effort to remedy this situation. Of all the tasks in the Government of the United States, in my opinion, the most difficult, the most thankless task, is that of administering W. P. A. From the beginning I have held the theory that gentlemen are wrong when they say there is no difference between establishing the prevailing wage for men engaged in private employment and establishing it for men engaged in W. P. A. employment. There is this difference:

When a man is engaged in building a post-office building. as has been suggested this afternoon, he is in the employ of a contractor. Whenever employed by a contractor, he is working for a man who is seeking profit; and whenever that man is seeking profit out of the labor of the employee, we rightfully say that he must be caused to pay the prevailing wage. I have voted for the prevailing wage in the Walsh-Healey bill, in the Bacon-Davis bill, in the P. W. A. measures, and on every occasion when the question has arisen with outside employment; but when my good friend from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] was discussing the matter with the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper], and they were saying that they saw no difference, I wondered why they could not realize that when a contractor hires a man, he hires the man because he is qualified as a skilled worker, because he is the best man the contractor can get. Unless the contractor believes that the man he employs is the best carpenter or best bricklayer he can get, the contractor will not employ him. When the Navy Yard employs a man, he is employed as the result of an examination. Notice of the examination is posted in every post office in the country, and a man receives the job only if, by reason of his examination, he demonstrates his qualifications as a skilled

The W. P. A. employment is on an entirely different basis. We give a man a job there, not as the result of an examination to determine his qualifications for the job, but solely because he has proved, not his qualifications, but that he is in need. His necessity alone is the qualification for the job which is given him by the taxpayers.

The carpenter who has never gone upon W. P. A., when he fills the gasoline tank of his little Ford automobile to go to work, pays a tax of 1 cent on every gallon of gasoline, which comes to the Federal Government to aid his neighbor who is out of a job.

We must believe that as a rule—there are exceptions—the skilled worker has lost his job because he was the least competent of the workers upon the job. Therefore, he is forced to go and ask for certification on the ground of his need. So there is an entirely different basis for the employment of W. P. A. workers.

We said that we did not believe in the dole. I am one of those opposed to it. Notwithstanding the fact that we know we could follow the example of Great Britain, and could supply food, flour, and bacon, and so on, to the man who is on relief at far less cost by means of the dole, we determined that employment by the Government would maintain his morale, enable him to hold up his head and say he was not the object of charity, but that he was rendering a service for what was given to him by his neighbors through the instrumentality of the Government of the United States; so we have given him employment. When we have given him employment, it has been upon work which in many cases was not essential. It is not like the post-office building. He has been given work upon projects which have been suggested only after careful consideration by local officials as furnishing the man an opportunity to work instead of to get something for nothing from his

We find ourselves today confronted with great dissatisfaction because the Congress put into the last relief act a provision requiring a man to work 130 hours per month, which, as my neighbor says, means 30 hours per week. If we look at the law we find that that is the cause of the trouble; for the security wage, which is an entirely different thing from the prevailing wage, was not changed. The security wage is fixed; but the bricklayer in the city of Washington who heretofore has worked 41 hours to get $72.50 is now called upon to work 130 hours for the same $72.50.

What is the result? If the Administrator had a project here in the city of Washington for the construction of a building, he would employ bricklayers from the relief rolls. When the bricklayer worked 41 hours he quit, after 5 days. The job had to go on, so another bricklayer was brought in from the relief rolls, and he could work for only 5 days, and then he had to go. Then another one came in. The unskilled worker, however, the man at the bottom of the ladder, the man about whom we cry here, had to work right on through to 129 or 120 hours per month, while the bricklayer would come in from the same relief roll, work 5 days, get $72.50, and say to his assistant, "Good-bye; I am going fishing for the rest of the month." The unskilled worker stayed on, and saw three men come in and walk out and get more money than he got, thus causing great dissatisfaction.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield. Mr. HATCH. I have not been on the floor during all of the address of the Senator from South Carolina, but when he made the remark about the skilled worker going fishing, I wondered whether he had explained to the Senate the facts we learned in the investigation about just what the skilled laborer did instead of going fishing.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, there is not the slightest doubt in the world that from the standpoint of the organized worker, of the skilled worker, who is not on the relief roll, the law as it stands today is the first effort made for his protection. He cannot possibly compete with a man on the relief roll. I have talked with men connected with the labor organizations. They have my sympathy today. They are in what we call a "hot spot" in ordinary conversation. But that man knows that he is being hurt every day by the man upon W. P. A. who gets a job as a skilled worker, because for the rest of the month he is taking work from him every day. He will go out to Chevy Chase, or to Cleveland Park, or to some of the other suburbs, and build a garage for a man at a lower hourly rate than he got from W. P. A., and he takes a job away from some other man every time he does such a thing.

How long does the unskilled worker labor? A statement has been furnished me by the officials of the W. P. A. In New York City the unskilled laborer, the common laborer, works 123 hours now. He has to work 123 hours in order to get his $60.27. The bricklayer works 46 hours; the carpenter works 53 hours.

Mr. RUSSELL. What is the monthly wage?

Mr. BYRNES. Approximately $86.48 a month for the bricklayer. The carpenter gets $92.75 for 53 hours. The painter gets $91.50 for 61 hours. When the carpenter quits at the end of 53 hours his assistant, who has been helping him, has to stay on and work 123 hours for the lowest wage that is paid under the existing scale.

Let us see about the unskilled laborer in Chicago, because if we are interested in anyone, for once let us give some thought to the common laborer, the man who needs help. How many are there? Of 2,500,000 on W. P. A. projects in June, there were only 221,000 skilled workers. Seventy-five percent of the workers on W. P. A. are unskilled, 15 percent intermediate, 10 percent professional and technical. Most of the time spent in the Congress of the United States in considering W. P. A. has been taken up in discussing the problems of the 10 percent professional and technical, and the 15 percent intermediate. Let me take a few moments in talking about the 75 percent of the two and a half million, who are entitled to some consideration at the hands of Congress.

They are not complaining today. Let us take the cities of this country. The unskilled laborers work 123 hours in New York City today. The new law would make them work only 7 hours more. In Chicago they work 110 hours. Louisville, Ky., they work 129 hours. In Oklahoma City they work 112 hours. In New Orleans they work 114 hours. In Atlanta, Ga., they work 134 hours, more than the new provision calls for. In Los Angeles they work 110 hours, in Seattle, Wash., 90 hours. Those are the figures for the unskilled workers. The complaint has not come from them. The complaint comes from the 10 percent technical and professional, whose wages have been fixed by the hour for the first time in their business experience, and from the 15 percent intermediate, 220,000 of the skilled workers.

I know this is a difficult problem. I discussed this matter, as I have stated, with gentlemen who are at the top of organized skilled workers. I asked them if they could not find it possible to agree with the proposal made by the unemployment committee, which proposal was that the wages should be based upon an annual rate. I asked them to submit to me some proposal which they thought would take care of their situation, and I assured them in advance that if it were in any way reasonable they would find a sympathetic listener in me.

They could not do it, and I well understood, because they are not in a position, with the situation which exists in the organized labor field today, with two groups, to make any suggestion about any change in the law which might hurt one or the other. I found that that could not be done.

We know we cannot continue under the system I have described without causing the greatest dissatisfaction to the vast army of unskilled workers.

I ask to have inserted in the RECORD the statement to which I have referred of the rates of pay for the various classes in the five or six cities, which table I have gotten from the W. P. A.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, under the new proposal, the building projects upon which skilled workers can be employed will be greatly reduced by reason of the provision that the contribution by the Federal Government cannot exceed $52,000. Heretofore a large number have been employed because W. P. A. has engaged in constructing large buildings. In one case I remember they built a hotel in the State of Oregon, costing a million dollars, and then there was a great enterprise in the city of New York, costing twelve to fifteen million dollars, I belive, and others throughout the country have furnished employment to a large number of men. But under the new proposal the administration would not be permitted to engage in such projects. Therefore the number of men who are going to be hurt in any way by this new proposal is exceedingly limited.

The number of nonrelief skilled workers who are employed today is 10,182. In other words, in addition to the skilled workers taken from relief rolls, 10,182 men have been employed who were not on relief, key men in some of the industries. After all, it is not a serious matter.

We have read of much trouble out in the city of Minneapolis, Minn. I took the trouble to inquire as to the scale of wages there. The unskilled workers labor 100 hours in the sewing rooms. Under the new proposal the increased time they would have to work would amount to 30 hours. But the security wage is higher there than in most places. It is $55 a month. They would have to work 30 hours more.

The Senate has been working for the last 3 days from 11 in the morning to 11 at night, and I submit that when it comes to asking the skilled workers, the 220,000, to work for a longer period than the 40 hours they have been working it is not an undue hardship. They could go to work at 7 o'clock in the morning and work until 12, which would make 5 hours; and if they work 6 days, just spending the morning, it would make 30 hours, and that would make up the 130 hours for the month.

While we can be sympathetic about things as men want to be, when we ask a man to work from 7 to 12, 6 days in the week, or ask him to work 4 days in the week, it is not imposing an undue hardship on him. We have been accustomed to working for that length of time, and even for a longer time.

There is this serious complaint: The skilled worker says it does amount to an injury to the man who is not upon relief but who is out in industry. That has caused me to give serious consideration to their complaint. There is a fear on their part that if there is any reduction in the wage of W. P. A. it will affect the wage of the man in private employment.

I certainly would not want to bring about that result. I would be opposed to the new provision if I thought it would have such a result. But I contend that inasmuch as there is the difference that the contractor, or the Government, employs a man only if he can prove his qualifications, it is on an entirely different basis from the W. P. A., which must take a man who is certified regardless of whether he is the best man but because of his need. I do not believe that causing 220,000 skilled workers throughout the Nation to work for 130 hours on W. P. A. will result in a reduction of the wages paid to men in private employment.

I believe that if anyone can be fair about this question, I think I can be. The bill was passed, and in the conference, because the Senate had adopted the prevailing-wage provision, notwithstanding the views I might hold upon it as to W. P. A., I stood with the Senate conferees, because I believe that when the Senate has taken a position, Senate conferees should stand out as long as there is any chance of securing an agreement. At 11:30 o'clock at night this was one of the four or five questions which had been debated for hours and upon which no agreement could be reached, because the Members of the House were strong in their views, and insisted upon them. Confronted with that, the Senate conferees receded on this matter, and, as the Senator from Colorado has stated, there were only four amendments out of the entire list upon which the Senate conferees entirely receded.

The Works Progress Administrator has not had a chance even to put into effect this new law. He is having difficulties because of the many changes in the law, and I submit to the Senate that the Congress should give to the Administrator a fair opportunity to put it into effect, and let us observe what will be the result.

So far as I am concerned, because of the changes in the law, after the adjournment of this session of the Congress I intend to ask the members of the Unemployment Committee to agree to return to Washington at some time in the early fall for the purpose of continuing the study of this question. I do not know what the effect of these other provisions will The Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Montana and the others on the committee who have been making an earnest effort to find a solution to this very difficult question will have an opportunity to observe the effect of this and the other changes, and I believe that in January we should report to the Congress what effect they have had upon the W. P. A. workers throughout the Nation, and recommend the changes which the committee believes ought to

There is one other thing which would affect this question, and it would affect it adversely. It has given me some trouble because of the statement in the papers quoting the Administrator as saying that, by reason of the language inserted by the House the increase should not be substantially above the national average, he would possibly have to reduce the compensation paid in some of the States.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let us be fair with each other. The Administrator did not use the word "possible." He said he would have to reduce so as to make an average. Is that correct?

Mr. BYRNES. If the word was not "possible"-then, whatever the word was.

Mr. McCARRAN. It was not even an equivalent word. The Senator used the word "possible."

Mr. BYRNES. I did, because that was my recollection. But I would not quarrel about the word. Whatever the word was, he said he would have to reduce the amount paid in some States. In the conference no one representing the House ever urged that that should be done, and therefore no one in the conference could speak for the conferees. But, as I said upon the floor a few days ago in response to a question by the Senator from Connecticut, certainly it was not my view that it should be done, and I do not think it ought to be done, and, believing that, I wrote to the Administrator a letter. Calling his attention to the provision in the joint resolution, I said:

JULY 26, 1939.

Col. F. C. HARRINGTON, Administrator, Work Projects Administration,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Colonel: The joint resolution making appropriations for work relief for the fiscal year provides, in section 15, that:

"The Commissioner shall fix a monthly earning schedule for persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by section 1 which shall not substantially affect the current national average labor cost per person of the Work Projects Administration. After August 31, 1939, such monthly earning schedule shall not be varied for workers of the same type in different geographical areas to any greater extent than may be justified by difference in the cost of living. * * ""

It has been stated on the floor of the Senate that in considering this language you feared that in administering the second sen-this language you feared that in administering the second sentence refering to the difference in the security wage, being based solely upon the difference in the cost of living, that you might find it necessary to increase the wage paid in certain sections to such an extent that you would substantially increase the current national average labor cost per person and thereby violate this section, unless you reduced the security wage in some States.

No one individual is authorized to speak for the conferees upon a legislative measure, but as one of the conferees, I desire to say that it was my thought that the language gave you sufficient discretion to enable you to administer the law without reducing the security wage in any one of the several areas. I realize that you have not had an opportunity to make such a survey as would enable you to determine the difference in the cost of living in the different geographical areas which would be necessary before you could announce any change in the security wage. But I want you to know, while you are considering the question, that in you to know, while you are considering the question, that in the conference nothing was said to indicate it was the intention of the representatives of either House that the cost-of-living factor would mean a reduction in the security wage in any State. Sincerely yours,

JAMES F. BYRNES.

The Administrator has written me a letter which I wish

FEDERAL WORKS AGENCY, Work Projects Administration, Washington, D. C., July 26, 1939.

The Honorable James F. Byrnes

Dear Senator Byrnes: The receipt is acknowledged of your letter of today relative to the application of section 15 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 upon the wage scale of the Work Projects Administration.

I have felt that the language of this section involved the granting of considerable discretion by the Congress to the Commissioner of the Work Projects Administration in fixing monthly sioner of the Work Projects Administration in fixing monthly wages, particularly as the determination of the wage scale involved the definition and interpretation of the phrase "differences in the cost of living." There were actually in effect on the date of the enactment of this legislation unskilled monthly wage rates which ranged from a maximum of $60.50 in New York City to a minimum of $26 in rural areas in the South. Since no interpretation of the phrase "differences in the cost of living" could cover so wide a variation, it is obvious that the lower wages must be raised.

raised.

However, the bulk of the employment of the Work Projects Administration is in the area in which the highest wages are paid. For example, 66 percent of all employment is in present wage region No. 1. The result of this is that the raising of security wages where they are lowest does not affect the national average in the degree that might be expected.

This whole question of wage scales is still under study by the Work Projects Administration. My present thinking is along the line of establishing three wage classes, i. e., skilled and professional, intermediate, and unskilled. This would involve consolidation of the former professional and technical rating with the sional, intermediate, and unskilled. This would involve consolidation of the former professional and technical rating with the skilled rating, which I believe to be advisable.

In working out the new wage scales, it is my intention to make a realistic interpretation of the words "differences in the cost of living," and a reasonably liberal application of the provision that the national average labor cost as of the date of the enactment of the legislation shall not be substantially affected. This is obviously for the purpose of minimizing reductions in the present high-wage areas. Such action on my part would appear to be justified by what you indicate to have been the intention of the justified by what you indicate to have been the intention of the conferees on this legislation.

Sincerely yours.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to the extent of reading again the next to the last paragraph on the second page of the letter?

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from Nevada wants me to read the next to the last paragraph of the letter. I show the letter to him.

Mr. McCARRAN. I want the Senator to discuss that. Mr. BYRNES. Yes; I want to do that.

Mr. McCARRAN. May I read the last paragraph so the Senator may discuss it?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes. I have read it, but the Senator may read it again.

Mr. McCARRAN. It is:

This is obviously for the purpose of minimizing reductions in the present high-wage areas

Will the Senator kindly discuss that?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes; that is what I am now going to

Mr. President, it is evident that, notwithstanding the statement contained in my letter, which I think is a correct statement of the attitude of the Senate conferees, and the fact that it was not argued nor contended by anyone that it would result or should result in a reduction of the wage scales, the Administrator still makes in his letter the statement that, while he is going to construe the provision liberally, it would be for the purpose of minimizing reductions, and that still means making reductions. So far as I am concerned, since it was never intended that there should be a reduction, whenever the deficiency bill comes to the Senate I intend to offer an amendment changing this substantial national average, so as to make certain that there shall be no reduction in the security wage in any area.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. That could not come before the Senate unless it should be on the third deficiency bill, which the Senator may have in mind.

Mr. BYRNES. I first thought of putting it on the deficiency bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. It would be subject to a rule.

Mr. BYRNES. No; not to a rule; but subject to a point of

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; certainly. In other words, it would take a two-thirds vote to set aside the rule prohibiting legislation from being attached to an appropriation measure.

Mr. BYRNES. That is correct.

Mr. McCARRAN. Would the Senator permit me to interrupt him to say that that propaganda has gone throughout the length and breadth of the Senate during the last 24 hours, and the able Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON] just a moment ago stated that this was not the bill to which the amendment should be attached. In other words, it has been peddled out here that we should forget this bill, we should not consider attaching the amendment to this bill, because it belongs on the deficiency bill—the third deficiency bill, if such a bill comes to the Senate—and the able Senator from South Carolina knows that it would require a two-thirds vote of the Senate to attach it to a deficiency bill.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield. Mr. PEPPER. I should like to ask if it is not possible to attain everything the Senator from Nevada seeks to attain, that is to say, to prevent the reduction of the security wage anywhere in the United States, by merely striking out the average provision in section 15 of the existing law, and providing that the security wage shall not be reduced in any section of the country.

Mr. BYRNES. There is not any question that if such an amendment were attached to any bill at all it would accomplish what the Senator from Florida has in mind.

Every Member of the Senate knows that if an amendment to the deficiency bill is offered it would be subject to a point of order. There can be no question in the mind of anyone as to that. But who would make the point of order, Mr. President. With the statement of the conferees on the part of the Senate and the attitude of the Senate, who would make the point of order?

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. McCARRAN rose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. May I not also ask the Senator whether, in his judgment, in view of the almost uniform action taken heretofore by the Senate on this proposition, and the almost unanimous adoption of the suggestion in the relief bill itself by the Senate, if any Senator made the point of order, if the same sentiment prevailed, would not two-thirds of the Senate vote to suspend the rule in order that the amendment might be considered?

Mr. BYRNES. I assume so, because in my humble opinion, knowing the attitude of the Senate, there will be no one to make the point of order on a proposal of that kind. But if anyone should make it-I may not be a prophet but I am willing to stake my judgment on the statement that not two-thirds but three-fourths of the Senate would vote favorably upon that amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield. Mr. McCARRAN. Is it not the rule of the Senate and the rule of the Appropriations Committee that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee must make the point of order? Why lead the Senate astray on this matter? Why not be frank? If you do not want it on this bill, why would you want it on the third deficiency? If it is not worth while on this bill, why would it be worth while on the third deficiency bill? Will there be a third deficiency bill? Perhaps there will be none. Why not do now what we should do? Let us be frank with the country, frank with ourselves, frank with our fellows in the Senate.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I am not interested in what bill an amendment is added to, except for results. I have had some experience around the Capitol, and I know that what the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Minton] stated a few moments ago has been stated time and again in the past 24 hours. Because I am interested in obtaining action upon the suggestion I have made to the Administrator, I would rather have the amendment offered to the deficiency appropriation bill, which must go through, rather than to offer it to the pending bill, which does not have to go through and which, according to information received by me and other Members of the Senate, may not go through. I believe in being practical. I know that the deficiency appropriation bill must be acted upon by the House. I know that this change was made by the House; and if we want action, the deficiency bill is the place to put the amendment. The Senate can adopt the amendment of the Senator from Nevada if the majority wishes to do so, and there will be no complaint from me. However, in addition to the proposal of the Senator from Nevada, I think we should do what I am suggesting and have suggested to the Administrator, and which I fear may not be covered in any other way.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator. Mr. MINTON. Is it not possible that if the deficiency bill comes over with legislation contained in it, a point of order could not be made against it?

Mr. BYRNES. That is true. There is no question that if it contained legislation the situation would be different.

Mr. McCARRAN. The rule provides that a point of order must be made by the chairman of the committee. The Senator will not deny that. Let us be frank.

The Senator from Indiana has propounded a question.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from South Carolina has stated that he would offer such an amendment. He has stated as frankly as he could that he did not believe there would be one Member of the Senate who would make the point of order, but that if it were made the amendment would be adopted by a two-thirds vote, if not a threefourths vote. That covers the subject.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not want to interfere with the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator from Indiana raised a question which I think should be cleared up. The rule provides that when an amendment proposing legislation is added to an appropriation bill the chairman of the committee must make the point of order against it. Am I correct?

Mr. BYRNES. No. Mr. President.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no such rule of the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. BYRNES. What the Senator has in mind is a rule of the committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no such rule of the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator mean that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will not follow the rule of the committee?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think so; but the rule to which the Senator refers is a rule of the Committee on Appro-

Mr. BYRNES. If legislation is in the bill, only in the Appropriations Committee is there a rule, which may or may not be followed; but I believe in being practical about the matter. Regardless of what action is taken on the matter, I think it should be done upon a bill which will go to the House with some hope of being enacted into law, which would make it impossible for the Administrator to reduce the security wage in any of the regions.

Mr. President, I think that is all. SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] to strike out subdivision (a), as modified, of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRANI.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to make a very brief statement. I do not wish to prevent a vote or delay the matter. I am not only for the prevailing wage; but I have voted constantly and uniformly for it. I voted for it as late as the occasion when the recent relief appropriation bill was under consideration. I would vote for the prevailing wage as an independent bill. I would vote for it as an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill, because I have believed in it, and I now believe in it. However, if it is added to this bill, and the bill shall fail-which might happen—then we should have no prevailing wage, and we should have no bill. Both might go down together.

In view of that situation I do not feel that I am at liberty to jeopardize the passage of one of the most important pieces of legislation which has come before this Congress by voting to add this particular amendment to the bill at this time. I say that in all sincerity. I do not say it in order to delay consideration of the principle involved in the amendment. I do not say it to evade my responsibility. I say it not only hoping, but expecting to have an opportunity to vote on the question on another occasion, within a very few days, because the bill to which reference has been made must come before us. It is now practically ready for consideration in the House of Representatives, and will be brought before us and passed on before the Congress adjourns, which I hope will be some time next week. So we should lose nothing so far as time is concerned, and I think we should gain much in the practical effort to deal with the question at a time when the amendment would not run the risk of defeating itself and at the same time defeating other legislation along with it. For that reason I cannot vote for the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada; and I feel that under the circumstances the Senate would be taking a great risk in adopting it at this time.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I desire to say the last word-and I hope it will be the last word-because I have no desire to delay the consideration of the bill.

I would rather have had criticism of my amendment come from the friends of the prevailing wage. When I say that I do not wish to be understood as at all critical of the able Senators who have voted against this amendment time and again. I wish I could have had their support in times past. However, every time the prevailing wage has been brought forward before this body, I have been confronted with the same excuses, "Do not put it on this bill; do not put it on that bill; defer it; it is legislation which should not go on an appropriation bill."

I recall the first time that we offered the prevailing wage amendment. My recollection is that the relief bill which was then pending, appropriating $4,800,000,000 or thereabouts, was deferred several weeks. I do not now recall the number of weeks. It was deferred to the extent that it was sent back to the Appropriations Committee. Some of us did not realize that when it went back to the Appropriations Committee it went back to be shorn of all amendments which had been adopted by the Senate, of which the prevailing wage amendment was one.

In 1935 the able Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] did not support the prevailing wage amendment. Neither did the able Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] support it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, my recollection is that I was absent from the city on that vote and did not vote, although my memory may be faulty. I know I was absent on one vote.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator is correct as to one vote. On the next vote he voted against it. I have before me a copy of the votes taken. Likewise, the able Senator from South Carolina did not support it.

Let us go into the conference report and see what it amounts to. The conference report set aside an amendment which I offered for the prevailing wage and which was adopted by the Senate. I shall not be critical of the action of the conferees who represented the Senate; but when I find that my good friend from South Carolina was one of the conferees, and, so far as I can learn, he did not support the amendment, I can only say that to the best of his ability he tried to maintain the action of the Senate, but no more. That is regrettable.

We now have a bill which is all important. It is a bill which carries with it a great and wide expanse of influence and consideration. Why should not the prevailing-wage amendment go on this bill? The able Senator from Indiana indicates that it might go on the third deficiency bill. Based upon my experience, which is also the experience of the able Senator from Indiana, he would have to go through the labyrinth of having the rule set aside.

The rule is that if legislation is attached to an appropriation bill it is the duty of the chairman of the committee to raise the question; and notice must be given to set aside a rule of this body.

We have no rule to set aside in the present case. We have only justice and fair play. I shall take the attitude of the able Senator from South Carolina, who says that he has been for the prevailing wage; and I shall take the attitude of the able Senator from Kentucky, who says he is for it. Let us vote it into the bill now, so that the country and the Relief Administration may know the attitude of this branch of Congress at least.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I should like to ask a question of the Senator, because I think in justice to him and to some of the others of us it ought to be made very clear what it was intended to attach to the deficiency bill. I did not understand that it was stated that the prevailing-wage amendment would be attached to that bill, or even attempted to be attached to the bill; but simply a provision that the section of the bill which refers to the average wage of labor should not result in a decrease in the wages paid by the W. P. A. Administrator. I do not want those who are interested in the prevailing wage to misunderstand. So far as I know, there has been no promise that any effort will be made to attach to the deficiency bill a so-called prevailingwage amendment. We must either obtain it in this bill or not at all.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to strike out subdivision (a), as modified, of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada IMr. McCarran].

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs on the amendment of the Senator from Nevada, as modified.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], as modified.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask for a division. The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division is requested.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I again demand the yeas

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers]. I vote "nay."

Mr. MEAD (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. KING1. If the Senator from Utah were present he would vote "nay," and if I were at liberty to vote I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] is necessarily temporarily absent. If present, he would vote "nay."

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON].

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I understand that if the Senator from Virginia were present he would vote "nay." I have been unable to obtain a transfer, so I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison], the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] is detained because of illness.

Mr. ELLENDER. My colleague, the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], is unavoidably detained. I am advised that if present and voting he would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 40, as follows:

So Mr. McCarran's amendment was rejected.

Mr. VANDENBERG subsequently said: Mr. President, I was unavoidably detained from the Senate when the discussion on the prevailing-wage amendment rather unexpectedly terminated. I do not wish to renew it; but I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to have printed in the RECORD a brief statement at the point where the discussion took

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR VANDENBERG

This vote presents a perplexity because of its conflicting con-

I have always supported prevailing-wage amendments because I do not believe that the Federal Government should engage at substandard wages in works that are inevitably competitive with labor in the private-construction industry. This problem is inherent in any relief system which puts the Government into general construction. It is one of the reasons why I have believed for years that there ought to be a different and decentralized relief system free of this complication. We cannot afford to go on with relief distributions which, on the one hand, fail to provide equitably and adequately for all citizens entitled to relief, and which, on the other hand, carry us ever farther into the danger zones of deficit red ink. But that question involves the original and basic choice of a relief system. Since we are bound for another year to the centralized work-relief system, which includes competitive public construction, I see no consistent way to avoid prevailing wage requirements. The change, in other words, must be in the fundamental system and not in the formula for the operation of the existing system. The cure is not in raiding the prevailing wage but in constructively and courageously providing a different general system of relief. I have often offered just such a substitute and I have always been voted down. Until such a substitute is provided, I must continue to support the prevailing wage.

The other conflicting considerations involve, on the one hand, the merits of the prevailing-wage idea, and on the other hand the desperately unfortunate and ill-starred fact that strikes against the Government have been invoked by way of protest against the recent repeal of the prevailing wage. I would not surrender to a strike against the Government anywhere or any time, and I challenge the labor wisdom of any labor advice to the contrary. A continuation of such revolts would render correction of even legitimate complaints impossible. I resent these and other violences—including insufferable violence of speech—and I should welcome a way to conclusively rebuke them without at the same time doing violence myself to the principle involved in this issue and to those who would innocently suffer from our outraged reprisals. But these strikes are now substantially repudiated; and, in the presence of facts as they are, I doubt whether I am entitled to penalize all labor and its essential reliance upon the principle of the prevailing wage because of the offensive acts of a minority. Therefore I resolve this problem in favor of the upon this issue.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move to lay that motion on the table. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from South Carolina.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 188) to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE COURTS-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HATCH submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 188) to provide for the administration of the United States courts, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

On page 2 of the engrossed House amendment, in line 17, after the word "supervision" insert "and direction".
On page 4, in line 23, after the word "Budget" insert the following sentence: "All estimates so submitted shall be included in the Budget without revision (but subject to the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget thereon), in the same manner as is provided for the estimates of the Supreme Court by section 201 of said Act."

On page 7, in line 8, strike the word "constitute" and insert in lieu thereof the words "be deemed to be".

On page 7, in line 14, insert quotation marks at the end of the line following the words "for such circuit".

On page 7, in line 15, strike "Sec. 309" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 2".

On page 8, in line 8, strike "Sec. 2" and insert in lieu thereof sec. 3". On page 8, in line 21, strike "Sec. 3" and insert in lieu thereof Sec. 4".

The report was agreed to.

PROGRAM FOR FINANCING RECOVERABLE EXPENDITURES The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2864) to provide for the financing of a program of recoverable expenditures, and for other purposes

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I have an amendment lying on the table which I now offer and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Montana will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert a new section, to read as follows:

SEC. Subsection (b) of section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(b) Employable persons who have been certified as in need of employment for a period of 3 months or more shall have preference in employment over persons who have had active employment status on such works projects continuously for 18 months or more: Provided, That this shall not result in the discharge of a person employed on works projects where he has made a reasonable effort to find suitable private employment, nor where project effort to find suitable private employment nor where project operations would suffer from his discharge nor where unusual hardship would result from such discharge."

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, this amendment is intended to modify the rigid provisions of section 16, subsection (b), of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939. The act as approved contains the following language, which is subsection (b):

There shall be removed from employment on Work Projects Administration projects all relief workers, excepting veterans, who have been continuously employed on such projects for more than 18 months, and any relief worker so removed shall be ineligible to be restored to employment on such projects until after (a) the expiration of 30 days after the date of his removal, and (b) recertification of the state of the tification of his eligibility for restoration to employment on such projects. In the case of relief workers whose period of 18 months of continuous employment expires before September 1, 1939, this section shall apply to require their removal not later than August 31, 1939, rather than on such expiration date.

Under the language of that subdivision of section 16 it is estimated by Colonel Harrington, the Administrator of the Work Projects Administration, that this means the arbitrary dismissal, regardless of merit or need, of 650,000 workers, or 31 percent of the entire W. P. A. rolls. In addition to that, we at the same time have the further reduction of W. P. A. rolls which results from the provisions of the act making it necessary to reduce the W. P. A. rolls by next spring to 1,500,000 workers, as compared with the 3,000,000 average maintained during the past year.

All of this is being done absolutely without any study as to the needs of these people; without any study of the economic effects which this ruthless action will have on business; without the slightest study of the employment trends of the country; and, consequently, without the slightest knowledge of the dangerous consequences which may ensue, slowing down the splendid progress the country has recently been making toward recovery.

Some pretense of an argument might be advanced to justify the reduction of the W. P. A. rolls from an average of 3,000,000 during the past year to a million and a half by next spring on the basis of the mounting national debt, but not the slightest argument or reason can be advanced for the inhuman punishment sought to be inflicted upon innocent

W. P. A. workers by causing them to be arbitrarily removed from the rolls without any study of their needs or other con-The only philosophy back of this arbitrary provision is to punish these men and to justify the slander which has been made against them that they will not take jobs in private industry.

As a matter of fact, it has been demonstrated time and again that there are no jobs in private industry for these men to take; and the only reason why they are remaining on the rolls of the W. P. A. is because it is impossible for them to find employment in private industry.

As I have pointed out, no study whatever was made by Congress in enacting this legislation in regard to employment trends. The truth of the matter is that the continued development of new machinery and methods of labor saving are annually continuing to decrease the number of jobs in manufacturing industries. Testimony which was submitted to the Senate Committee on Unemployment and Relief a year ago dwelt on this situation and showed absolutely that unemployment and relief have come to be a condition that this country must face for many, many years to come.

Not only was no study made to justify this arbitrary dismissal of W. P. A. workers, but no thought whatever was given to the economic results which are sure to follow. This policy of firing W. P. A. workers without rhyme or reason has created a tremendous resentment across the country. It has had the effect of frightening millions of people into not spending money. Strikes and disorders have developed and confusion and uncertainty has been created. All this means that we are going to see a drop in business.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield to the Senator from Washington. Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Would it not be possible, under the amendment which the Senator proposes, in those cases where there is an actual finding that people are staying on W. P. A. when they could find employment in private industry, for the Administrator to separate them from the W. P. A.?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, it is a requirement of the present law that if any worker on W. P. A. can secure employment in private industry at the same or similar work he is required to accept it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. That is the point I am trying to make, that even with the amendment of the Senator from Montana it would not be possible for those who can find private employment to remain upon W. P. A.

Mr. WAGNER. No; it would not.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I have submitted the proposed amendment to Colonel Harrington, and I have received from him a letter in which he discussed not only this amendment but the amendment which has been before the Senate this afternoon, presented by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran]. In his letter to me discussing the amendment which I have presented, Colonel Harrington states:

> FEDERAL WORKS AGENCY. WORK PROJECTS ADMINISTRATION, Washington, D. C., July 26, 1939.

The Honorable James E. Murray, United States Senate.

My Dear Senator Murray: The following is in reply to your letter of July 24, 1939, requesting my views concerning S. 2765 to amend section 15 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, which was introduced by you jointly with 21 other Senators. You also asked for my comments upon a proposed amendment to section 18 (b) of the same act. 16 (b) of the same act.

So far as the effect of S. 2765 upon section 15 (a) is concerned, it would require that all monthly security wages be maintained at not less than those which were being paid on June 30, 1939, and that no differentials in such wages for workers engaged in similar work in differentials in such wages for workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area should be permitted.

Under the provisions of the present law, which go into effect on September 1, 1939, it will be necessary to reduce the monthly wages in certain sections of the country. My opinion on this matter is expressed on pages 21 and 22 of my hearings on May 23, 1939, before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives which was considering the appropriation for work relief, and which I quote, in part, as follows:

"Regarding differentials in W. P. A. wage scales, I would like to point out that differentials in wages are recognized by employers, employees, and organized labor. As to whether the differentials now existing in the schedules of monthly earnings are justifiable or whether the differentials could be limited to a specified maximum is a question that should be based on varying of local conditions.

"In considering this matter I would like to emphasize the importance of fixing monthly earnings which bear a relatively close relationship to actual local conditions where the workers reside. It is my belief that the present monthly earnings do not exceed minimum subsistence standards and any general revision downward in the schedule of earnings as now established would make it impossible for workers to obtain for themselves and their families the necessi-

"It is my judgment, based on recent studies, that the present schedule of monthly earnings may contain too many levels of earn-ings, and it is my intention to take administrative action necessary to correct this condition."

The amendment which you propose would effectively prevent wage reductions, but the provision prohibiting wage differentials within the same wage area raises certain other problems. The wage structhe same wage area raises certain other problems. The wage structure of the country is an exceedingly complicated one, and, in my opinion, differentials in Work Projects Administration wages should be provided based on actual differences in costs and conditions of living and in wages in private industry. The application of S. 2765 would require that the wages of all workers in each of the four wage classes, namely, unskilled, intermediate, skilled, and professional and technical, should be raised to the highest wage paid within the wage region for each of the wage classes.

The fixing of a schedule of monthly earnings on the basis of the proposed amendment would mean that no consideration would be given to actual differentials in living costs, living conditions, customs, and wages paid in private industry which actually exist between areas within a State as well as between States.

As an example, the lowest unskilled monthly wage of $40 which is now being paid in any of the States in wage region No. 1, which comprises the Eastern, Northern, Western, and Middle Western States, would be increased to $60.50 per month, which is the highest monthly wage which was being paid to unskilled labor in this region on June 30, 1939. Similarly, in wage region No. 3, comprising the Southern States, the lowest unskilled wage of $26 would be increased to $40, which is the highest unskilled wage paid in that region.

It is not known to what extent these increases in the monthly

It is not known to what extent these increases in the monthly wages would affect the average monthly labor cost. I am sure, however, that they would produce a substantial increase, and such an increase would decrease the number of persons who could be employed with the funds appropriated to this Administration by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939.

If general legislation is adopted limiting wage differentials in private industry, or even within all agencies of the Federal Govern-ment, the Work Projects Administration should obviously conform to such legislation, but I do not believe that it should be singled out in this respect.

The amendment of section 15 (b) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, which is proposed by S. 2765, would in effect restore prevailing hourly rates on the projects of this Administration. My views on this subject are also contained in my testimony on the Work Relief appropriation, and appear on pages 19 and 20 of that testimony as printed. From this I quote in part as follows:

"A great deal of consideration and study has been given to the advisability of the abandonment of the prevailing hourly rate of pay and the adoption of the principles of a monthly wage with a standard number of hours of work required each month. In addition, the Works Progress Administration has experienced the advantages and disadvantages of operating a works program the basis of monthly wages with standard, uniform hours of work for all workers and also of operating a works program on the basis of prevailing hourly rates of pay with hours of work varying according to classes of work.

"The advantages of operating a works program and employing workers on a monthly basis can be readily appreciated in view of the varying hours of work required for the different skills. In addition to making possible a more efficient and effective opera-tion, employment on a monthly wage basis requiring 130 hours of work each month from all workers would eliminate, to a large extent, the criticism that has been made of this administration that many workers particularly in the skilled occupations, are supplementing their W. P. A. wages by securing outside employment at substandard wages

"Moreover, it is believed that the principles of the monthly wage requiring 130 hours a month will be an important factor in determining need, since workers who are able to secure partime employment and who have any other means of livelihood would not, in general, accept employment on a works program requiring 130 hours of work per month at a subsistence wage except as a final resort. except as a final resort.

"It is my recommendation that persons employed on projects of the W. P. A. be required to work 130 hours per month and that the earnings of such persons be on a monthly basis with the requirement that substantially the present national average labor cost be maintained. Allowances should be made for differentials in these earnings according to existing differentials in cost, continue to the continue of the cost of the cos ditions of living, and the average earnings in private industry."

There are two other points in conection with S. 2765 which I would like to bring to your attention. The first is that the prowould like to bring to your attention. The first is that the proposed amendment to subsection (b) makes no provision for exemptions from the schedule of monthly earnings where such exemptions are necessary to protect work already done on a project; to permit making up lost time; in case of an emergency involving the public welfare; and in case of supervisory personnel employed on work projects. The omission of these exemptions, which are authorized under the existing law, would make it a rigid requirement that all persons employed on work projects be paid in accordance with the established schedule of monthly earnings which obviously would seriously handien the operation of ings, which obviously would seriously handicap the operation of a work program.

The second point is that S. 2765 provides that determinations as to wage scales shall be made by the Federal Works Administrator, whereas the present law places this responsibility on the Commissioner of Work Projects. I do not know whether it was your intention to make this change, or whether it was due to inadvertence, but I thought that your attention should be called to it. Due to pressure of time I have not consulted the Federal Works Admin-pressure of time I have not consulted the Federal Works Administrator in this respect, and do not know his views in the matter. The amendment which you propose to section 16 (b) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 would modify that section, which now requires the mandatory dismissal of workers who have been continuously employed on the W. P. A. for a period of 18 months or more. Under the present wording of the act, all certified workers, except veterans, who have been employed continuously for 12 months or more must be dismissed by August 21. tinuously for 18 months or more must be dismissed by August 31, 1939. This means that by that date the employment of approximately 650,000 persons must be terminated, which will impose severe hardships on many individuals and adversely affect the efficiency of project operations. Although the law provides that workers dismissed under this provision may be reinstated after a 30-day period if they have been recertified, it will be very difficult to accomplish such reinstatement without very considerable delays, especially as the total employment will be diminishing during this

I believe that it is desirable to give preference in employment to ersons who have been certified and awaiting assignment to Work Projects Administration jobs for some time over those who have been employed continuously for long periods. My testimony to this effect appears on pages 22 and 23 and 28 to 30 of the hearings on this appropriation before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives. Specifically, I suggested that employable persons who had been certified as in peed for a period of 6 months or more and had not been given any need for a period of 6 months or more and had not been given emneed for a period of 6 months or more and had not been given employment should have preference in employment over persons who had been on the W. P. A. for a period of 3 years or more. In this connection I made the following statement:

"There has been discussed here in the committee and in debate there has been discussed here in the committee and in decade the question of W. P. A. career workers, as they are called, the idea being that the benefits of W. P. A. employment might be rotated. But at the outset, I think the approach to it should be a very careful one, the suggestion I make is only the first step in what might eventually evolve out of this thing, and that is, a preference provision as to employment."

I believe that the amendment which you propose accomplishes the primary purpose of giving preference in employment to persons who are awaiting assignment over those who have been employed continuously for a long period, and at the same time allows sufficient administrative discretion so that the application of the policy would not result in the disruption of the program and the individual hardships which will come about under the present law.

Sincerely yours,

F. C. HARRINGTON, Commissioner.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. May I inquire whether Colonel Harrington, the Administrator of the fund, favors the amendment which the Senator has offered?

Mr. MURRAY. Absolutely he favors it.
Mr. WAGNER. Will the Senator permit me at this stage to read a letter which I have just received from Mayor La-Guardia in reference to the Senator's amendment?

Mr. MURRAY. Certainly. Mr. WAGNER. The mayor states:

DEAR SENATOR: A delegation of frantic mothers just called on me, explaining the embarrassment caused to one of the most worth-while projects—nursery schools—through the 18 months' rule. This is typical of what is taking place throughout W. P. A. projects. As I stated to the committee and as the mayors have stated in their memorial to Congress, if a person needed work relief for 18 months, it is no solution to the problem to drop them for that reason them for that reason.

May I urge you to continue your efforts to have this vicious provision of the recent act amended at the earliest possible

He encloses a petition signed by the mothers who called upon him and many others urging the adoption of the amendment which the Senator from Montana has offered. and which I hope will be agreed to.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, absolutely no justification can be advanced for the language which is incorporated in the bill. The only purpose I can see to justify it is a desire to carry out the slander against the workers on W. P. A., to the effect that they will not accept employment in private industry, and that they are seeking to make a career of their jobs on W. P. A. As a matter of fact, there are no jobs available in private industry. More than 750,000, or nearly a million, men and women are now on the certified lists of those eligible for employment on W. P. A. It is reasonable to assume that if there were such jobs in private industry as are spoken of, these people who are on the certified lists. eligible for work on W. P. A., would gladly accept those positions. But, as a matter of fact, as I have stated before. there are no such jobs.

The unemployment conditions in this country are not improving in any satisfactory degree. As a matter of fact, we are constantly met with the introduction of machinery and new methods in the factories and manufacturing establishments of the country, a condition which is increasing unemployment rather than improving the situation. So that it seems to me most unwise to undertake at this time to throw these men off of the relief rolls, and make them hunt for jobs, which cannot be found, which do not exist. It is a punishment of these people which cannot be justified upon any basis.

I submit to the Senate that the only justification for it is a desire to carry out this campaign of misrepresentation against the W. P. A. The result of the whole thing is that newspapers all over the country are laughing up their sleeves at the embarrassment of the administration with this condition confronting it.

I have here an article from a Wall Street magazine, which discusses the situation in the following language:

When Congress hikes homeward in another week or so, it will leave hanging on its own doorstep, and, of course, on Roosevelt's, a succession of headaches sufficiently potent to turn the usually quiet intrasession period into a wild scramble for position, and insure that, come January, there will be a humdinger of a fight from the comping going from the opening gong.

This article goes on to discuss this very situation and purports to charge that-

In principle this suggestion came in the first place from within the W. P. A. organization.

That statement in the article is absolutely unfounded, absolutely without any justification, and intended to make it appear that someone connected with the Works Progress Administration authorized or supported the amendment which was put into the act as it was passed.

As a matter of fact, in the letter from Colonel Harrington he has clearly stated his position. His testimony appears in the hearings before the House committee and shows that he never had any idea of proposing or supporting any such provision. It is not only an injustice to the workers themselves, but it is a great injustice and embarrassment to the W. P. A., because it will result in great inefficiency in their operations if they are compelled to remove from the rolls 650,000 workers in one fell swoop. Anyone can understand what demoralization that will create in the program of the Work Projects Administration.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. As I understand, the amendment of the Senator from Montana is designed to prevent these people who have been working on the W. P. A. for as much as 18 months from being thrown off the rolls.

Mr. MURRAY. That is exactly what it is intended to accomplish.

Mr. PEPPER. I was going to call the attention of the Senator to section 17, paragraph (a), which reads as

SEC. 17. (a) No person in need who refuses a bona fide offer which pays the prevailing wage for such work in the community where he resides and who is capable of performing such work shall be employed or retained in employment on work projects under the funds appropriated in this joint resolution for the period such private employment would be available.

Is it not therefore a fact that with that language of the bill, without the 18 months' provision, there would not be any W. P. A. worker who would stay on the W. P. A. rolls who could honestly get a job in private employment under reasonable working standards?

Mr. MURRAY. That is clearly the fact. The Administrator has been undertaking to carry out that principle without any legislation whatever, and I have no doubt that he is succeeding.

Mr. PEPPER. So, even without this 18 months' provision in the law, the people would not remain on the W. P. A. who had a fair chance of going into private industry?

Mr. MURRAY. Absolutely not.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask the Senator whether it is not also a fact that the existing law has removed aliens from the W. P. A. rolls?

Mr. MURRAY. It has such a provision. Mr. PEPPER. And that the rolls have also been purged by a special investigation ordered by the Congress.

Mr. MURRAY. The Senator is absolutely correct. I thank the Senator for referring to these points.

Mr. PEPPER. And whether, in addition to that, some five or six hundred thousand W. P. A. workers who were certified by State agencies, who were on the W. P. A. rolls in January, have been cut off since that time?

Mr. MURRAY. That is absolutely the fact.

Mr. PEPPER. So that in addition to the fact that the W. P. A. worker was first examined by a State agency and certified as in need of a job by a competent State socialservice worker; then, in addition to that, was scrutinized by the W. P. A. staff itself, and since that time has been specially examined, and the ones found not to be needy have been taken off the rolls-

Mr. MURRAY. That is all very true.

Mr. PEPPER. And in spite of the fact that no aliens can be on the rolls, and in spite of the fact that no one can be on the roll who can get a job in private industry-in spite of all those facts, we are asked to take off more hundreds of thousands because they are needy, because they cannot get jobs elsewhere, just because they have been unfortunate enough to be on the rolls for 18 months.

Mr. MURRAY. The Senator has made a very accurate statement of the situation.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, would it not be accurate to say that they cut off everybody they could get an excuse to cut off, and now they want an arbitrary reason for cutting others off?

Mr. MURRAY. The Administrator of W. P. A. acknowledges all these points which are being presented, and his letter, which has been read already, shows that, from the studies he has given to the situation, it will mean that he will be compelled, under the language of the bill, to immediately let off 650,000 persons. There is absolutely no justification for this, and in view of the statement of Colonel Harrington, who is in charge of the Works Progress program, it seems to me that there should be no hesitation on the part of the Senate in supporting the amendment I have offered, especially in view of the fact that the amendment is substantially the same as the one that was adopted in the Senate when the appropriation bill was before us at the time the law was enacted.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. On that last point, is it not true that the amendment of the Senator from Montana is substantially the same as the amendment which was presented and proposed by the Senate Committee on Appropriations after hearings and study of this subject?

Mr. MURRAY. That is true.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. MURRAY. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. MALONEY. The Senator read from an article in a publication which he referred to as a Wall Street publication. I should like at this time to read briefly an article which was published in the last edition of Labor, the publication of the railroad brotherhoods. I quote:

MAYORS PREDICT COLLAPSE OF W. P. A.—RELIEF AGENCY CANNOT FUNC-TION WITHOUT MORE FUNDS, CONGRESS IS WARNED

Unless Congress appropriates additional relief funds and removes hampering restrictions on administration, the W. P. A. program

That is the judgment of men who are in best position to know the facts—the mayors of American cities.

Through their organization, the United States Conference of Mayors, they have issued this statement:

"What we are now seeking to impress upon Congress, with all the emphasis and seriousness in our power, is that if the law stands as recently enacted, problems lie just ahead which must be faced jointly by W. P. A., the cities, and the unemployed, which will be so serious that their full import is not yet even generally realized, even by Congress.

"The bill works definite hardship on more than 2,000,000 American citizens—about 8,000,000 if we count in their families—people who through no fault of their own are in dire need."

Mr. MURRAY. I thank the Senator for that contribution. Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield to the Senator from New York. Mr. MEAD. First of all I want to compliment the Senator on the excellent argument that he is making in support of the meritorious amendment. I wish to say to him that I am in agreement with the point that has been made by the Senator from Florida, supported by the Senator who has just relinquished the floor. But in addition to the argument that has been made in support of the amendment, and realizing the chaos which will result from its enforcement, it will result in a necessary constant check of the personnel in all the offices located throughout the United States, and as they approach the 18-month period it will be necessary to lay them off. This will result in a lack of efficiency of administration, added cost of administration, and it will disrupt some of the projects which are being conducted at a very high rate of efficiency, so that it will increase the cost, it will reduce the efficiency and it will result in malad-ministration. Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, the letter from Colonel Harrington corroborates the very statements that the Senator from New York has just made.

I wish also to call attention to some editorials on this subject. I have before me an editorial from the Philadelphia Record of July 18, which is as follows:

> [From the Philadelphia Record of July 18, 1939] TWO MORE BLOWS AT W. P. A.

The mischief that has been done to the W. P. A. system by hasty, ill-advised, last-minute legislation is only now beginning to be realized. Prevailing wages were cut out without sufficient study or discussion. We have seen the unfortunate results of that step.

Two other changes with shattering implication will shortly go into effect. They transcend the prevailing-wage issue in importance.

Deep wage cuts, not only in hourly rates but in actual total monthly compensation, are disguised in this innocent sentence of the new act: "After August 31, 1939, such monthly earning schedule shall not be varied for workers of the same type in different geographical areas to any greater extent than may be justified by differences in the cost of living."

That means W. P. A. workers in the South will have to be paid the same wages as those here in the East, except for the small difference in the cost of living—about 6 percent.

But unskilled W. P. A. workers in the South today receive $26 per month. Unskilled labor in Philadelphia draws $60.50 per month. We have no objection to seeing wages in the South raised; they should be raised. But W. P. A. has only a limited appropriation—$1,477,000,000 as against $2,250,000,000 for last year. The new clause means, therefore, that wages will be equalized by raising the southern rate and reducing the northern rate.

It is reported that the southern rate may go up to about $45 a month, while the northern rate is dropped to $50 a month or pos-There will be corresponding cuts in the higher classifications for skilled labor.

classifications for skilled labor.

The least Congress could have done (it still has time to act before August 31) was to establish minimum standards below which W. P. A. wages could not go. Then equalize it, if it wanted to cut out sectional differences. The crude, unthinking method chosen is a piece of rank sectionalism, aimed like a loaded gun at the North, corresponding in spirit to the new clause limiting individual W. P. A. projects to $52,000 of total cost.

Preparations for the second change have already been started in this city. All W. P. A. workers of 18 months' standing, except World War veterans, will be fired. They may not be rehired for a month, and then only upon recertification from direct relief officials. Colonel Harrington estimates that this will call for 650,000 dismissals, or 31 percent of all W. P. A. workers. In New York City dismissals, or 31 percent of all W. P. A. workers. In New York City alone 75,000 will be fired.

If the same ratio holds here, it will mean 7,000 W. P. A. workers will be laid off in Philadelphia September 1. A survey is now being made here to determine how many will get their "403's" or dismissal notices.

dismissal notices.

In addition, the reduced appropriation makes mandatory a permanent reduction of W. P. A. by next spring to 1,500,000 workers, compared with the 3,000,000 recently employed.

All this without study of the need, without study of the economic benefits of W. P. A. to business, without study of the employment trend. It is legislation by blunderbuss. There has never been a clearer indication of the lack of a basic philosophy of relief in Congress; it patently does not know what it wants to accomplish.

It will be inexcusable for Congress to adjourn and let the disaster take place on September 1. There is time to reopen the question and to try to draw up a relief program that has some relation to the needs of the country and of the jobless, a relief program with a sense of direction.

I read another editorial of July 25, published in the same newspaper:

YOU CAN'T SELL MORE GOODS TO PEOPLE WITH LESS MONEY

"Sharp gains scored by business during June-July period."
"Relief rolls jump to 737,691 in State; 100,000 above 1938."
These two headlines from yesterday's news columns suggest a paradox. Actually, they are not.

Business gains do not show in business figures until long weeks after the purchasing power behind them has been distributed.

There is a lag.

Relief figures, on the other hand, are up to date. No lag there. They show the relief situation as of this week.

On the basis of the experience of the past few years, then, those relief figures mean that a month or so hence the business fearures will account the second of the past few years.

You can't sell more goods to people who have less money. If this were all of the relief picture it would be bad enough. Unfortunately, it isn't all.

The present policy of firing W. P. A. workers willy-nilly; the cruel device of enforced "vacations"; the reduction in W. P. A. expenditures; the cut in individual W. P. A. wages—

All these have the effect of frightening millions into not spending money.

And that means a drop in business.

W. P. A. workers, of course, can't save much. But every time a W. P. A. worker is laid off, or forced on "vacation," the terrifying uncertainty of his existence is driven home to his relatives, his neighbors, and his friends.

neighbors, and his friends.

Conservatively, it may be estimated that a W. P. A. cut affects 10,000,000 Americans besides the W. P. A. workers themselves. The jobs of those people are none too secure. Heretofore they have more or less thought of the W. P. A. as a last resort if their own jobs should vanish. Now they hold no hope in that direction. So they save every cent possible.

And if they save only 10 percent of their incomes, the loss in buying power will run at least $30,000,000 a week.

That this is not guesswork but reasoning based on fact is demonstrated by the Federal Reserve figures, which show that today the total savings of individuals in mutual savings banks is more than it was in 1929 and that savings in the form of life insurance have to was in 1929 and that savings in the form of life insurance have reached an all-time peak.

Millions are scared. And they are all customers.

This is not, of course, to decry saving. But there is a limit to the amount which can be saved out of the Nation's current income without undermining the husbness which pays the income without undermining the business which pays the income.

Business, by its very nature, is the exchange of labor for money and money for goods.
Would that Washington recognized these human elements in

The relief rolls, by their sharp rise, show only the first effects of the "vacations" and lay-offs.

The other effects—on business—will be slower in appearing.
But a loss of business follows a loss of purchasing power as the night follows the day.

That's not economics; it's experience.

Editorials and articles have appeared in newspapers all over the United States, and the inquiry is, "Has this action of Congress been justified?"

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield. Mr. PEPPER. I will ask the Senator if it is not the understanding or if he has not heard the estimate made that about 500,000 people every year are thrown out of employment in this country by reason of technological improvement, and if in addition to that there is not a net of about 600,000 people who come every year into the labor market, that is to say, become employable in excess of those who come out of the employable class? If a million people, roughly, each year are added to the employable class; that is, that have to get jobs in addition to those who already have jobs, by next June, beginning with the period of January 1, 1939, there will be approximately one and a half million people who will have to be taken care of and go into the employment market who were not there in January 1939? Would that not be the fact?

Mr. MURRAY. That is absolutely a true picture of the situation confronting the country.

Mr. PEPPER. In addition to that, if the law remains as it is, with the 18 months' provision in it, the 3,000,000 who were on W. P. A. rolls in January 1939 would all be off by the 1st of July 1940, would they not?

Mr. MURRAY. The Senator states the situation very clearly.

Mr. PEPPER. And the conclusion would be, therefore, that if the law remains as it is, and these economic factors are as the Senator indicates he thinks they are, that will mean, of necessity, that private enterprise in this country between the 1st of July 1939 and July 1, 1940, will have to take care of four and one-half million people in addition to the ones who are now employed. And I will ask the Senator if anyone in this Chamber thinks that private enterprise can absorb those four and one-half million people in addition to the ones who had jobs in January 1939?

Mr. MURRAY. The Senator's statement demonstrates the absurdity of the situation created and what would have to be done if the law remains as it is now. But, of course, no such thing can happen. I submit that on the statement of Colonel Harrington and upon the plain facts and the necessities of the situation, the amendment should be adopted. The act must be corrected in order to avoid a serious condition of affairs.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to make an inquiry?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. As the Senator knows, this matter has been before the Senate Committee on Appropriations. At that time Colonel Harrington submitted to us his draft of what he thought would be the proper provision. The Senator has that before him?

Mr. MURRAY. Yes. I have the bill as it passed the

Mr. ADAMS. That varies somewhat from the Senator's amendment. Would the Senator, who relies upon Colonel Harrington's statement, be willing to accept the amendment which Colonel Harrington then prepared, and which the committee approved, and which the Senate adopted?

Mr. MURRAY. I consulted Colonel Harrington in connection with this subject, and while it is true that, as the Senator has just stated, the language of my amendment is slightly different-it contains an additional clause-it has the approval of Colonel Harrington, and will enable him more efficiently and satisfactorily to handle the situation, and it seems to me there would be no justification in eliminating it merely because it was not in the form in which he presented it to the committee during the hearing.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am at a loss to understand exactly what the amendment is which is referred to by the able Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. I am referring to the amendment in reference to the 18 months' period.

Mr. McCARRAN. Do I understand the Senate adopted the same amendment?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. What amendment is that?

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator from Montana has it. He can read it to the Senator.

Mr. McCARRAN. That was adopted in the committee and brought into the Senate, was it not?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; and approved by the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is to the effect that one who has been in W. P. A. for 18 months shall be laid off for 30 days? Mr. ADAMS. No; that is not the point of the amendment.

Mr. MURRAY. No; the amendment that we adopted in the Senate eliminated the provisions that came over from the House, which undertook to lay persons off after they had been on W. P. A. for 18 months. Following is the language adopted in the Senate:

Employable persons who have been certified as in need of ema period of 3 months or more, and who have not in that period been given employment on works projects, shall have preference in employment over persons who have been in employment status on such work projects for a period of 18 months or more.

Mr. ADAMS. That does not discharge anyone from the W. P. A. It merely says that if a person has been in need of relief for more than 3 months, as between that person and one who has been on the relief rolls for 18 months, the one who has not had help should have a preference, but if there was no one crowding him, no one who was in greater need, no one who had been without relief for 3 months or more, then the one who had been on 18 months could stay. We criticized the House amendment because of its arbitrary removals, and we accepted Colonel Harrington's suggestion that there should be a preference given to those who needed immediate relief as against those who had had it continuously for 18 months.

Mr. McCARRAN. What will be done with the man who is let off, and who has, nevertheless, dependents who have been on the verge of starvation for 30 days? What relief does

Mr. ADAMS. Colonel Harrington suggested the preference. Here we have the same man who has not had any help for 3 months as compared with the one who has been getting help for 18 months.

Mr. MURRAY. The man who is let off after having been on for 18 months, goes on direct relief, and he takes direct relief until he can get back on again, or goes into private employment.

Mr. McCARRAN. What does he receive in the way of direct relief?

Mr. ADAMS. It depends a little on where he is. If he is in New York City, which was one of the inspirations for the legislation-in New York City 42.1 percent of the people on relief have been there 3 years or more. That was one of the things that led to the introduction of that type of an amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. What does the man who goes off for 30 days and must go onto direct relief, which is the dole, get by way of a dole?

Mr. ADAMS. He gets whatever the particular community distributes under this fund. In New York City he would get about $20.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. I should like to make a statement in view of the Senator's statement, although I dislike to make a different statement.

Mr. ADAMS. I am sure the Senator will make a correct

Mr. BYRNES. No. The mayor of New York City in one conversation with me about the time our Committee on Unemployment was considering this question, stated that they were exceedingly liberal; I think the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] would be in better position to state the situation than I am. As I remember, however, $50 was allowed on direct relief, according to Mayor LaGuardia, in cases where it was necessary for medicinal care and so forth. That is the highest amount that I know. The amount varies throughout the country.

Mr. McCARRAN. If a person could get $50, he had better stay on direct relief, because he can get that amount without working at all.

Mr. BYRNES. Of course, if he happens to be a skilled worker, he would get about $90 there.

Mr. WAGNER. Is it not a variable amount?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes. Mr. WAGNER. When medical care is needed for the family the higher figure to which the Senator refers is given.

Mr. BYRNES. I think the city of New York is the most liberal of all the cities in the country in the way of direct relief. Relief varies, but it goes down in amount in the smaller towns. The amount provided depends on the municipality.

Mr. WAGNER. Still it is far below what a family would actually need to live reasonably comfortably. Let me ask the Senator a question. Assuming that is true that in New York 42 percent of those on W. P. A. have stayed there for 3 years, does that furnish any proof that they could acquire some other employment?

They cannot acquire any other employment. I know as a matter of fact that the law is very strictly observed in New York City. The administrator is Colonel Sommervell, who is probably one of the ablest administrators in the country. If there is any private employment which has an opening for any of those on the roll, they must accept it; and we are gradually bringing those on relief into private employment. To punish a man because after 18 months he has not been able to obtain employment is something that I cannot appreciate.

Mr. ADAMS. It is not a question of punishing them. It is a question of taking care of those who are off relief and cannot get on.

Mr. WAGNER. We had better try to get them all on. That would be my way of doing it. However, the appropriations do not permit it.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I was very much interested in the question which the Senator from Nevada asked a moment ago. I do not believe the cost would average $10 a month, taking the whole United States. It would not be that much in my State, and I wonder if Senators believe it would be much more than that on the average. I do not believe the cost of direct relief, dissociated from jobs, would average $10 a month per person anywhere in the United States.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The last part of the discussion came as a result of the discussion between the Senator from Montana [Mr. Murray] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] as to the difference between the amendment of the Senator from Montana and the amendment adopted by the Senate when the relief bill was before us. I should like to have that difference explained. My understanding is that in substance the Senator from Montana is offering the same amendment which the Senate once adopted.

Mr. MURRAY. Yes. In that connection I wish to say that my amendment accepts the formula which was adopted by the Senate, except that it adds this language:

This shall not result in the discharge of a person employed on works projects where he has made a reasonable effort to find suitable private employment or where project operations would suffer from his discharge or where unusual hardship would result from such discharge.

I discussed the matter with Colonel Harrington, and he approved of the additional language, which would be helpful in administering the act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. Murray].

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Andrews	Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Schwartz
Ashurst	Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Schwellenbach
Austin	Davis	La Follette	Sheppard
Bailey	Downey	Lodge	Slattery
Bankhead	Ellender	Lundeen	Smith
Barbour	Frazier	McCarran	Stewart
Barkley	George	McKellar	Taft
Bilbo	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gibson	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gillette	Miller	Tobey
Bridges	Green	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Guffey	Murray	Truman
Bulow	Gurney	Neely	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Nye	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Herring	Pepper	Wagner
Capper	Hill	Radcliffe	Walsh
Chavez	Holman	Reed	Wheeler
Clark, Idaho	Holt	Russell	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, during the time we have had the W. P. A. there has been criticism of it. It has been said that persons stay upon the W. P. A. too long; and very definite charges have been made that the W. P. A. has been made a career service by persons who do not want to take jobs in private employment. As a result, in January of this year Congress ordered an investigation by the W. P. A., and ordered the W. P. A. to take from its rolls those persons who had been on the W. P. A. rolls for such length of time and under such circumstances that that conclusion could be reached about them.

The W. P. A. made an investigation and a purge. Then when the last relief appropriation bill came to the Congress the House of Representatives included a section which automatically and arbitrarily provided that those who had been on the rolls for more than 18 months should be given a 30-day furlough, as it was called. It is all very well to refer to it as a 30-day furlough. One Senator remarked that people who had worked for a year and a half should have a month's vacation. However, that is not the way it has worked out or will work out. When a person gets off the W. P. A. roll and loses his position he loses all his status and must come back at the end of 30 days for recertification, which means that the 30 days is extended almost indefinitely and that for many months thereafter he does not get back.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wonder if the Senator from Washington thinks that the prospect of such a vacation without pay for W. P. A. workers is likely to inspire purchasing-power confidence in them?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I do not see how it could inspire anything but gloom in the mind of any W. P. A. worker.

Our own Committee on Appropriations, recognizing what the problem was and recognizing the situation presented by the House bill as it came over to this body, on its own initiative changed that rule, eliminated the House provision, and inserted its own amendment. I think the Senate unanimously adopted the amendment. However, when the measure went to conference, unfortunately just a few hours before the end of the fiscal year, in order to make it possible for a bill to be adopted prior to the end of the fiscal year, our conferees were compelled to give in to the House, and the House language stayed in the bill as it was adopted.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. Murray] has given us the figures as to the number of persons who will be arbitrarily taken from the W. P. A. rolls unless this rule is changed in some measure prior to the time of the conclusion of this session of Congress. In my opinion, this is the only measure on which we can practically hope to obtain such an amendment of the present act as to bring it in accord with the unanimous opinion of the Senate at the time the Senate passed upon the bill, so as to relieve the possibility of the distress which would be caused.

I do not know of anything more cruel that has been done in the whole administration of relief than laying down this arbitrary rule. The amendment which the Senate adopted upon the recommendation of the Appropriations Committee and the amendment of the Senator from Montana do not give to anybody the right to a career service in the P. W. A. They recognize that those who stay on W. P. A. more than 18 months, and who could secure work in private employment, should be separated from the W. P. A. rolls; but that there should be some fairness and some measure of justice in the administration of the act.

As the law now stands there cannot be fairness and there cannot be any measure of justice. Those members of the legislative body of the National Government who are so very much interested in the problem of the danger to our form of government should consider this particular matter as being of extreme importance. If hundreds of thousands of people are to be unjustly and unfairly deprived of an opportunity to work on W. P. A., then I believe it can be conservatively said that the next few months will see very serious times in the United States.

That statement is not in the nature of a threat. It is in the nature of a recognition of the practical circumstances which will exist. If the Government is to be in the business of furnishing employment, it must furnish such employment upon the basis of fairness; and it cannot be fair so long as it has an arbitrary rule.

Under the present law there is no discretion. No judgment is allowed to the Administration. The rule is arbitrary. After 18 months elapse the Administrator must arbitrarily throw a certain number off relief; and at the end of 30 days they start their quest in an effort to get back on.

The pending amendment is simply a reaffirmation by the Senate of what its Appropriations Committee thought was right and what the Senate thought was right; and is simply an effort to have some justice and fairness in deciding upon who should remain on the rolls after they have been there for a period of 18 months.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. Murray].

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The Chair was about to order the clerk to call the roll.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley], which has been transferred to the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers]. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. AUSTIN (when Mr. Norris' name was called). I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] is necessarily temporarily absent from the Senate and that, if present, he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], who, if present, would vote as I have voted, and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the general pair of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass].

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] is absent because

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee] is paired with the Senator from Utah [Mr. King]. I am advised that if present and voting the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "yea," and the Senator from Utah would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 43, nays 32, as follows:

So Mr. Murray's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I know the temper of the Senate at this time; the Senate is weary of long speeches. If I were disposed to be guilty of such an impropriety I would not at this time attempt to make an extended address under the circumstances. The importance of the amendment for which I shall ask consideration will not be judged by the length of the address I may make.

Mr. President, no speech that I could make could more clearly explain the amendment than the amendment will explain itself. At the risk of tiring the Senate, I shall ask that the clerk read the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert a new section, as follows:

Sec. 21. There is hereby established a Commission to be known as the Mines Finance Commission, composed of three Commissioners to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Every Commissioner appointed under this section shall have the following qualifications: He shall be a citizen of the United States; shall have been an actual bona fide resident of the State from which he is appointed for at least 3 years next preceding his appointment; he must have been engaged in active mining for at least 5 years next preceding his appointment; he must have had at least 5 years next preceding his appointment; he must have had at least 3 years' active underground mining experience; his mining experience must have been in metal mines in the United States; he must be a resident of one of the metal-mining States and familiar with the needs of prospectors and small-mine owners and operators. No Commissioner shall be interested in any manner with any individual, partnership, corporation, or mining enterprise applying for a loan from the Commission, or interested directly or indirectly in any business connected with any mining loan by the Commission. Every Commissioner shall devote his entire time to his duties as prescribed in this section.

The Commissioners shall each receive an annual salary of $7,500, payable in monthly installments by the Treasurer of the United States. Such salaries shall be paid from the Mines Finance Commission fund, plus necessary travel expense.

The first Commissioner appointed shall serve 1 year, the second 2 years, and the third 3 years. Thereafter all Commissioners shall serve 3 years

The principal office of the Commission shall be located in one of the metal-mining States where there are public mineral lands sub-ject to location under the mining laws of the United States.

The Commission shall have power to employ and discharge such clerical and technical assistance as it may deem necessary and fix their compensation. All employees of the Commission shall be citizens of the United States

The Commission is authorized and empowered to make one or

The Commission is authorized and empowered to make one or more loans to metal-mine owners or operators in sums not to exceed $5,000 to any one borrower, and to arrange the terms of such loans in accordance with the provisions of this section.

All loans shall be made with the reservation that if, at any time before the full amount of the loan is expended, the Commission determines that further expenditure of money would be fruitless the unexpended portion may be withheld.

determines that further expenditure of money would be fruitless the unexpended portion may be withheld.

Loans shall be made only to citizens of the United States, or to associations or corporations, a majority of whose stock is owned by citizens of the United States. All loans shall bear interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum, payable semiannually.

The Commission shall take as security for loans a first lien on all ore in the property on which the loan is expended, payable in royalies of 15 percent of the net smelter, mill or mint returns therefrom. Loans may be granted to parties operating under a lease or other contract, provided the owner of the property consents to the creation of such lien, and to the rules of the Commission.

The loans herein provided for shall be made to facilitate the development of commercial and strategic metallic minerals.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the use and purposes of this section the sum of $150,000,000. To supply said fund the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to issue silver certificates and deliver the same into a fund to be known as the mines finance fund and kept by the Treasurer of the United as the mines finance fund and kept by the Treasurer of the United States. Said issue of silver certificates shall be charged against the issue heretofore authorized against silver purchases under the Silver Purchase Act. Said fund shall be subject to withdrawal by the Commission.

The Commission shall make a report to the Secretary of the Treasury as of June 30 and December 31 of each year showing the entire status of the funds handled by the Commission, together with a detailed report of the condition of each loan made.

The Mines Finance Commission shall exist for 10 years from and after its creation. The Commission shall so conduct its affairs that all transactions can be closed within the terms of the contractions.

that all transactions can be closed within the terms of its existence. The term of office of all Commissioners shall expire with the life of the Commission, regardless of the time of appointment.

The Commission may make use of any State agency created for the purpose of encouraging the development of mineral resources, the purpose of encouraging the development of mineral resources, and to pay such State agency such sums as the Commission shall deem reasonable for such service rendered in effectuating the purposes of this section, performed for the Commission upon its prior request. The Commission shall, wherever feasible, utilize such State agencies for the carrying out of the purposes of this section.

The functions of the Commission shall not in any manner encroach upon the functions of Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the purpose of this section being to prepare meritorious prospects for class B and class A mining loans under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act. When a property is qualified for a loan by Reconstruction Finance Corporation by reason of a loan granted under this section, the Commission may arrange with Reconstruction Finance Corporation to absorb the loan granted under this section either on the basis of assumption and payment of such loan by Reconstruction Finance Corporation or by pro rata participation by Reconstruction Finance Corporation or by pro rata participation by the Commission in the returns from such Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan.

The Commission shall have power to adopt rules and regulations for the administration of this section, and to alter, amend, and repeal the same.

All limitations upon the kind of minerals for the development or extraction of which Reconstruction Finance Corporation is under extraction of which Reconstruction Finance Corporation is under the corp existing law authorized to loan money, and particularly as contained in section 14. Public Law No. 417, Seventy-third Congress, approved June 19, 1934, as amended, are hereby removed, and Reconstruction Finance Corporation is hereby authorized to grant mine loans to all classes of mineral properties as the Commission is herein authorized.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I repeat that the amendment itself carries a stronger argument than I could make, but I wish in a few sentences to strip it of its legal verbiage and explain in my own language what it means.

The amendment extends and enlarges the power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation so that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may make loans to small mines and prospects. In the present situation the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may make loans only to facilitate the exploration and development of gold mines, silver mines, and tin mines.

In the long history of mankind the element of personal courage in warfare has frequently determined how the scales are tilted. In the battles of antiquity the warriors used weapons made of iron, copper, tin, zinc, wood, tough bull-hides, and now and then a spear point or an arrowhead of volcanic glass or other stone. But at the present time many metals are used in industry and in warfare. I cannot enumerate them all, but a few of them are aluminum, antimony, chromite, copper, iron, lead, manganese, mercury, nickel, tungsten, platinum, molybdenum, vanadium, and zinc.

My amendment would set up a mines finance commission to deal with loans and advances. Loans could be made to the owners or lessees of legitimate mines producing or likely to produce any of the metals in addition to those upon which loans may now be authorized; for, I repeat, only gold, silver, and tin are made the subjects of mining loans at this time.

Under the amendment no loan shall be made to any person or any association of persons upon any one mine for a larger sum than $5,000, and the security will be the ore and the smelter returns. At any time when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the commission proposed to be set up should be of the opinion that the loan should not be further extended they would have the power to stop further loans and foreclose on the ore already developed.

I am fortunate, and the auspices are quite favorable, in that probably one of the most, if not the most, experienced of all the Senators in prospecting happens to be the present distinguished Presiding Officer, the President pro tempore of the Senate, the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman]; but I know that all Senators, whether they are from the so-called mining States or not, know what a prospector is. The prospector is sui generis. There is none other like him. He dwells in the future; he has faith in the future. He is willing that a couple of burros be his companions. By the way, I wish I had the time, as I have the inclination, to pay a tribute to the burro; he conquered the desert. The prospector goes with his burro, with a grubstake—the word "grubstake" is a definite, valid locution; it is known to the law.

His grubstake arises from the fact that some friend of the prospector, some merchant or other person advances to the prospector food, blankets, powder, and other equipment, with the understanding that whatever the prospector discovers in the way of metals, the man furnishing the grubstake shall be entitled to whatever proportion of the discovery the contract calls for, and such a contract is valid

Many able and thoughtful persons erroneously believe that a man may easily go out and, through some happy stroke, and without much effort, discover a rich mine. That is a castle in Spain. It might happen in the realm of fiction, but such experience is so rare in this practical world that no substantial dependence can be placed upon it. The development of a mine is like the development of a great river. The Mississippi River, for example, our greatest river, does not spring forth full panoplied like Minerva from the brow of Jove; it comes from a small alpine spring here, a slender stream there, some snow melting on yonder hills, slender stream joining stream, multiplied again and again, gathering in volume as it flows, until it becomes a mighty river, fed originally by a multitude of meandering streams.

So it is with a mine. The prospector goes forth with his grubstake; he finds what appears to him to be a good prospect—he is a practical man, skilled in geology in his rough way—he finds "float," he knows that the "float" did not move up hill against gravity, so he looks above the ground whence the float may have come. He stakes out his claim; he does discovery work, and, with faith in himself and his mighty arm and unerring eye directing the point of a miner's pick, he develops his prospect.

He may not have adequate means and his backers may not have adequate means with which practically to develop the prospect but if he can borrow $2,000, $3,000, or $5,000, he may develop his discovery. The probabilities are that it may be a distressing failure, but he is—I was going to say endowed, but I shall say he is endued with hope and zeal. He believes in his country, he believes in his luck and, with courage and strength, he strikes the adamant breast of the mountain and streams of metal gush forth—sometimes; not always.

Mr. President, the Government may not in the nature of things employ prospectors and direct prospectors. For the discovery of these metals so important to industry and to national defense we cannot depend upon the Government; we must depend upon the initiative, the boldness, the zeal and the courage of the prospector.

Therefore this amendment, if it should become a law, would give encouragement to the prospector. I hope Senators will not be frightened when I say that the sum authorized is $150,000,000. No one's cheek should blanch and no one should have a rush of blood to the head because of the mention of $150,000,000. If I should, forsooth, add another cipher thereto I do not think it would cause any great rush of blood to the head, so accustomed are we to large figures.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue silver certificates, mark you, to the amount of the $150,000,000, against the billion dollars worth of silver now stored. A billion or more dollars of silver is stored, I believe, near West Point. The gold is stored at Fort Knox, Ky., doing no one any good, but is withdrawn from the veins and channels of trade.

The amendment is not inflationary, it merely provides that against this billion dollars in silver the Secretary of the Treasury may issue silver certificates to the amount of $150,-000,000, which would create the fund upon which and out of which the prospectors might make applications for their loans.

Mr. President, I did not draw the amendment. I am not such master of accurate terminology in mines and metals as is evidenced by the amendment. The amendment was drawn by some very capable Arizonians who understand the use of such language. It was carefully scrutinized and introduced by the Representative in Congress from Arizona [Mr. Murdock], who is familiar with these matters. It has been offered in the House by Representative Scrugham, of Nevada, who is a practical mining man.

I am not an "inflationist." I do not wish to be known as one who would willfully waste any public funds, and I think all my colleagues feel the same way.

If I thought this amendment would be the medium or the instrumentality of wasting public funds I would not offer it; but I do not perceive what harm can come from issuing silver certificates to the amount of $150,000,000 against our buried silver and allow such certificates to circulate among the people.

Under the amendment no man, no set of men, could secure on any one property a loan of over $5,000; and I think, if the Presiding Officer were parliamentarily in a position where he could bear me out, he would say that many prospects may fairly be demonstrated by the expenditure of $5,000, although in the case of many mines some forty or fifty or a hundred thousand dollars is sometimes required to demonstrate the value of the mines.

Mr. President, it may be asked, why does not the Reconstruction Finance Corporation do this now? Because the Reconstruction Finance Corporation must adhere rigidly to the law.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as I understand, cannot make a mining loan on other than a gold, silver, or a tin mine.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has made some loans on mines. The figures I am about to give, Mr. President, may be inaccurate, but, so far as I am able to check them they have an approach to accuracy. There has been authorized by the R. F. C. to be loaned on gold, silver, and tin mines $13,934,500 and of that authorization the R. F. C., for reasons known best to themselves and probably because they err on the side of caution and conservatism, retain $7,421,000, leaving only $6,513,500 that the R. F. C. has loaned on mines.

I repeat, they have loaned $6,513,500 on mines.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I wonder whether the Senator has in mind the fact that one who applied for a loan from the R. F. C. and who could meet the requisites of the R. F. C. would in reality not need a loan at all?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. In other words, if he had that which the R. F. C. would require as the basis for a loan he would not even require a loan.

Mr. ASHURST. That is true.

Mr. McCARRAN. So the whole proposition is out of line.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield. Mr. ADAMS. I think the statement should be supplemented, because the R. F. C. can make two types of loans, class A and class B, one of them limited, I think, to smaller amounts, which are rather more of the speculative type. That is, there is not an unreasonable exactness with reference to smaller loans.

Mr. ASHURST. That is the class B loan.

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. That is quite true, and I am glad to have the able Senator from Colorado and the able Senator from Nevada question me, because they know more about mines and mining than I do.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I may say, in view of the fact that the able Senator from Arizona was born in the greatest mining State of all the world, and then, through no volition of his own, went into the State of Arizona, that he has by reason of his contact with both States, he being a native of my State and a resident of another State, a very intimate knowledge of the whole subject of mining. He is most apologetic. He need not be, because he knows more about mining than any of the others of us do. But I conclude with a question. With regard to the two classes of loans referred to by the able Senator from Colorado, neither of those classes has been given its proper status by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, because the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is composed of those who have no particular faith in a mining venture, and every mine is a venture.

Mr. ADAMS. Is not the great State of Nevada represented on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am not certain about that.

Mr. ADAMS. Is not former Senator Henderson on it?

Mr. McCARRAN. I think he was nominated from the State of California. Am I right about that?

Mr. ADAMS. I thought he was from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I think he was nominated from the State of California. Then I think the Senator from California refused to accept him as a resident of the State of California, and so he is on the Board as a representative of the State of Nevada. Whichever State he represents, the result follows that neither the State of Nevada nor the State of California have received any benefits by reason of his presence on the Board. What I mean by benefits is that we have received no consideration-

Mr. ASHURST. No special consideration. Mr. McCARRAN. For small mine ventures.

Mr. ASHURST. I wish to be understood as not quarreling with the R. F. C. It is suggested now and then that they lose some money. It would be unthinkable that they should not. Only a man with an imagination fleet as the wings of Mercury could expect that the R. F. C. in all its enterprises and ramifications would lose no money. I marvel that they have lost so little.

Let me finish the presentation of the figures. There has been authorized for mining loans $6,513,500. There has been disbursed for mining loans $4,486,000. Of that there has been repaid $1,827,000. I may be wrong about that. But those are the figures I obtained yesterday.

So, Mr. President, I do not want the Government to engage in any wild speculation. A mining claim located in accordance with the law depends upon the prospectors' or the owners' further compliance with the law, if he have no patent. A great many excellent lawyers who have never had any experience in mines are unable to understand how a prospector and miner may hold against all persons and even against the United States a lode claim or a placer claim when he has no title other than his location, which is kept alive by assessment work each year. But that is the law. If he makes a discovery and if he keeps it alive, he can hold it. It may be mortgaged, sold, or made the basis of a stock flotation.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I once traveled with a Congressional party through Nevada, and I shall never forget the thrill which we experienced when we came to the little town of Winnemucca, the birthplace of the distinguished Senator from Arizona. Mr. President, now as always, I am swept along by the wonderful flow and current of his eloquence. His presentation is most pleasing, and, as always, his arguments are irresistible.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, we cannot hear what the Senator from Minnesota is saying.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, his statement is so complimentary that perhaps he feels it should be reserved entirely for the Senator's ears.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the statement was so complimentary that I wish the kind Senator from Minnesota had spoken louder so others might hear. [Laughter.]

Mr. LUNDEEN. I wish to say that it is wonderful to know that the eminent Senator remembers people from whom he sprung; that he remembers those pioneers, those noble men who crossed the prairies and the mountains and settled in the section where he was born. I am glad to know that in the day of his greatness here he has not forgotten those people. I am pleased and happy to be a neighbor of the Senator in the Senate Office Building. A more agreeable neighbor I have never known. His wit and unfailing good humor is unsurpassed. Kindly and generous, he is the personification of a courteous gentleman. Nevada and Arizona may well be proud of their Senator, who wears his toga with all the dignity of a Roman senator.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I have no words with which to reply to such splendid compliments except to say "I thank you."

I now yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I may add to that which has been said by the able Senator from Minnesota. In view of the fact that the Senator from Arizona sprang from those who lived in my State—and he is a native of my State—I join in every expression made by the Senator from Minnesota and in every expression that might be made by any Senator complimentary of the Senator from Arizona, whose official life in the Senate has extended over some quarter of a century.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, before the Senator makes reply I desire to include this remark. In conformity with the utterance and the spirit and the sentiment so well expressed by the able Senator from Minnesota and by the able Senator from Nevada, I wish to add my little appreciation of the Senator from Arizona, who is the living antithesis of that despicable character who Shakespeare portrayed as having climbed up the ladder of success, and to whom he referred in this wise:

> But 'tis a common proof, That lowliness is young ambition's ladder, Whereto the climber upward turns his face; But when he once attains the upmost round, He then unto the ladder turns his back, Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees By which he did ascend.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, knowing myself intimately as I do, I wonder how men could be so kind as to say these things of me. All I can say is that I am very humble and very grateful.

Mr. President, some Senators have suggested that I should distinguish between nonmetals in the mineral world and Then there are of course minerals that are not The minerals that I am sure are not metals are, among others, pyrites, china-clay, coal, fluorspar, graphite, nitrates, petroleum, coal, phosphates, potash, sulphur, and

These nonmetals would not be eligible for a loan under this amendment for reasons that I need not go into now. It is obvious to many Senators why they do not need to be brought under the provisions of the amendment.

Mr. President, I ask to include in the RECORD a report of the Committee on Mining Loans, Yavapai County Council, Arizona Small Mine Operators' Association.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report is as follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON MINING LOANS, YAVAPAI COUNTY COUNCIL, ARIZONA SMALL-MINE OPERATORS' ASSOCIATION

It is vitally necessary that a new plan be presented to the mining public to relieve the present unfortunate conditions in the small-

The reasons are here presented in the form of a resolution:
Whereas the entire mining sections of the United States, comprising 12 States and Alaska, produced in 1937 only 71,095,711 ounces of silver, which cost the Government a little more than 67 ounces of silver, which cost the Government a little more than 67 cents per ounce, authorized for coinage at $1.29 per ounce, or a total cost of $54,992,532, or a profit to the Treasury of 100 percent, all out of the pockets of the silver miners; and

Whereas a reduction to $0.6464 per ounce paid for silver in 1938 caused a reduction in production to 60,264,573 ounces, or a drop of roughly 70,000,000 to 60,000,000 ounces, with an attendant closing down of many mining properties, throwing out of employment thousands of miners and putting them and their dependents on relief. This is reflected not only in the increase of Federal, State, and local relief expenditures from $194,562,000 per month in 1937, to $247,671,000 per month in 1938, but by a considerable reduction in the number of lode mines in Arizona alone; and

Whereas the retention of the $0.7757 per ounce price of 1937, throughout 1938, if only by keeping former mines producing at the same rate as in 1937, would have cost our Government only $9,107,361 more for silver authorized to be minted at a profit of over 100 percent, and would have kept many thousands of miners and their dependents off the relief rolls, as shown in the previous over 100 percent, and would have kept many thousands of miners and their dependents off the relief rolls, as shown in the previous paragraph. This is readily seen from the fact that the fixed price of $0.7757 in 1937 increased the number of producing lode mines in Arizona alone from 847 in 1936 to 888 in 1937; and Whereas a large percentage of those miners thrown out of employment are the owners of, or are interested with others in prospects of sufficient surface and other showings to merit continued interest in their development; and prospects of sufficient surface and other showings to merit continued interest in their development; and

Whereas class B of the R. F. C. loans for development of mines has failed to operate beneficially by reason of many impossible requirements, some bad features being inherent in the law itself and some in the regulations, for example, one requirement being that applications must contain a detailed statement of the applicant's proposed plan of operation after the development program has been completed, with full information concerning the financing of such operations, when no one, with a mortgage on his mining property and developed ore could place a second mortgage to private capital for further operation unless a bonanza were struck rivate capital for further operation unless a bonanza were struck (such bonanzas being very rare even among our largest producers), or unless the R. F. C. would grant a class A loam—a remote contingency, evidenced by the fact that while $10,000,000 was placed as a limit for allocation to class B loans a mere $724,500 was placed in only 48 loans in the entire United States and its possessions. The R. F. C. found only 126 borrowers for either class of loan, and of the amounts loaned only one-third was actually disbursed; and

Whereas mining for the money metals is noncompetitive and when productive constantly adds to the volume of the medium of exchange in circulation; and Whereas miners are wholly consumers and in mining the money metals are noncompetitive with industry at large, being forced to buy freely of all industrial commodities, thus being a great aid in keeping the manufacturing establishments busy with attendant continued employment in many industrial centers; and

Whereas the extension of loans to other than gold, silver, and

Whereas the extension of loans to other than gold, silver, and tin will aid largely in the discovery and development of strategic minerals for the national defense, a matter which is at present concerning the Congress deeply: Now therefore

It is recommended that the following new plan be set up for encouraging the small miner not only to become a producer but an employer, thus not only eliminating him and his dependents from the relief rolls, but also those whom he will be required to employ, and their dependents; and to aid in the improvement of national economic conditions and the development of strategic minerals for the national defense.

minerals for the national defense.

This plan as outlined by your committee is hereafter set forth for the consideration of all interested and termed "Mines Finance" Commission, small metal-mine loans, class C."

INTRODUCTORY COMMENTS REGARDING THE PURPOSE FOR, FINANCING OF, AND LEGISLATION TO MAKE POSSIBLE THE HEREIN CONTEMPLATED LOANS

It is clear that the R. F. C. class B mine loans, which were designed to aid the owner of mining claims to develop his claims, has generally failed of the purpose for which it was intended. To support this claim it is only necessary to refer to the Seven-Year Report of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, issued February

Report of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, issued February 2, 1939, and read the short paragraph on page 13 dealing with mining loans. The R. F. C. states:

"One hundred and forty-four loans, in the amount of $12,655,500, have been authorized to 126 borrowers for mining, milling, and smelting ores, and development of ore bodies. Of this, $7,392,000 has been canceled and $4,179,700 disbursed; $1,531,252 has been repaid. Eighty-seven of these loans, aggregating $1,440,500, have been approved under the section of the act which authorizes loans up to $20,000 to one borrower for development; $716,000 of this has been withdrawn or canceled."

With this short comment in a 28-page booklet, the R. F. C. dis-

With this short comment in a 28-page booklet, the R. F. C. dismisses the subject of mining loans.

Now, it is quite clear that if so few borrowers have been found among the whole mining industry for loans which were supposed to have a popular and stimulating effect on mining, one (possibly both) of two things is wrong: Either there are no suitable mining properties remaining in the United States which merit the expenditure of development loans or the basic purpose of these loans was misconstrued when the enabling legislation and rules of the R. F. C. were formulated. The mining industry will by no means R. F. C. were formulated. The mining industry will by no means admit the former, for it is an obvious absurdity. We must, therefore, deal with the fact that the R. F. C. loans, at least the class B development loans, have not served the purpose for which they were development loans, have not served the purpose for which they were intended because of the way they are set up.

This committee feels that not only is it possible for a class of loan to be devised that will reach meritorious mining properties needing such loans but that it is possible to finance such loans from the miner's own money now in the Treasury of the United States, i. e., the unissued portion of silver certificates representing the Treasury's 100-percent profit.

In this way the silver profits, which at the present time benefit no one, will be used to aid the industry which produced them. The Treasury at present is authorized to issue this currency in the form of silver certificates. We feel that $150,000,000, a small proportion of the vast silver reserves, is not too much to ask for loans which will have a broad enough base to aid the whole mining business. So much for the source of the funds with which to finance these loans. finance these loans.

It is equally clear that the R. F. C. loans have failed of their purpose of helping the small mine owner because of the narrow restrictions placed upon the Corporation as a banking organization by the law itself. It is not commonly understood that the R. F. C. has no choice and that a modification of this provision is not merely a matter of changing corporate rules. The same thing, indeed, applies to the restriction of loans to gold, silver, and tin properties.

A new loaning body is definitely indicated, one which can take a part of the surplus silver money now existent and devote it to a part of the surplus silver money now existant and devote it to the needs of the small-mine operator without the inhibiting restrictions of the R. F. C. and this body we have attempted to set up. Specific legislation to this end has been drafted and is made a part of this report.

In drafting the new legislation for the proposed small metal-mine loans the Committee has had in mind the necessity of extending the loans to all classes of metal mines so that the potential production of both commercial and strategic war minerals will be encouraged.

In order to allow the R. F. C. to take up the financing of worthy properties which these class C loans may have put in a suitable state for further expenditure, a clause has been introduced in our act broadening the powers of the R. F. C. to include all metallic minerals. The committee feels, however, that private capital will take over many of the mines aided by these small metal mine loans. metal mine loans.

As these loans are to precede and not to replace the R. F. C. type of loan, the amount which may be loaned to any one borrower has been restricted to $5,000.

The proposed act setting up the mines finance commission to administer funds for the small metal mine loans has been framed in such a way as to avoid having in its personnel individuals who may not be in sympathy with the mining business, and to insure that the commission and its personnel will be thoroughly conversant with mining business in all its phases.

In avoiding mortgages on the mining properties of borrowers, or on their equipment, some security had to be designated. We believe repayment of the loan by means of a 15-percent royalty on the net smelter, mill, or mint returns solves this problem. A lien will be taken on the ore exposed during the operation of the loan, payeble from proceeds.

This class of loan may be absorbed by a class B or a class A R. F. C. loan, and payments made under the latter will be prorated between the R. F. C. and the M. F. C.

between the R. F. C. and the M. F. C.

As a matter of mines finance commission policy, your committee has so drawn the act governing the commission's activities that the commission must work as closely as possible through the State Bureau of Mines, Mineral Resources Department, or other similar suitable bodies which are or may be set up in the particular States where the small metal mine loans may be granted. The data collected by the commission's engineers will be exchanged with present State mining organizations, and they in turn will furnish information to the mines finance commission. information to the mines finance commission.

Mr. ASHURST. Speaking for a moment of small mines, let me remind the Senate that small mines make the great mines. Possibly my friend in the chair and others here more familiar with mines know of mining properties that were from the start rich from top dirt down. Possibly the mountain of silver near Virginia City in Nevada might have been originally, from the start, great, but many if not most of the important and great mines have grown from small and humble beginnings.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Arizona when he refers to Virginia City, that out of one tunnel into the earth, one shaft into the earth, we produced $800,000,000, which money lent itself to the continuity of this Nation. I am glad the Senator made mention of Virginia City in his splendid argument, because Virginia City started from nothing. It was merely a prospector who found some dark metal in his pan when he was panning for gold, and, finding that dark metal, he wondered what it was.

Then he sent it to an assay office, and he found it was silver. He then followed it on to its source, and the great Comstock Lode was thereby discovered. The Comstock Lode produced more wealth for the Nation than any one agency we have ever known.

Mr. ASHURST. That is true.

Mr. President, I have no memory for anything that has been said about me in the course of a long political life that was not felicitous. I have no memory for anything but good, but I wish to tell of an incident which took place a very few days after I was inducted into this body many years ago. I feel inspired to say that the first figure I met-certainly among the first-was the able senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah], then, as now, pursuing serenely and bravely a course of devotion to the public service certainly never excelled and rarely equaled in the annals of our country.

Another Senator was not so gallant toward me. He made bold to say, "I do not think we should have such States as Nevada and Arizona, with their wild ideas. I welcome you here-but dubiously. I wish we did not have Nevada and Arizona."

He was a patriotic man. I believe he had been a soldier. I said in reply, "Senator, out of modesty I will not speak for Arizona, but I will speak for Nevada." It so happens, as the Senator from Nevada has said, that I was born in Nevada. I contend that Nevada has produced more statesmen per capita than any other State in the Union. [Laughter.]

I said to the Senator, "So you think Nevada should not have been a State?"

He replied, "No; I do not."

I said to him, "Senator, read your history. A Caesarian operation was performed on Utah Territory and Nevada was made a State against her will. Then when paper money was refused by the bankers of the land during the war between the brothers it was the silver of Nevada which paid the soldiers and sustained Abe Lincoln."

He said in reply: "I feel ashamed and rebuked. I wish I had not said what I said."

I thank the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eigthy-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. In view of the fact that the Senator's amendment pertains to a different subject, and that we are about to pass from the question of the prevailing wage. I wonder if the able Senator from Delaware would permit me to offer an amendment and to have it voted on? I will say to the Senator that I shall not occupy more than 2 or 3 minutes of the time of the Senate.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I should like very much to accommodate the Senator, but I shall occupy only a few minutes myself. I have only a very short speech, which will take but a short time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Delaware will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to add the following new section:

Sec. — All power and authority of the President and the Secretary of the Preasury with respect to the acquisition of foreign silver under the Silver Purchase Act of 1934, under section 43 (b) (2) of title III of the act of May 12, 1933, as amended, and under any other provision of law in force on the date of enactment of this act, shall cease and terminate on the date of enactment of this act; and all proclamations, orders, rules, regulations, and other action promulgated, made, issued, or taken by the President or the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to foreign silver pursuant to any such power or authority shall cease to be effective on and after such date. For the purpose of this section, the term "foreign silver" includes any silver not mined subsequent to July 1, 1938, from natural deposits in the United States or any other place subject to the jurisdiction thereof.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President-

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to my friend from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Does the Senator's amendment include a repeal of the tax which was laid on silver-purchase profits under the Pittman Silver Act?

Mr. TOWNSEND. It does not.

Mr. ADAMS. Does not the Senator think that repeal of the tax should be included?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have no objection to it being in-

Mr. ADAMS. Would the Senator accept a modification of his amendment to that effect?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I would.

Mr. President, my amendment calls for the repeal of all provisions of existing statutes which permit or compel the Government of the United States to buy foreign silver. The purpose of my amendment is so well understood by the Senate that I need not here explain it again in detail. One month ago this body, by an overwhelming vote, put on record its clear desire that this Government terminate, now and for good, the buying of foreigners' cast-off silver.

At West Point a deep hole has been dug in the mountainside to bury the cast-off and unwanted metal which China, Japan, Mexico, Canada, Spain, and a score of other countries have been selling us for millions of dollars of real American cash. The Treasury of the United States is no cemetery for the interment of worn-out foreign coin. Foreign silver buying is inexcusable, and the country is simply tired of it.

Let me call the Senate's attention to the excerpts from newspaper editorials on silver which I inserted in the RECORD during my speech on July 26. They appear on pages 10034-10036 of the Congressional Record. These 63 editorials are merely a sample of the country's almost unanimous and plainly recorded view that the purchase of foreign silver must stop. These recent editorials—and there are scores more like them-come from all section of the Nation. They come from Maine and California, from Minnesota and Louisiana—from the length and breadth of the land. It will be noted that our own silver States are represented among the protesting editorials. All agree that buying foreign silver is indefensible.

Mr. President, while it is not my function here to defend the purchase of foreign silver—and I emphasize that my amendment does not touch the present domestic-silver law in any way-I again remind the Senate that Mr. Marriner S. Eccles, of Utah, has testified several times this year that nothing will so work to the detriment of the domestic silver producers as retention in the statutes of the provision to buy foreign silver.

Mr. Eccles, however, gave us a far more important reason for buying no more foreign silver. He proved that the issuance of silver certificates has already greatly complicated the task of the monetary and credit authorities. The hearings on my bill fully developed that point.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield. Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator has made a statement to the effect that the purchase of foreign silver is indefensible. Will the Senator kindly permit me, within his time, to make an expression so that he may answer it within his time?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes. Mr. McCARRAN. The fact of the matter is that the great nations which purchase from us our surplus commodities use silver. In other words, we must recognize the silver dollars of the nations which buy farm and other commodities from us.

Mr. TOWNSEND. To what countries does the Senator refer

Mr. McCARRAN. I speak of the South American countries and of the Orient. The Orient recognizes silver as its primary money. In other words, the nations of the Orient are monometallists. The nations of South America are monometallists, and in each instance silver is the metal.

When we first established money in this country silver was recognized as one of the two metals that should be basic to the money of the country; namely, gold and silver.

Would the Senator now say that we shall repudiate the money of a country which is the greatest purchaser of our surplus farm commodities?

I want to say to the Senator that I cannot go along with him. I hope his amendment will not prevail, because, if it does, it will destroy everything that is in keeping with our whole idea of selling our surplus commodities, both farm and industrial, to nations that would buy from us and use silver as their money, which we must of necessity recognize. If we do not recognize their money, we will close our ports, if you please.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator, as he well knows, that there is no country in the world which is on a silver standard-not one-and we are simply purchasing silver from foreign countries.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lucas in the chair). Does the Senator from Delaware yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes; I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. India is not on the silver standard; and yet, when an Indian desires to buy a piece of cotton cloth to cover himself with, he has to obtain a certain amount of silver with which to buy a dollar with which to buy the cotton cloth. In the long run, it does not make any difference what we call the standard; a person buys with what he has. Silver is all the people have in India, and it is all they have in China.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, we can never sell abroad the silver which we have imported. There is no chance in the world of our doing so.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator another question?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Treasury Department reported, day before yesterday, that silver was flowing from the United States to London. Is that a fact? That was reported.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Just 1 day.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator knows that at the price of 35 cents an ounce silver is moving out of the United States.

Mr. TOWNSEND. At the price of 35 cents an ounce there was 1 day when the foreign silver market was higher than our market. Today our market is higher than the foreign market, so silver is coming this way again.

As I have said, we can never again sell abroad the silver we have imported. My hearings developed expert Government testimony on this point, too. So why do we keep on buying it under a mandatory law which sets no end to the treadmill purchases?

The only excuse now advanced in defense of this law, which was originally advocated as a means of raising the purchasing power of the Orient for our bathtubs, our shirts, and our shoes, is that Mexico wants us to act under it.

Mexico, we are told, wants us to keep on pouring out American dollars by the million in exchange for silver for which we have no imaginable use. Mexico, whose silver we have been buying as fast as it could be pulled out of the ground, ever since 1934; Mexico, which has seized American lands and properties without prompt payment; Mexico which has owed our claimants money as long as I can remember-Mexico tells us if we want to get some of the pending problems settled, we must keep on importing its silver. Mexico even has the nerve to suggest that since we have raised the return on American-mined silver from 64 cents to 71 cents an ounce, we should raise the price on Mexico's silver to 47 cents.

Mr. President, I think we should not be dissuaded, on any basis smacking of blackmail, from dropping an erroneous and wasteful policy, hurriedly adopted in 1934. That I mention Mexico now is only because Mexico is the excuse which defenders of the foreign-silver program gave us last month. But with or without Mexican silver, the purchase of the foreign metal should be stopped completely and at once.

If we now stop all buying of foreign silver, the act of July 6, 1939, still requires the Treasury to take off the market about 65,000,000 or 70,000,000 ounces of silver a year, or however much we may produce in this country. This is a decided benefit to all foreign sellers of silver, Mexico included. Sixty-five million or seventy million ounces is about twice as much as was taken off the market by five countries under the London silver agreement of 1933; and whereas that agreement took 35,000,000 ounces off the market each year for only 4 years, we now are going to take our entire domestic production off the market until silver ceases to be mined

When the Senate a month ago voted to discontinue buying foreign silver, the Treasury immediately lowered its price for foreign metal from 43 cents an ounce to 35 cents an ounce; yet even that price of 35 cents was higher-and it is still higher—than the market value of silver abroad. This shows the absurdity of the foreign-silver program.

I earnestly urge the Congress to heed the country's wishes in this matter.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I advocated the Silver Purchase Act. I had in mind the stabilization of monetary systems in various places in the world. I did not anticipate that there would be the purchase of the mine-production of certain countries. It was not in my mind, and was not involved in the stabilization that I had in mind. I had in mind the stabilization that took place in Mexico for a while. Mexico had a greatly inflated paper currency. Our Government entered into an agreement with agencies of Mexico by which they agreed to maintain 25-percent reserves of silver and 75 percent in United States dollars behind their currency, and that the limit of their currency issues should be upon the basis of 40-percent reserves, which would absolutely prevent inflation. The Mexican Government undertook that. They undertook to coin their own silver and take up their paper currency. In 1 year they coined over $300,000,000 worth of silver coins and took up $300,000,000 worth of paper currency; and then there was a change in Mexico. The plan which was laid out went to pieces.

In China the authorities nationalized silver. They took all the silver from the banks. They changed the value of their silver coins by reducing their silver content. They themselves took up over $300,000,000 in paper currency with the new coin currency. China's currency was based upon 25-percent silver reserves and 75-percent United States dollars. They had the soundest currency anywhere outside of the United States at the time the invasion of southern China by Japan took place. That ended it all.

I must say that my aspirations with regard to the Silver Purchase Act were not carried out. I feel certain today, however, that there is a change of program. The changed program does not any longer affect the domestic purchase of silver. The program did affect the domestic purchase of silver before we had a law fixing the price of silver, because the tendency was for domestic silver to go up or down with foreign silver. We no longer have an interest, from the domestic standpoint, in the price of foreign silver.

As illustrative of the change of policy, the price of foreign silver—or the world price of silver, we may call it, as distinguished from the domestic price—fell from 45 cents an ounce to 35 cents an ounce in 30 days; why? Because the Treasury was not bidding for foreign silver. The Treasury is not bidding for foreign silver today, and that is the reason why silver moved from the United States to London. As long as there is a chance of the United States putting up silver, the owners of silver will sell to the United States. When silver is not purchased by the United States it will move into the channels of trade. It will not come to the United States but will go to other countries.

But this is what I want to say to the Senator. It is almost entirely foreign to this argument, but I think it is a very serious argument:

Admitting that possibly some of us might have handled the matter differently from our viewpoint, that, however, is past. The Senator from Delaware has had his bill before a subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency for how long?

Mr. TOWNSEND. For 2 or 3 months.

Mr. PITTMAN. Two or three months. It must be a subject of importance, or the Senator would not have had the bill before a distinguished committee like that for 2 or 3 months. There must be more than one question involved in it, or the committee would not have had it under consideration for that length of time. The Senator has had hearings, has he not?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes; we have had extensive hearings, and they have been printed.

Mr. PITTMAN. Very distinguished experts have appeared before the subcommittee?

Mr. TOWNSEND. They have.

Mr. PITTMAN. And yet the subcommittee has not yet made up its mind. The bill has not even been reported to the full Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. TOWNSEND. May I make an explanation of that in the Senator's time?

Mr. PITTMAN. Just a minute.

I want to say that in the very last hours of the session, when no one here even has a chance to read the Senator's amendment, no one even has a chance to offer amendments to it, because we do not know what it is and do not understand it, the Senator leaves a committee which he appealed to 2 or 3 months ago, when they have not even reported the bill to the full committee, and comes in before the Senate, and asks us practically to discharge the Committee on Banking and Currency, of which he is a member, and act on this matter today.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, in the hearings the testimony was overwhelmingly in favor of this amendment.

Mr. PITTMAN. Did the committee so decide?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Three weeks ago the subcommittee was ready to report, and at the request of one member of the committee that we defer action for some testimony from Secretary Hull, for whom I have the highest regard, we deferred action until Secretary Hull could come before the committee. This was on a Thursday or a Friday.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

That is hardly an accurate statement.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What is an accurate statement?

Mr. BARKLEY. I am the member of the committee who asked that the matter be deferred, because it involved certain negotiations between the State Department and one of the countries involved in the production of silver.

Mr. TOWNSEND. In regard to which Secretary Hull had made certain statements.

Mr. BARKLEY. Action was not delayed in order to enable Secretary Hull to appear before the committee. The matter was delayed in order that the State Department might be consulted with respect to the effect of this sort of legislation upon negotiations in which they are now involved with respect to one of the countries producing silver. There was no understanding that Secretary Hull was to come before the committee. There was no request that Secretary Hull should come before the committee.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I wish to say to the Senator that he is entirely mistaken. The chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] asked Secretary Hull to come before the committee, and Sunday 2 weeks ago Secretary Hull called up the Senator from Virginia and asked him to defer his appearance for 5 days. The Senator from Virginia came to me and asked me what to do. I said, "I have the highest respect for Secretary Hull, and we will defer it for 5 days."

Mr. BARKLEY. I am talking about the deferring of the action of the subcommittee, of which I happen to be a

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is exactly right.

Mr. BARKLEY. In order that the State Department might be consulted about this, and it was consulted. I do not know anything about any conversation which occurred between Secretary Hull and the Senator from Virginia, who is chairman of the subcommittee. I was not present. But I do know that the State Department is vitally interested in negotiations with respect to certain matters pending now between it and a country producing silver, and at the request of the State Department the matter was deferred.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am trying to tell the Senator exactly what happened.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suppose that it was hearsay with the Senator, just as it was with me. He did not carry on the conversation with the State Department.

Mr. TOWNSEND. No, but the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] told me that Secretary Hull asked him to defer it for 5 days. He had asked him to come before the subcommittee. I said, "Very well, we will defer it for 5 days."

On a second request from the Senator from Virginia, he asked that it be deferred until last Saturday, I think it was, or last Saturday week. I do not recall which, but, anyway, some date in the last week. I said, "Very well, we will do that." I expected, of course, to take the amendment before the full committee last Friday, but when I left the committee I had a definite understanding with the chairman that we would go over until Monday, and that we could offer any amendment. When I returned the bill had been reported, and came before the Senate. That is the history of it. I have deferred to Secretary Hull so far as I thought was reasonable

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield. Mr. WAGNER. I hope the Senator from Delaware does not desire to convey the impression that he did not have every opportunity, if he wanted it, to consider the proposed legislation.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am not trying to convey such an impression, but the Senator will remember that I sat down beside him and asked him if we were going to have a meeting on Saturday, and he said we were not. Then I left with that understanding. I am not complaining about it, I am merely stating the situation.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from Ohio was authorized to vote for the Senator from Delaware, so I assumed he understood there was to be a meeting. But I do not want to get into an argument over veracity.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I left on Friday before the committee hearings were over.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senator from Nevada will permit, let me say that I am proud to be chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee. There is not in this body, as the Senator will agree, a more deliberative and more industrious committee than the Committee on Banking and Currency, and never has a bill been reported from that committee in a slipshod manner.

What is the situation in regard to this question? Are we to have the practice, before a committee is through with its deliberations on a matter so important and complex as this, of depriving a committee of its right to consider a bill? Are we to institute a practice by which, while a subcommittee is still deliberating on it, a bill is to be brought to the floor before the Senate has the advantage of our deliberations and our report?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President-

Mr. WAGNER. Permit me to make my statement, and then the Senator can refute it if I am mistaken about it.

I knew the subcommittee was having its hearings upon the silver bill, just as it was on some other legislation, and I conferred on several occasions with the chairman of that subcommittee. I may say here that there is no more able member of the committee than the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]. He told me that he was not prepared to report yet, that he had not concluded his hearing. I said to him, "Just as soon as you conclude your hearings and are ready to report, I will call a meeting of the full committee. After the testimony is printed we will have a meeting of the full committee and discuss the matter the way we discuss every bill before our committee."

There are members of the Committee on Banking and Currency on the floor at this time, and I think they will sustain me at least when I say that every bill which is reported to that committee from a subcommittee is fully and thoroughly discussed.

I do not know the merits of this proposition, because I have been waiting for a report from the subcommittee, and also an opportunity to read the testimony. The subcommittee has not yet reported to the full committee, the full committee has had no opportunity to study this question and give the benefit of its views to the Senate, yet we are asked now, in the last moments of the session, to pass upon so important a piece of legislation.

I want to say to the Senate, if I may, that when that subcommittee does report, the report will immediately be taken up by the full committee, and one way or the other the Senate Banking and Currency Committee will report the result of its deliberations and the result of its conclusions to the Senate. That will be the time, I think, when the Senate can properly and intelligently take up the subject. If the practice were otherwise there would be no need of having standing committees at all.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Let me say to the Senator that this amendment was adopted once by the Senate practically unanimously. The hearings have been studied for 4 or 5 weeks, and the Senator has had the privilege of seeing them; he is chairman of the committee. The Senator from Delaware requested the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] to call a meeting of the subcommittee, and that was done. The Senator knows who was there, and that the meeting was deferred. We deferred a report until we could hear from Secretary Hull.

Mr. WAGNER. I did not participate in the discussion on the floor because I did not feel that the Senate would pass on an amendment which was pending before a committee and being studied by a committee.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator was one of the conferees who kicked the amendment out of the conference.

Mr. WAGNER. That is true.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I will conclude quickly. There have been a number of occasions when there have been motions to discharge committees which had under consideration matters referred to them, but I have never known of a committee being discharged from the consideration of a matter referred to it when it diligently pursued consideration of the subject. I think twice in the 26 years I have been a Member of the Senate a committee has been discharged when the evidence showed that they had made no effort during a long period of time to give consideration to the bill in question. Even recently, when certain action was taken by the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate. it was widely discussed here informally and in the press as to whether or not, in opposition to the will of the Committee on Foreign Relations, the so-called neutrality measure should not be offered as a rider to some other bill. That did not receive sufficient encouragement even to induce an offer.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is not the Senator completely answered by the fact that the Senate itself took jurisdiction of this particular amendment 4 weeks ago and adopted it? Did not the Senate at that time decide whether or not it wanted to take jurisdiction? It did take jurisdiction; it did adopt the amendment; and it certainly is entitled to adopt it again, particularly in view of the fact that it was thrown out in a very questionable fashion in a very pell-mell con-

Mr. PITTMAN. I agree that the offering of the amendment of the Senator from Delaware was in a very pell-mell. confusing, fashion. Two other amendments had been adopted already which no one expected to be adopted, when the Senator's amendment was offered, and no one even took the pains to ask for a division or roll call. But that is neither here nor there.

By that pell-mell vote to which the Senator from Michigan has referred, the customs of this body were not discarded. This body prepares legislation through committees; it selects its own committees, which it respects; and when, as the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency has stated. and as the colloquy has shown, a subcommittee has for 3 months been taking evidence on this subject, serious evidence of acknowledged experts, and the subcommittee have not as yet determined whether to advise the Senate to vote for or against the bill, or whether to advise them to vote for it with substantial amendments, I say the usual custom should be followed.

Considering the facts and the present policy of the Treasury Department, which is very largely related to the policy of the State Department, as shown by the report of the State Department, which has not advised on this matter, considering the fact that the whole world is in turmoil today, and considering the fact that this question undoubtedly involves some other countries of the world it is not proper to act on this question in haste.

I would be ready to take the matter up in January, when the Committee on Banking and Currency decides whether they should report favorably or unfavorably on the bill, or whether they should report on it with amendments. Certainly no bill any Senator ever drafted and sent to a committee was perfect in the first stage. I have never offered a bill but that the wisdom of some committee did not suggest amendments which were superior to my ability. Yet the Senator comes here at this late hour of the night and throws an amendment before this body and asks us either to accept it or reject it without knowing what it is or what amendments should be offered to it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I wish to say that this amendment is precisely the same as the one which was adopted by the Senate, and that all in the world it would do would be to stop this country from buying foreign silver. That is all this amendment would do.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yet not even the subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency, which the Senator asked to have appointed, the subcommittee of which he himself is a member, which he admitted had taken evidence for 3 months, has reported a conclusion to the full committee. The Senator is a member of the committee, and he has an obligation to it, and it is just as though he has asked for the discharge of his own committee.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The committee has been ready to report, and the only reason why it did not report was a request from Secretary Hull for additional time. That is the only reason why it did not report.

Mr. PITTMAN. That could only be a subcommittee report. Then there is the full committee. I am actually surprised, and I think that when the Senator stops to think it over he will regret that he has moved to discharge his own committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I find it difficult to understand the heat which the Senator from Delaware has generated over the subject of the purchase of foreign silver. He seems to be obsessed with the notion that unless we quit buying foreign silver the foundations of the American Republic will crumble.

What are the facts about the purchase of foreign silver? In the confusion which surrounded the silver situation 3 or 4 weeks ago the Senate did, on a viva voce vote, agree on an amendment offered by the Senator from Delaware prohibiting the purchase of foreign silver. Whether that amendment would have been adopted on a roll call is a matter of speculation, and may be anyone's guess.

The whole matter of silver went to conference. Our country was then and is now engaged in negotiations with a silver-producing country upon certain matters vitally affecting American interests. I felt then as I feel now, that those negotiations involving infinitely more than is involved in the purchase of silver from that country, should not be thrown out of the window because of a desire to prohibit the purchase of silver from that or any other country, and by our refusal to purchase silver from that or any other country, to deny more than $100,000,000 worth of exports from the United States to silver-producing countries of the world.

The Senator from Delaware introduced a bill 2 or 3 months ago. That bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and I will say, to the credit not only of that committee but to its distinguished chairman [Mr.

WAGNER, that no bill ever comes out of that committee which has not received meticulous and careful attention in every detail from the members of that committee. I see here the distinguished Senator from Maryland [Mr. Radcliffe] who is a member of that committee and will corroborate what I am saying.

In the circumstances that surrounded the bill then before the Senate and the House in conference—the monetary bill—against which there was a futile fillbuster, in my judgment, the amendment of the Senator from Delaware was not retained. It is of no use to go into the details of that conference. It was not retained. And there was nothing questionable about the methods by which it was rejected, in spite of the Senator's statement.

Following that conference report, the subcommittee met to consider the Senator's bill, and it was upon my suggestion—even my appeal to the subcommittee—not to take hasty action on that bill in the light of information which I had received from the State Department involving infinitely more than the value of silver we purchase from any one country. That was on Friday or Saturday. The matter went over to the next week. In the meantime I consulted still further with the State Department, in which my suggestion at the committee meeting was confirmed and emphasized.

The Senator from Delaware refers to a telephone conversation between Secretary Hull and the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]. I do not know what occurred in that conversation, but I have understood that the Secretary of State stated to the Senator from Virginia what I had previously stated to the subcommittee and what I am stating here, and asked that the matter go over; asked that negotiations between the State Department and one of our neighbors in the Western Hemisphere be not interfered with in a very vital matter by the passage of a bill of this sort.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. He asked that the matter go over 5

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know how many days he asked that it go over. He asked that it go over. The subcommittee has not been called to consider the Secretary of State's request that it go over.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I asked the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] whether he was prepared to report upon that bill, and the Senator told me that the subcommittee was not ready to report on the bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I have not contended that the Senator from Virginia was. I am telling of the conversation which took place and what the Senator told me

Mr. BARKLEY. Since the conversation between the Secretary of State and the Senator from Virginia has been brought into the discussion, I am reminded of the fact that the Senator from Virginia told me that the Secretary of State had asked him that this matter be deferred before the passage of the bill introduced by the Senator from Delaware, which he now offers as an amendment to this bill, would operate to terminate negotiations between the United States and one of our neighbors in the Western Hemisphere, involving matters infinitely more valuable to America than the amount we pay that country for the silver.

The Senator from Virginia is not here and he is not in the city. Because of his physical condition he has gone to Virginia. What the Senator from Delaware is doing is practically asking the Senate of the United States to do what he has never asked the committee on Banking and Currency to do, and that is to discharge its own subcommittee from consideration of the bill which he introduced in order that the full committee might pass upon the merits of the proposed legislation.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am simply asking the Senate to consider a bill which they passed by practically a unanimous vote and which went to conference and was kicked out the window.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I understand "practically by unanimous vote" under circumstances that did not afford any Senator any opportunity to consider the merits of the measure or its consequences.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator had the privilege of asking for a record vote.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, yes; of course we have many privileges here that we do not exercise.

Mr. President, to adopt this amendment on this bill would be equivalent to the discharge of the Committee on Banking and Currency. More than that, it would be the equivalent of the discharge of a subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency from the further consideration of this measure.

This amendment has no more relationship to the bill under consideration than the amendment repealing the neutrality law would have to this bill, and if the Senate is going to adopt amendments of this character, we might as well go into extraneous questions that have no connection with or relationship to the bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not think there is any less reason for my bill coming before the Senate than the bill which provided for wasting our money by buying foreign silver.

Mr. BARKLEY. I know the Senator thinks that. Mr. TOWNSEND. We have no use on earth for it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I know the Senator thinks that. I want to call attention to a few facts in connection with the purchase of silver by the United States. If the United States ceases to buy foreign silver, the immediate reaction, the immediate effect of that action, would be reduction of exports of more than $100,000,000 a year to the countries that produce silver and pay for the exports that we sell to them with silver. The Senator cannot contend that silver is of no value.

Mr. TOWNSEND. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It has been testified here that we have a billion ounces of silver buried at West Point for which we have no earthly use. Does the Senator contend that we should continue to purchase something for which we have no use and send our goods to foreign countries?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is not all that is involved in this problem. The value of silver is not destroyed by its purchase and being stored by the Government. In all the history of the world silver has had a value, and will always have a value.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It only has a value now that our Secretary of the Treasury has fixed for it. He fixes the value every day.

Mr. BARKLEY. We thrashed out the question of the price of domestic silver here nearly a month ago. The adoption of this amendment would have no effect upon the price of domestic silver. The Government is buying all the silver produced in the United States, and it is paying for it the equivalent of 71 cents an ounce, and it is fixed by law. It is a permanent law until repealed by Congress, and no matter what happens to the price of silver in the world market, which has gone down to 35 cents, the United States will continue to pay 71 cents an ounce. So, the stopping of the purchase from foreign countries of silver—which will always have a value—will result in the reduction of our exports to other countries of more than $100,000,000 a year in American products.

It may be that no one is concerned about our finding a market in the other nations of the world for the products of American labor in field and in factory, but the sale of $100,000,000 or more than $100,000,000 worth of American products means the employment of many thousand American laborers, and the termination of those sales in the markets of the world means the termination of employment for many thousand American citizens.

We are now considering a bill designed to increase employment; we have been appropriating from the Treasury of the United States two or three billion dollars a year to give American citizens work, and yet we are asked now to adopt an extraneous amendment that has no connection with the bill, the result of which will be to throw more men out of employment in the United States.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. We are asked now to adopt an amendment that will stop wasting our substance and keep it at home

Mr. BARKLEY. I know. I understand that the Senator believes that. The Senator seems to draw no distinction whatever between the increase or even the maintenance of our foreign trade and the employment of American labor. There are Members of the Senate and there are other American citizens who think that our foreign trade is of no consequence. Ten percent of all we produce in the United States is sold to foreigners; and our ability to sell that 10 percent has a very vital effect upon the price received for the 90 percent that we sell to the people of the United States.

If we stop selling to other nations the 10 percent of our exports we have either got to stop producing that percentage or dump it upon our own markets, and thereby drive down the price to the producers of these American products, in addition to throwing out thousands if not hundreds of thousands of men from the opportunty to enjoy the right to earn their living in the sweat of their brow.

We have been undertaking to build up in the Western Hemisphere a feeling of confidence in the American Republic. For a long time there has been a feeling in certain nations in South and Central America that the United States had a mercenary purpose; that we had no interest in the Western Hemisphere except to dominate it. It has not been so many years since the policy of "dollar diplomacy" actuated our Government in its dealings with other nations. We have been trying to build up a feeling of confidence and respect among all the nations of the Western Hemisphere in the good faith and the honor and integrity and in the unselfishness of the United States of America.

To cease the purchase of silver in foreign countries would result in a severe blow to certain Latin-American countries which are among our best customers.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, would the Senator go so far as to advocate exports even though we only get a bad debt for those exports?

Mr. BARKLEY. That has nothing to do with the question now under consideration.

Mr. TAFT. I think it has a very direct bearing.

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, the Senator and I disagree about that.

Mr. TAFT. The question is-

Mr. BARKLEY. We are not asking that we export American products in return for bad debts. Silver, which has all through history had a value and will continue to have a value, is not a bad debt.

Mr. TAFT. As I understand, the Senator argues that we should stimulate exports, whether we get something for them which is worth anything or whether it is not worth anything, in order to promote the good-neighbor policy in South America. Is that what the Senator means?

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator understands that he is still lacking and deficient in understanding. I said nothing of the sort; I intimated nothing of the sort; and I believe nothing of the sort. I do not think that silver can be placed upon the same basis or in the same category as bad debts of the type to which the Senator refers.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I listened to the question of the able Senator from Ohio, who, it is hoped, will be allowed to relinquish his duties in the Senate to become the next President of the United States. I wonder what he meant when he asked whether or not we should take something that is worth nothing, as against something which is worth something. Is that what the Senator said?

Mr. TAFT. I am about to move to reduce the amount allotted to the Export-Import Bank; and I wondered whether the Senator's argument with regard to silver went so far as to advocate the acceptance of bad loans in order to stimulate exports. I am glad to know that his argument does not go that far

Mr. McCARRAN. May I continue, with the permission of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. McCARRAN. When we take silver we take that which is the basis for the money of America. In 1792, when we established our mint and our money, bimetallism, namely, gold and silver, was made the basis. We established the value of those metals in trade. We established their value as the money of the country. We cannot relinquish that basis, repudiate the silver which is daily offered to us from foreign countries, and say to them, "We will give you our surplus commodities, but we will not take your money, not-withstanding the fact that your money has been established as the basis of our money."

That is the whole question involved. It is not a question of purchase, because we do not purchase. We simply take silver as a basis of exchange for our surplus commodities.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada. When we export American products and take silver in return, we take it at the world price.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. The world price happens now to be about 35 cents an ounce.

Mr. McCARRAN. And we put it out at $1.29. Between the two we make a profit.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let us assume that we do not at this time need all this silver. If we do not accept payment for our exports in silver, we must accept it in gold if the countries buying our products can obtain the gold. Gold is the medium of international exchange among most of the nations of the world. We have more gold than silver.

Though we have silver which we do not need, we have even more gold. But when we sell American wheat, cotton, automobiles, agricultural machinery, tobacco, and other American products to foreign countries we take in return what they can pay for it in silver; and silver has a market value in the world. When we stop buying silver from them we practically serve notice on them that we do not desire to have any business relations with them because we refuse to allow them to pay for the products we send them in the thing which they have to pay for them.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President— Mr. BARKLEY. I yield further.

Mr. McCARRAN. Nothing gratifies me more than the fact that the President pro tempore and myself have been able to convert the splendid ability of the Senator from Kentucky to realize the real truth of the problem involved; and I am glad that the senior Senator from Nevada and the junior Senator from Nevada may have contributed something which has won over the leadership of the majority.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am willing to give credit to both Senators from Nevada to the fullest extent for my conversion. The Senator is familiar with the old adage that so long as the light holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return.

Mr. President, we are sending to Mexico more than $62,-000,000 worth of American products. Mexico produces annually more than $1,000,000 ounces of silver. Peru buys from us $17,000,000 worth of American products and produces 20,000,000 ounces of silver. Chile buys from us $25,000,000 worth of American products and produces more than 1,000,-000 ounces of silver. Bolivia buys from us between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 worth of American products and produces more than 10,000,000 ounces of silver.

What are these countries buying from us? I speak now only of the countries in the Western Hemisphere, whose friendship, cooperation, faith, and confidence we are undertaking to establish and to retain. How can we retain that confidence; how can we buttress the fortifications of democracy in the Western Hemisphere, if we deny to our sister nations of the Western Hemisphere the right to buy American products and to pay for them in the commodity which they produce? The silver which they exchange for our products buys agricultural machinery, radios, typewriters, industrial and electrical machinery, automobiles, and trucks and parts thereof, metals and manufactures, including a great variety of iron and steel products, petroleum and products derived from petroleum, such as gasoline, fuel oil, and greases, textiles and textile products, including raw cotton, cotton goods, and chemical products of all kinds, in addition to raw agricultural products produced on the farms of the United States.

I am wondering whether the Senate of the United States, in the international chaos which surrounds the nations of the world today, is willing to serve notice on the American republics that we have no desire to do business with them; that all our protestations of friendship are hypocrisy; and that we are willing to stop selling to them what we need to sell in order to employ thousands of American workmen, because we are unwilling to accept in payment the thing which they can export to the United States.

I do not wish to take the time of the Senate any further. I hope the Senate will not say to the Banking and Currency Committee "Notwithstanding your record and reputation for careful consideration of every bill referred to you; notwithstanding that for reasons which are sufficient and sound the subcommittee has not seen fit to report the bill to the full committee and the full committee has not seen fit to discharge the subcommittee from further consideration, you shall no longer consider the implications, ramifications, and consequences of this legislation." In the posture in which we find ourselves today, not only in the western world but throughout the world, the chaos, confusion, suspicion, and fear which surround the people of every nation. I hope the Senate of the United States will not say to the western world, "We are yet mercenary; we are yet selfish; we are yet provincial. We do not propose any longer to have either commercial or diplomatic relations with you because we do not want to buy from you any more silver, which, in all the history of mankind from the beginning of the world until now. and in all the years that lie before us, has had and will continue to have value in the markets of the world."

For that reason and others I could urge except for the lack of time, I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I desire to speak very briefly on this matter, because I presume it will come to us in a different way hereafter. I hardly suppose it will be finally disposed of at this time.

Mr. President, I agree with the view entertained by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend] with reference to the purchase of foreign silver. I am opposed to continuing that program. But that is not what at this time seems to me to be the controlling question. Lately I have had occasion to appreciate the integrity, and the necessity of maintaining the integrity, of committees and the procedure of the committees in this body. I do not want to see established a rule by which we will take away from a committee, either under the dictation of a majority in this body or of anybody else, the consideration of important matters which are still before the committee, and with respect to which there is no evidence that the committee is seeking to avoid action or unreasonably delay action.

If I thought that the committee in this instance was guilty of refusing to act when it should act, and as speedily as it should, I should feel entirely different about the matter; but the Senate ought to maintain its machinery of doing business in all its integrity, and it ought to do so as against majorities and as against the dictation of those outside the Senate.

There is nothing more necessary than that we ourselves determine in what manner we shall proceed and how we shall dispose of our business in the Senate. I have had reason to believe that there is nothing more important than that the Senate appreciate the maintenance of its machinery in all its integrity. I therefore do not feel that I want to vote to take away from the committee an important matter of this kind, without any evidence of the fact that the committee has failed to do its duty, and without any evidence that the committee has failed to meet the situation.

I am not at all impressed with the trade argument which is so thoroughly accentuated in these days with regard to the matter of purchasing foreign silver. I should like to have the committee go a little further with the examination it has already made and examine into the question of what is behind the purchase of silver, aside from the question of trade. In my opinion there is much back of it. If there is trade value to it, of course we want to maintain it. We want trade everywhere. We want trade in Japan, Germany, and wherever we can get it. Trade is not a thing of likes and dislikes; and it will be well if our Government remembers that fact. I am in favor of a policy which will pursue that course; but I think when we come to investigate the question of trade with reference to the purchase of silver, we shall find that the trade question is a secondary question in this matter. But with reference to the question of discharging the committee and passing upon the measure at this time, my experience of late teaches me to believe that I should not in any way join in a program which will disregard the integrity of the machinery of the Senate.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that this afternoon the Senate, almost by unanimous vote, took a bill out of the hands of the Banking and Currency Committee and passed it. It may be that it broke the machinery of the Senate; but, at any rate, the majority of the Senate, almost by unanimous vote, sustained that proposal. I maintain that the Senate as such is supreme over its committees, and that when its committees fail to report, when its committees try to pigeonhole legislation, the Senate always has a right to override its committees, because the committees are the servants of the

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, of course, the committees are the servants of the Senate, and the Senate can always take a bill away from a committee when it thinks proper; but what I said was-and my position was and still is-that so long as a committee is acting with due regard to the rights of the Senate, there is no evidence of an attempt to pigeonhole a bill, there is no evidence of bad faith upon the part of the committee, the committee is having its hearings or has had its hearings and is now considering the matter and prepared to consider it; I think the committee ought to be permitted to do so.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I do not want to prolong this discussion, but I hope the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] did not intend to intimate that the Banking and Currency Committee is pigeonholing this particular legislation. I explained, when the Senator was not on the floor, that a subcommittee at the head of which is the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]-and nobody would ever suggest that he would deliberately evade his responsibility-has held hearings for over a period of 2 months. The hearings have not yet been concluded. I asked the Senator from Virginia shortly before he left-I am sorry that he is not here now-when he expected to report the bill, and he said he was not ready to report it. Just as soon as the report of the subcommittee comes to the full committee the full committee will take up this matter. I will say to the Senate that the committee will report one way or the other upon the legislation after it has deliberated upon the subject.

I desire to say on behalf of the Committee on Banking and Currency that never, certainly never since I have been its chairman, and never that I recall since I have been a member-although I will speak with certainty of the time since I have been chairman—has there been a report made by the committee by polling the members upon the floor of the Senate. No bill has ever left the committee except after thorough discussion. We certainly will discuss this matter just as soon as the subcommitte reports upon it, and then report to the full Senate regarding it.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, is the Senator from New York referring to the silver proposal of the Senator from

Mr. WAGNER. I am referring to the amendment which the senior Senator from Delaware is now offering as to the pending bill. It was introduced separately as a bill by the Senator from Delaware, and referred to our committee. It was then referred to the subcommittee headed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. The Senator from Virginia. who has been a very busy chairman, took up the matter some 2 months ago and held hearings over a period of 2 months. The hearings have not been concluded. Nobody would even intimate that the Senator from Virginia would be a party to a scheme to delay the consideration of this legislation.

As I say, the Senator from Virginia told me just recently that he was not quite ready to report on the bill. As soon as the report comes to the full committee, like every other report from the subcommittee, it will be immediately taken up by the full committee, considered, and a report thereon made to the Senate, either adversely or favorably or with amendments, whatever the determination of the committee may be. I do not know a single instance in which there has been any delay by the committee after its subcommittee has reported to the full committee.

That is the exact situation.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator directly and frankly whether there was any effort upon the part of anyone, to the knowledge of the Senator from New York, to delay this matter?

Mr. WAGNER. Absolutely not. Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, it has been stated here, and I think correctly, that this particular bill was held up at the request of the Secretary of State. If that is what Senators call democracy, they have a different definition of democracy than I have.

Mr. WAGNER. If that is so, I was not informed about it. I assume that the Secretary of State, like any other official, has a right to present to the subcommittee any testimony he may wish to give upon a particular subject. I know of no delay, however. Whether or not the Secretary asked to be heard, I do not know. If he had, it would not have been an unreasonable or unusual request. I think the Senator will agree with me that he has never known an instance, after the subcommittee has reported to the full committee, in which the particular legislation reported was not promptly taken up by the full committee, considered, and reported upon. Am I accurate in that statement?

Mr. FRAZIER. I think the Senator is accurate in that statement.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, it seems to me this is a subject which has no complications. What is the reason why it should take more than 2 months to get a report upon it? What is the great, complicated secrecy in regard to this question?

Mr. WAGNER. I am not able to inform the Senator as to that. We were waiting for the subcommittee to report. There must be some questions involved, because testimony was taken for a period of a month and a number of witnesses and experts appeared. There are kindred subjects involved which I think ought to receive careful consideration. As was suggested by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah], the question of trade undoubtedly is involved. Our full committee has never discussed the bill, and we have never had the testimony of the subcommittee presented to us. It seems to me this is rather hasty action upon so important a matter, and the question is whether we shall maintain the orderly procedure of this body and the integrity of our committees.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I am surprised that the Senator says this is hasty action when the committee has held hearings, and they have been printed for 2 months, and in those hearings the witnesses were unanimous in saying that we ought to stop the purchase of foreign silver. Then to say that this is hasty action is astonishing. We are acting tonight on a $2,300,000,000 bill. How long has it been before the committee? It came in about 15 days ago.

Mr. WAGNER. Was the Senator's bill ever considered by the full Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Not this amendment: no.

Mr. WAGNER. That is just what I am saying; but it is before our committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsenp].

Mr. TOWNSEND and other Senators called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Sheppard
Andrews	Davis	Lodge	Shipstead
Ashurst	Ellender	Lucas	Slattery
Austin	Frazier	Lundeen	Smith
Bailey	George	McCarran	Stewart

Byrnes	Holman	Radcliffe	Wheeler
Capper	Holt	Reed	White
Chavez	Hughes	Russell
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Schwartz
Clark Mo	Johnson Colo	Schwallenbech

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend]. On that question the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I transfer my pair with him to the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], who, if present, would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley], which has been transferred to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers]. I am, therefore, at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton]. If the senior Senator from Louisiana were present he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], who is absent. I understand he has a special pair on this vote, so I am at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] is absent because of illness. He has a general pair on this amendment with the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], who is unavoidably detained

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from California [Mr. Downey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Herring], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Maloney], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr.

OVERTON], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] is paired with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Virginia would vote "yea" and the Senator from Oklahoma would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 41, as follows:

So Mr. Townsend's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the amendment was rejected be reconsidered.

Mr. WAGNER. I move to lay that motion on the table. The PRESIDENT pro tempore (putting the question). The motion to lay on the table is agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER obtained the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Just a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana has the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I rise to a question of parliamentary law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. JOHNSON of California. The Chair put the question as to those in favor of the motion, but he did not put any question as to the "noes." I do not care whether the result be one way or another; to that kind of parliamentary tactics I do not agree.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is entirely mistaken, and it will be left to Senators. The Chair did ask for the "noes." Without objection, the Chair will put the question again. [Putting the question.] The Chair is of opinion that the "ayes" have it.

Mr. BRIDGES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. McCARRAN. The result has been announced.

Mr. BARKLEY. I make the point of order that the Chair has announced the result.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair stated the result in the first ruling. The Senator from Montana has the floor.

Mr. BRIDGES. May I ask, as a parliamentary inquiry, why did the Chair put the question again if the result had been stated?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did it out of respect for the Senator from California, who raised the question.

Mr. BRIDGES. It meant nothing whatever, if it was all over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair says again it was over at the first vote, undoubtedly so. The Chair put the question and waited.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. If the Chair asked for the "noes" in the first instance, I did not hear it, and for that reason I made the objection which I stated. I think that in the haste that was pursued by the Chair he forgot to ask for the "noes."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has some privileges in this body. The Chair did ask for the "noes," and it was responded to by some. The Senator from California did not hear the request for the "noes," evidently.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. That is quite true.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the Chair stated that by unanimous consent he would put the question again.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. That was a very courteous and a proper thing for the Chair to do, but there were about 30 other Senators back of me who did not hear the Chair ask for the "noes."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has attempted to cure his haste, if it was haste, but he did ask for the "noes." The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I move to strike out on page 9, beginning with line 11, down to and including the word "section" on page 10.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 9, line 11, after line 10, it is proposed to strike out through line 2, on page 10, as follows:

RAILROAD EQUIPMENT

SEC. 7. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Corporation shall have power

(a) Through public bidding or private negotiations to make contracts for, or to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase or construction of railroad equipment by a carrier or to be acquired by a carrier or carriers under contract and of such type and design as may, with the approval of the Corporation, be specified by the carrier or carriers by whom such railroad equipment is intended to be used, and to make contracts to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase, rebuilding, repair, or disposition of old railroad equipment; and
(b) To lease, with or without the option to purchase, or to sell or rent upon such terms and conditions as it shall prescribe, any railroad equipment constructed, rebuilt, or repaired under this

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, if this amendment shall be adopted it will mean that that provision in the bill relating to railroad equipment will be stricken from the bill.

Mr. REED. A point of order. May we have order? I should like to hear the distinguished Senator from Montana. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is attempting to preserve order. Mr. WHEELER. Section 7 reads as follows:

SEC. 7. Subject to the provisions of this act, the Corporation shall have power—

(a) Through public bidding or private negotiations to make contracts for, or to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase or construction of railroad equipment by a carrier or to be acquired by a carrier or carriers under contract and of such type and design as may, with the approval of the Corporation, be specified by the carrier or carriers by whom such railroad equipment is intended to be used, and to make contracts to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase, rebuilding, repair, or disposition of old railroad equipment.

Mr. President, under the terms of this provision the Corporation could buy equipment for a road and could take in part payment old equipment which a railroad has.

Mr. TOBEY. This would put Uncle Sam into the junk business, if nothing else, would it not?

Mr. WHEELER. That is true, it would put Uncle Sam and the Corporation in the junk business if they wanted to go into it.

Though I am not a member of the committee, I understand that the testimony before the committee shows that they intended to do exactly that thing. In other words, the Corporation could buy equipment for a railroad, and the railroad would have some old equipment, and they would trade it in as part of the purchase price, and the Corporation would lend them the balance of the money needed.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I know it is difficult to maintain such order that all may hear, but I am sure the Senator from Montana is stating something of value which should be heard, and I ask that an attempt be made to restore order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order, of course, is well taken. There are a number of Senators present who desire to hear the argument being made. The Chair suggests that those who do not desire to listen retire to the cloak room. The Chair feels that he should state to the occupants of the galleries that they are guests of the Senate, and they will please not engage in conversation. Conversation causes confusion on the floor.

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TRUMAN. Does not the Reconstruction Finance Corporation already have power to make these loans, and has it not already the funds with which to make loans for this very

Mr. WHEELER. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation now has the money, and it can make loans to the railroads for the purpose of buying new equipment.

Mr. TRUMAN. And this provision in the bill is entirely unnecessary?

Mr. WHEELER. It is entirely unnecessary, except that if the Corporation wants to take in old equipment in exchange for new equipment, and apply it upon the purchase price, then the bill provides that they shall have 40 years in which to pay for it. The Corporation can lend the money to the railroads or lease the equipment to them for the period of 40 years, and lend the money to them at about one-half of 1 percent more than what it costs the Government of the United States. They can lease the equipment to the railroads for 40 years, and they can take an equipment trust and have them pay it off in 40 years, and before the 40 years expires the equipment which they take will be absolutely worthless, and of no value whatsoever. They cannot do this through public bidding but they can do it by private negotiation. There has never been in the history of the Senate, in my judgment, a more loosely drawn provision than this section giving the R. F. C. the power to make contracts and negotiate with railroads, and to turn equipment over to them. It is almost impossible of administration, and everyone who has studied the problem knows the Government will never get the money back.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield. Mr. McKELLAR. Has the committee of which the Senator is chairman ever had this matter before it, or was it brought before it, or was the Senator consulted about the matter?

Mr. WHEELER. The Committee on Interstate Commerce has studied this problem of railroad financing for the last 2 or 3 years. There was never the slightest intimation of this proposal brought to the attention of any member of our committee; we were never consulted about it in any way, shape, or form, and I am sure that every member of the committee who knows anything about it would have been unanimously against a proposition of this kind, because we know what has been going on in the way of financing on the part of some of the railroads, and we also know of the tremendous losses which have already been sustained by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in respect to some of the loans which it has made to the railroads. I happen to know of one particular instance of a loan of $80,000,000 made to one railroad, and the securities for that loan, which the Government has today, have a market value which would not amount to 50 percent of the amount of the loan. How many other loans have been made which are in the same condition no one knows at the present time except the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. We do not have any positive, definite information, although I asked for such information something like 2 or 3 months ago.

Suppose a loan is made to a railroad, and as security the Government takes an old engine, or an old car, or an old machine of any kind or character; what are the farmers of the country going to say about that? Further, suppose the loan is made at the rate of one-half percent more than the money costs the Government to obtain. The farmers are going to say, "We want to make loans on the same basis."

A farmer might come in with a couple of mules and say, "Lend me the money to buy a pair of mules," and offer as security the old broken-down mules. Farmers in the Northwest will bring in old broken-down farm machines-threshing machines, plows, and harrows-and offer to turn them into the Government in order to get a loan with which to buy new equipment, and then the loan would be made on the basis of 40 years in which to pay it back.

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, I believe that if we took as security for loans a lot of old second-hand tractors and cultivators and other farm machinery in order to enable the farmers to buy new equipment we would be doing better than we would do under this provision of the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, we are doing that very thing now under the Rehabilitation Act, and we have $300,-000,000 in this bill for continuing the rehabilitation service under which farmers are able to purchase new machinery in lieu of old and equip their farms as they have been doing in a more modest way under the appropriation heretofore

Mr. WHEELER. I beg to differ with the Senator from Kentucky. There is not any method today by which a farmer can turn in his second-hand used machinery or horses or cows to the Government of the United States and get some new mules or some new machinery, and have his old equipment apply on the payment. The Government will be in the second-hand business and junk business if we do the same in the case of the farmers as with the railroads.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is mistaken about that. Mr. WHEELER. No; I am not.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. In the Committee on Banking and Currency, when this legislation was before that committee, and this particular section pertaining to the railroads was under discussion, I asked Mr. Jesse Jones where the genesis was for this legislation, and to save my soul I could not find out.

Furthermore, any railroad in this country can borrow all the money it wants to on equipment, and these equipment bonds go like hot cakes without the Government acting in the capacity of a wet nurse in the matter.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I am glad the Senator called attention to that, because the evidence before the committee was to the effect that the railroads can go to any banking institution in the country and borrow money for equipment by giving equipment trust certificates, covering a period of years, but not more than 40 years.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I merely rise to ask the majority leader if he would not withdraw his statement about the rehabilitation of farmers as a comparison with this provision of the bill. Does the Senator realize the condition in which farmers must be before they can secure the type of aid to which he refers?

Mr. BARKLEY. I am familiar with the practices in the administration of the Rehabilitation Act. I was replying to the Senator from Montana who seemed to suggest that under the program of this bill and under the policy of the United States heretofore in vogue, we were not doing this; that we were not rehabilitating; that we were not making it possible for farmers to buy new machinery or to buy new stock or to equip their farms with them in order that they might carry on their operations with some fair chance for success.

Mr. HATCH. I merely wanted to say it is true that we have done a great work in the rehabilitation of a certain class of farmers; for those who are unable to help themselves under any circumstances; but to compare the law under which that has been done with this provision of the pending bill seems to me to be so farfetched that I hope the majority leader will not insist on that statement.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator from New Mexico. Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. What will the Government do with the old machinery and equipment that it will take as part payment on the new? What will become of that? What will it do with that? What use has the Government for it?

Mr. WHEELER. None whatever. There is only one thing that can be done with the old equipment. You can go out today and see old boxcars that are being junked by the railroads because they are of no value except as junk. You can find old engines being junked. When the engine is worn out, it is of no earthly use under the sun except for junk.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Well, we will be able to sell it to Japan as scrap iron and steel.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. The Senator, as I understood him, stated that the railroads can now go into the capital market and procure capital for equipment loans.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. I think the Senator is entirely correct in that statement so far as the testimony before the committee was concerned; but it was also testified, I think, unanimously, by the witnesses who appeared that in order to do that the railroads had to pay 20 percent down in cash before they could be financed through a bond issue and through private-investment bankers.

Mr. Jones, I think it was, testified that many of the railroads were unable to put up 20 percent in cash and get the equipment loans made on a 100-percent basis that were fairly good. He testified also that the R. F. C. had made several such loans within the last 6 months and that they felt that a 100-percent equipment loan was a good loan if properly made and properly supervised, and that many railroads might be unable and are unable today to take advantage of the private-capital market because of the requirement of the 20-percent down payment.

Mr. WHEELER. I did not hear Mr. Jones' testimony. But let me say to the Senator that there is no doubt that the railroads today can buy equipment on the installment plan. The testimony before the Interstate Commerce Committee during the hearings was that the railroads could borrow all the money they wanted on equipment trusts.

But this measure goes further than that. This measure permits the railroads to turn in their old equipment and to make any kind of a deal on any kind of basis. In other words, we have thrown the matter wide open.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. I want to point out this fact, that when Mr. John J. Pelley, representing all the railroads of this country. came before our committee and took up this matter, in answer to my question, he said that the whole thing should be dropped out of the bill. Then they revised the plan somewhat and modified it according to the present plan, and then they asked him about it, and he answered in effect in a spirit of fine tolerance, "Let it be in, although we do not need

The point I wish to make is that the R. F. C. has already established the policy of making equipment loans to the railroads, and even to railroads which are in financial difficulties, for it made a loan to the Denver & Rio Grande, a bankrupt road, at the rate of 2% percent, and it made a loan to the Western Maryland, a road in some kind of receivership, at the low rate of 1% percent.

It is a laughable thing, this proposal. There is only one thing to do, strike out this section from the bill; and that will make a bad bill a little bit better than worse. Then kill the bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BONE. In view of the fact that a great many if not all of the railroads have outstanding bond issues that are underlain by a blanket mortgage to secure their payment, as a result of which they have to issue equipment-trust certificates in order to get new money with which to obtain new equipment to operate their roads, what sort of security could the Government be able to get in the face of that sort of financial condition, which is almost universal with the railroads?

Mr. WHEELER. The only thing they could do would be to get a Government loan for 40 years with which to buy equipment, but the equipment would be worn out in a period of from 15 to 20 years.

Mr. BONE. Obviously a mortgage could not be placed on equipment that is presently mortgaged, and it would of necessity have to rest on the new stuff. There is a question in my mind as to how valuable that kind of a mortgage would be

Mr. WHEELER. The R. F. C. are lending money to banks and receivers of banks at 3 percent. They are loaning money to mortgage-insurance companies at $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent. They are loaning it to the railroads generally at 4 percent, and in some instances on equipment trusts, as the Senator from New Hampshire said, at something less than $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent.

Industrial loans are made at 4 percent for a period of 2 years. Self-liquidating loans are made at 4 percent for a period of 2 years from April 1, 1931. R. F. C. securities are exempt from all Federal, State, and local taxation, except surtaxes, gift taxes, inheritance taxes, and estate taxes.

They are loaning money to the farmers of this country for $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent and up to as high as 5 percent.

Now it is proposed to make loans to railroads on equipment trusts for ½ of 1 percent more than the money costs the Government, over a 40-year period, when they are not in distressed condition so far as borrowing money on equipment trusts is concerned.

First, they can borrow it from any of the banks throughout the country. Secondly, they can borrow it from the R. F. C. on equipment trusts. There is no necessity for this provision in the bill; and the suggestion that they be permitted to turn in their old junk as part payment is perfectly ridiculous and should not be in the bill.

In addition to that, it is proposed to lease equipment to the roads for a 40-year period. If that is to be done why should not the Government buy equipment for the farmer and lease it to him for a period of 40 years, and let him pay for it in that length of time?

Mr. President, I say that if we do this the great utility interests and others will be down here asking to be accorded the same sort of treatment, and they will be entitled to it. Many manufacturers and other businessmen of the country are in distressed condition, and would like new machinery. Why should not the Government of the United States lend them money so they can buy equipment? Why should not the manufacturers be loaned money on the same basis, and the farmers and every other class of business?

I submit the provision should be stricken from the bill. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Has the Senator ever heard in his life of a lessee who would take care of property as well as the owner of the property?

Mr. WHEELER. No; I have not.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. As a matter of fact, it was proved that at the time the United States Government itself took over the railroad properties during the war, the United States Government did not take as good care of the railroad equipment of this country as the owners had been in the habit of doing. It would be very much cheaper actually to loan the money to the railroads, or give it to them, than to undertake any sort of leasing proposition of this sort.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. I have no objection if the Government wants to loan money to the railroads upon a proper basis. It is doing it. It is taking terrific losses and will take more losses. But if property is leased to the railroads, what will happen is as the Senator has said, and the Government will be in litigation with the railroads for the next 20 years. At the present time there are pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission claims on the part of the railroads for money which they say is due them by reason of losses sustained during Government operation. Among other things, the railroads claim the Government did not keep the equipment in as good repair as it should.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Have not the railroads in the past always financed their equipment under trust agreements?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. MINTON. And have not they always been profitable to the people who held the trust agreements?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. MINTON. Why would the Government be taking a greater risk than those who have dealt with the railroads in the past for years?

Mr. WHEELER. Why should we loan the railroads money when they may borrow it from private institutions?

The reason we are passing legislation now is not merely for the purpose of putting the Government into the equipment-trust business. The Government is going into all classes of business. There is no more reason for making loans to manufacturers and farmers of the country than for making them to railroads.

The Senator says that the railroads may issue equipment trusts today. That is true. However, I have never heard of an equipment trust running for 40 years. No equipment trust runs for a longer period than the life of the equipment.

Mr. MINTON. There is nothing in the bill which compels the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make a 40-year loan. It may make such loans for 10 years, or 20 years, or whatever the life of the equipment may be. The Senator assumes that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is going to make a different kind of a contract than experience has dictated throughout the years.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course I do. I say that because of the fact that loans have been made to the railroads of the country which in my judgment should not have been made, and on which the Government has taken terrific losses. I know, and the Senator knows, that if we put such power into the hands of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, pressure will be put on that body for long-term loans. What private concern has ever taken a lot of junk and worn-out material in part payment for new material? When has the Government of the United States ever taken a lot of junk and worn-out material in part payment for new material, as the testimony before the committee shows is proposed to be done?

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. As I understand the Senator's argument, he anticipates that the Government is to make a contract on which it will lose money.

Mr. WHEELER. I have no doubt about it.

Mr. MINTON. In the next breath he tells us that equipment trusts have always been profitable. Why does he assume that the Government is going into an unprofitable business when everybody else has made money out of it?

Mr. WHEELER. Because every time the Government has gone into business it has lost money.

Mr. MINTON. I do not agree with the Senator; and the record of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation does not bear out his statement.

Mr. WHEELER. I submit that the record does bear it out; and I submit that the Government has lost money on railroad loans.

Mr. MINTON. It has not lost money on all the transactions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as a whole. The Senator knows that equipment trusts are the best security a railroad can give; and yet the Senator stands here and tells us that the United States is going bankrupt if it takes the same kind of contracts on which other people have been making money throughout the years.

Mr. WHEELER. The Government is not going to take the same kind of contracts.

Mr. MINTON. What makes the Senator think the Government is not going to take them?

Mr. WHEELER. Because of the testimony before the committee, and because I know what has been done.

Mr. MINTON. Does the Senator think that Mr. Jesse Jones and those running the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will make worse contracts than other people have been making throughout the years?

Mr. WHEELER. What is the use of talking with the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. MINTON. Or the Senator from Montana. He has his mind made up. He is not for the bill. He wants to tear it limb from limb.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I do not propose to let the Senator put words in my mouth.

Mr. MINTON. I do not propose to let the Senator from Montana put words in my mouth, either.

Mr. WHEELER. I am not trying to put words into the Senator's mouth.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator certainly did.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator's mouth is big enough so that I can do it. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana will suspend. The Chair wishes to admonish the occupants of the galleries that they are here as guests of the Senate. and that the rules of the Senate do not permit any expressions of approval or disapproval.

The Senator from Montana may continue.

Mr. MINTON. I am willing to let the Senator's statement stand in the RECORD. It is all right with me if he wants to indulge in that kind of tactics.

Mr. WHEELER. I will take the remark out of the RECORD.

Mr. MINTON. No; leave it in.

Mr. WHEELER. I am perfectly willing to leave it in; but when the Senator comes before the Senate and says that I am trying to tear the bill limb from limb, I say he is stating something which is not at all in accordance with my views about the matter. I am opposed to making these loans. I say it is ridiculous to make them, and that the Government of the United States should never entertain a proposal of this kind.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. I will say to the Senator from Indiana and to the Senator from Montana that when Mr. Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, appeared before the committee, he was asked how much money the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had lost on its loans, and he said, "I am ashamed to tell how much." However, that statement was expurgated from the hearings. That was his

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Jones, the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was referring to small industrial loans. Nothing connected with railroad loans had any relationship to the statement made by Mr. Jones which is quoted by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not know anything about his testimony; but the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has made loans and has lost money on its railroad loans.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I should like to ask the Senator from Montana what security the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been obtaining from railroads for past railroad loans. What has been the nature of the security?

Mr. WHEELER. It has taken bonds and securities of the railroads. It has taken all kinds of bonds and securities of various railroads.

Mr. BONE. Obviously, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could not obtain mortgage liens on the railroads when they are covered by bond issues.

Mr. WHEELER. No. It has taken securities which the railroads have held. For example, many of the railroads hold the bonds and stocks of other railroads. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has taken such things as security for loans.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Briefly, is not the situation presented by this section of the bill that whereas the railroads have always been able to borrow money on equipment trusts, which are considered perhaps the very best railroad securities, or among the very best railroad securities, their equipment trusts are limited in terms to the useful life of the equipment?

Mr. WHEELER. Of course.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. This section, in effect, sets up a series of equipment trusts based upon something like three times the useful life of the equipment, as proven by railroad experience.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. When the proposal was first discussed, it was proposed to lease equipment to the railroads for a period of 40 years. That was the original idea of those who sponsored the bill. The proposal was to lease the equipment to the railroads for a period of 40 years.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. Will the Senator point out, for the information of the Senate, the 40-year provision to which he has frequently referred?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. ELLENDER. Where is it? Mr. WHEELER. It is on page 17, section 17:

No project shall be constructed, nor any loan made directly or indirectly to construct any project, unless through its operations or from reasonable assurances or agreements it is determined by the agencies making the expenditure or loan that the amount expended, or the loan, with interest, will be repaid within 40 years.

Mr. ELLENDER. That language does not deal with the leasing of equipment. It refers to projects that may be constructed. What about the language on page 2, beginning in line 13? What does it mean? Does it not conflict with the language quoted by the Senator on page 17, section 17?

Mr. WHEELER. The language in section 3 on page 2

Such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations may mature at such time or times, not exceeding 30 years from their date, and contain and be subject to such terms, covenants, and con-

Mr. ELLENDER. Such terms as the lending Corporation shall determine. The notes or bonds may mature long before the debt incurred for the purchase of equipment.

Mr. WHEELER (continuing):

Subject to such terms, covenants, and conditions as the Corporation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe.

Mr. ELLENDER. And not to exceed $2,390,000,000. Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. ELLENDER. Can the Senator reconcile those two provisions?

Mr. WHEELER. I must confess that I cannot; but I do not think the first provision applies-

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that situation is perfectly easy of explanation. The provision just referred to provides that the notes and debentures issued by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to obtain the money with which to assist railroads, farmers, and many other activities may run for 30 years, although the agency may make loans for as long a period as 40 years. However, Mr. Jones testified before the committee that in such a case all the Corporation would have to do would be to reissue the 30-year bonds and obtain money for the extra 10-year period, so that the Corporation might be able to obtain some advantage by not extending its obligations longer than 30 years. However, there is no inconsistency between that provision and the provision of the bill fixing a 40-year maximum for loans made by the various agencies.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. In the matter of making or losing money, is it not perfectly evident from reading this section that it will be impossible for the Government to make any money on these loans? On the contrary, it is absolutely necessary that it lose, and lose very largely.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator. I think he is entirely correct. I do not see how anyone could come to any other conclusion.

Mr. McKELLAR. That must be the intent of the bill. Mr. WHEELER. Yes. One cannot read the bill and come to any other logical conclusion from the provisions of the

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. I should like to direct the Senator's attention to page 9, line 16, where the Senator will find the words "or otherwise."

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. Mr. DANAHER. Has the Senator given thought to exactly what Mr. Jones had in mind by that language?

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think this is Mr. Jones' language. I do not think Mr. Jones ever had anything to do with drafting this language.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator thinks so, he is mistaken.

Mr. WHEELER. Perhaps I am.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is. I happen to know that

Mr. WHEELER. If the Senator says so, I will take his word for it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I know that is true.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield

Mr. WHEELER. I cannot believe that Mr. Jones ever thought he should be given power to make any kind of a loan he wanted to make, and to take junk as a part of the payment of the loan. If Mr. Jones ever proposed anything of the kind, then I must confess that I would lose a great deal of respect for his judgment.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. I was present when Mr. Jones made the statement on page 93 of the hearings to which I invite the Senator's attention. When he talks about financing railroads and assisting them by loan, lease, "or otherwise," that is Mr. Jones' idea. He wanted to buy railroad securities. He wanted to lend money to the railroads to buy in Why? He explained. On page 94 he their own bonds. explained that if the railroad were able to buy in its own bonds, it would be able the better to maintain its road and to keep more men at work. Moreover, he said that a railroad which has to skimp to pay its interest on outstanding bonds is able, by reducing the charges, to buy new equipment, and thus conform to the purpose and intendment of the bill.

The distinguished majority leader [Mr. BARKLEY] is quite correct in saying that the matter of the amendment was taken up with Mr. Jones, and that his purpose is as stated. Secondly, the words "or otherwise" imply that the Corporation may lend money to railroads to buy in their own bonds.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana. Mr. MINTON. I have before me the United States News for May 29, 1939, in which is published the record of loans of 10 major governmental agencies; namely, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Rural Electrification Administration, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Administration, the United States Housing Authority, the Disaster Loan Corporation, and the Central Bank for Cooperatives. The record shows an operating profit, according to this newspaper, of $414,300,729.

In the light of that kind of a record does the Senator think we may expect that the Government will make equipment trust loans so as to take a loss on them, as the Senator has indicated?

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think there is any question under the sun that the Government cannot make these loans in the manner testified to before the committee without taking a loss on them. One can come to no other logical conclusion. With all due respect to Mr. Jones, who has probably done as good a job as anybody could, I say that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has lost money on railroad loans. I know that in the case of some of the railroads the securities taken by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are not worth more than 40 or 50 percent, or perhaps not more than 33 1/3 percent, of the amount of the loans.

Mr. MINTON. Has the Senator heard of the loan recently made to the Southern Railway, from whose securities the Government realized a profit of over $1,000,000?

Mr. WHEELER. No; I have not heard of that particular loan. However, I can tell the Senator about a great many other loans with respect to which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has taken terrific losses.

Mr. MINTON. What makes the Senator think that because the Government will make equipment-trust loans it will lose money, when everybody else who has made them has always made money?

Mr. WHEELER. I have tried several times to explain it to the Senator; and if I have not made it plain to him, it is undoubtedly my fault. I am not going to try to explain it again.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Indiana, in the statement he made, showed the book value of the loans. No appraisement whatever has been made of these loans. Furthermore. the Senator from Montana knows that the Commodity Credit Corporation, for example, has twice lost its complete capital stock-$94,000,000 one year, and $116,000,000 another

There is no question whatever that there are great losses in all the Government loans that have been made. They have not been disclosed because no appraisement has been made. The Senate recently adopted a resolution requiring that the assets be appraised.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator. I have not the slightest doubt that if today we took the market value of the securities which are held by the R. F. C. and checked them up against the loans they have made, we should find that the R. F. C. had taken a terrific lot of losses, not only as to railroads but as to industrial concerns and pretty nearly every other corporation to which they have made loans. Of course, if the loans are carried on the books at their face value, the books are going to show an increase and a profit to the loaning agencies; but, as the Senator from Missouri says, we cannot cash in on those values at all.

Let us assume, however, that they were going to make money. The only reason why we are passing this legislation is to help out some concern that needs to have money and cannot get it at any other place. I challenge anybody to stand on the floor of the Senate and say that the railroads of the country cannot get money for equipment trusts from any reliable banking firm in the United States today. There is not any doubt that they can.

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President-

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Missouri. Mr. TRUMAN. The railroads already have power to get money for this very purpose from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly; there is no doubt about it. Mr. TRUMAN. And the R. F. C. does not need this section at all to do the business.

Mr. WHEELER. They do not need it to make legitimate loans.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The R. F. C. has power to make loans to the railroads, of course. We all admit that; and they have made loans, not only to railroads for equipment purposes, but for other purposes. No losses have been sustained by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, however, on loans that have been made for the purpose of securing equipment.

Mr. WHEELER. That is true. Mr. BARKLEY. And there have been no final losses, as I understand, except in one case in which there was a false certification by a well-known concern of auditors or certifiers-Price, Waterhouse & Co., I believe. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation does have power to make direct loans, but it has no power to enter into contracts by which equipment may be manufactured on the plans and specifications of a railroad, and the R. F. C. may take a lease on that equipment, and in the contract provide for its repayment over a period of years, and provide for the ultimate ownership of the equipment by the railroad itself.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.
Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Jones testified to that before the committee.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct. What is being done in this bill, and the original purpose of it, is and was, for the Government to buy equipment and lease it to the railroads for a period of 40 years. Let us make no mistake about that. That is the purpose of the bill, and that is the very reason why these provisions were written into the bill.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator please show me where the 40-year provision is?

Mr. WHEELER. The 40-year provision is in section 17, on page 17.

Mr. MALONEY. If the Senator will read that section I should like to be corrected if I am in error—it seems to me to state that "no project shall be constructed nor any loan made directly or indirectly to construct any project"-

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.
Mr. MALONEY. It does not seem to me that that applies to railroad-equipment loans.

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, yes; there is not any question about it. That is the reason why it was put in there.

Mr. MALONEY. I do not so understand it. Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the 40-year limitation is a maximum for all the loans contemplated in the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.
Mr. BARKLEY. It does not mean, however, that those loans will be for 40 years. We could not fix a different period with respect to all the four or five types of loans provided for in the bill. It was desirable, in the case of loans to municipalities or public bodies under the P. W. A. provisions, that the loans should be for a maximum of 40 years, and that under the Bankhead-Jones Act and the Rural Rehabilitation Act the maximum should be 40 years, and that under all these provisions for loans the maximum should be 40 years. There was no reason to make a different period for the railroads, but there is also no reason why they have to be for 40 years.

Mr. MALONEY. Is not that the only reason it was made 40 years-to protect the loans to which the Senator has just referred?

Mr. WHEELER. Absolutely. Forty years is the maximum; but the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may make loans for 15 years, or 20 years, or 25 years. The mere fact that there is a maximum over-all, with regard to all the loans, does not at all mean that they will be for 40 years.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I agree with the Senator from Kentucky that it is not necessary for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lease the equipment to the railroads for 40 years: but I am saying to the Senator that I happen to know that the idea was, when they talked to me-because I was talked to about it after the bill was introduced-that they should build or buy this equipment and lease it to the railroads over a period of 40 years.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. My recollection is that Secretary Morgenthau testified before the committee that one of the advantages of this power was that these loans could be made for 30 years, whereas private capital would never be willing to make them for longer than 15 years. That is my recollection of the testimony, and I think there is no doubt about it. He stated that it was the purpose. It was 30 years, not 40 years.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. FRAZIER, Mr. BYRNES, and other Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield first to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I desire to state that in the hearings the Honorable Jesse Jones, when asked about the losses the R. F. C. had had on their old loans, made the statement that they had taken care of those losses by what they made in the rate of interest. That is, they got the money at a very low rate, and charged a high rate of about 3 percent for the loans they made. He said they took care of the losses in that way; but he said it could not be done under this bill, because they were limited under the bill at that time to one-eighth of 1 percent above what the money cost. Since that time it has been made one-quarter of 1 percent.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from South Caro-

Mr. BYRNES. Because the Senator has been discussing the matter-though it has been mentioned by the Senator from Kentucky-I think it should be said that section 17, to which the Senator has referred, was introduced by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] and myself, and the 40-year period was placed in that section because one or two of the subjects in the bill provided for loans for 40 years. As the Senator from Colorado stated, the reclamation projects by statute are made payable in 40 years; but we put at the end of the bill, after the various items, a blanket provision providing that there must be reasonable assurance of repayment of the amount loaned. If the Senator will notice the language-

Mr. WHEELER. I have read the language.

Mr. BYRNES. It says "to construct any project"; and we intended that to refer to the previous phases of the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes; I have read it.

Mr. BYRNES. I only wanted to call the Senator's atten-

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator for doing so; but I want to call his attention to the fact that, in section 7, where the bill says-

(a) Through public bidding or private negotiations to make contracts for, or to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise-

Under that language the R. F. C. may lease the equipment to the railroads not only for 40 years but for 100 years, or for any time. There is no limit to the time for which they may lease it. So under the leasing provision they are not even limited to 40 years or anything else.

Mr. BYRNES. Inasmuch as the discussion as to Mr. Jones' view has taken place, I think the Senator should have called to his attention the fact, for whatever it is worth, that, on page 92 of the hearings, he stated that certainly they had no idea of providing loans for more than the life of the equipment, which, in his opinion, was from 15 to 20 years. He may not be administering the loans, however.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course; but the truth about the matter is, as the Senator knows, that Mr. Jones is not going to be administering the loans any longer. He has a title without any authority.

Mr. BYRNES. No; I will venture to say that the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Jones, will never be found in the fix of having a title but no authority. He will generally have more authority than the title conveys.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President-

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Washington. Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. In view of the statement of the Senator from South Carolina that 40 years was just included as an over-all figure, and would not apply to railroad Ioans, if they are to be made only for the life of the equipment, and, as has been said here, that is 15 or 18 years, what would be the objection to a 20-year limitation, say?

Mr. WHEELER. Of course that would be very helpful if we were going to make these equipment-trust loans. Frankly, I would not have any objection to making loans to the railroads for equipment trusts. The R. F. C. has that authority, and does it at the present time; so there is not any necessity for writing into the legislation at this time provisions to give them power to make loans for equipment trusts. They have that power. They have done it in several instances. They have done it with two or three roads which are in the hands of receivers, and they have done it with some others; so there is not any reason for that. The provision that they really wanted was a provision for the Government to buy equipment. This provision gives the R. F. C. power not only to loan the railroads the money for equipment trusts, but in addition to trade in-and the record shows it-old equipment which they have as part of the purchase price. Then, again, the Government is going into the leasing business

Why should the Government, as a matter of fact, buy equipment? Do we want to start on a program of the Government buying equipment and leasing it to the railroads? If we do that, we are going to have to do it with the manufacturers. They are going to come down here and say, "We want some new equipment in our business. We want you to build us some equipment and lease it to us." Then the farmer is going to come in and say, "I want a new threshing machine. You buy it," and the Government will be leasing threshing machines, and we shall be going into all kinds of business.

I want to call attention to the fact that when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill was pending before the Senate in the Hoover administration, the Republicans on the other side of the Chamber stood up and said, "If we pass this R. F. C. legislation it will only be a question of time when the smoke will be coming out of the factory chimneys, and the railroads will be prosperous, and then the farmers out in the West will be prosperous." I then repeatedly said on the floor of the Senate that the R. F. C. legislation was bad legislation. I said, "When you start loaning money to the banks of the country, when you start bailing out the banks of the country and bailing out the insurance companies of the country, when you start loaning money to railroads, you cannot stop short of loaning money to every other class of persons in the United States."

I say to those who criticize this administration because of the fact that they have made loans to farmers, and those who criticize this administration because they have done a lot of other things, that the first wrong thing that was done was when we started to make loans through the R. F. C. to the banks, and the insurance companies, and the railroads, and when we bailed out some of the big private banking institutions of the country. According to the testimony before our committee we bailed them out because we took over the loans that were made. The R. F. C. bailed out some of the biggest private banking institutions in the country, and when we started doing that we could not stop it. We could not say to the farmer, and we could not say to the manufacturer, and we could not say to the merchant, "We are going to do this for the railroads, we are going to do it for the banks, we are going to do it for the insurance companies, but we will not do it for you."

If now we start building equipment for the railroads and leasing it to them over a period of 30 or 40 years, I say that we cannot avoid doing the same thing for every single class of people under the sun.

If we say to the railroads, "We are going to take back as part payment on some of your loans the old junk you have," we cannot refuse to do the same thing for the farmer, for the manufacturer, for the storekeeper. If we want to adopt such a policy, let us be frank about it, let us say we are going to do it for the railroads, for the manufacturer, for the merchant, for the farmer. Let us not start and not carry it through.

No matter what is said or thought, we would have to treat all alike.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I recognize that the Senator has several objections, but one of them is that a 40-year term is too long, and looking purely at that one objection, would that not be met by a 20-year limitation? If the statement of the Senator from South Carolina is correct—that they intend not to make loans longer than for the life of the equipment—I should like to know why such an amendment could not be included.

Mr. WHEELER. I would not have any objection, and I so stated when the bill was first introduced, if there were a desire to lend the railroads money to buy equipment. We are doing it now; but I objected to having the Government of the United States buying equipment and leasing it to the railroads.

We are asked to authorize lending them money to buy equipment, but when it is provided that the Government shall take back the old junk in part payment, and that it will give the roads 30 or 40 years in which to repay, and that the equipment is to be leased to the roads, I say we are going to get the Government into all kinds of difficulty.

When the Senator from Indiana says that I am urging these objections because I want to tear down the bill, I say to him that I not only made them upon the floor of the Senate, but I urged the President of the United States not to press this, because I felt it was a wrong policy and would lead us in the wrong direction. I did not go to him in a spirit of trying to tear down the proposal, but there are some Members of the Senate who, no matter what anyone says, if he votes and speaks his own convictions, think he must be looked upon as an enemy of the President of the United States. Some take that attitude because they are currying favor with the Chief Executive by denouncing everybody who has an opinion of his own.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield the floor.

Mr. MINTON. I should like to know whether the Senator from Montana is for the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes: I intend to vote for the bill.

Mr. MINTON. I am glad to hear it.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator could have heard it a long time ago, because I announced it some time ago.

Mr. BARKLEY obtained the floor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator if he cares to propound a question to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I asked the Senator a very definite question, and I do not think he intended, by the latter part of his remarks, to intimate that because I asked him that question I was denouncing him.

Mr. WHEELER. Let me say to the Senator from Washington that I had no such idea. His remarks were entirely of a constructive nature, and I appreciate the suggestion he made. I would say it would be a fine measure, if the rest of the provisions were cut out, and the bill merely provided for the lending of money to buy equipment, limiting it to the life of the equipment trust. In that event I would not raise my voice in protest, I would say I would be for it. But that is not what it provides.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I dislike to occupy the floor of the Senate so frequently, but, inasmuch as I am under some obligation in regard to the bill, I suppose the Senate will forgive me for injecting myself into the debate more frequently than I otherwise would.

For a long time we have recognized certain fundamental weaknesses in our railroad transportation system. I do not think it is profitable now to go into any detail in undertaking to attach responsibility for those weaknesses.

The Senator from Montana is chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, a very able and diligent and industrious chairman. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. Truman] has been chairman for 2 or 3 years of a subcommittee of that committee, and I am honored by membership myself upon it. During that time certain phases of the railroad situation have been rather carefully gone into.

For a good while there has been an almost universal cry, not from railroad people but from the country at large, that something must be done to save the railroads. Not only are those who have their money invested in railroads interested in preserving the roads as a part of our transportation system, but the approximately million men who are working on railroads in the United States are likewise interested, the traveling public is interested, the shipping public is interested, industry likewise is interested.

Other forms of transportation—the bus, the automobile, the airplane—have come into existence as competitors of the railroads, just as the railroads in a former day came in as competitors with the steamboat and the stagecoach. We have found the railroads in a situation where they have needed financial assistance. There has been a general accusation, with some justification, that in many cases the railroads are no longer owned by the railroads themselves, but by bankers. Undoubtedly there is some justification for the feeling among many Members of this body, and throughout the Nation, that before we ever get to a fundamental railway transportation condition, the railroads must be put through what is called the "wringer," in order to wring out the water which has been pumped into the securities of the railroads because others than executives of railroad transportation systems have sometimes obtained control of the railroads. But without regard to these causes, without regard to this historical background which surrounds the condition of our railroads, the railroads of this country are undoubtedly as a whole in a weakened financial and physical condition.

Various projects or proposals have come forward for the lending of more money to the railroads. We have authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend up to $350,000,000 to the railroads of the country, and under that jurisdiction the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has made direct loans to railroads, and it has also made equipment loans to railroads in order that they might improve their rolling stock, and perform their services as facilities for transportation throughout the United States.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. I should like to inquire of the majority leader how long it has been that the heart of this administration has been bleeding for the railroads?

Mr. BARKLEY. How long what? Mr. BRIDGES. The heart of the administration has been bleeding for the railroads of the country.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not talking about the heart of the administration and I am not talking about bleeding. I am discussing generally the condition of the railroads in the United States. I do not suppose the Senator from New Hampshire will dispute the premises I have laid.

Mr. BRIDGES. No; but it is the first time I have heard that the administration has bled very greatly for the railroads, and I wondered when this change of attitude took place.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are so many things in the world the Senator from New Hampshire never heard of that I have not time now to catalog them. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRIDGES. The Senator prefers cataloging a few of the things for himself first.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will attend to that in due time. I say that there is no dispute about the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make a loan to a railroad. with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and on their certification that the railroad which is applying for the loan, and which is before the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on that application, is not in need of reorganization, that the security is of such a nature as to be reasonably calculated to insure repayment of the loan. Under the present law the R. F. C. cannot make a loan to a railroad without the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission. That Commission must certify that the security is of such a nature as to reasonably assure repayment, and that the road is not in need of reorganization through processes of bankruptcy.

Various proposals have been made to increase the lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and before the Committee on Banking and Currency Mr. Jones suggested an amendment to the pending bill authorizing them to make loans up to $150,000,000, in the aggregate, in order to enable the railroads to buy up their own securities at reduced prices in order that they might avoid the necessity for reorganization through the courts of bankruptcy. The committee did not agree with that amendment, and it is not

Mr. President, what is the condition which has made advisable the enactment of the provisions in the bill? I will say to the Senator from Montana and to the Senator from Washington and to other Senators that, so far as I am concerned, I have no objection to limiting the length of the loans to the railroads for equipment purposes to 20 years. Forty years was the limit adopted because it was not thought necessary to make a different period for different types of loans. It is 40 years for the R. E. A., 40 years for the Farm Security; 40 years for cities, towns, and counties under the P. W. A. program; and 40 years for the other types of loans; and it was not thought necessary to fix a different period for railroad loans, because we thought we could trust the officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make the loans on such terms and conditions as would be reasonably businesslike and sound.

What is the situation with respect to the railroad equipment? One of the outstanding and able men of the country. whatever may be said with respect to his policies, however much one may disagree with him, Mr. Marriner Eccles, the head of the Federal Reserve System, in his testimony before the committee, which was undisputed, and which was corroborated from other sources, gave the following informa-

Mr. Eccles. I think the committee will be interested in the considerations that led to its inclusion in this program.

That was with respect to the railway equipment-loan pro-

We have on the one hand, in the railroad-equipment industry, one of the most depressed of all our capital-goods industries. On the other hand, we have the railroads, with the supply of rolling stock rapidly declining in quantity and deteriorating in quality. Our supply of freight cars—

I ask Senators to listen to this because there is no dispute about it-

Our supply of freight cars is back to the level of 1905. over 40 percent of the freight cars are 20 years of age or older. Over 70 percent of the steam locomotives are 20 years of age or older, and only 3 percent are under 10 years of age. Some 13,000 locomotives of American railroads were built before 1910. Most of the machine-shop equipment of American railroads is universally acknowledged to be obsolete and in poor condition. Consequently, repair costs are high, both because of the age of the rolling stock and because of the character of the equipment of the machine shops. In no field, I believe, from the point of view of economy, recovery, or national defense, could the Government's credit be better used than in enabling the roads to modernize their equipment.

The success of this program depends upon low interest rates, long maturities, and no down payments, so that railroads can acquire new equipment at annual costs no greater and in some cases less than those arising out of the operation and maintenance of some of the present aged and obsolete equipment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Kentucky in saying that we should do our best to help the railroads, but I am now looking at the provisions in this bill, and I call the Senator's attention to line 24, on page 9. subsection (b)-

(b) To lease, with or without the option to purchase, or to sell or rent upon such terms and conditions as it shall prescribe, any railroad equipment constructed, rebuilt, or repaired under this

That indicates that the Government by this section of the bill is going into the business of rebuilding, repairing, and constructing railroad equipment. What is the purpose of that? Is it the intention to ease the Government into the railroad business in such a way that the railroads are to be taken over by the Government?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I will say to the Senator it is not. One of the objections which was raised by the railroads themselves to the provision as originally introduced was that it might have authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to construct equipment on the speculative prospect that it might lease it, or lend it, or sell it to some railroad.

Mr. John J. Pelley in his testimony before the committee objected to that provision because it might put the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in competition with railroad shops, or other industries engaged in the manufacture of railroad equipment, and it was never the intention to do that. So the bill was modified so as to provide that this equipment is to be constructed and repaired by contract, with the railroad doing the repairing and construction in its own shops, or in other shops if it wishes to do that, and when that railroad equipment is repaired, constructed, or rebuilt, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may enter into a contract with the road for a rental or a lease over a term of years that will enable the railroad to acquire the equipment, improve its rolling stock, whether passenger or freight, to obtain new engines, to obtain modern boxcars, modern passenger cars, and, if necessary, to enlarge and equip its own facilities for manufacturing, or improving, or reconstructing the equipment necessary to operate the roads.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if what we see in the public print is true, one of the troubles with the railroads now is that they have more equipment than they have goods to carry in their equipment, and it seems to me that what they need rather than equipment is business.

Mr. BARKLEY. They undoubtedly need business, but the equipment which the Senator has in his mind is obsolete and out of date; it is out of repair; it is antiquated; it is not sufficient to meet the requirements of a modern transportation system.

Mr. President, the bill does not contain any of the scare-crows or bogies which it may be possible to conjure up with respect to it. Mr. Jones in his testimony before the committee—and he was more elaborate and went into more detail in testifying before the House committee than he did before the Senate committee—was emphatic in his statement that he needed this authority, and that the railroads needed the equipment; that he had no authority now to lease, or to enter into a contract of lease, with the railroads.

In his testimony before the committee Mr. Eastman, with whose record and ability we are all familiar, testified that he favored the authority and the power conferred upon the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by the provisions of this bill, and that he was willing to risk the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and especially Mr. Jones, in the exercise of the authority conferred upon the Corporation by this provision.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is it possible that Mr. Eastman, with his knowledge of railroads, testified that he believed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could go into the railroad equipment business and sell equipment to the railroads cheaper than the railroads can build equipment themselves?

Mr. BARKLEY. I may say to the Senator that it is not contemplated that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will do anything of that sort.

Mr. McKELLAR. Section 7, paragraph (b), provides that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall—

Lease, with or without the option to purchase, or to sell or rent upon such terms and conditions as it shall prescribe, any railroad equipment constructed, rebuilt, or repaired under this section.

It has to repair it or reconstruct it before it can rent it.

Mr. BARKLEY. It has to do it under this section, and subsection (a) sets out in some detail the method by which this process or this program will be carried on. It provides that—

Through public bidding or private negotiation-

In the event a railroad had equipment which it desired to sell at public auction, and which might be bought by some other railroad that needed it, either before or after it had been repaired or reconstructed, it might be desirable to dispose of it by either public bidding or by private negotiation.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I call the attention of the Senator to line 22, page 9, the words after "or otherwise."

The purchase, rebuilding, repair, or disposition of old railroad equipment.

Would it be done by some other railroad company than the one which originally owned it? Is that what the language means?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; it might be done by any equipment manufacturer who might desire to purchase outworn equipment for the purpose of reconstructing it itself, and resell it to a railroad under a program by which that railroad would be able to refinance the operation either by purchase, or lease, or by loan.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator from Montana made what I consider to be a very potent argument against the provision which would permit the Corporation to take in old machinery, railroad equipment, and as one Senator put it, to go into the junk business. As I now understand the Senator from Kentucky, the Corporation would not do that itself at all. Yet I think the language in lines 22 and 23 on page 9 would be subject to the construction placed upon it by the Senator from Montana. It seems to me that if that is not the intent, there should be such amendment to that language as to make it certain that that is not the intent.

Mr. BARKLEY. Among the powers conferred by subsection (a) is to make contracts with the railroads—

To aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase or construction of railroad equipment—

Also-

To aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase, rebuilding, repair, or disposition of old railroad equipment.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. It seems to me that to make the provision certain and to meet the argument made by the Senator from Montana an amendment should be made in lines 22 and 23.

Mr. BARKLEY. If any clarifying language is necessary there, of course, I would not object to it, but frequently railroads might desire to exchange obsolete, outworn equipment which has some value, even if it has value only as junk. It is needless to try to ridicule this provision by referring to the equipment as junk. The railroads of the United States do have outworn and obsolete material that still has a value. They might desire to exchange that by some arrangement of financing which would be facilitated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, for new equipment, and that old, outworn, and obsolete equipment subsequently repaired and reconstructed, either by the railroads that took it over in exchange, or by some equipment construction company that took it over in exchange for modern and new equipment and machinery.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I have no objection to the word "junk" or to "junking."

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. It seems to me it would be absolutely impossible for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to take over this old equipment, whether we call it old equipment or junk, or by any other name, and to dispose of it. If that is not the intention, it seems to me only logical that the possible construction that the Senator from Montana put on it should be obviated by amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate that. It certainly is not contemplated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, or the Banking and Currency Committee, or by anyone else that the Government of the United States shall go into the junk business, but, inasmuch as there are hundreds of thousands of particular pieces of equipment of various kinds that have reached the junk stage, that is, it is outworn and obsolete, although it has some value, certainly there could be no legitimate objection to making it possible for railroads to provide themselves with modern equipment as a substitute for this outworn stuff.

It may be that much of it can be repaired and reconstructed so as to be modernized, and that operation ought to be facilitated. While there has been a depression among the railroads, and a falling off of their traffic, we do not anticipate that that condition will exist forever. It has been unequivocally testified that if there were any emergency, either in the United States or in the world situation, which might call upon the railroads of our country to render a major service to the American people, the railroads are now woefully lacking in equipment which would enable them to perform that service.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I will say to the Senator and to the Senate that I think there is merit in this proposal. The amendment may be a little unfortunate. Perhaps it ought to be changed. However, I will say that the operating manager of a railroad in receivership, which did not have 5 cents' worth of credit, told me that he found 2,400 obsolete freight cars on sidings. He said that the expense of moving them back and forth, storing them on the sidings, and so forth, was $100 a year apiece, or $240,000 a year. Not having any credit, and needing new equipment, he made a deal with a car manufacturer to take the obsolete equipment off his hands as scrap, and to give him an allowance for the scrap as the first payment on new equipment. The car dealer took title to the equipment, and the railroad paid a dollar a day for the use of the equipment, saving 35 cents a day on each car, which it would have paid to other railroads for the use of their cars.

As a result, the railroad turned a liability of 2,400 cars, which cost it $100 a year apiece to carry on sidetracks, move back and forth, insure, and so forth, into an asset; and instead of paying demurrage on cars from other railroads at a dollar a day, the railroad paid the car company a dollar a day, and saved 35 cents on each car, which was applied to the payment for the cars.

The President's committee, which made a report on the railroads a year or two ago, reported that there were 300,000 obsolete cars on the sidings of the railroads of the United States. If it costs the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad $100 a year apiece to carry those obsolete cars, for insurance, storage, and moving them back and forth on sidings, the same thing would be true of any other railroad. Carrying 300,000 cars as obsolete equipment on the railroads of the United States would therefore cost the railroads $30,000,000 a year. If in some way the financing can be fostered without waste and if something can be done to facilitate scrapping the obsolete equipment and turning in the proceeds as part payment for new equipment for railroads which need it, I think the proposal has merit.

The amendment as worded may not properly safeguard the loans or the money which is provided. I have not seen the amendment this evening; but certainly there is merit in retiring obsolete equipment of railroads and applying the proceeds on new equipment, if it can be arranged. If Government finances were necessary, I should not object. I think it would be a good thing, and would be very helpful to the railroads. Some of the railroads have credit, and some have not.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the contribution made by the Senator from Minnesota. I think if there is one thing that is certain growing out of the investigations dealing with this subject, it is, as the Senator has said, that some of the railroads have credit, and some have not. In all likelihood, some strong railroads would never make any use of the provisions of the bill. However, others now have no credit, or have insufficient credit to enable them to borrow money directly from banks in order to carry out the modernization of their equipment; and when they borrow money they have to put up a 20-percent cash payment. In other words, they can borrow only about 80 percent of the value of the equipment.

Mr. TOBEY and Mr. WHEELER addressed the Chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. Just a moment.

Mr. Jones testified before the committee of the House of Representatives-I have forgotten whether or not he so testified before our committee-that a number of roads could take advantage of these provisions, but without them they must hobble along with antiquated, obsolete, outworn, inefficient rolling stock of all sorts. Many of them have not even the money with which to improve the facilities of their own shops so that they may improve their own rolling stock in their own plants.

I now yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, the Senator has referred to the testimony of Mr. Joseph Eastman, whom we all regard as an authority. I quote from Mr. Eastman's testimony in answer to interrogations by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend].

The Senator from Delaware asked this question:

Senator Townsend. You state that your recommendation was that Government funds be furnished for equipment. Under the authority given to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mr. Jones, does not he have full authority to loan for equipment at the present time? Mr. EASTMAN. He does.

Senator Townsend. Does he not have the authority to fix the rate of interest at any rate he may see fit?
Mr. Eastman. That is my understanding.

Further on the Senator from Virginia asked a question:

Senator Glass. Are not the equipment-trust loans regarded as a very sound method?

very sound method?

Mr. Eastman. They have been; yes, sir.
Senator Glass. Is there any railroad that you know of which would be unable to borrow by that method now?

Mr. Eastman. I do not know of any railroad that would be unable to do so, provided it is able to furnish the cash for the down payment. I am not sure that all would be able to or at least would be willing to; they might not feel that it was wise.

Senator Townsend. There is nothing to prevent the Reconstruction Finance Corporation from lending Government money to any of those?

Mr. EASTMAN, No.

With respect to the remarks of the distinguished leader of the majority with reference to the down payment, according to the testimony of Mr. Jones, and of Mr. Eastman, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation now may loan money to any railroad in the country on equipment to meet a down payment, or the whole payment, or anything it wishes to loan. It has the authority. The testimony of Mr. Jones is that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has $1,400,-000,000 of resources to lend. He further testified that it could take care of $770,000,000, including railroads and everything else, for a year, or until the Congress next convenes, without the aid of the bill before us.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator knows that Mr. Jones testified that while the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had the authority to borrow $1,300,000,000 more, he felt that as a business proposition it ought never to come nearer than $1,000,000,000 to exhausting its borrowing power for all purposes.

Mr. TOBEY. But he did concede that he could go along for 1 year, and we could come back again next year.

Mr. BARKLEY. No.

Mr. TOBEY. That is his own testimony. I will read it to the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. If Mr. Jones felt that the railroads which need this equipment could now borrow it from him, and that he had enough money to meet their needs; if he felt that he needed no more authority, why did he come before the committee and say that this bill ought to pass, that he could use the money, that he did not have the power, and that he wanted it?

Mr. TOBEY. Perhaps for the reason that forces above Mr. Jones told him to, and for the same reason perhaps the same forces cut out his testimony and gave us a shadow of his testimony which is now before us.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire has no basis upon which to make that statement.

Mr. TOBEY. I have this basis, that Jesse Jones' own statement was expurgated and changed from the truth to a falsebond.

Mr. BARKLEY. If it was expurgated it was expurgated by him, just as every other witness has the right to change his testimony and modify his statements.

Mr. TOBEY. At the suggestion or direction of somebody else.

Mr. BARKLEY. Nobody beside Mr. Jones modified or in any way changed his testimony.

Mr. TOBEY. Jesse Jones does not renege on any of his promises or statements.

Mr. BARKLEY. Ask Mr. Jones.

Mr. TOBEY. He is not here. I cannot ask him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Senators will kindly be in order. The Chair desires to bring to the attention of the Senators engaging in this debate the rule of the Senate which requires that any Senator desiring to interrupt another Senator shall address the chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, just a moment-

Mr. TOBEY. Let me say to the Senator-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just a moment. The Chair does not desire to inject himself into this debate; but the reporters of the Senate, marvelous as they are, cannot report debate when two Senators are speaking at once.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the purpose of the present occupant of the chair to protect the right of the Senator who has possession of the floor. Therefore Senators are requested to address the Chair when they desire to interrupt the Senator who has the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

Mr. TOBEY. I respectfully say to the Chair that I asked the Senator to yield, and he yielded to me. I thought I was talking entirely in order, albeit too fast, as always.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President—Mr. WAGNER. Just a moment-

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has imputed to somebody some irregular and improper motive.

Mr. TOBEY. Not at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire will observe the rules of debate.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has imputed to somebody some irregular and improper motive in connection with Mr. Jones' testimony. The Senator knows, as every other Senator knows, that when testimony is given before any committee, before it is printed the witness is given an opportunity to look it over for the purpose of revising it if he feels it

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. In a moment, I do not yield at present. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to

Mr. BARKLEY. The great offense of Mr. Jones evidently was that in testifying before the committee about small business loans, but not in connection with railroad loans at all, he was asked the question as to how much the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had lost on these small loans, and he said "Plenty." Somebody asked "how much?" Then Mr. Jones said, "I would be ashamed to estimate how much." When he corrected his testimony he merely modified that statement by saying "I am not at present prepared to estimate how much the losses are." Because on the spur of the moment and in a casual way Mr. Jones said, "I would be ashamed to undertake to estimate how much they would be," and later desired to modify that statement so as to read that he was not prepared to estimate how much the losses would be, he has been accused, or somebody else has been accused, of falsifying the record.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. He or somebody else has been accused of doctoring his testimony so as to make it show a falsehood.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Nobody else beside the witness had anything to do with the modification of that statement.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator yields to the Senator from New York.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will yield to the Senator from New Hampshire in a moment.

Mr. TOBEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the Banking and Currency Committee followed the same procedure with reference to Mr. Jones that it follows with reference to any witness who requests that the testimony be sent to him so that he may make such correction as he desires. Upon that request by Mr. Jones the testimony was sent to Mr. Jones, and in his own handwriting he corrected the testimony. That correction, in Mr. Jones' own handwriting, is in the possession of the Banking and Currency Committee. Nobody except Mr. Jones had anything to do with it; and he was given the same courtesy which is extended to other witnesses.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, before I yield to any-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky declines to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I decline to yield to anybody at the moment.

Mr. President, the same custom is followed by all committees of the Senate and of the House of Representatives.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. Just a moment. I will not yield now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky declines to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. We all know that in the rapid fire of questions and answers in committee hearings witnesses are likely to make statements on the spur of the moment which, upon reflection, they do not wish to have go into the permanent record. Witnesses before committees of the House and Senate are not the only ones who enjoy the privilege of revising and correcting their remarks after the testimony has been given or the statement has been made. Even a United States Senator, after he has made an extemporaneous speech on the floor of the Senate, frequently asks the reporters to return the transcript to him in order that he may revise his remarks so that no statements made on the spur of the moment and in the heat of debate may go into the permanent RECORD which he did not intend, or which may be misinterpreted or misconstrued.

That is done here every day, and every Senator knows it; and yet no Senator is ever charged with falsifying the record of his own remarks because he has enjoyed the privilege of going over them after he has made them in extemporaneous, and in some instances—as in the case of the Senator and myself-heated fashion. We have the record placed before us, and respect it. So Mr. Jones was given that privilege, as was Mr. Pelley, Mr. Eastman, Mr. Carmody, and all the other witnesses, including Mr. Eccles, although Mr. Eccles and the Secretary of the Treasury came there with prepared statements. Notwithstanding that, they were given a chance to look over their extemporaneous answers to questions propounded by the members of the committee, in order that they might be revised.

I am sure the Senator from New Hampshire-for whom I have the highest respect, for whose integrity and intellectual ability I have the greatest admiration-does not desire the RECORD here to show that because Mr. Jones changed one answer from "I would be ashamed to try to estimate the losses in small business" to a revised statement that he was "not prepared to do it," the Senator from New Hampshire desires to impute any dishonesty, or any desire to evade, or to delude, or to do anything else except to tell the truth.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do.

Mr. TOBEY. The Senator from Kentucky a few moments ago spoke of the debate or colloguy between the Senator from New Hampshire and his distinguished self, and spoke of a measure of heat in it. If there was any heat in evidence to the audience gathered around here, I apologize for it. There was a dead earnestness about it which is somewhat akin to heat, and heat generates earnestness, and vice versa. But I want to pay tribute to the Senator from Kentucky before I take up another matter. I honor him extremely. He has stood here for the last 3 days and borne the brunt of the whole business of this miserable bill; and he is the only Democrat on the other side of the aisle who has defended the thing. I honor him for it. He has been up against the guns, and he has carried on in man fashion.

I have no heat toward the Senator or toward Jesse Jones. I yield to no one in the country in my admiration for Jesse Jones. He is a straight shooter. He has made the most distinguished record of any agency of our Government, in my judgment, all the way through; but what I do say is that when it is claimed that he revised his remarks of his own volition, I am of the opinion that he never changed that matter at all-never! I believe it was suggested by somebody else-best represented by the algebraic expression "X," an unknown quantity.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in reply to that, if the Senator is going to something else-

Mr. TOBEY. No; nothing else-the same subject matter. Mr. BARKLEY. I was going to say that the Senator not only has no information but he has no justifiable suspicion that anybody other than Mr. Jones had anything to do with changing that one remark, and I am quite satisfied that nobody suggested to Mr. Jones that he change it. Mr. Jones is a fearless man. He is not bossed by anybody. If there is an unbossed man in the public service in the United States it is Jesse Jones.

Mr. TOBEY. Right. On the other hand, Mr. Jesse Jones is part of this administration; and my own judgment is that when he went ahead and made this answer, somebody in reading his testimony simply said, "Jesse, you spilled the beans; set it right."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have the floor.

Mr. TOBEY. The Senator gave me the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will give it to the Senator permanently. Mr. TOBEY. No; I do not want the Senator to give it to me permanently. I just want to say this in 1 minute more:

The Senator from Kentucky said that Mr. Jones had a right to correct his statement before it was printed. But, Mr. President, the hearings were printed. Here is the language right in the printed document; and after it was printed they get out a revised edition, if you please. It is not a question of correcting an extemporaneous remark before it was printed, but of changing material testimony. I do not like that way of playing the game; that is all.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if I had the imagination of the Senator from New Hampshire, I would not be in the United States Senate. I would be a great writer, such as Dickens or Scott or Robert Louis Stevenson; because I suppose the Senator means that the merits of this bill ought to turn on whether Jesse Jones changed the word "ashamed" to "not prepared."

Mr. TOBEY. It is only contributory evidence; that is all, sir.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I regret that there has been any heat. I realize that I become earnest. My earnestness and zeal sometimes are mistaken for heat. We all know that even before the days of electricity, and before the days of the sulfur match, friction created heat, and sometimes a flame. It may be that friction in debate sometimes creates heat; but I have no heat toward the Senator from New Hampshire, neither am I frozen toward him.

Mr. TOBEY. Nor frozen to him, either; are you?

Mr. BARKLEY. Nor frozen to him-no, indeed; but I appreciate the earnestness and sincerity of the Senator from New Hampshire, even if it generates heat in him.

I do not think the merits of this bill or this railroad-loaning section turn on any change at all which Mr. Jones or anybody else made in his spontaneous replies to questions asked by cross-examiners on the committee. It may be said, in this connection, that all those who testified in behalf of this bill were cross-examined as if they were on trial for some heinous offense, and some technicality was sought in their testimony upon which to hinge an argument against this measure.

Mr. President, I shall not consume any more time. If there is any doubt about the language of this bill. I am perfectly willing to make it plain. In lines 21 and 22, in speaking of the contracts referred to there, "to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase, rebuilding, repair, or disposition of old railroad equipment," I am willing to add "or contracts between the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the railroad involved."

That certainly would take away any doubt as to whether the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was to go into the junk business. I have no objection to and will offer an amendment limiting these loans or leases to a period of 20 years, which may be reasonably expected to be the life of the material

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. BARKLEY. Just a moment.

When any railroad has entered into a contract with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by which it is enabled to obtain modern machinery and modern rolling stock, engines, cars, or otherwise, and begins to acquire an equity in that property by the annual payment of rental or leases. the railroad company may be depended upon to preserve that rolling stock as carefully as if it had simply borrowed the money from a bank, and had given a mortgage on the rolling stock in order that it might be able to equip itself.

I now yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, in line 14 there is a provision that the transaction shall be "through public bidding." If we should strike out the words "or private negotiations," it would read thus:

Through public bidding to make contracts for-

Then in line 15 strike out "or" and insert "and", and between "loan" and "lease" insert "or", so as to read:

and to aid in financing by loan or lease

Then in line 16, strike out "or otherwise," and the words "purchase or", having it read:

by loan or lease, the construction of railroad equipment by \boldsymbol{a} carrier or to be acquired by a carrier—

And so forth. Then in line 22, after the fifth word, "purchase", insert "loan." If that were done, the loan could be made, and title under the lease would be taken in the equipment by the Government as security.

I point that out, and ask the Senator's opinion as to whether that would not eliminate the ownership, except as the basis of a loan.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that I do not think the words "private negotiations" ought to be eliminated, because otherwise the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could not make a contract with any railroad to help it obtain this rolling stock except by public bidding. is not necessary or advisable. All these loans and all these arrangements will be made between the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the railroad involved. The equipment has to be constructed or repaired upon the application and specifications of the railroad itself. The term "public bidding" was put in because there might be instances in which old rolling stock might be exchanged for new or modern rolling stock, and it might be advantageous to sell that at public bidding.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. That is all right.

Mr. BARKLEY. So I do not think it ought to be restricted to public bidding. In all these transactions between the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the railroads in their individual capacity, contracts will be entered into between the R. F. C. and the railroads, whether they manufacture or improve their rolling stock in their own shops, or whether they obtain it in factories or plants like those of the American Locomotive Co., the Baldwin Locomotive Works, or the American Car & Foundry Co., which are engaged in the manufacture and fabrication of all sorts of rolling stock for railroad equipment.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Would the Senator object to having new equipment specified to be acquired under competitive bidding, in order to get as much value as possible for the money backed by Government finance?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think that would be advisable, because many of the railroads have their own shops. They ought not to be required to enter into competition with some other railroad to furnish equipment that they themselves can manufacture; so that would not be advisable.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I agree with the Senator that so far as possible it would be very desirable that the railroads should make these cars in their own shops, in order to give actual railroad employees employment; but when the private companies that make cars make these cars, does not the Senator think there should be some safeguard, that the bids should be competitive?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not see how that would be practicable, because contracts will be made, and they will be bilateral. They will be between the R. F. C. and the railroad company needing the equipment. A contract may involve the manufacture of the equipment in some manufacturing plant, but it ought not to be subject to public bidding, because otherwise it would put every railroad at a disad-

In order that the language may be clarified, Mr. President, I propose this amendment: On page 9, in line 21, after the word "contracts", insert "with any carrier or railroad-equipment manufacturer", so that the language would read:

And to make contracts with any carrier or railroad-equipment manufacturer to aid in financing by loan, lease, or otherwise, the purchase, rebuilding, repair, or disposition of old railroad equip-

I submit that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky, which will be stated for the information of the Senate.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. WHEELER. There is a motion to strike out the whole section.

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is ready to rule on the point of order. Under the rules and precedents of the Senate, amendments to perfect the text proposed to be stricken out by such a motion as that pending by the Senator from Montana are always in order. The point of order is not well taken.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I wish to say a few words. I think there should be a provision here that whenever a railroad has its own shops they should be given the preference, in order to give actual railroad men employment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, of course the Senator knows that neither the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. nor any other lender, would require a railroad company to go outside of its own shops to equip it or to repair its own equipment. I do not know that there is any such language as that necessary.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I do not think they would, but the railroad executives themselves might go outside of their own railroads. There are instances where they have done so.

Mr. BARKLEY. They would be very poor executives if they went outside of their own shops.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. We have plenty of such instances; that is the trouble with the railroads today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, at the end of section 7 I offer an amendment, to add the words "Provided, That no loan or lease under this section shall extend for a term exceeding 20 years."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish merely to state, in conclusion, that this provision should not be stricken out. If there are any further deficiencies in it the Senate can deal with them and correct them, but certainly the testimony of the agencies of the Government and of the railroads themselves ought not to be disregarded. When the amendment was offered and agreed to in the committee changing the language from the language to which the railroads objected, under which they thought there might be some compulsion under which they might operate, or authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to go out and manufacture a lot of material in the speculative hope that they might rent it to railroadswhen that was eliminated, Mr. Pelley, speaking for the Association of American Railway Executives, said that they had no further objection to it, and that they thought it was satisfactory.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I wish to say that the amendments offered by the Senator from Kentucky do not change the defects in the language except insofar as the lending provision is concerned. I have said repeatedly that I would not have any objection to the lending provision, but it is not necessary, because the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can do everything that is included in this bill with reference to lending, and there is no question that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has the money with which to do it, and is making that kind of loans.

I am objecting to the fact that there is an attempt to give the Corporation authority to lease to the railroads, and to take the old equipment in the deals. I submit that the provision should be entirely stricken out.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, several Senators understood I would take a little time, but the hour is late, and I do not wish to consume the time of the Senate. I think it is time for a vote. I merely want to say to the Senate that I am in complete agreement with the Senator from Montana in his conclusion that this section should be stricken from the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

Mr. TAFT and other Senators asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I merely wish to say for the RECORD that we can talk all we desire about railroads, but whether it is this year, or next year, or some other time in the future, one of these days we will come to Government ownership of the roads. I want that to appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER]. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. Gibson], who, if present, would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GREEN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS]. I am therefore free to vote, and I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded,

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison].

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (after having voted in the negative). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am not informed how he would vote, and since I cannot transfer my pair, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] is absent because

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] is absent on important public business.

The Senators from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST and Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senators from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee and Mr. Thomas], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley] is paired with the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from North Carolina would vote "yea," and the Senator from Arizona would vote

"nav."

The result was announced—yeas 45, nays 32, as follows:

So Mr. Wheeler's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY and Mr. CLARK of Missouri addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I call up an amendment which is lying on the table.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am very glad to yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I wanted to ask the Senator from Kentucky whether he would tell us what his plan is, and whether or not the Senate could now take a recess. We have been in session for twelve and a half hours continuously. Does the Senator from Kentucky think we could possibly finish with the bill tonight?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it had been my hope that we might finish the consideration of the bill before we recessed tonight. Of course I had not anticipated that there would be so much debate and so much delay. May I inquire what long-winded speeches are in contemplation on the part of Members of the Senate? [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. Does that include the floor leader, Mr. President? [Laughter.]

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I was about to ask whether the floor leader was including himself in his inquiry.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I am willing to include myself. The length of what I say of course is governed by the length of what other Senators say. I do not intend to put myself at a disadvantage.

In all good faith, I was trying to ascertain how many speeches were to be made, and if I offended anyone by using the term "long-winded," I apologize to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President-

The President pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming has the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I have the floor. yielded to the Senator from South Carolina in order that he might propound an inquiry to the Senator from Kentucky. I have not yet heard the reply of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was laying the predicate for a reply. May I inquire of the Senator from Vermont, who is acting as the minority leader, whether he can inform me as to the prospects for further discussion?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I am informed that there are two Senators who have speeches which they wish to make, which are of a substantial character, and lengthy,

Mr. BARKLEY. Then, at least my description was in part correct. If the Senator from Wyoming will yield further-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wonder whether we could enter into an arrangement under which, if we recess until tomorrow, we could bring about a limitation of debate.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I object to any limitation of debate until I have an opportunity to make a motion to reconsider the last vote taken.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, apparently there is no answer to the inquiry.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I have no desire to debate the

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I do not care to yield unless there is a development of this question of recess.

I will say that I am very happy to reply to the suggestion of the Senator from South Carolina. I hope that an opportunity may develop for an immediate recess. My only concern is that I may retain the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that beginning at 12 o'clock tomorrow, contemplating an 11 o'clock session, and during the remainder of the consideration of the bill. no Senator shall speak more than once nor longer than 20 minutes on the bill or more than once nor longer than 20 minutes on any amendment.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I object.

Mr. McCARRAN. I object.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. May I ask whether we could enter into an agreement by which we could limit debate subsequent to 1 o'clock tomorrow? And I will say to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] that as far as I am concerned, he can make his motion to reconsider now.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the Senator from Wyoming will permit me to respond to what the Senator from Kentucky said-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I will not agree to any sort of a proposal for an agreement to limit debate until I shall have had an opportunity to make a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Wheeler amendment was just agreed to. Mr. BARKLEY. So far as I am concerned, the Senator can make the motion to reconsider now.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Unless the Senator from Wyoming is willing to yield to me to make the motion to reconsider, I shall have to object to any agreement.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, my only concern about the matter is this: I know that there are probably about a dozen Senators who desire to offer amendments. I do not wish to be displaced. If I may have unanimous consent to retain priority, I shall be very happy to yield to the Senator from Missouri in order that he may make the motion to

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Wyoming may be permitted to yield for the purpose of my making a motion to reconsider without losing the floor so far as priority is concerned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the Wheeler amendment was just agreed to.

Mr. TYDINGS. I move to lay that motion on the table. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maryland to lay the motion of the Senator from Missouri on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I will not yield further, Mr. President, unless the Senator from Kentucky can effect an agreement

Mr. AUSTIN rose.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I think it is practicable to enter into an agreement, with certain provisos which I think are not difficult for the majority leader to assent to.

In the first place would the majority leader modify his request by including in it a condition that there will not be an attempt made to reinject into the bill the highway provisions in any form whatever?

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that I have no control over other Senators. I have no intention of offering any amendment on that subject.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, if the Senator would not object to a proposal of that kind it would become binding by the unanimous-consent agreement of the Senate, and therefore would put an end to a possible parliamentary situation which might prolong the session of Congress for some time. If the Senator is willing to make that a part of this proposal, and willing to provide in some manner for the two Senators who wish to be heard, we would have no objection to the request made by the majority leader.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Vermont that I am willing to make exceptions with respect to the two Senators. I understand the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NyE] wants to speak, and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] also wants to speak at some length, or at least beyond the time suggested by me. Is there any other Senator who wishes to speak?

Mr. AUSTIN. None that I know of.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not here want to enter into any bargain by which I would be bound not to offer any amendment. I will say to the Senator that I am not going to offer it with respect to the highway situation, but I do not desire to be forced to enter into a bargain here without which I cannot get an agreement to limit debate.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I understood that the majority leader was undertaking a bargain by making a proposal

Mr. BARKLEY. No. That is a different kind of a bar-That is an agreement among all Senators. And I do not think the Senator from Vermont has any ground for feeling that I would not comply with any statement I make here with respect to my attitude or conduct.

Mr. AUSTIN. None at all. Mr. President, if my remark could be construed that way I withdraw it. That is not what I meant.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I do not think the Senator meant

Mr. AUSTIN. My proposal is simply that the unanimousconsent proposal shall exclude from it consideration of the subject matter of that part of this bill which the Senate has stricken out.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say this to the Senator, that if anybody offers an amendment on that subject, I am willing to exclude it from this agreement.

Mr. AUSTIN. I think the Senator misunderstood my proposal. I ask the Senator if he will exclude it in his proposal for a unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, is it understood that the two Senators who are to make rather lengthy speeches are to be recognized, and that we are to get rid of that matter first?

Mr. AUSTIN. That is satisfactory to us.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, does the Senator from Wyoming still yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that upon the convening of the Senate tomorrow at 11 o'clock, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NyE] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] may be permitted to speak without limit, and that following those addresses during the remainder of the consideration of the bill no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than 15 minutes on the bill, nor more than once or longer than 15 minutes on any amendment, excluding any amendment with respect to the highway provisions of this bill stricken out.

Mr. HOLT. I object.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting several nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

ADDITIONAL REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1789) to authorize the cancelation of deportation proceedings in the case of Florence Sinclair Cooper and daughter, Margaret Lavallie, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1034) thereon.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2141) to authorize acquisition of complete title to the Puyallup Indian Tribal School property at Tacoma, Wash., for Indian sanatorium purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1035) thereon.

Mr. O'MAHONEY, from the Committee on Indian Affairs. to which was referred the bill (S. 2843) granting easements on Indian lands of the Wind River or Shoshone Indian Reservation, Wyo., for dam site and reservoir purposes in connection with the Riverton reclamation project, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1036) thereon.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

As in executive session,

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs. reported favorably the nominations of sundry officers for appointment, transfer, or promotion in the Regular Army.

Mr. McKELLAR. from the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably the nomination of Lt. Col. Philip Mathews, United States Army, retired, to be Work Projects administrator for Pennsylvania.

He also, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

ADDITIONAL BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. GREEN introduced a bill (S. 2916) for the relief of Joseph V. Broderick, which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Claims.

REFERENDUM ON WAR

IMr. La Follette asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a communication from Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, United States Army, retired, in the New York Times of Tuesday, July 25, 1939, on the subject of a war referendum; which appears in the Appendix.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 11 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, July 29, 1939, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 28 (legislative day of July 25), 1939

RAILROAD RETIREMENT BOARD

Lee M. Eddy, of Missouri, to be a member of the Railroad Retirement Board for a term of 5 years from August 29, 1939 (reappointment).

WORK PROJECTS ADMINISTRATION

Denis W. Delaney, of Massachusetts, to be Work Projects administrator for Massachusetts.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Thomas B. Hassett, of Fitchburg, Mass., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Massachusetts, to fill an existing vacancy.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rev. Edward B. Wilcox, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, of Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and everlasting God, whom to know is life eternal, and whom to love is perfect joy, stand Thou among us in this hour. Bestow, we pray Thee, the blessings of Thy divine wisdom upon these Thy servants, who labor for the welfare of their country. Grant that they shall ever continue in unselfishness and love their great share in guiding the destinies of this land wherein Thou hast vouchsafed unto us a dwelling place. Do Thou cause Thy blessing to rest upon Thy servant, the President of these United States, and all who are in authority with him. Direct us, O Lord, in all our doings with Thy most gracious favor, and further us with Thy continual help, that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in Thee, we may glorify Thy holy name, and finally by Thy mercy obtain everlasting life. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 162. An act to protect producers, manufacturers, distributors, and consumers from the unrevealed presence of substitutes and mixtures in spun, woven, knitted, felted, or otherwise manufactured wool products, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

H.R. 5375. An act to promote nautical education, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6746. An act to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6984. An act to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2697) entitled "An act to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Townsend to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. Hayden, Mr. Byrd, and Mr. Tobey as the members on the part of the Senate of the Special Committee to Express to the American Association of State Highway Officials the appreciation of Congress on the accomplishments of the association in highway development, pursuant to the provisions of House Concurrent Resolution No. 10, agreed to July 25, 1939.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. Barkley and Mr. Gibson members of the Joint Select Committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments," for the disposition of executive papers of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution and move its adoption.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 279

Resolved, That David J. Ward, of Maryland, be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Immigration and Naturalization.

The resolution was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 5407. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY ACT

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to announce that pursuant to the authority granted him on yesterday he last night signed the enrolled bill of the House (H. R. 5407) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States.

AMENDMENT OF RETIREMENT ACT OF APRIL 23, 1904

Mr. MAY submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (S. 839) to amend the Retirement Act of April 23, 1904.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein a speech over the radio delivered by myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Commissioner from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

Mr. Brooks asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the Record.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, in our country today 1 American in every 6 is receiving public charity in one form or other. In Great Britain, one in seven is on some kind of public bounty. In 1881 only 1 American in every 565 received assistance, while 1 in 32 was on the dole in England.

We have become 94 times poorer in the last 60 years, while Britain has grown only 5 times more badly off in the same period. Ask the new dealers to explain this phenomenon.

THE LATE SIMON M. HAMLIN

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maine [Mr. OLIVER] for 1 minute to make an announcement.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, as once again the Grim Reaper exacts his toll of mankind, it becomes my sad and solemn duty to advise the membership of this House of the passing into the Great Beyond of former Representative Simon M. Hamlin of South Portland Maine.

Simon M. Hamlin, of South Portland, Maine.

Mr. Hamlin, or "Sime," as he was affectionately known to those of us who were intimately acquainted with him, was an outstanding character. Those of you who associated with him in the Seventy-fourth Congress will recall his unquestionable integrity, his sincerity of purpose, and his loyal devotion to his party. His community, his State, and his Nation have lost in the passing of Simon Hamlin a man who was the finest type of citizen, a loyal and devoted son, and a great patriot. Those who knew him personally have lost a friend.

It shall be my purpose at a later date to extend more detailed remarks in his memory.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include a short editorial written by the distinguished newspaper publisher, Frank E. Gannett, of Rochester, N. Y.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Vermont?

There was no objection.

[Mr. Plumley addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short editorial from the Steuben Republican.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include an editorial from the Chicago Daily News.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

JOHN L. LEWIS

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Labor of this House, I want the House to know that when the chairman of the committee, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Norton], yesterday thanked John L. Lewis for his fine contribution to the committee after he had made his vicious and uncalled for assault on that courageous American, Jack Garner, she was not speaking the sentiment of the committee. And I as one of the committee resent the statement of Mr. Lewis. [Applause.]

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, before the Labor Committee went into session yesterday a motion was made and carried that none of the Members should have the right or the privilege to interrogate any person who appeared before the committee. Three of the members of the committee voted against that motion, and I was one of the three. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gross] was one of those who voted for that motion.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman from Pennsylvania cannot divulge what happened in the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania will suspend. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] makes the point of order that the gentleman from Pennsylvania is undertaking to disclose the proceedings before a committee of the House on a matter which has not been reported by the committee to the House. The rules and precedents sustain the point of order made by the gentleman from Massachusetts, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, under the rules, is not privileged to discuss matters which occurred before the committee.

Mr. DUNN. Very well, Mr. Speaker. May I proceed?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman may proceed in order, but he cannot disclose or interpret matters that occurred before the committee on measures that have not been reported to the House.

Mr. DUNN. Did not the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gross] do the same thing?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROSS] did divulge matters which occurred before the committee, but no point of order was made, and, therefore, the Chair could not act on his own motion.

Mr. DUNN. I just want to say that the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Norton], our chairman, was not responsible for that and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gross] was.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein a brief statement concerning the President, written by one of my constituents.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

IMPORT PROVISIONS OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1933

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7171) to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. It is my understanding that this involves a form of tax that is equivalent to a tariff. If I am correctly informed in that particular I ask the gentleman why such a measure as that should not go to the Committee on Ways and Means instead of to the Committee on Agriculture. I did not suppose that the Committee on Agriculture would have the right to impose any tariff duties in any bill which it reported.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, when the triple A bill in 1935 was under consideration section 22 was put in as an incident to the bill. That is, in any effort to secure better farm prices in this country naturally it was necessary to have some provision about imports that interfered with the price levels. This provision was placed in the bill applicable to any program that might be fashioned under the Triple

A act. Within that act, but not as an integral part of it, was section 32, which provided for using certain funds for the purchase and distribution of surplus commodities in this country or for the export of those commodities.

In the interpretation of that it has been thought by legal counsel that the provisions of section 22 would not be applicable to purchases under section 32. This simply is an amendment to strengthen section 22, make it more flexible, and make certain that it applies to any program under section 32. Simply because section 22 was in the original farm act, this amendment to that act went to the Committee on Agriculture. Otherwise it would have gone to the gentleman's committee. If this were coming up as a first impression it would go to the gentleman's committee. However, in view of the gentleman's well-known position, I do not think he would object to this strengthening of that particular provision.

Mr. TREADWAY. No; I am not opposing that-

Mr. JONES of Texas. I will state to the gentleman that it is no thought of ours to try to take jurisdiction away from the Ways and Means Committee. We have all that we can say grace over now, and but for the fact that this is an amendment to a provision which was in the A. A. A. Act, as a protective measure to the operations under the act, this would not have been sent to our committee.

Mr. TREADWAY. Then does not the inquiry lie against the original provision? How did the original provision get in?

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman knows that under the rules of the House, when a bill is presented that covers more than one subject, its reference is governed by the major purposes of the bill. It was essential to have such a provision in any proposal that might have for its effect the securing of better prices to the American farmer.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield. Mr. McCORMACK. What the gentleman says is correct in that respect undoubtedly, but this is an amendment to a specific section of that act, which amendment is purely within the jurisdiction of the Ways and Means Committee. mere fact that section 22 or 32 might be a part of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which properly comes before the committee of which the gentleman from Texas is chairman, it does not necessarily follow that the committee has jurisdiction over a specific amendment to that, where the specific amendment comes within the jurisdiction exclusively of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I will state that my committee had no particular desire to handle this legislation, but we had an exact illustration of it in what happened yesterday in connection with the barter provision, which naturally would be within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Agriculture, because it involves the Commodity Credit Corporation which is a set-up in agriculture. But on account of the fact that in a comprehensive bill, the Commodity Credit Corporation was originally established in the terms of a provision that was reported by the Banking and Currency Committee, the parliamentary authorities in the House have referred all subsequent legislation-and another measure which was introduced yesterday—to the Committee on Banking and Currency. Since the original provision was embodied in that act and is a part of that act, an amendment thereto, according to the parliamentary authorities, is referred to the committee having the original jurisdiction. That is logical, I think. I hope the gentleman will not object to this.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am addressing myself-

Mr. JONES of Texas. I will state that I have consulted with several members of the Ways and Means Committee. I am sorry I did not get to see the gentleman.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am not so mentally constructed that the gentleman would have to consult me.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I understand that.

Mr. McCORMACK. Unanimous consent can be exercised arbitrarily, but it should not be. It should be exercised as a trust. But will the gentleman explain what this bill does, and why its passage is necessary? Is it connected with the export bounty or subsidy on cotton that has recently been put into operation by the Secretary of Agriculture?

Mr. JONES of Texas. It refers to no particular commodity. I will state to the gentleman that it applies already to the entire agricultural program. But in using section 32 funds, which were used in connection with 17 commodities and will probably be used with reference to more this year, if by the purchase of those commodities the price is better in this country, it may be used with reference to any of them. It may be necessary, and probably will be necessary, if there is considerable exportation of cotton, in order to protect cotton textiles, as well as the cotton farmer, if such a program is carried out; but it would be true with reference to lard or any other of the numerous commodities in connection with which a purchase and distribution program is carried out, either here or abroad.

Mr. McCORMACK. In other words, as a result of the export subsidy we have to pass this law now in order to protect our markets?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Oh, no. This bill was passed in 1935, and applies to everything except section 32, and, in my judgment, it would apply to that. However, the Legal Division has held that section 32, while in the Agricultural Adjustment Act, was not an integral part of that act, and therefore it has to be broadened, since we have additional funds, and it will apply to all commodities. It is necessary not only as to cotton, but as to any other commodity that section 32 may be used in connection with. That is the only change.

Mr. McCORMACK. Did the gentleman's committee go into the entire question of the effect of this proposed bill upon the whole tariff situation, or did the gentleman just confine it-

Mr. JONES of Texas. Oh, yes. When the original act was presented, we had numerous witnesses and spent some days considering this particular provision. This simply makes it cover what it was intended to cover originallythe whole A. A. A. program.

Mr. McCORMACK. But when a tariff question comes up, it is not a tariff question alone that the Ways and Means Committee considers, but it is the effect on the entire sit-

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes. We went into that thoroughly, and on this particular amendment we consulted representatives of the Tariff Commission and the State Department and the gentleman's committee. We had a meeting and went into it thoroughly.

Mr. McCORMACK. Conference with the committee of which the gentleman from Massachusetts is a member?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I say with some representatives of his committee.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman's answer shows clearly that they went into the whole tariff question in the consideration of this bill, but certainly it is a bad precedent to have these conflicts between committees. I am glad to note, however, that some committee in the House besides the Committee on Ways and Means is going into the tariff questions.

Mr. JONES of Texas. We are interested only in the principle that is essentially a part of the program, and I hope the gentleman will not destroy the program.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman from Massachusetts does not bow to the gentleman from Texas in his support, whether I have been wise or unwise, of farm legislation.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I agree that the gentleman has been very generous, and I have a high regard for his judgment and ability.

Mr. McCORMACK. But we want to know what we are doing.

Mr. JONES of Texas. That is right.

Mr. McCORMACK. And this bill is necessary to protect the American market against the export of American farm products-raw products.

Mr. JONES of Texas. No; against the import of such products.

Mr. McCORMACK. But we have got to export them before they are imported.

Mr. JONES of Texas. No, no; most of this fund, a major portion of it, will be used in purchasing and distributing among the low-income groups in this country.

Mr. McCORMACK. We have a subsidy with reference to the export of raw cotton, have we not?

Mr. JONES of Texas. In its exact sense, I think the effect of the subsidy is simply to release cotton from the artificial barriers of a loan that keeps it above the market level of the world price; so the effect of it is not in its essence a subsidy. It is simply a release of cotton from the artificial barriers so it can flow naturally as it would if we did not have the Federal loan policy.

Mr. McCORMACK. We will call it an inducement.

Mr. JONES of Texas. In an exact sense, I think it is not an inducement, it is simply a removal of the barrier so it can flow naturally.

Mr. McCORMACK. But the finished product can come back into this country and go on the world markets at lower cost than if those inducements, or whatever the gentleman may call it, did not exist.

Mr. JONES of Texas. That depends. All cotton grown abroad will still flow except for the tariff, and we have a tariff on the finished product.

Mr. McCORMACK. Why do we not put the raw cotton into our own factories and turn it into the finished product in the United States, give the American worker employment on it, and then export the finished product to the foreign market under a subsidy, or whatever the gentleman calls it?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I may state to the gentleman from Massachusetts that part of it will be used that way, and I think the major portion of it may be. I think the gentleman is correct in his position, but we have such a tremendous supply that we are really almost compelled to make disposition of it by the use of all available methods.

Mr. McCORMACK. My friend from Texas with his arguments, convincing as usual, and with his personal charm, overwhelms me. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, under my original reservation of objection, I would like to make one observation in connection with the statement of the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts is

Mr. TREADWAY. I am very much impressed with the merit of the proposal. It contains, as the gentleman has said, in the amendment they are offering a very distinct tariff provision. I congratulate the gentleman on including that in any measure he may support. I want to say further, though, that it seems to me we ought to have a little better understanding from time to time when measures naturally follow within the jurisdiction of a certain committee are taken up by some other committee. We have had several instances in the Ways and Means Committee of bills containing joint provisions that would make the bills referable either to our committee or some other committee; and that is the case here. I think, therefore, we, as the Committee on Ways and Means, ought to have had the original legislation on the amendment that the gentleman is anxious to have included.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Replying to the gentleman from Massachusetts, I may say that it has always been my philosophy of tariff that it should be on a revenue basis, but that whatever tariff system is in effect should be applicable generally; in other words, it should be a tariff for all or a tariff for none.

On the other proposition I thoroughly agree with the gentleman, but I may state that I am confident the gentleman's committee has reported more legislation that probably dealt with agriculture than the Committee on Agriculture has legislation falling within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. I have seen it occur a number of times. Under the peculiar rules of the House, however, this practice is indulged in, and the major purpose of the bill controls its reference to a particular committee.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may say to the gentlemen on the Committee on Agriculture that if the Committee on Ways and Means will not give a tariff on things that are necessary to protect agriculture. then I think the Committee on Agriculture is within its jurisdiction in going ahead and giving us a good Republican tariff, because that is the only thing that is going to save this Nation: A good Republican tariff. I congratulate the gentleman and the Committee on Agriculture from bringing that in at this time. [Applause.]

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman is entitled to his free opinion. I disagree with him, however, and refuse to accept his label.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933, as amended, and as reenacted by section 1 (k) of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended", wherever they appear, the words and figures ", or section 32, Public Law No. 320, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 24, 1935, as amended"; by inserting in subsection (a) after the word "being" the words "or likely to be"; by striking out in subsection (b) the words "limitations on the total quantities of any article or articles which may be imported" and by inserting in lieu thereof the words "fees on, or such limitations on the the total quantities of, any article or articles which may be entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption"; by striking out in subsection (b) the expression "July 1, 1928, to June 30, 1933" and inserting in lieu thereof the expression "January 1, 1929, to December 31, 1933"; and by amending subsection (c) to read as follows: "The fees and import restrictions proclaimed by the President under this section and any revocation, suspension, or modification thereof, shall become effective on such date as shall be specified in such proclamation, revocation, suspension, or modification, and such fees, which shall not be in excess of 50 percent ad valorem, shall be treated for the purposes of all provisions of law relating to customs revenue as duties imposed by the Tariff Act of 1930."

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Agriculture, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. Jones of Texas: On page 1, line 11, strike out the word "likely" and insert in lieu thereof the words "practically certain."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SUPPRESSION OF CERTAIN SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5138) to make unlawful attempts to overthrow the Government of the United States; to require licensing of civilian military organizations; to make unlawful attempts to interfere with the discipline of the Army and Navy; to require registration and fingerprinting of aliens; to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States circuit court of appeals in certain cases, and for other purposes; and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it shall be in order to consider the substitute amendment recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now in the bill; that such substitute for the purpose of amendment shall be considered under the 5-minute rule as an original bill; that any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any of the amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or committee substitute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion.

RESIGNATION FROM COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication, which was read:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 28, 1939.

HOD WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD.

Speaker of the House, Washington, D. C.
DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On Tuesday, July 25, 1939, in pursuance of House Resolution 272, I was elected to serve as a member of the Committee on War Claims.

In view of the pressure of my duties as a member of other standing committees of the House, I desire to be excused from serving on the Committee on War Claims.

Please accept my resignation from the Committee on War Claims, effective immediately.

SUPPRESSION OF CERTAIN SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

The SPEAKER. The motion now pending is the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER] that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 5138.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARCANTONIO) there were-ayes 193, noes 31.

So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 5138, with Mr. CHAPMAN in

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Virginia (interrupting reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH]?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOBBS. I think the Clerk is reading that part of the bill that has been stricken out by the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The part of the bill that has been stricken out, so far as the bill is concerned, is before the Committee now.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. Chairman, in view of the unanimous consent of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, was that not dispensed with and the substitute to be considered?

The CHAIRMAN. That does not cover the first reading of the bill in Committee.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York IMr. CELLER] is recognized for 1 hour and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Guyer] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes. Mr. Chairman, it might be well to refresh our recollection for just a minute as to the exact contents of this bill. To my mind it is one of the most important bills that has ever been presented in this body. There is no security in this country for life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness, or property without adequate national defense. There can be no adequate national defense as long as subversive influences threaten to undermine the loyalty and devotion of our fighting forces. Therefore, at the instance of the Army and the Navy, after full hearings and consideration, title I was approved by your Committee on the Judiciary. This title applies to those who would circulate subversive literature or spread subversive propaganda among the personnel of our Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard, with the intent to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or

The officers testified before our committee that they were loath to ask for this provision in peacetime but that conditions had become worse, that propagandists were now gaining a foothold to some extent among the enlisted men of our Army and Navy, and that but for the high character and splendid loyalty that has always obtained among the rank and file of our men they would have had to ask for the enactment of this bill much sooner. So, then, title I interdicts the exertion of subversive influences with the intent to undermine the loyalty, morale, or discipline of our fighting

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOBBS. I yield gladly to the gentleman from Mis-

Mr. COCHRAN. I am in sympathy with an effort to secure legislation that will correct some of the conditions to which the gentleman has referred, and intend to support this bill, but as I read section 1, I see that it shall be unlawful for anyone to advise, urge, solicit, or induce any member of our armed forces to disobey the laws or regulations governing those forces or the lawful orders of a superior officer. This is going pretty far, but nevertheless this provision is in the bill. Let us say there are four or five privates in the charge of a corporal.

They may be doing some minor work about a military post. It so happens that one of them has a little money. When the corporal is not on the scene the one with money urges the rest of the soldiers across the street from the reservation and get some refreshments, and the men are discovered there. The men may say, "He got us to go over there; he had some money." This man induced the other men to disobey the order of the corporal. Still that man would be subject to punishment of 10 years in the penitentiary or a $10,000 fine for doing that.

I say it is all right to pass laws to protect our Army and Navy against those who would want to destroy our armed forces or the country, but certainly something should be said on this floor to let the Army and Navy and the Marine Corps know that it is not the intent of Congress to apply this law to minor violations by the boys in the Army and Navy who might disobey a regulation by going out and having a good time for a few hours or violate some minor regulation.

Mr. HOBBS. The gentleman is preeminently correct. We are assured by the Army and the Navy that all misdemeanors and offenses of every kind and character whatever, committed by the boys in these services, will be handled as they have been since the foundation of our Government, by courts martial.

Mr. COCHRAN. Under the language of this bill men committing such offenses could be reached, could they not, if the officers wanted to do it?

Mr. HOBBS. No, sir. It is the propagandist, the one who is disseminating subversive influences, at whom this title is aimed. It does not apply to our boys in uniform at all.

Mr. COCHRAN. Absolutely, and we should eliminate such a propagandist.

Mr. HOBBS. The penalties the gentleman envisions are the maximum discretionary penalties. You might as well say that the fine would be 1 cent, without hard labor. is in the discretion of the courts of justice to administer this act, and to fix the punishment to fit the crime. The penalties named are a ceiling, not a floor.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman, speaking as a member of the committee, feels that it is the intent of the committee that misdemeanors and minor cases should be handled as they have been in the past and that this act should not be applied to them?

Mr. HOBBS. The courts martial will regulate the conduct of the men in the service. This law would apply to those who would seek to undermine the loyalty of our armed

Mr. COCHRAN. I believe that such a statement in the RECORD, showing the intent of the committee, should be noted by the Army and Navy. They will have no reason to say now "Congress wrote the law; we must carry out its provisions to the letter." It should not apply to minor offenses.

Mr. HOBBS. I believe we can safely trust our Army and Navy authorities and the courts of justice. I wish to say to the gentleman that I do not believe, and neither did the committee, that there ought to be any distinction made between inciting to insubordination and any other form of disloyalty. Any influence that advocates disobedience in any military or naval establishment is just as vicious and vile and potentially destructive as anything can possibly be, for discipline and obedience to orders of superior officers are the sine qua non of successful functioning in any military organization.

The second title is a long title because of the Ramseyer rule, under which we rewrote the whole section of the code which we were amending. Essentially, however, it does only this: It adds four grounds of deportation, first, knowingly and for gain, aiding illegal entry; second, espionage; third, conviction of a State narcotic law violation; and, fourth, unlawful possession of machine guns or similar weapons. Of course, it applies only to aliens.

The general law now covers violation of the Federal narcotic law. This provides that violation of a State narcotic law shall also be a ground of deportation.

We also have a committee amendment which will be offered later adding a fifth ground-violation of the Marihuana Taxing Act of 1937. I neglected to say that there will also be a committee amendment to title I which will extend the coverage to the Reserve of the Navy and the Reserve of the Marine Corps.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I am happy to yield to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Would it be any trouble to the gentleman to recount again the four or five additional grounds he mentioned?

Mr. HOBBS. First, knowingly, and for gain, aiding illegal entry; second, espionage; third, conviction of violating a State narcotic statute; and fourth, possession of machine guns, sawed-off shotguns or other weapons of that kind, without legal authority. Then if you adopt the committee amendment adding a fifth ground of deportation the bill will also interdict the peddling or smuggling of marihuana cigarettes to high-school children, and all others, for that matter; in other words, a violation of the Marihuana Taxing Act of 1937.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield in that connection?

Mr. HOBBS. Certainly.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The distinguished gentleman has stated the additional grounds of deportation that are included in this bill, and one of them has something to do with the carrying of weapons like sawed-off shotguns. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: Does his amendment adhere closely to the present statute against carrying such weapons? In other words, unless it does the administrative officers will have a gool deal of difficulty in enforcing the law, but if it does correspond exactly with the law which the Attorney General recently advocated and which we subsequently passed, then the work will be very easy under it.

Mr. HOBBS. We have the assurance of the Department that this law will be enforcible. The language is "without legal authority."

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. And the same thing applies to peddling marihuana. If you follow the present marihuana statute it will be all right.

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOBBS. I yield to the gentleman from New York, the acting chairman of our committee.

Mr. CELLER. As to the carrying of sawed-off shotguns and other weapons by aliens without legal authority, which means without a permit, that means that the administrative officer, the Secretary of Labor or whoever is in charge, would arrange an order of deportation without a trial in any kind of court. The mere possession of these prohibited weapons would be sufficient to deport that alien.

Mr. HOBBS. That is right, and we maintain that it should be exactly that way. Our guests in this country have no right to abuse our hospitality by arming themselves with that kind of paraphernalia. Every State of the Union interdicts the possession of burglarious tools. We maintain that these guests of ours in our national home are perfectly welcome to live here if they will not insist upon having or carrying machine guns or similar death-dealing weapons. Such weapons are made for one purpose only-to take human life.

Title III amends the law so that it will express clearly what the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Strecker case held that it did not provide with sufficient clarity. The congressional intent to make membership in any organization advocating the overthrow of this Government by force or violence, at any time, and without regard to its duration or continuance, a ground of exclusion or of deportation, is by this title plainly set forth.

Title IV provides that no immigration visa shall issue in any foreign country, to any applicant, without fingerprinting the applicant in triplicate and furnishing one copy to our consular agent there, one to the immigration authorities at the port of entry into this country, and one copy to our Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOBBS. I yield, with pleasure, to the gentleman from

Mr. MASON. Does this cover visas issued for temporary residence, like visitors, or does it only cover visas issued for permanent residence?

Mr. HOBBS. It covers both, the idea being that it is only the work of a moment to take finger impressions and that the racket which has obtained in years past, as we have heard so often on the floor, of buying a name, will be prevented by absolute identification. There is no stigma connected with it. It is simply a part of the machinery of identification.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOBBS. I am happy to yield to the distinguished acting chairman of our committee.

Mr. CELLER. I believe title IV is limited to those seeking permanent entry, because section 8 reads as follows:

No immigration visa shall hereafter be issued to any alien seeking to enter the United States unless

And so forth. So I think it is limited to those who come here permanently and does not apply to those who come here temporarily.

Mr. HOBBS. Possibly I am in error and if so I stand corrected. Frankly, I had given no thought to the meaning of the word "immigration" in that respect.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Certainly. Mr. MASON. Does the gentleman mean that the word "immigration" placed before the word "visa" designates it as a permanent visa?

Mr. HOBBS. It may do so, technically, and that is the interpretation which the acting chairman of our committee puts upon it and, therefore, I stand corrected. Title IV, therefore, only applies to those who are coming in under the immigration quotas, and not to those asking for visitors' visas.

These, Mr. Chairman, are the only four titles in the committee bill. Everything else has been stricken out. We have worked hard and faithfully. If you will read our report of this bill you will see what we struck out, and why. We have brought you a good, clean, carefully drawn bill and one of tremendous importance.

The finest compliment paid this committee bill was paid it in the debate on the rule. Many Members thought that the bill was too weak, many other Members thought that the bill was too strong. We submit that that means that it must be pretty good. With confidence, then, we invite your careful scrutiny. Appreciation of its meaning and significance will mean its speedy and, possibly, unanimous passage. It is for the common weal. It will benefit every citizen and every good alien. It is in the interest of good government. It will make our beloved country a better place in which to live. Our homes and our children will be safer and happier because of this enactment. When this bill becomes law, the blessings of life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness will be more fully assured.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HINSHAW. In the debate on the rule the subject was brought up of a possible comparison between this bill and the alien and sedition laws of the past. Would the gentleman discuss that subject and show any possible likeness or unlikeness between them?

Mr. HOBBS. With pleasure. The alien and sedition laws which were stricken from the statute books through the advocacy of their repeal by Jefferson, Madison, and other patriots, gave to the President power to expel all such aliens as he might adjudge dangerous to the peace and safety of the Nation. His decision was final. There was no trial by jury or court. He was bound by no rules of evidence. He was a "court of star-chamber." His ipse dixit was the law. His judgment might be based on mere gossip. There was no right of cross-examination, nor of appeal. Under such laws, freedom of speech and every other guaranty of our Bill of Rights were unknown, and an alien had no rights whatever. Since their repeal no such legislation has disgraced our statute books.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. With pleasure.

Mr. GEYER of California. Does my colleague want to say that this bill before us does not infringe on the right of freedom of speech?

Mr. HOBBS. I certainly do, and most emphatically.

Mr. GEYER of California. The gentleman does not think it forbids anyone advocating the overthrow of the Government, and that that is not infringing the freedom of speech?

Mr. HOBBS. If I recollect correctly, there is no such provision in this bill; but if there were, it would be but a curb upon the abuse of the right of freedom of speech.

Mr. GEYER of California. Then I have read it wrongly.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The gentleman will concede that this bill makes advocacy of the overthrow of the Government by force and violence a deportable offense?

Mr. HOBBS. I do not think so.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. It definitely does on various pages. I am sure the gentleman does not want to remain in error.

Mr. HOBBS. I think the gentleman is talking about those titles in which we amend existing law, and those provisions are in the old law, not the new. This is so in both titles II and III.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. That is true.

Mr. HOBBS. Therefore this bill does not add anything at all of that kind to the law which has existed since 1917.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Except that the definition of advocacy has been extended by the present language. In other words, on page 24 we have (a) allens who are anarchists, (b) aliens who advise, advocate, or teach or who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group, that advises, advocates, or teaches opposition to all organized government. That is new language.

Mr. HOBBS. That is on page 24?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. That is correct. It is subdivision (b). And the gentleman will also find new language in subdivision (c).

Mr. HOBBS. Oh, that is title 3.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Yes.

Mr. HOBBS. Title III amends the law that Mr. Justice Roberts, in his decision in the Strecker case, said we should amend if we meant to make it so that conduct or membership which had ceased would be just ground for deportation, but, mark you, this does not change the law one whit on that subject. It simply says that no matter how far in the past membership in an interdicted organization may have been, nor of how short duration, it shall constitute, as we maintain it should, ground for deportation.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. On that point, if the gentleman will permit me, I think the gentleman is very familiar with the decisions on this type of cases, particularly criminal statutes. The gentleman is undoubtedly familiar with the case of People against Gitlow, in which the court held that mere advocacy could not be made a penal offense.

It is only when advocacy ceases and incitement begins that the Congress may in the case of citizens make it a penal offense. Does the gentleman believe that our bill of rights can continue by leaving it to a jury to determine when mere advocacy ceases and when incitement begins? Can we get 435 Members of this body to unite on one opinion as to where is the line of demarcation?

Mr. HOBBS. I am very happy to answer the gentleman as best I can. The position I take with respect to that matter, and which I believe this House will take, is that citizens of the United States have constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech which do not apply to aliens, and which never can be stretched so as to apply to aliens. Aliens in the United States are exactly analogous to visitors in your home. No guest in your home has the same rights as do your children. They have no vested right to remain here. They have no right even to a hearing unless that be granted them by specific act of Congress. The Supreme Court of the United States has so decided.

But even if aliens had the same rights as do citizens, no question as to freedom of speech is here involved. They can say anything they please so long as they stop short of advocacy of violence in the overthrow of this Government. The abuse, not the use, of freedom is inhibited. That has been the law all the time. All I am saying is that in title III we do nothing to change that law. In title II, which the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER] questioned, we did not change any law on this subject. The McCormack amendment to the change of penalty in the espionage law did that. We struck out title I when the McCormack amendment passed the House. What we are saying here is simply this, that whether advocacy amounts to incitement or not, we do not want any of those guests in our home to be advocating the burning of that house and the killing of the hosts. That is all. [Applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I will be happy to yield to my friend.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. I asked the gentleman to yield for the purpose of having him explain, and I know that he will very thoroughly, this phase of the bill. I will cite an example in order to get it before the Committee as it should be. Suppose that a citizen of Russia, who was a Communist over there—probably he could not help it, because, as I understand it, that is the only party there is in Russia—but suppose that by reason of the fact that even in Russiahe had decided that he wanted nothing to do with communism, and to get away from the vice of communism and come to a country where he can worship and also believe politically as he sees fit, he leaves Russia and lawfully enters the United States.

Of course, when he enters he is a member of the Communist Party, notwithstanding the fact that he left Russia to get away from it. When he entered here he could not be anything but a member of that party. When he entered the United States lawfully and is a member of the Communist Party, he immediately renounces his affiliation with that party. He immediately denies his belief in communism and states openly that he believes in our democracy and wants to take advantage of it; that he left Russia and came here to be able to do it, and then he lives here for a period of 1 year or 2 years, or, for that matter, 10 years, and during that 10 years he demonstrates that he has in good faith renounced all affiliation with communism; he demonstrates without doubt that he is a firm believer, in good faith, in the democratic principles of our Constitution; with the citizens of this country in the community where he lives he has demonstrated his position by act and by every utterance that he has made; he has lived an honest life; he has mingled with those citizens; he has endeared himself to them, and they love and respect him and want him to stay here, and he wants to stay here; but under the viciousness of this act-and I say that this phase of it is vicious-if he is picked up there is absolutely no defense. Once the fact is proved that he is a Communist, he must return, if he can return, to the country of Russia. Is that Mr. HOBBS. That is not exactly correct. In Russia membership in the Communist Party is not obligatory.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. If the gentleman will yield, I want to assume the facts as they are. I will assume that it is not obligatory, but by reason of not having full information, by reason of not knowing the liberty and opportunities afforded by American democracy we have here, he, unfortunately, through misinformation or no information, became a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. HOBBS. I will say to the gentleman that my information is that under the Russian system that could not happen. Under the Russian system you have to prove yourself to be a good Communist before you are elevated, as they say, to membership in the party.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Well, I want to state the premise just exactly as it is. We will assume, then, that even in Russia he demonstrated that he was a Communist and that for the time being and by lack of information he was a good Communist; his fidelity to the party could not be questioned, but that ultimately he wants to renounce it and come to America, and does renounce it.

Mr. HOBBS. Now so much for that. I submit there is no such case as the one hypothesized in the gentleman's major premise. But I would say that if this act were enforced, it would be impossible for him to have been here for 10 years, because he could not even enter.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Well, I said 2 years.

Mr. HOBBS. He could not enter at all. He is required to be stopped at the port of entry if he has been a member of any organization advocating the overthrow of our Government by violence. That is, if it be proved that the party to which he belonged was one that advocated overthrow of our Government or of all government by violence. [Applause.]

There are too many good aliens wishing to come here for us to take or keep those who have ever espoused the cause of assassination of men or government. [Applause.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to support this legislation, which, in its present form, comes to this body with the approval of an overwhelming majority of the members of the Committee on the Judiciary, without regard to their political affiliations.

Last week when the House debated the rule for its consideration, I listened with considerable interest to the arguments advanced by the opponents of this bill. Almost at the outset a dire warning was sounded, presumably to the Democratic majority of the House, to stop, look, listen, and reflect upon the disastrous fate of the old Federalist Party in 1800 due, it was said, to the espousal and enactment by the Congress controlled by that party during the administration of President John Adams, of the so-called alien and sedition laws. It was pointed out that the rebuke administered by the American voters to the party in power in 1800 was one from which it never recovered and was the beginning of a series of defeats that finally sent the Federalist Party down the road to oblivion. The inference was manifest that a similar fate awaits the Democratic Party in 1940 if by a substantial vote of its Representatives and Senators the Smith bill is enacted into law.

While I can agree that the fears and apprehensions of the gentlemen as to the probable results of the elections in 1940 are well founded, it will not be because of Democratic support of this worthy measure. Other issues and innumerable sins of commission and omission will be the cause in 1940 of the withdrawal by the people of their political affections that they might transfer them to more efficient and competent recipients. The only unfavorable reaction that the party in power can suffer as the result of the passage of this bill is because of the tardiness of its Representatives in not seeming to realize until 1939 the need of this type of legislation.

But the comparison of the pending bill to the old alien and sedition laws seems to me to be the acme of absurdity. Let us glance for a moment at the old Alien Act of John Adam's time. Boiled down it amounts to this: Congress in 1798 granted the President arbitrary and despotic power to order all such aliens as he should judge dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States, or should have reasonable grounds to suspect were concerned in any treasonable or secret machinations against the Government, to depart from the United States within such time as he specified in his order. There was no appeal from his edict. There was no unbiased tribunal to sit in judgment as to the reasonableness of his suspicions or the soundness of his judgment. At the whim of one man, who might be laboring under prejudices created through unsubstantiated rumors or malicious fabrications, decent, law-abiding men, women, and children who had, through their own energies established themselves as residents of a given community could have been ordered to pack their belongings and depart from the United States—to go wherever someone might be kind enough to receive them. Their only recourse was to appeal to the mercy and reason of him who mistrusted them and this remedy was not open to them except at his sufferance. He was the court of first and last resort. He was the prosecutor, judge, jury, and executioner.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. On page 27 we find this language:

It being the intent and purpose of this section that membership in any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act, at any time, of no matter how short duration or how far in the past, irrespective of its termination or of how it may have ceased, shall require deportation.

I want the gentleman to put me right if I am wrong in my construction of this language, because I think the gentleman perhaps is more informed upon this subject than I, as he is a member of the committee reporting this bill. My construction of this language is "once a Communist always a Communist," whether or not a man reforms.

Mr. REED of Illinois. There was some discussion of this subject during the time the committee was addressed by the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs]. In my opinion, this bill does not of itself provide that a person must be deported because he is a Communist. It was stated by the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Murdock] on the floor a few minutes ago that an alien may come from Russia; that at the time he lived in Russia he may have been a member of the Communist Party; that he comes to America, and then, ipso facto, he would be deported because of his former affiliation with the Communist Party. The bill does not say that.

To be subject to deportation under this bill he must have been a member of a party or an organization which advocated, not the overthrow of the Russian Government but the overthrow of the Government of the United States. If that were a principle of the Communist Party while he was a member of that party in Russia, and he then and at that time advocated the overthrow of the Government of the United States, that in itself would be enough to deport him if he came over here; and it should be.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I thank the gentleman for that explanation, and I want to make this observation: Suppose a Communist comes over here and joins one of the classes to which reference is made in section 1; that he has been a member in Russia of the Communist Party, which advocated the overthrow of the United States Government by either force or violence. But he finds he is wrong, finds he is mistaken, gives up his previous views, and becomes a splendid man, and all that sort of thing. Under the provisions of this bill, having once belonged to that class of people, there is no chance for him to become a respected and honored citizen of the United States, as he could have done had he not once been a Communist. I think we ought to have some forgiveness in our hearts for people who have gone wrong but later mended their ways.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. REED of Illinois. The legislation before us today, so far as it deals with aliens, will affect only those who are convicted criminals, anarchists, and persons who have been infected with the virus of organizations bent on the destruction of our Government by force and violence. With the enactment of this bill tribunals set up under existing law, with the right of a review of their decisions, will, as heretofore, sit in judgment in deportation cases. If they function in an unlawful, arbitrary, or capricious manner, writs of habeas corpus will accord the alien the protection of our Federal

The law of 1798 aroused the resentment of the public, because in it this Government exhibited an unfairness toward the alien. The Smith bill merely insists that the alien must be fair to this Government.

The people of this Nation are becoming more and more American-minded and are determined not to tolerate the further presence in their midst of criminal alien enemies whose sole ambition is to tear down American ideals and institutions, instill disrespect for government and law, corrupt the young men of our Army and our Navy, and create disorder, chaos, and industrial paralysis in our domestic affairs.

This legislation should, and I believe will, receive the overwhelming approval of Members on both sides of this House.

[Applause.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes in which to answer the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REED] and his statement with reference to the alien and sedition laws. I am going to read briefly a statement made by James Madison in the General Assembly to the people of the Commonwealth of Virginia on January 23, 1799, against the alien bill. He said:

But this bill contains other features, still more alarming and dangerous. It dispenses with the trial by jury.

So does the Smith bill.

It violates the judicial system; it confounds legislative, executive, and judicial powers; it punishes without trial; and it bestows upon the President despotic powers over a numerous class of men. Are such measures consistent with our constitutional principles?

Madison said "No" then, and with reference to this new alien and sedition bill I likewise say "No" today.

Madison complained that the bill punished without trial. We have the same thing in this bill. An unsuspecting alien may possess a sawed-off shotgun or some other weapon interdicted by the provisions of this act; he may go out huntingand be it remembered that a citizen might very well have a similar weapon without molestation from the authoritiesyet this poor alien can be nabbed, taken into custody, and without trial-because all the act says is that should he possess the gun or weapon without legal authority, which simply means without a permit, this poor, innocent, unsuspecting alien could without trial by jury, merely upon the say-so of an executive, in this instance subordinates in the Department of Labor, be banished from this country to the country of his origin.

Furthermore, Madison said:

There is bestowed upon the Executive despotic powers over a numerous class of men.

I loathe communism with every ounce of energy within me. I have denounced communism at all times, yet I am interested in fair play, as was Madison interested in fair play way back in 1798 and 1799, as were Jefferson and those who saw eve to eve with him.

As was pointed out, you give power in this bill to the Secretary of Labor, that is, an administrative officer, to deport a man who may have been a Communist or who may have joined the Communist Party or some similar radical party for 5 minutes, 5 days, or 5 years many years ago, and regardless of his subsequent mode of living, regardless of his change of mental attitude, regardless of repentance or contrition. Certainly something should be said about true repentance. A man should have the right to change his mind and doctrine subsequent to his admission to the radical party. He should have the right to indicate to the Nation that he disowns what he may have done previously and that he does no longer believe in those tenets of radicalism. He is now a good man, a good family man, a loyal employee, an honorable husband and father. I say it is unfair to send him hence without a trial. No trial is provided even in that situation. Action is taken merely upon the say-so of an administrative official, the alien is sent to the country of his origin, be his affiliation in the radical party of only a very short duration. He may have joined up during a strike. during suffering, at which times men in penury and want are easily influenced by radical leaders and selfish orators and leaders.

A further provision of the bill states that any alien engaged in espionage shall be sent back to the country of his origin.

There will be no trial by jury. What is espionage or is not espionage is a matter of opinion. There is no definition in the bill. So we place in the hands of an executive officer the right to say that some alien has been guilty of "espionage," but there is no definition in the statute. Here the administrative officer is the judge of the situation. He is the judge and the jury and the prosecutor. We have an Espionage Act, and it is a rather well-defined act.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 additional

Mr. Chairman, the act to which I referred, the Espionage Act, is a well-defined, carefully worded statute. Why do we not say in this bill, if a person who happens to be an alien is guilty of the violation of the Espionage Act, that he shall therefore have a trial by jury, and if he is found guilty under those circumstances, then he shall be sent hence to the country of origin. But the condition precedent should be a trial by his peers, a trial by jury. No jury trial is provided by this bill.

Mr. REED of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. REED of Illinois. The gentleman mentioned that an alien might go hunting. Did he ever hear of a person going hunting with a sawed-off shotgun?

Mr. CELLER. It may be possible. I think that may be possible. I do not know anyone who would do it. I would not do it, but maybe an alien might do it. My contention is that the mere possession of such a weapon without a trial should not mean deportation. At least let there be first a conviction by a jury. Then, and only then, deport.

Mr. HOBBS. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.
Mr. HOBBS. I will ask the gentleman if the Espionage Act that is already on the books does not in its own terms limit itself in its application to wartime and not to times of Mr. CELLER. That is all the more reason why in times of peace we should have an act which clearly requires a jury trial as a condition precedent to deportation. If in time of war you cannot send one hence unless he is guilty of violation of the Espionage Act, which provides for trial by jury, with all greater force and with all greater reason we should apply this to a violation of an Espionage Act in times of peace. If a man is guilty of violating that act in time of peace, after a trial by jury and he is found guilty, he shall then, and only then, be banished or deported.

Mr. FADDIS. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Mr. FADDIS. The gentleman speaks of the innocent alien getting into trouble. Is it not just as much incumbent upon an alien to bring himself within the law of this country and conform to it as it is for a citizen?

Mr. CELLER. There is no doubt about that. Aliens, I say, are more law abiding than citizens. That sounds strange but is true.

The Department of Justice compiles each year statistics of the persons arrested in the United States. They come from, for this last year, 1938, 2,662 cities and communities, representing over 67,000,000 people. They show that, for each 100,000 native-born whites in our population, 570.9 were arrested last year; while of our foreign-born whites, only 209.2 were arrested. In other words, the native-born were arrested three times, in general figures, as often as the foreign-born white, and those same proportions have held, year after year, for many years.

I have here the figures recently released by the Department of Commerce, the Bureau of the Census. They get out periodically figures on the population in our prisons. These figures are for prisoners received from the courts during 1937, the last available. Of the 63,552 received in State and Federal prisons and reformatories in 1937, 46,325 were white. Of those, 93.1 percent were native-born, and 6.9 percent were foreign-born. Now, in your population, according to the last census-and this is dealing simply with the white population-the native whites were 87.7 percent and the foreignborn 12.3 percent. That is 12.3 percent of the total population, as compared with 6.9 in prisons, admitted to the State and Federal penal institutions. That has been true year after year, and I think that is valuable to call attention to, in trying to suggest the need or the lack of need for reaching the alien as a special class.

So often our general laws are aimed at someone-in this case, quite rightfully, the agitator-but the question is whether the law will accomplish the purpose that you have in mind, because, for one agitator that you may reach, you are going to reach thousands of aliens-women, mothers, particularly, who are innocent of any wrongdoing.

Thus our aliens are hardly as black as they are painted. It might be well to direct some of the force and oratory and attention now aimed at the aliens to our citizens. At the time of our last Presidential election, we had in the United States, according to the census, 67,000,000 people over 21 years of age who were citizens. Now, some 46,000,000, or a trifle less, actually voted, a discrepancy of 21,000,000 who were not performing their duties and responsibilities as citizens. That is a matter of regret; that is a matter of education, to cure that situation; and I think we have exactly the same situation with regard to some of our alien population, and it is a matter of time and education to adjust them, not a kind of compulsory naturalization, which, it seems to me, would do far more harm than good.

Certainly the alien problem, if any exists, cannot be solved by new alien and sedition laws.

The problem has always been settled by the eventual assimilation of these aliens into our own American way of life, That is how and why our Nation has thrived. The problem cannot be solved by the force and violence of alien and sedition laws.

The alien and sedition laws fairly bristled with hatred of Irish and French immigrants, who were beginning to make themselves felt in American politics. Just as today, the new alien and sedition laws are aimed at certain classes and races coming from lands of persecution. Even the Federalist, Hamilton, was dumfounded at the temerity and brutality of these laws, strict enforcement of which would have sent Jefferson to the gallows and sealed the lips of many Members of Congress. It is well to repeat the words of Edward Livingston:

If we are ready to violate the Constitution, will the people sub-nit to our unauthorized acts? Sir, they ought not to submit; mey would deserve the chains that these measures are forging mit to our unauthorized acts? for them. The country will swarm with informers, spies, delators, and all the odious reptile tribe that breed in the sunshine of despotic power. The hours of the most unsuspected confidence, the intimacies of friendship, or the recesses of domestic retirement afford no security.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. RISK].

Mr. RISK. Mr. Chairman, I have noted with a great deal of interest the debate which was brought about when the gentleman from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] asked a question as to what would happen in the event a man who came from Russia, had been a member of the Communist Party over there, remained here and behaved himself, and lived a good life as every American should. The question was not, in my opinion, answered to the satisfaction of the gentleman from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK].

I call the attention of the Committee to page 20, where that class of individuals has ample protection under the proposed law, because any of the activities enumerated in that title must take place after entry. Under the provisions of title III, on page 24, if a man who was a citizen of Russia and a member of the Communist Party applies for admission, he is automatically excluded under the act; but if by any chance he is a member and he has already been admitted to this country, he must be found guilty of some of these activities after his entry into the United States before he can be deported. It seems to me that fully answers the question.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. RISK. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. We know that in nearly all of the jurisdictions, or at least in many of them, membership in the Communist Party is sufficient ground, and has been so held, to deport. If you will turn to page 27 you will find the following language, and there is no question about why this was written in here. Our friend from Alabama was so emphatic about it there is no question about his intent in writing it:

It being the intent and purpose of this section that membership in any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act at any time-

Now, that refers back to Russia-or no matter how short duration or how far in the past, irrespective of its termination or of how it may have ceased, shall require deportation.

Mr. RISK. But does not the gentleman read on page 20 the same as I do? The activity of which the man is charged must have occurred after his entry into the United States.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. All we have to show, though, is the activity, his membership, which may have been the most passive kind of membership, or that at one time in the past he was a member of the Communist Party. Out in Seattle that has been held to be sufficient to deport.

Mr. RISK. The action must have been performed after his entry into the United States.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RISK. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The gentleman is mistaken in his view, because the gentleman has in mind title II. If he will read title III, it specifically states that any alien who is at the time of his application for admission into the United States or who was at any time theretofore a member of any of the following-described classes, and so forth. I think that meets the gentleman's point.

Mr. RISK. Title II provides for exclusion of those who are applying for admission, and deportation after conviction of those already in the country of any of these violations

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Oh. no: they may be deported under that section if they belonged to any of the proscribed classes prior to entry.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RISK. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. I may say as a member of the committee that the title to which the gentleman refers, title III, is retroactive and may apply to aliens no matter how long they may have been in this country in the past.

Mr. RISK. Mr. Chairman, it is hard for me to understand why anybody can vote against a measure like this.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield for an observation?

Mr. RISK. I will be glad to.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I am opposed to communism just as much as the genteman is, or any Member of this House, but as I read this bill I cannot get away from the fact that once having been a Communist, under the operation of this law, though it were many years in the past, he shall be deported. Is that right? Do we not write a law to the effect that we cannot forgive? That we do not believe in reformation?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RISK. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MILLER. With reference to these hypothetical cases that have been cited of a man being here from 2 to 10 years who was a Communist in Russia, may I say that if he were sincere in his desire to repudiate communism would he not have taken out his citizenship papers in that time?

Mr. RISK. He would already have had his citizenship papers and would be a citizen by now.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Is it not a fact that under the operation of this bill a man could never live down the fact that he was a Communist?

Mr. RISK. Anyone who took advantage of the hospitality of the United States and was a Communist ought not to be permitted to live it down. [Applause.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Does not the gentleman believe a man ought to be forgiven for his sins? Does the gentleman want to deny Christianity? That is what you are doing in this bill. Are we going to legislate against the teachings of the Man from Galilee?

Mr. RISK. No; but can the gentleman reconcile communism with Christianity?

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; but Christianity is the teachings of Christ, who believed and taught forgiveness of sin.

Mr. RISK. Mr. Chairman, it is difficult for me to understand how any Member of this House can vote against this measure. It provides for a fine or imprisonment or both for any person who is convicted of any of the offenses enumerated therein, and for the deportation of any alien violating its provisions. Furthermore, it declares ineligible for Government service any person violating its provisions.

It seeks to punish those citizens who have so far forgotten themselves as to advocate the overthrow of our Government, and to deport those aliens guilty of subversive activities. What reasonable citizen can fail to see the justice contained in the bill?

This country of ours is made up almost exclusively of men and women who ask only the privilege of making an honest living, and of giving to their children something a little better than they themselves had. Due to economic conditions over which they had no control, they found themselves stymied in their ambition when they either suffered great reductions in their incomes or lost their jobs entirely.

For the past 20 years or more there has been a movement in progress here admittedly designed to alter radically our representative form of government. We can see on all sides the effect of this movement. Up to the time when the last major depression came upon us, we were able to resist to a great extent the platitudes of those who were promising a utopia. But when our people are discouraged and disheartened at their prospects, when they find themselves out of work and forced to pocket their pride and ask for assistance from their Government, they are more susceptible to the wiles and the machinations of those forces seeking to tear down everything for which this country has fought for a century and a half. Aliens who have nothing in common with us have come within our borders and taken advantage of the tolerance of the American people to bore into the very vitals of American life. Law and order has no place in their conception of government, at least while they are here in the United States. We have for too long stood by and permitted them to grow stronger each day until now we are faced with a real threat, more of a threat to us. Mr. Chairman, than is the most warlike and aggressive foreign nation.

Let this measure become law, and with the information already in the hands of the Government as a result of the work of the Dies Committee and the Department of Justice. we can root cut these alien parasites and disturbers, send them back where they came from, and assure some measure of peace and contentment to our own free people. [Applause.1

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK].

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I believe that I love my America just as much as any Member of this House. My ancestry goes back to the Revolution. I have ancestors that fought in the Revolution just as many of you here today have. I believe in our constitutional democracy. I believe that we must and should perpetuate it. I do not believe you can perpetuate American traditions and American principles, even in the name of patriotism, by resorting to the procedure of communism and fascism in order to enforce patriotism in the United States. which I believe you would be doing by the enactment of this

I have the highest respect for the gentleman from Alabama. I believe he is one of the finest lawyers I ever met and one of the greatest advocates who ever appeared on this floor. I know that notwithstanding his sincerity in his authorship of the Hobbs alien bill and notwithstanding his eloquence and sincerity in sponsoring this bill he gives me the right to my opinion and probably respects me in it.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. HOBBS. I may say that I certainly do-to the

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Much has been said here during the discussion that I intended to say. The only part of the bill to which, by reason of the short time I have, I can and wish to direct your attention at this time is section 2 of title III and especially the language on page 27 which has been referred to time and again. However, to make it emphatic and to impress you with its seriousness and its viciousness, I want to read it again:

It being the intent and purpose of this section that membership in any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act, at any time, of no matter how short duration or how far in the past, irrespective of its termination or of how it may have ceased shall require deportation.

Mr. Chairman, have we come to the point in the United States when we, in my opinion, not only depart from Americanism but depart in that language from Christianity? One of the great underlying principles of Christianity is that if a man wants to repent, Christianity forgives him; but this language does not, it condemns him eternally. [Applause.]

Mr. GWYNNE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GWYNNE. Does not the gentleman believe that language goes far beyond the necessities of the case?

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. It goes so far that it is ridiculous. It goes so far that it is absurd. I understand, Mr. Chairman, that the distinguished lawyer, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Gwynne] will offer an amendment to at least bring the language back within the scope of Christianity. As I am informed, the gentleman's amendment will do this: When a warrant is issued against any alien charging him with communism in the past, he shall have the right to show that in good faith he has renounced his affiliation with that party and has not done so simply to evade deportation. Do you want language to go further than that? Shall we depart from Christian principles and tell a man, even if he has been here for 10 years and has demonstrated his ambition to be an American citizen and a good one, and has demonstrated to his neighbors that he wants to do that, that he cannot do it under the laws of the United States simply because of a mistake of which he repents and asks forgiveness.

Mr. Chairman, if we adopt this type of language we had better send a commission to New York Harbor to shoot the light out of the hand of the Statue of Liberty and blot out the inscription engraved thereon and which our laws have honored for so many years:

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame, with conquering limbs astride from land to land; here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand a mighty woman with a torch, whose flame is the imprisoned lightning, and her name, "mother of exiles." From her beacon hand glows world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command the air-bridged harbor that twin cities frame. "Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp!" cries she with silent lips. "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, the wretched refuse of your teeming shore. Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me. I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

[Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Burdick].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, before I can make up my mind to vote for this bill you will have to do something to the language on page 27, which reads:

It being the intent and purpose of this section that membership in any one of the classes of aliens enumerated in section 1 of this act, at any time, of no matter how short duration or how far in the past, irrespective of its termination or of how it may have ceased, shall require deportation.

There is some concern in this House about communism. I do not know of any place on earth where communism is being tried, and I do not believe any other Member of the House knows, either. There are various forms of communism. In Russia there have been four. The Kerenskyites are the ones who first overthrew the autocratic czarism of Russia, but they are now fugitives from justice. They do not dare go back. At one time they were not only Communists but the leaders of the Communist Party.

The second class is the Trotskyites, who led the Russian Government at one time. Today the Trotskyites are fugitives from justice, and many of the followers of Trotsky have been executed in Russia. I believe the record shows that about 3,000,000 men and women have been shot or are missing in Russia since the revolution began.

The Trotskyites in turn were succeeded by the Leninites. Fortunately for the name of Lenin, he died a natural death and became a hero of the Russian Government until very recently.

Lenin in turn was succeeded by Stalin, and his followers are known as Stalinites. They are the Government of Russia. It is a pure autocratic military regime, as all the others have been.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. BOLLES. Is it not true that all of them are based on the socialism of Karl Marx in his Communist Manifesto? Mr. BURDICK. The principles of Karl Marx or collectivism have never been tried out as a pure theory anywhere.

The Stalinites are now, if you will notice the daily papers, rounding up the great leaders of the Lenin government, and many of them are out to be shot.

Now, we will just imagine, under the terms of this bill, one of the Kerenskyites comes to the United States. He has had all the communism he wants. He wants to become an American citizen; but under page 20 of your bill he does not have to carry a sawed-off shotgun or a machine gun to get into trouble. All that is required is that "any alien who within 5 years after entry becomes a public charge." He cannot make a go of it, just like about 14,000,000 of our citizens cannot make a go of it today, and just as soon as that happens and it is proven that at one time he belonged to the Kerenskyites, under the terms of your bill, he is to be expelled from this country, and, of course, returned to Stalin and shot.

Now, we will suppose a Trotskyite comes along. He has had all of the present regime of communism that he wants. He wants to find a new country. He wants to come to this country, as my ancestors did in 1617, and become a useful member of society. He tells the officials he is not a Communist, because he does not want to aline himself with the present Stalinites of Russia. He is admitted as a citizen, but he becomes poor after 5 years and becomes a public charge. Then it is proven that he was a member of the Trotsky Party, and under the terms of this bill he must be expelled, no matter how long before it was or whether he has recanted that particular "ism" or not. He will be handed over to Stalin and shot. So it is with the Leninites or with any other groups, and if you will look at page 20 you will see:

Any alien who within 5 years after entry becomes a public charge from causes not affirmatively shown to have arisen subsequent to landing.

You cannot get me to vote for a bill that will permit murder by sending these men back to Russia. [Applause.] [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH].

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, I am sincerely in favor of the objectives of the pending legislation. I say this, knowing full well that in certain quarters there is a disposition to treat lightly the consideration and the passage of such bills by this House.

I would not want to be misunderstood. I feel, as I am certain the large majority of Americans feel, that the naturalized citizens of this Republic are just as important to our Nation as are the native-born citizens. We are all descendants of those who came to our shores either at an early or a late date, and I feel that these individuals who come to America and embrace this country and its institutions of democracy are valuable and important to the Republic. [Applause.]

I congratulate those persons who appreciate the land to which they have come to live, and figures show that applications for naturalization are increasing. These men and women become splendid and law-abiding citizens and contribute to the betterment of the United States. These people are awakening to the fact that they must protect their good names and not allow undesirable aliens to besmirch their fine citizenship record.

I desire at this time to call attention to H. R. 4172, a measure which I introduced on February 15 of this year. The proposal calls for any alien who does not make declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States within 1 year after he becomes eligible to make such declaration or within 1 year after the enactment of this act, whichever is the later, that individual shall be taken into custody and deported by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the provisions of law relating to other deportable aliens.

Mr. MARCANTONIO and Mr. CELLER rose.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I would rather complete my statement, although I have no disposition to fail to answer any questions. I do want to make certain observations and I shall hope that later I shall have time to answer your questions.

I trust that it will be possible for this measure to be considered by the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. I have been somewhat worried at the delay of the committee in calling a hearing to date. I have asked for it repeatedly, but I do not want to give the impression that I feel the committee has not acted in good faith. The chairman has promised me there will be a hearing upon this bill next week. A point of order could be raised if I were to attempt to offer it as an amendment to the pending legislation.

I feel very strongly that in the United States there are literally millions and millions of individuals who are aliens through and through. In speaking of "aliens," I designate those persons who have entered our country legally or illegally. but who remain here and make no attempt to become citizens of the Nation to which they have come, and who are not willing to uphold the foundations of our system. They indicate no interest in the progress of America, and by the hundreds of thousands they have taken jobs in business and industry which rightfully belong to American workers. To me that is a clear-cut definition of an alien. We know as a matter of fact that there are those aliens in the United States today who accept the privileges, the profits, and the protection of America, but who at the same time accept none of the responsibilities of American citizenship. We should rid our land of such persons. [Applause.] They spread discord in the ranks of labor, they cause unnecessary strikes, and they do not uphold the democratic institutions of this Republic. That is the reason that I am in favor of the objectives of a measure such as we have before us, mindful, of course, that when the bill is read under the 5-minute rule there will perhaps be written in amendments that will make the legislation more acceptable to Congress. I now yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman would require that all aliens must make a declaration of intention within 1 year after they come to the country.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; that is true.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. And that is for the purpose of seeing to it that the people who come to this country become American citizens?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes. Using the words of George Washington: "Citizens by birth or choice of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections."

Mr. MARCANTONIO. That is the gentleman's motive?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; it certainly is my hope that native-born and naturalized citizens unite to protect themselves.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does the gentleman provide any penalty in his bill for those district court judges who ask questions of aliens that even Members of the Supreme Court cannot answer, in order to deprive the alien of opportunity to become a citizen of the United States.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I believe those individuals who apply for citizenship should be given an opportunity to fairly present themselves to a court that will be just and helpful.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; I yield gladly to one who believes in America for Americans.

Mr. KEEFE. Is it not a fact that in the application for first papers no such examination is necessary? The examination comes on final naturalization.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I was referring to final papers.

Mr. KEEFE. Then the gentleman's inquiry was not pertinent to this bill.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. It is pertinent to naturalization and therefore pertinent to the gentleman's bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia has expired.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BLACKNEY].

Mr. BLACKNEY. Mr. Chairman, I am earnestly in favor of H. R. 5138, a bill known as the Smith alien bill, which possesses many meritorious provisions and, in my judgment, should be passed by this Congress.

This bill is not aimed at aliens who are lawfully here and who are desirous of becoming American citizens, and will not interfere in the slightest with those aliens lawfully entered, who believe in American institutions and in American principles; but it is aimed at those radical aliens who have entered this country illegally, who are not in sympathy with American principles and American institutions, whose desire is to subvert our form of government and, in its place, substitute a radical form of government.

The problem of immigration has always been a vital issue in America, but is more vital today than ever before in our history. Since 1820, 38,000,000 aliens have entered the United States legally as immigrants. Most of these people who have come here have made fine contributions to America. They deserve honor and credit for it. On the other hand, it has been estimated that there are over 2,000,000 aliens in this country who have entered unlawfully, thousands of whom have been and many of whom are still, on Government relief. Within 30 days after Congress passed the last relief bill more than 30,000 aliens were dropped from our relief rolls, and there are reasons to believe that many thousands more are still on the rolls at the expense of the overburdened American taxpayer.

It becomes necessary for the United States to give its first thought to our own citizens, both native-born and naturalized. We must find jobs and opportunities for those who have a rightful claim to the benefits and blessings of American citizenship; but our country now has reached the condition where unlimited immigration is no longer possible. Our house is full, and our first thought, therefore, must be for our own citizens.

Despite existing restrictions placed on the flow of aliens, our immigration laws are filled with loopholes. Countless thousands are coming in illegally. We have shown sympathy for undesirable aliens who have flouted our laws and our institutions. We have no adequate check on aliens who come in on temporary permits. We permit alien groups to organize and undermine our institutions and complicate our own domestic problems.

It is not definitely known how many aliens we have in this country who have entered unlawfully, and the only way to determine that fact is by rigid registration of all aliens in the United States. Under existing laws we cannot deport aliens who entered unlawfully prior to 1924, unless it can be shown that they have been guilty of crime involving moral turpitude.

The first title of this bill is one which provides that it shall be unlawful to spread sedition through the Army and Navy of the United States. That bill was drafted and sent to the committee by the Navy Department and is included in this bill. Representatives from both the Army and Navy urged the adoption of this bill, because the ill effect of allowing communistic propaganda to be circulated in the Army and Navy was already proving disastrous.

Title II of the bill amends the law for the deportation of criminal aliens and adds several classes to the deportable criminal-alien class. To illustrate, it adds to that class those who are found guilty of carrying machine guns and sawed-off shotguns in violation of the law. I cannot conceive that any Member of Congress should object to the deportation of those folks who come here from foreign countries and indulge in the use of machine guns and sawed-off shotguns upon our population. It also adds those people who violate State narcotic laws.

Title III amends existing law and takes care of the unfortunate situation in the Strecker case. You will recall that the Court held that a man could be a member of a party which advocated the overthrow of the Government of the United States, but could not be deported unless he was a member of that party at the time he was arrested for deportation. This amendment changes that so as to avoid the situation where a person, who, upon being suspected, could resign from that organization and say, "I was formerly a member of that organization, but I have now resigned."

This is exactly the situation under the law in the Strecker case. This bill makes it plain that a person who advocates the overthrow of this Government by force, and belongs to a party that recommends it, shall be deported, whether he belongs to it now, or whether he belonged to it yesterday or last year, if he is an alien. I think this is a fair and square issue and those Congressmen who favor the deportation of aliens advocating the overthrow of this Government by force ought to vote for this bill.

The last title of the bill provides for the fingerprinting of those aliens who come to this country. I can see no reason why anyone should object to that. Why should not these aliens be fingerprinted? We fingerprinted our soldiers during the World War and again fingerprinted them when they applied for their adjusted-service compensation. Fingerprinting is becoming popular among all classes of our citizenship as a matter of protection. No alien coming to this country with proper intentions and with a desire to conform to American institutions should object to being fingerprinted.

There has been a great deal of maudlin sentiment manifested toward aliens unlawfully here and several Members have spoken on the floor of the House, shedding tears over the dire calamity that will result if this bill goes into effect. The time has come in America when red-blooded American citizens should have the courage to stand up for those great principles of America which have changed us from a nation of 3,000,000 to a nation of 130,000,000.

If these communistic, disgruntled radicals who refuse to become American citizens do not like our country, let them return to the land that gave them birth. America has welcomed in the past those citizens of foreign countries who came to our shores imbued with the idea of becoming American citizens and loyal to the flag and the Constitution. Those are still welcome, but the other group of aliens now numbering approximately 2,000,000, who are here unlawfully, thousands of them not desirous of becoming American citizens, thousands of them preaching their gospel of hate, communism, and radicalism—that group should be deported and if this bill is adopted methods of deportation will be greatly

One of my colleagues, the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER], stated on the floor of the House that he would vote for this bill if he could forget that his grandparents were aliens, if he could forget that there were Members of the House who have been aliens, if he could forget that the Nation had been built largely by the work and help of aliens, and if he could forget his oath of office.

Let me state to my colleague that the very facts he has enunciated should be conclusive evidence to him that he should vote for this bill, because I assume that his grandparents were aliens who came to this country to be American citizens, who became lovers of our country, its flag, and its Constitution. He should vote for this bill because, granting his premise that our Nation has been built largely by the work and the help of aliens, these aliens were the type of aliens who become American citizens and who, when they took the constitutional oath to preserve, protect, and to defend the Constitution, meant exactly what they said; and then, my colleague should vote for this bill because when he took the oath of office on the floor of the House as a Congressman, he then, himself, said that he would preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution. How can he preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution if he sits idly by while thousands of radicals endeavor to overthrow this Government and he does nothing about it?

There are from six to seven million aliens in this country today who have shown no tendency or disposition to become American citizens. This is an unhealthy situation which should be corrected. I favor legislation that will give these aliens a reasonable time in which to make up their minds as to whether they want to become American citizens, and at the expiration of that time, if they have made no move to become naturalized, I favor deporting them to the country from whence they came. They are receiving all of the benefits which our citizens enjoy, without assuming any of the hardships and responsibilities. This is manifestly unfair.

The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and all veterans' organizations are in favor of legislation along the line indicated. It is a fine thing for this country today that our veteran organizations throughout the land are taking such a pronounced stand upon Americanization. These veterans are literally soldiers of peace, as they formerly were soldiers of war. They recognize the proposition that these aliens unlawfully here, preaching their nauseating doctrine of hate, should be deported. These veterans fought to preserve the flag and the Constitution, and they are now fighting to maintain that same flag and that same Constitution in perpetuity. For that reason they believe in the deportation of radical aliens who are opposed to American principles and American Government.

I am opposed to all foreign "isms" and un-American groups which enjoy the privileges of America and, at the same time, seek to undermine our Government. I shall vote for H. R. 5138. [Applause.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Robsion].

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, we have before us H. R. 5138, known as the Smith bill. It seeks to accomplish three things:

First. To make it unlawful for anyone to distribute any book, pamphlet, paper, article, letter, or other writing among the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States with the intent and purpose to interfere with, impair, or break down the morale or discipline of the armed forces of the United States.

Second. It provides for the deportation of (a) aliens who are anarchists; (b) aliens who advise, advocate, or teach or who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group that advises, advocates, or teaches opposition to all organized government; (c) aliens who advise, advocate, or teach or belong to organizations, associations, societies, or groups that believe in or advise, advocate, or teach the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States, or of all forms of government, or the assaulting or killing of the officers of the United States, or who favor the unlawful damage, injury, or destruction of property or sabotage; (d) aliens who write, publish, or cause to be written or published or who knowingly circulate, print, distribute, or display letters, papers, or documents teaching opposition to all organized government or advocate the overthrow of the Government of the United States or all forms of law, or the necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of the officers of the United States.

Third. It provides that our consular officers in foreign countries shall not issue a visa to any alien seeking to enter the United States unless such alien has been fingerprinted and a careful check-up made to find out whether such alien has a criminal record in the country from which he comes.

I favor the objectives sought in this bill. Those in charge of our armed forces have become alarmed. They say that Communists and other organizations are flooding the ships, barracks, Army and Navy posts with subversive literature, and are seeking to break down the morale of the armed forces of our country. This is a policy that has been pursued for a long time by Communists, anarchists, and others whose purpose is to overthrow this Government. We are now spending approximately $2,000,000,000 annually to build up the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard to defend effectively our country if assailed. Millions are being spent every year to instruct our young men and women in our defense program, in Americanism, patriotism, and loyalty to this country and to those in charge of our armed forces. Now why should we permit these Communists, anarchists, and other subversive groups to distribute their un-American and poisonous literature among our armed forces? We might as well take poisonous reptiles into our own households and among our own wives and children as to permit this conduct on the part of the enemies of our Government and our country.

ONLY ENEMY OR CRIMINAL ALIENS CAN BE DEPORTED

Title II of the bill applies solely and only to the deportation of enemy or criminal aliens. It provides that any time within 5 years after entry, any alien who is a member of one or more of the classes excluded by law-that is, anarchists, Communists, aliens convicted of crimes, and so forth-or any alien who at any time after entry knowingly or for gain shall have encouraged, induced, or assisted any other alien to enter the United States in violation of law, or any alien that is a foreign spy or belongs to any society, organization, or group seeking to change the character of the United States Government, or who has been convicted of violation of the narcotics laws or who at any time after entry possesses or carries any weapon without legal authority which shoots automatically or semiautomatically without manual reloading or that carries or has a sawed-off shotgun or who advocates the unlawful destruction of property or the teaching of anarchy or the overthrow by violence of the United States, and so forth, may be deported.

The acting chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, my friend, Mr. Celler, of New York City, in his opposition to this bill expressed concern that some alien hunting in this country might be picked up and deported. This bill only reaches the alien who possesses or carries any weapon without legal authority, such as a machine gun or sawed-off shotgun. Well, we go hunting sometimes down in Kentucky, but we never go hunting with a machine gun or a sawed-off shot-When a fellow does that down in Kentucky we know he is hunting for something besides rabbits or birds. He is hunting banks and their officers and deposits. He is hunting for two-legged game, not squirrels, rabbits, or birds. Perhaps in New York City they do hunt with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns. [Laughter.] Almost daily we read in the press of such hunting in New York City, but the newspaper reports indicate that people are killed and not birds or rabbits.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. My time is limited, as you

Mr. CELLER. Oh, yield just briefly.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Well, if the gentleman can explain how they hunt rabbits and other game in New York City with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns, I yield for that purpose. [Applause.]

Mr. CELLER. I just wanted to explain how they hunt in Harlan County, Ky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. If machine guns and sawed-off shotguns are ever used in Kentucky, they are not looking for rabbits or birds. If we had in Kentucky as many gang murders, bank hold-ups, kidnapings, and gang killings as they have in my friend's city of New York, and as many anarchists and Communists, I would say nothing about Harlan or any other county.

This bill expressly provides that an alien can be possessed of a weapon without deportation, provided it is not unlawful in his home State to have the weapon in possession. If the State of New York permits aliens to possess machine guns and sawed-off shotguns, the alien could not be deported under this bill for possessing such weapons. We take the position that a good, law-abiding alien does not need machine guns or sawed-off shotguns in this country. Such weapons are used to hold up banks, kill the officials, to rob trains and express offices, to kill officers of the law, to kidnap, and engage in gang murders. Aliens are in this country by permission and sufferance of the American people, and we say in this bill that they cannot arm themselves in violation of State laws with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns to the terror of law-abiding aliens and law-abiding citizens.

ALIEN COMMUNISTS AND ANARCHISTS MAY BE DEPORTED

Title III of the bill authorizes the deportation of aliens who were at the time of their admission into the United States or who were at any time theretofore anarchists or who advise, advocate, or teach or who are members of or affiliated with any organization, association, society, or group that advises, advocates, or teaches opposition to all organized government, or aliens who believe themselves, or belong to an organization that advocates the overthrow of this Government by force or the assassination of the officers of this Government, or aliens who write, publish, or cause to be written or published or distributed letters, books, or articles advocating those very things.

Strange to say, there is opposition to the provisions of this real American bill in the House of Representatives. I cannot understand why such aliens should not be deported. How can this country be benefited by keeping them here?

They object most seriously to the provision of the bill giving the right to deport aliens "who were at any time before their entry into the United States anarchists, Communists," and so forth. They urge that these persons might have been anarchists or Communists in their home countries, but after coming here they may no longer be anarchists or Communists.

If these aliens told the truth when they were admitted, they would not have been admitted. They could not have been anarchists in their home countries and been admitted into this country. They had to say that they were not Communists or anarchists. They had to say they were not opposed to all organized government. They had to say that they did not believe in the overthrow of this Government by force or violence or in the assassination of our Government officials. The truth is, they said just the opposite. If they were Communists or anarchists of that ilk, or enemies to all organized government and enemies of this Government, they lied to get into the United States, and therefore we should not hesitate to send them back.

Those opposing this bill want the law to remain as it is. It provides for the deportation of Communists, anarchists, and so forth, but a recent decision of the Supreme Court in the noted Strecker deportation case held that the Government would have to prove that these aliens were anarchists or Communists at the time deportation proceedings were instituted. These Communists and anarchists and other such groups seeking to overthrow this Government, found a way to get around the law. Their leaders advised their members to say when they were arrested, "Yes, we did belong to the Communists or anarchists, but some time ago we resigned. We decided not to belong to the organization any longer."

Strecker, a Communist alien, was apprehended. He readily admitted that he had been a Communist, he had his membership card, but claimed that he had recently resigned from that party. The Supreme Court held that in view of that statement Strecker could not be deported.

The alien, Harry Bridges, whose deportation has been urged by the American Legion, other veteran organizations, and hundreds of organizations and patriotic groups in this country, hopes to remain in this country under the ruling of the Supreme Court in the Strecker case. The Government has introduced many witnesses to show that Bridges is a Communist, but, of course, the Government cannot prove that at the very time he was arrested that he was a Communist.

This law provides that the alien, Harry Bridges, and any other alien Communist or anarchist may be deported if it can be shown that he or they were members at any time of these organizations such as anarchists or Communists that advocate the overthrow of this Government by violence or favor the assassination of our public officials. Without this new law, anarchists, Communists, and other like organizations will continue to flourish and grow and endanger the very life of this Nation, its citizens, and their property.

There are many times more people in countries across the seas that want to come to this country than can come. They have never been anarchists or Communists. If we are going to let aliens come, let us select those who believe in organized government, those who do not favor the overthrow of this Government by force or violence, or the destruction of people's property in violation of law, or the assassination of our public officials.

Let us bear in mind that an alien is merely our guest. What would you think of a fellow who comes to your home as your guest and you warm him and take care of him and while he is there in your home he secretly advocates the overthrow of your home and the destruction of your family and your property? You would throw him out on his head if you were any sort of a man. That is the very thing we are proposing to do here for our country. We say to these people who would overthrow our Government, assassinate our officials, and destroy our property, "You cannot come, and if you lie and deceive and get in, we will throw you out." [Applause.]

FINGERPRINTING ALIENS BEFORE THEY ENTER

Title IV of the bill provides that our American consuls in foreign countries cannot grant a visa for any alien to come to the United States, even under the quotas, unless such alien is fingerprinted and a copy of the record sent to the United States and kept on file. It is through this fingerprinting that we can detect criminal aliens in foreign countries who are trying to come into this country. A decent, upstanding alien trying to get into this country should not object to this fingerprinting. If he is a criminal, we are entitled to take this precaution in order to protect our own country and our citizens.

In fact, it seems to me every alien in this country should be required to be registered. We have millions of aliens and many of them criminals who have slipped into this country in violation of law. They committed felonies to do so. We should require aliens to be registered so that we can find out what aliens are in this country legally and what aliens are here illegally, and then we could keep track of them. Hauptmann, who kidnaped and murdered the Lindbergh baby, had committed a number of felonies in Germany, escaped from Germany, and slipped into this country in violation of law. If he had been required to register, we might have avoided that terrible crime, as well as other bad crimes committed by criminal aliens.

The deportation provisions of this bill only apply to criminal aliens or to aliens who are Communists, anarchists, and so forth. They could not apply to either a naturalized or native-born citizen. Neither could they apply to any alien who got into this country legally, who is not a criminal, and who does not belong to such organizations as anarchists and Communists.

This bill, from beginning to end, is in the interest of our people and our country as a whole. [Applause.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent, before I proceed, that the Clerk may read a letter written by the former chairman of the Rules Committee, Mr. John J. O'Connor, to the Vice President of the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

JULY 28, 1939.

Hon. John N. Garner, Vice President of the United States, Capitol, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Vice President: God love you and preserve you.

The vicious attack on you by J. Lewellyn Lewis, American No. 2—I put his Communist associates as No. 1-only endear you all the more to the people of our country. America's

While the press carried in detail his intemperate remarks about you, I know they would never print how he characterizes the you, I know they would never print how he characterizes the President of the United States, and this, despite the fact that he is still a "white-haired boy" at the White House, and can protrude his bushy eyebrows through even the kitchen door. What the President now says about his ex-pet, Lewis, would likewise be unprintable, but still they mest, and Lewis "lays down the law."

For years I pleaded with the President to free the Democratic Party of this $500,000 mortgage holder. The President then resented any criticism of the man he had taken up on the mountain and made king of all he surveyed.

Incidentally, the only times I ever met Lewis were at cocktail parties.

But that Lewis was made a "big shot" by the President and the administration, was proven many times. You will recall when he took possession of the office of the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, Likewise, you will recall when, with administration support, he stood in the lobby, just inside of the House of Representatives of the United States, and defeated an innocent resolution to investigate the "cause" of "sit-down strikes."

All he has ever had are evelyows and bluster. Maybe he has

All he has ever had are eyebrows and bluster. Maybe he has tried to imitate you as to the former, but it is a poor copy.

Leaving out the eyebrows, which no barber has ever been permitted to touch, the bluster is his only claim to fame. It's a big bluff, but he has been getting away with it for years, especially with some "leaders" of the House and some Senators, whom has "buffalced."

("Pill" Hytthinger, of the Corporator, colled his buffalced."

"Bill" Hutchinson, of the Carpenters, called his bluff at Atlantic City, and if a 10-year-old boy took a swing at him, he'd run to one of his chauffeurs of his Cadillac cars and retire to his $100,000 colonial mansion in Alexandria, Va.

It is almost time his bluff was called. Go at him. Pull no punches. America stands behind you.

With warm personal regards, I am Sincerely yours,

JOHN.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah (interrupting the reading of the letter). Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] did not get consent to proceed out of order, and when he asked that the letter be read, I assumed it was pertinent to the debate here on the pending bill. I now make the point of order that it is not.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CHAPMAN). The gentleman from Michigan obtained unanimous consent that the letter be read, and stated the name of the person who wrote the letter. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, he did not state the purport or intent of the letter.

The CHAIRMAN. All the gentleman from Michigan said was that it was a letter written by a former Member from New York, Mr. O'Connor, and asked unanimous consent that it be read by the Clerk. That unanimous consent was granted.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Does not a Member have the right to assume that when a unanimous-consent request is made to have a letter read, that the letter is pertinent to the debate being carried on at the time on the floor?

The CHAIRMAN. Any member of the Committee had the right, when the request was made, to reserve the right to object and to interrogate the gentleman from Michigan as to the contents of the letter.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the letter. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan IMr. HOFFMAN] is recognized.

Mr. GEYER of California. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOFFMAN. Not at present.

The bill under consideration, if enacted and enforced, would probably rid us of many of those who are causing a great deal of trouble. It is doubtful if it goes far enough. In my judgment, if it were germane, it should be amended so as to curb in some way the activities of those who are denying civil liberties to hundreds of thousands of American citizens. [Applause.]

I am glad the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER] applauds. I hope the gentleman will listen to what Mr. Lewis, to whom Mr. O'Connor referred in his letter, and those who believe as does Mr. Lewis have accomplished and are trying to accomplish throughout this country of ours. Listen to and consider these instances, where American citizens-not criminal aliens, but American citizens-have been and are deprived of their civil liberties.

Here is a letter which came in yesterday morning from Glassport, Pa.; that is in Allegheny County; and it carries this information-and I quote:

When the Irvin Works was built across the river a common laborer paid $25, an electrician $90, a steam fitter $125, an erection machinist $110, for a card which simply gave him the right to work on the job.

On the road being built on the old West Penn right-of-way common labor must pay $15 for a job.

The author of this letter is an ordinary, average, patriotic American, who loves his country; who has been trying to carry on in spite of the activities of those who would destroy our industries, bring want and confusion, to the end that the overthrow of our form of government may be more easily accomplished.

In the last paragraph of this gentleman's letter-and let me repeat—he is an average, patriotic, God-fearing, libertyloving American, he voices his fears in this language:

Sometimes I wonder if the time has not come to organize what patriotic citizens are left and take over long enough to liquidate the parlor pinks in Washington and elsewhere and restore the Constitution to the people.

Now, you who have been talking about revolution if certain pressure groups do not have their way; who have been threatening dire things to this Republic of ours if the Communists were not permitted to carry on their activities unhindered, unhampered, pause and consider the statement made by this man. And consider, too, that it is but one of many which have come to me in recent months.

For overlong, blustering John L. Lewis has acted on the theory that he had a monopoly of headcracking; that it was his privilege to destroy civil liberty whenever and wherever it suited his purpose; that it was his function to determine who should work and on what terms and conditions they should work.

John has invaded the White House. He goes in and out. He has the ear of the President. Unrebuked, he has demanded that the President back his, Lewis' will on certain occasions. This last outburst of his occurred when he went before the House Committee on Labor to oppose amendments to the wage-hour law which would have exempted the operators of small telephone exchanges, certain employees of small newspapers, and certain farm labor.

Not content with voicing his opposition to these amendments, angered, he made a vicious assault upon the personal character of the Vice President. The incident reveals just how far along the road to an absolute dictatorship over labor Lewis conceives himself to have traveled.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I asked that the letter be read without being taken out of my time.

Mr. GEYER of California. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not so understand the gentleman's request. It was taken out of the gentleman's time

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Out in California, the gentleman's own State—now, get this—

Mr. GEYER of California. The gentleman is listening.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Daniel F. Ryan, in Marin County, Calif., had 180 cows. He had 6 men who wanted to do the milking; men who were satisfied with their jobs; men whose employer was satisfied with them. Then along came the union organizers and insisted that the farm hands join the union. The men, being satisfied with their jobs, refused.

Then the organizers went to the farmer, presented him with a union contract, told him that if he wanted to market his milk he must sign a contract that only those who belonged to their organization could milk his cows. He told them that if the boys wanted to join, that was their business; that if they did not want to join, he would not force them to join, pay a membership fee and monthly dues.

The organizers told the farmer that unless he signed, compelled his men to join, his milk would be declared "hot." Following his refusal, union teamsters refused to draw his milk to the city, saying they were sorry but had been forbidden by their organization to haul it.

The farmer got his milk to the plant by the aid of independent drivers, and then was told by the Borden Co. that they could not handle it because it was not brought in by union truckers.

For 600 days this farmer suffered a loss of $37.50 per day because he could not market his milk with the Borden Co. The farmer sued the union and recovered a judgment of some $22,000 against it, and, I understand, certain individual members. Then the judge before whom the case was tried was appointed to an official position, and just before he took office caused the judgment to be vacated, and the farmer is back where he started.

Out on the west coast the Associated Farmers are fighting this idea that only those who belong to a particular union shall have the privilege of earning a livelihood. The farmers have the milk. Their organization at one time controlled some 90 percent of the milk which went into San Francisco, and yet the truck drivers and their affiliates insist that before that milk can reach the babies and the mothers of San Francisco, upon it must be levied tribute; that it must pass through their hands; that they must "get theirs" before the babies and the mothers receive the necessary food.

Just how long are we to submit to this organized group which is demanding that, whether its services are needed or not, it must levy and collect a charge upon the results of the labor of everyone else?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I notice in the press of July 28 that our Democratic colleague, the gentleman from Misscuri [Mr. Anderson], said that "Lewis has raped the Democratic Party and is preparing to return to his first love, the Republican Party." I do not see how the Democratic Party can cry "rape" when the Democratic Party has sold itself to Lewis for 500,000 pieces of silver—his $500,000 political campaign contribution.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. For a question; yes.

Mr. GEYER of California. I want to ask the gentleman if he will be kind enough to tell about our vicious Milk Trust in California in order that we may have both sides of the question?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I suggest that the gentleman tell about it himself. What I am talking about now is the teamsters union which will not let babies and women in San Francisco have milk until they have the privilege of drawing it in there, until they have added to the cost of every drop that reaches the baby's bottle.

Mr. GEYER of California. But the gentleman is telling one side of the story only.

Mr. HOFFMAN. This is the side that is important now, and if the gentleman can find any justification for any union stepping in between the farmer who has milk to sell and the mother and the baby who needs it and making it more difficult for that baby and that mother to get a necessity upon which their lives depend, by imposing a charge for a service which is not necessary, he has had ample time during this session—he will have ample time before it closes—to give us his views on the floor of the House.

Mr. GEYER of California. There is another side to the teamsters union.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not yield further to the gentleman.

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mr. PATRICK. He came over to us from the Republicans. Do you want to take him back now—John Lewis?

Mr. HOFFMAN. But you got $470,000 with him, remember that.

Mr. PATRICK. That is true. If we give you back that money, would you want him back?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No, no. We know that he has been playing around with the President; that he made that campaign contribution of almost a half milion dollars to the New Deal campaign fund. We know that he expected to get something for it. We know that he has twice called upon the President to pay back that political debt, and on each occasion has received a substantial payment through administration aid, as in the sit-down strikes in Michigan and in the settlement of the soft-coal controversy between his union and the operators.

But apparently Lewis thinks he has been deceived; that he has been sold down the river. One day, figuratively speaking, he damns the President; the next he is invited down to the White House or to some social function, and evidently soothed by a cocktail or two, or perhaps by the dinner clothes which he wears, in contrast to the garb of his miners, is again cheek by jowl with the President.

If Lewis has discovered that he has been deceived, that he was cheated in the bargain which he thinks he made, or if he has repented and has learned at last that only under Republican principles and a Republican administration prosperity will return to the country and members of his unions have steady jobs in private employment, let him come back. If he has learned all that and is willing to forego his un-American demands for the collection of revenue from men who must earn their living by their daily toil, I have no doubt but that he and all of his followers who are thoroughly convinced that the safe and sound, just, fair, and equitable principles on which our Republic is founded are the only ones which will serve us in time of need as well as in time of prosperity, all will be welcomed back. Most assuredly, the gates should not be closed in the face of any who at last has seen the light and is willing to be good. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, we started out discussing a very serious question and the debate was being conducted on a very high level by both the proponents and the opponents of this measure. Most unfortunately, however, we have just now had some monkeyshines from the gentleman from Michigan. Now that they are over I do hope it will not be too difficult for the Committee to come back to the bill under consideration.

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. O'TOOLE. I think the gentleman will admit that the remarks and the actions of the gentleman from Michigan today show the sterility of the Republican Party; having had to use the help of a Tammany Hall Democrat when he needed support, one whom he bitterly despised when Mr. O'Connor was a Member of this House, as an agent to attack the things we stand for?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Political lines are becoming rather confused nowadays. It is very difficult to tell who is a Republican and who is a Democrat in this House. We do know one thing, however, and that is it is very easy to tell who in the House is a Tory and who in the House is a liberal. That is the realinement which is taking place as we approach the elections of 1940. [Applause.]

Mr. GAVAGAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. GAVAGAN. The gentleman recalls the fact, of course, that the letter read to us was written by Mr. O'Connor, of New York, who was defeated in his campaign for reelection, defeated by the people of his own district.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. And with the help of my party—the American Labor Party. Incidentally, as the Republicans and Democrats are going to caucus this afternoon and evening, I announce that my party will hold its caucus tonight after the Democrats have concluded. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Chairman, there is one section in this bill which proerly gives one the right to characterize it as a Gestapo bill.
The Gestapo, for the information of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] and the other gentlemen of this House who would substitute a native Gestapo for our democracy, is that secret police organization which raids a man's home in Nazi Germany, takes his property and his family away from him, arrests him without cause, and very often returns the man in the form of ashes in an urn to his family. The same Gestapo has burned the books and other precious literature of Germany. What the Gestapo has done and is doing in Nazi Germany can be repeated under the provisions of this bill. It can happen here and it will if we do not prevent it. I call your attention to title I of this bill on page 17.

Title I says:

It shall be unlawful for any person, with intent to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or discipline of the Army or the Navy—

And so forth. Section 2 of that title states:

Any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing of the character described in section 1 of this act may be taken from any house or other place in which it may be found, or from any person in whose possession it may be, under a search warrant issued pursuant to the provisions of title I of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations"—

And so forth. Who issues a search warrant? Every lawyer in this House knows that a search warrant is in all cases, with the exception of very rare instances, issued by a commissioner of the district court. Let us assume that some one has in his home, for instance, All Quiet on the Western Front. There you have a book that is opposed to war. It is a book that describes the horrors of war. Some sergeant of the Army who might think in the same manner as many of the gentlemen of this House, who believe that free speech and the Bill of Rights should be something of the past, can go to a district commissioner with an affidavit and say, "John Jones, in his home, has a book which tends to impair the morale of the United States Army and the United States Navy."

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, they can go into that home with a search warrant issued in that manner and confiscate any book, writing, or literature, arrest the person, and subject him to all types of persecution.

The Army and Navy do not need this Gestapo law. The men of the Army and Navy are loyal. They are loyal to the United States and they are loyal to the democracy of this country. Court martial and military procedure can handle those who are disloyal. But here you are putting into this bill the same tory political philosophy that this Congress has been legislating into law ever since its inception, a reactionary philosophy, a Bourbon philosophy that has crucified the unemployed of this Nation, assaulted the rights of American labor, a philosophy which is aimed at the Bill of Rights, a philosophy which will go down to the everlasting shame of the Seventy-sixth Congress. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Thomas F. Ford].

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I have a very brief statement to make. If we will refer to page 27, lines 3 to 7, and cut two words out, "of aliens," we will have a beautiful description of absolutism as practiced by the totalitarian powers. It only requires the cutting out of two words to make it that.

There is no use arguing against this bill. It will pass. I am satisfied in my own mind that the mood of this House is such that if you brought in the Ten Commandments today and asked for their repeal and attached to that request an alien law, you could get it. [Applause.]

I am opposed to this bill because I believe in the Bill of Rights, which refers to persons and guarantees to persons certain liberties which this bill seeks to deny.

It is un-American, undemocratic, and, in my view, unconstitutional.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Leland M. Ford].

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Chairman, following so closely my colleague [Thomas F. Ford], who has asked that our names be distinguished, may I say it will be a great deal of pleasure to me after that speech to have my name distinguished from his. [Applause.]

I cannot see why any alien should object to the things that are contained in this bill unless he intends to engage in some of the things enumerated in the bill as follows, and I am going to ask a question. Do they want to come into this country and aid and abet other aliens to get in here illegally? Is that why they object?

Do they want to engage in espionage for a foreign government or be engaged by an international political agency seeking to change the character of the Government of the United States? I think we have too many of those kind of people in here already.

Do they want to engage in the peddling of narcotics, or engage in an act which would be a violation of the narcotic law?

Do they want to carry lethal weapons, sawed-off shotguns, and so forth equipped with Maxim silencers? Do they want to advocate the teaching of anarchy? Do they want to break the laws of this country?

Mr. Chairman, I do not see any good answer to those questions. If any alien wants to come into this country and engage in any such practices, I say that we had better keep him out of here, and I say further, with reference to page 27, that any alien who comes into this country with the idea of preaching a philosophy that would destroy our Government certainly should be kept out. I say it is a good law and I congratulate the author. I hope it will pass as

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Bolles].

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, I was much interested in what the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] said in reference to communism and the history of communism. The whole basis of the Russian theory of government at this time, and from its establishment following the Kerensky break-down, is that of Karl Marx. Karl Marx was the father of the present idea of communism. It is embraced in this book called The Communist Manifesto. It is all those things which they have attempted in Russia to carry out into a regular governmental situation. It does not believe in religion. It says that religion is the opium of the people. Any visitor to Moscow today will find engraved upon the Kremlin that "Religion is the opium of the people." It discourages any reference to the name of God.

Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand Earl Browder's latest book. If Earl Browder were in Russia, and if he had attempted to write a book of this character, opposing the Stalin government, he would be shot not only at sunrise but probably in the afternoon as well. He says:

probably in the afternoon as well. He says:

Lenin always insisted on facing reality; he was the uncompromising foe of utopianism and wishful thinking. It is with this Leninist attitude that we Communists guard against any exaggeration of our party's influence, that we guard against placing immediate tasks which are not matured. We know that the very broad influence exerted by our party is not a sign that the American masses are ready to build socialism in our country now as an immediately practical task. It is the guiding thought of everything we do to prepare and educate the masses for socialism and to lead them to its realization when they are ready. But nothing is further from our minds than any abortive attempts of a small minority to impose its will upon the masses. We base ourselves completely upon the democratic masses, upon the working class, and all toilers who comprise the overwhelming majority of the people, and we set no tasks that the masses are not themselves to be the moving and decisive factor in accomplishing. We are first and last democratic in this most fundamental sense. And it is only because we have made this point unmistakably clear that we are steadily growing in numbers, and even more in influence, even though we are still a small fraction of the population.

I say to you that the time will come—and I do not believe

I say to you that the time will come—and I do not believe we should bury these things-when we will very carefully scrutinize some of this literature that is passed out, and which is supported and given kind words by a number of the gentlemen on this floor.

How can you break down all the things that have been so fine in our history; how can you break down all the memories of the pioneers who built these United States of America; how can you break down all the things done by those who met in Independence Hall and later built the Constitution; and yet give no protection to them from those who will not become citizens of the United States?

I have met many aliens. I know one who for 17 years, without ever being a citizen of the United States, served on the board of supervisors of a county in my State of Wisconsin. When the war came and he had to show that he was a naturalized citizen he could not do it and got an alien card.

I believe the time has come when we must wash out our citizenship. There was a time when America was-and it is today—the beacon light for all Europe, for all the distressed people, all those who were persecuted and punished, who had no opportunity. Here in America we beckoned to them and brought them over here, and those people became citizens and were assimilated into this Nation.

The way to become a citizen of the United States is for an alien to have it in his heart before he buys his steamship ticket to this country. You have it in the heart of the man. If in the heart of this man he is not a citizen of this country, he is not and never will be a citizen of the United States.

Mr. Chairman, I am for this bill. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Coffee].

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, like many of my colleagues who are supporting this bill, in my district I have comparatively few people of foreign ancestry, but I cannot refrain from taking advantage of this opportunity to reply to the statements made by the learned gentleman from Wisconsin and to say that to the immigrants in the United States this country owes a great deal of credit for its accomplishment. Let us not forget that during the Revolutionary War had we not had the help of foreign friends we would have lost the war. The man who said that was George Washington himself. For the benefit of those of you who are inclined to scoff at the part that the immigrants played in the development of this country, I advise you to go down to Yorktown and read the inscription engraved on the monument and find out how many Frenchmen were there who joined with George Washington and the colonists in defeating the English on that critical and memorable day, October 19, 1781. To those of you who think that only the pioneers built up the Nation I advise that you read the writings and speeches of General Dodge and his narration of the history of the Union Pacific, and ascertain the credit he gives to the Irish immigrants who helped build that great enterprise across the Midwestern and Mountain States.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COFFEE of Washington. No; I have only 2 minutes. To those of you who come from Wisconsin I advise that you look into the history of the State of Wisconsin and find out to whom should go the credit for pioneering in that great State, the Scandinavians and the German immigrants who came over here in the first generation and carved out their homes in the wilderness. Let us not forget the part that immigrants played in this country. Who are you and I to discredit the immigrants? It is merely a matter of relativity. One of us may have been here four or five generations ahead of another. I do not want to alienate the people of foreign descent from loyalty to the United States.

[Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I listened with a great deal of interest a few minutes ago to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO], who cited section 2 of title I of this bill, appearing on page 18. He said that under this section and under this title a search warrant might be issued by a magistrate to search an alien's home, and there he might find a book.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Anyone's home. Mr. REED of Illinois. Anyone's home.

He might find, for instance, All Quiet on the Western Front. The gentleman said that possession of that book would be a violation of the law, because books of that type are mentioned in section 1 of that title.

Section 2 states:

Any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing of the character described in section 1 of this act may be taken from the house or other place in which it may be found.

Let us turn back to section 1 and see what the section describes. Section 1 states:

It shall be unlawful * * * to publish or distribute any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing which advises, counsels, urges, or solicits any member of the Army or the Navy or the Coast Guard of the United States to disobey the laws or regulations governing such military or naval forces, or to disobey the lawful orders of a superior.

I have read the book the gentleman from New York mentions, and I challenge him to show me any place in All Quiet on the Western Front where it advises or solicits any member of the Army or the Navy or the Coast Guard to disobey the laws of the United States or to disobey the lawful orders of a superior.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. REED of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from New

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I said that this book does not advocate disobedience on the part of members of the Army and the Navy. I did say, however, that any sergeant in the Army or any other person could go to a commissioner of the district court and on an affidavit state that in his opinion this book constitutes encouraging disobedience or lowering or impairing the morale of the Army. It would be up to the district commissioner if he found that the affidavit constituted probable cause to issue such a warrant. By doing that, for the possession of books which are to be interpreted by sergeants or various other individuals you open up the man's home to the seizure of his books, his writings, his letters, and everything else he possesses.

Mr. REED of Illinois. Yes; but the warrant can be issued by the commissioner only upon a showing of probable cause and upon substantiating facts sworn to in the application for the warrant, in the same manner as such warrants are issued under the general laws of the various States of the Union.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield further for an observation?

Mr. REED of Illinois. Just for an observation. Mr. MARCANTONIO. I can understand a search warrant for guns, for narcotics, or even for the illegal possession of liquor, but I believe that we are going too far when we provide for search warrants to search for books, writings, and literature. This smacks too much of the Gestapo.

Mr. REED of Illinois. If they are subversive, and advocate the destruction of this Government by force and violence, I think it is not only our right but it is our duty to search, find them, and bring the persons who are distributing them to the bar of justice.

There is just one more thing. At the time we had the debate upon the rule, considerable comment was had concerning cases involving moral turpitude wherein a person might be deported. I want to call the attention of the Members to page 22, commencing on line 14, which is the law as it now exists. This provides that in any case where any person is convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude, if the judge at the time or within 30 days thereafter shall recommend to the Secretary of Labor that the alien shall not be deported, then that alien cannot be deported, regardless of whether the Secretary of Labor wants it done or not; it is absolutely absurd to assert that a boy who would steal an apple might be deported because it involved a question of moral turpitude.

There is not a judge in the United States of America or in any of the States who would ever send a person back to the land from which he came for stealing an apple. If any Federal judge did anything of that kind he would be brought before the bar of this House, impeached, and thrown out of office.

The gentleman who preceded me mentioned having gone to Yorktown and some other places in the country and saw inscribed there the names of men who came to this country as our allies from foreign countries and helped us during the Revolution. I wish the gentleman would go up to my State to the city of Chicago, and I wish while there he would go to Haymarket Square and there see where brave men, men who were citizens of the United States, men who were law-enforcement officers, were murdered, murdered by alien anarchists who were armed with weapons and explosives which this bill seeks to prevent them from carrying. If he looks at that scene, and reflects upon the horror of it, maybe he, too, will vote for this bill as I believe a substantial majority on both sides of the House will.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. GEYER of California. Does the gentleman realize that under this bill an alien may be arrested for having in his possession the Declaration of Independence?

Mr. REED of Illinois. No; and I do not think the gentleman believes that himself.

Mr. GEYER of California. You know it is true, if you know anything about the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. REED of Illinois. I hardly think the gentleman would make a very good case before a court if he tried to have him deported on that ground.

Mr. GEYER of California. It may be a good idea to consider some of those things, though.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I feel that these proposals have attracted many well-intentioned persons in the House and outside the House and that they believe that the deportation of aliens means fewer people and that fewer people mean less unemployment. That theory, of course, is economically unsound and without any merit whatsoever. Others in this House, and outside this House, are outraged by the excesses of some alien-minded Communists, Fascists, and Nazi-ists. I, too, am outraged by them, but the cure in this bill, and in similar bills pending in both Houses, is, indeed, a cure that is worse than the disease.

I am opposed to this type of legislation, first, because this type of bill wrongs a vast number of innocent aliens, and there are many, many thousands of innocent aliens in this country who would be wronged by the enactment of this bill.

This type of legislation sets up precedents of evil omen against citizens because they threaten the liberties even of citizens.

Remember this: We are all immigrants or descendants of immigrants, and it is interesting to note, as a matter of history, that Martin Van Buren was the first President born in the United States, and all those who preceded him, in a certain sense, were aliens and were not born in the United Bills of this character penalize parts of our population because of its place of origin and because of its opinions and because they do thus threaten basic American liberties. I must rise in my place and oppose them. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. I must, therefore, warn you that you should be vigilant and thus protest and vote against this bill. It threatens our liberties.

We passed the concentration-camp bill, the Dempsey aliendeportation bill, and in the Senate there are bills which would stop all immigration. The Senate has bills for immediate registration and fingerprinting of all aliens, and there are bills even for the arrest of aliens for any kind of a misdemeanor or felony without a warrant. Why this avalanche of antialien bills? Why this antialien hysteria that seems to beset the Nation? I am at a loss to understand, except to say that we always seek a scapegoat in times of stress, in times of depression; and just because we want to seek a scapegoat, we put all of the blame for the ills of the Nation on the alien, little realizing that the citizen likewise is to blame for those ills.

Under this bill we can deport an alien who has been convicted of a misdemeanor, because it provides that any alien who goes to jail or is imprisoned for 1 year or more can be deported. In many States in the Union, in my own State, there are misdemeanors carrying imprisonment for a year. The selling of liquor without a license is a crime carrying imprisonment for a year or more in some States. If the alien violates that law, he can be sent hence. Putting a slug in a gas meter is a misdemeanor carrying similar punishment, and violation of traffic laws, as well as trading under an assumed name. Such violations might mean deportation.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. CELLER. No. It seems unfair for us to be able to take an alien and deport him for this kind of misdemeanors. I say the bill for that reason and for many other reasons goes too far. Take title 1 with reference to military disaffection. The testimony given before our committee did not show any inherent danger in the Army or the Navy because of any subversive activities. Just listen to some of the testimony of Commander Albert M. Bledsoe, of the Bureau of Navigation. He says:

In all fairness I must state that I do not believe these organizations have been very successful, but I think that this lack of success is due more to the type of men that we are recruiting nowadays than to lack of effort on the part of these organizations.

He saw no serious disturbance, no palpable danger, that should compel us to adopt title 1 of this act. Then there is the statement of Lt. Ira H. Dunn, of the Judge Advocate's office of the Navy Department, to the following effect:

It is possible—we have not investigated it thoroughly—that we may be able to proceed against these people who join certain organizations by court martial. The Navy Department so far has not seen fit to do that, has not wished to proceed in that way. We simply discharge them as undesirables.

We are having some trouble, a little trouble, and as Commander Bledsoe said, I believe that our comparative freedom from things of this kind can be laid directly to the high character and the intelligence of the men that make up our armed forces. They are a fine bunch of men, the most loyal people I have ever known, but there exists a slight difficulty, which certainly will grow worse if not corrected.

There is no serious danger that would warrant the drastic remedies in title 1. A peace pronouncement by a reputable organization, a peace manifesto, might be deemed a violation of some sections of title 1, because that section says:

It shall be unlawful for any person, with intent to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or discipline of the personnel of the Army or the Navy.

And so forth. Some of those peace pronouncements and manifestoes could well be deemed to interfere with the discipline and loyalty or the morale of the Army. If somebody gets up on a public platform and says that he does not countenance and he deplores the use of troops in strikes, he might be held as violating section 1, title I, of this act. A soldier might go out with a young lady and might say to her, "My superior officer says that I must return at 12 o'clock," and she says, "Oh, come on, let's stay out a little longer," and if he stays out longer, that woman could be held as violating that act, because she countenanced and encouraged a violation of "an order of a superior officer." That is how far this title I goes, and it is for that reason that I must perforce object to the entire bill, with title I.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CELLER. Yes.

Mr. KELLER. Does not the gentleman think it would be a mighty fine thing if we could protect the morals of the Army by such a rule as that?

Mr. CELLER. We can protect them without going as far as that, I assure the gentleman.

The alien problem, if any, is bound to settle itself in the course of time, and particularly so, since we are losing population and not gaining it as far as immigration is concerned. For the past 6-year period from July 1, 1932, to June 30, 1938, more emigrants went out than immigrants came in; 4,487 more aliens departed than were admitted during that period of time.

At the time of the 1937 census there were 6,234,613 foreign-born residents in the United States who had not been reported naturalized. The estimated alien population as of July 1, 1938, was 3,838,928. Thus, there was a total decrease of 2,395,685, in our alien population, between the aforesaid dates.

It is estimated that on July 1, 1938, there were outstanding at least 700,000 valid unexpired declarations of intention, and this number has been considerably increased by declarations filed since the above date. There is thus a substantial part of the unnaturalized alien population which is seeking to secure citizenship.

Although we have no available statistics on the following point, there are many evidences that a very large proportion of the 3,800,000 unnaturalized aliens now in this country came in prior to the 1917 Immigration Act and are now elderly people who are held back from naturalization by fear of the educational tests. It is quite natural that old people who have been in this country many years without gaining a fluent, written command of the English language should hesitate about undergoing such a test, much as they may desire the citizenship which their children and grand-children have already attained by birth in this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Casey].

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, there are a great many antialien bills that have either been brought before this House or that are now pending. I am against these antialien bills because I think they are undemocratic in principle. The danger lies in their Fascist implications. Who are the aliens against whom these bills are directed? I know that to a certain type of mind the word "alien" is synonymous with a wild-eyed radical or Communist. This is not true. Most of these aliens are potential citizens and many of them are men and women who, because of their experiences in other countries under other forms of government, have a greater appreciation of the benefits of democracy than do some of our native-born Americans.

They have a right to believe us when we set forth that this Nation stands for liberty and that it guarantees to the individual more freedom than can be obtained under any other government on the face of the earth. I know not what interpretation some Members of this House place upon the word "liberty," but to me it stands for freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom to criticize existing policies, and freedom to agitate for a change of policies, for reform, and for improvement in government according to the viewpoint of an individual or a group of individuals. While freedom of speech does not mean the right to say anything in any place as exemplified by the famous statement of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes—

Freedom of speech does not permit one to rise and shout "Fire!" in a crowded theater—

It does, according to my interpretation, guarantee the right to express any opinion that does not incite to violence.

I believe that there should be throughout this Congress and throughout this land of ours more of the sentiment expressed by the great French philosopher Voltaire when he stated:

 ${\bf I}$ do not agree with a word that you say, but ${\bf I}$ will defend to the death your right to say it.

I offer this philosophy in substitution for the philosophy that lies behind these antialien bills which says, in effect, "If you differ with us, if you disagree with us, we shall answer you by putting you in cantonments, or sending you to foreign countries where you may not be welcome because of some prejudice against your race or creed." The proponents of these antialien bills say that they seek to perpetuate the democratic plan of government. I say to you that if the time ever comes, which God forbid, when this great democracy crumbles, it will not be brought about by aliens, but by the smug, intolerant attitude of the supporters of this type of legislation who say, in effect, "We are right, we are perfect, and we shall not tolerate any difference in viewpoint."

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The Clerk will read the committee substitute as an original bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE I

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person, with intent to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or discipline of the personnel of the Army or the Navy or the Coast Guard of the United States, to advise, counsel, urge, or solicit any member thereof to disobey the laws or regulations governing the Army or the Navy or the Coast Guard, or to disobey the lawful orders of a superior, or to publish or distribute any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing which advises, counsels, urges, or solicits any member of the Army or the Navy or the Coast Guard of the United States to disobey the laws or regulations governing such military or naval forces, or to disobey the lawful orders of a

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, section 1 of the present bill and sections 2 and 3 are substantially along the lines that the Special Committee on un-American Activities, of which I was chairman, 5 years ago, recommended.

As a result of the recommendation of the special committee a bill was introduced, which bill was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and which bill received the deep consideration of that committee, and the bill was reported by the committee in the first session of the Seventy-fourth Con-

The special committee introduced that bill upon the request of the Navy Department, through the late Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the late Colonel Roosevelt, one of the finest man I have ever met, one of the finest public officials that one could meet—a great American. Colonel Roosevelt, as those of us who remember that fine character, died a few years ago, when he was occupying the position of Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of legislation of this type. I see my distinguished friend from Kansas, Judge Guyer, who was a member of the special committee. He well remembers the considerations of our special committee on the occasion of our recommendation. The special committee was very cautious in its recommendations because we are living in a democracy, and under democratic processes of government there are many foolish things we have to stand and tolerate in order that democracy might exist. However, the special committee felt that legislation properly drafted along these lines was proper and necessary, in accordance with the evidence that we received. Apparently the Committee on the Judiciary feels the same way, because in this bill sections 1, 2, and 3 relate to the same subject matter that the special committee made recommendations upon. However, the language of the present bill is much broader than the bill recommended by the special committee of which I was chairman, and the bill that was reported out by the Military Affairs Committee of the Seventy-fourth Congress. The bill which we recommended was introduced-and I want to say that after we made the recommendation I withheld the introduction of that bill for several months. I made at least 20 drafts of the bill, because I realized that in legislation of this kind we might go too far and that we might pass legislation that would affect American organizations. and legislation that might have an adverse effect upon the persons legislation of this type is not aimed or directed at. We did not want the possiblity of a mother writing to her son in the service being indicted for influencing her son to disobey orders of a superior; nor a father or brother or sister. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. For that reason, I felt a responsibility resting upon myself as chairman of this special committee. and other members felt the same way, to draft a bill that would direct itself at those who are enemies of our Government; those who would like to see the democratic processes of government, carrying with it personal liberty, carrying with it our dignity and the personality of the individual, which can only exist where democratic processes of government exist-who would like to see everything that you and I cherish in our ideals of government destroyed, and substitute therefor some form of totalitarian government, either of the so-called left or of the so-called right.

I think I fairly state the views of every Member of this House that the enemies of our Government should be ferreted out: that those who would try to subvert and destroy our Government should not be tolerated: but I think I also speak the sentiments of every one of my colleagues when I say that legislation that will affect those forces only should be enacted into law, and that legislation should not be enacted into law that may go far beyond those conditions which we intend to meet; those who would ultimately bring about the destruction of our Government, if they had their way.

The bill I introduced by direction of the special committee read in part as follows:

Whoever advises, counsels, urges, or solicits any member of the military or naval forces of the United States, including the reserves thereof, to disobey the laws or regulations governing such military or naval force, or whoever publishes or distributes any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing which advises, counsels, urges, or solicits any member of said military or naval forces of the United States to disobey the laws or regulations governing such military or naval force shall be—

And so forth. The bill which we introduced meets the evil. The bill under consideration reads:

It shall be unlawful for any person, with intent to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or discipline of the personnel of the Army, Navy—

And so forth. The bill we introduced relates to those who would try to influence members of our armed forces, to incite them to disaffection; and it seems to me, agreeing as I do with the gentleman from Virginia as to the objective sought, that the language in the pending bill goes far beyond what is necessary for Congress to legislate in order to meet the evil we are attempting to legislate against.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. Is it not a fact, I would ask my colleague from Massachusetts, that a great many Members seem to be under a misapprehension as to just exactly what is provided in section 1? Reading that portion found on page 17, is it not a fact that a person who might be found guilty of intentionally interfering with or impairing, or influencing the loyalty, morale, or discipline must manifest an intent and must manifest that disloyalty, and so on, in the particulars set forth in the succeeding lines of the paragraph? That it does not constitute an offense unless the offense is carried out by advising, counseling, urging, or soliciting any member of the armed forces to disobey such regulations? One cannot read the first five lines and pass judgment upon it without reading what follows.

Mr. McCORMACK. In answer to the gentleman from Wisconsin, I may say that the gentleman and I agree as to the objective desired. My purpose in rising was to call attention to the fact that this matter had been acted on by the House in a previous Congress, not to offer any amendment at this time, because this is a matter which can be taken care of, if it passes the House, in the other body.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. My purpose in rising was not one of hostility to this legislation but in support of it, and to call attention to the fact that the language employed here goes beyond those elements that we intend to combat by legislation, those forces which are trying to bring about disobedience and disaffection in the armed forces for the purpose of subverting our institutions of government, and in the hope that they will be able to obtain enough support to bring about the ultimate overthrow of our Government by force and violence.

The gentleman from Wisconsin and I have absolutely no disagreement as to the objective sought. I am fearful that the language of the bill goes a little too far. I am not, how-ever, going to oppose it because of that. I simply rise to call attention to the fact that if this bill passes the House and goes to the other branch, Members of the other branch will give consideration to amendments that will limit the operation of the law to embrace only those forces which are clearly against our institutions of government and whose aim and interest are the disaffection of our armed forces.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. Mr. Chairman, I had hoped to get time before this without having to interrupt the reading of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I think every Member of the House is in agreement in a sincere and earnest desire to protect constitutional democracy and the American way of life. To my mind, we are living in a critical period in the history of our country and in the history of those institutions which this Nation first gave to the world and which, for all I know, this Nation may be the last nation to preserve. I have this confidence, that if in the United States alone of all the nations of the world there should be kept alive constitutional democracy and human liberty, and if at the same time we can successfully solve the difficult economic problems of the machine age, these institutions will live again in every nation in the world. [Applause.] The question is how best to do these things, and I rise at this time to say one or two rather simple things. Bills like this one may be protective of American free institutions, as the proponents say, or they may be the first fatal step toward the destruction of liberty not only for the alien but for the citizen as well.

First and fundamentally, you must depend upon the basic loyalty and devotion of the people of the Nation, upon their spontaneous devotion, to these institutions and ways of life, for reliance in their permanency. The fundamental thing to which Congress must address itself first of all, therefore, is the solution of this economic problem and the freeing of the people of this Nation from the fear and concern they find themselves in about making a living. There are those people in this Nation who are fighting a battle in the front line trenches in an attempt to solve these economic problems. They are working in various fields, but leadership in this effort should come from this body to a much greater degree than it has. Believe me, gentlemen, the answer to the Communist movement, the answer to the Fascist movement, to the Nazi movement, and every other movement of that character is to be found not in legislation like this, not in attempted suppression, but in the successful solution of our economic problems. I think that is most important. What we need here is an earnest and unrelenting devotion to the task of showing that a democracy can solve the problems of the machine age. I think it also important that the full truth be told to the people of the country about such movements as seek the destruction of democracy and the substitution of a totalitarian state. But that is a very different sort of approach to the problem.

Mr. Chairman, I find it impossible to vote for this legislation for this reason-I have not time to go into it fullybut as has been stated by others, the political philosophy of this bill is that you can treat aliens unjustly without taking the next step and treat citizens the same way; that you can stamp out subversive activities by passing loosely drawn legislation aimed to scare people; and that once a person has made a mistake he can never, never correct it or make up for it in the mind of the United States Congress. I cannot vote for legislation of that kind.

Under this bill a person who once belonged to a religious sect that believed in the destruction of property in liquor could be deported. A person who once upon a time made a contribution of "anything of value" to an organization of a Fascist, Nazi, or Communist nature, even though he does not now belong to it, never did belong to it, and has learned to despise it, is to be deported from this country. It is no answer to say this applies only to aliens. I myself believe that anyone coming to this country should, before a certain length of time has passed, be required to become a citizen or else to depart. But all human beings are, after all, alike in the sight of God, and the Government which permits itself to deal harshly with one group will sooner or later drift into harsh dealing with other groups. Indeed, in my opinion, this Congress has already dealt with our unemployed citizens with a harshness hard to understand.

I feel this is a dangerously broad measure, and I do not think it is fair. I do not think you can enact such legislation as this, having to do with aliens, without doing violence to the fundamental nature of the American way of life. I do not think you can do something which is fundamentally against the principles of general humane consideration, against the principle of enabling a man to find the errors of his ways and correct them, without doing violence to the fundamental principle upon which this Nation was founded. I want to protect these principles; but in attempting to protect them I should hate to be a party to undermining them by indirect methods.

May I say-and this is something I have known to be true-that some people who are fighting in the front-line trenches against real subversive activities in this country are people who have learned their lesson about what those things really are and they are doing their utmost to try to uphold among the people of this Nation the American principle of government. Some of those very same people would be adversely affected by this bill, I am convinced. Some of those people, who out of their own experience know that American freedom means more to them than any technical, dogmatic scheme that is proposed as a catch-all solution for the problem, will be caught by the provisions of this bill and deported.

I believe if we go too far with legislation of this character we are going to do violence to some things that are near to America's heart.

America, once her economic problem is solved, can rely upon the spontaneous loyalty of her people. An hour's honest, careful consideration of ways and means of effecting a balance between this Nation's power to consume and its power to produce would do more to defeat subversive activity in this country than 100 hours of consideration of bills like this one.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, there are three committee amendments on the desk, and I ask unanimous consent that the three committee amendments may be considered as one.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs]?

There was no objection. The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 18, line 1, after the words "Coast Guard", insert the words "or the Naval Reserve or the Marine Corps Reserve."

Page 18, line 4, after the words "Coast Guard", insert the words "or the Naval Reserve or the Marine Corps Reserve."

Page 18, line 8, after the words "Coast Guard", insert the words "or the Naval Reserve or the Marine Corps Reserve."

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I simply wish to say to the Committee that these amendments were prepared by the Navy Department and are recommended and asked by them. The Army feels that the section as written is sufficiently broad with the definition in the last paragraph to cover its group.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Celler to the committee amendment: In each of the committee amendments, after the words of the amendment, add the following: "or the Merchant Marine Reserve."

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I have a letter here from the American Merchant Marine Institute, Inc., which reads as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 22, 1939.

Hon. EMANUEL CELLER,
Acting Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.
Re H. R. 5138—Report No. 994.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN: May I call your attention to the fact that there are many Naval Reserve vessels in the United States merchant marine, and therefore, on page 18 of the above-mentioned bill, continuing title I, section 1, on line 1, after "Coast Guard," should be inserted, "or the Naval Reserve or the merchant marine"; on line 4, after "Coast Guard" should be inserted "or the Naval Reserve or the merchant marine"; on line 8 after "Coast Guard" should be inserted "or the Naval Reserve or the merchant marine."

There is a deluge distribution of books, pamphlets, prints, articles, etc., continuously in circulation which this bill seeks to control, also making paramount the orders of superior officers. The foregoing proposal is recommended and submitted for your usual circumspect consideration. Very sincerely yours,

FRANK J. TAYLOR, President.

Apparently the effort is being made by this letter to extend the protection of this statute to the so-called reserves of the merchant marine.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.
Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does not the gentleman realize he is aiming at the National Maritime Union and various other unions involved in the merchant marine with that amendment? Does not the gentleman also realize that the reserves in the merchant marine, the men who are trained to do sailor work and other kinds of work on ships, travel and work on the merchant marine?

Mr. CELLER. I am not pressing the amendment. I am offering it at the request of the gentleman whose name I read in the letter.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment simply to call the attention of the House to the fact that this goes beyond the legitimate purview of title I, which is to preserve our armed forces from subversive influences. Of course, we are all desirous that every citizen be as innocent as possible and as little exposed to contaminating influences; yet we cannot abridge the right of freedom of speech as guaranteed in the first amendment to the Constitution. I therefore beg of the Committee not to agree to this amendment, which has been offered to the committee amendment.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOBBS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Is not the merchant marine a vital part of our national defense?

Mr. HOBBS. That is true. It is a part of our armed forces in time of emergency, but only then.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. The merchant marine, that part manned by the Naval Reserve officers and flying the Naval Reserve pennant, is part of the United States Naval Reserve, is it not?

Mr. HOBBS. I would be happy to offer an amendment, if it is desired, that will cover such vessels.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. It is my belief the gentleman's amendment covers it.

Mr. HOBBS. I doubt it.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment to the committee amendments. The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection,

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'Toole: Page 17, beginning in line 23, strike out lines 24 and 25, and on page 18, lines 1 to 10, and amend section 1 to read as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person connected in any capacity with the Army, Navy, or the Coast Guard of the United States shall be prohibited from reading any newspaper, book, magazine, or other publication, including the Bible and Congressional Record, while in said service."

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Chairman, this amendment may seem absurd, but it is no more absurd than the crackpot legislation that is before us today. [Applause.] I offer it not to have it passed but to endeavor to disclose to my colleagues the foolishness of the so-called Smith bill. No man has a greater respect for the Bible than myself, yet under this bill some fanatic might well term it a propaganda inspirational book. I know that when I finish speaking some Members will take the floor and endeavor to make my amendment appear a serious one so that they can make a speech defending the Bible. Ten thousand copies of the speech will then be sent back to their districts labeled "My Answer to the Godless Representative from New York." Most of the Members well know what I am driving at. I am endeavoring to show the fanaticism of a few who would drive out of this country the legally admitted alien; the same alien who, like ourselves, hates fascism, communism, nazi-ism, and all other un-American doctrines, and who asks that this Congress give him the opportunity to embrace the American system so that he may become a good citizen, as did your ancestors and mine. There is no doubt in my mind that in the very first section of this bill you are asking men who have been educated in the two great institutions of this country, West Point and Annapolis, to read only those things that you prescribe. Men of education, men of culture who are in the service of their country in the future can read only that which the Congress of the United States feels they are entitled to read.

In the last few months we have seen a wave of crackpot alien legislation. Let me say to you that those who are fighting the aliens are those who know them the least. I have seen men get up here who probably do not have 10 aliens in their district and talk of the alien menace. Let me remind you, particularly those of you from the South, that in 1861 aliens, especially aliens from Ireland, came to the defense of that bonny blue flag, as you called it, and at Shiloh they held the ridge when the true bloods of the Confederacy were going back as fast as they could. Let me tell you that in 1861, in the city of New York when the loyal Americans were dodging, we raised 13 regiments of aliens who went to the front to keep the stars in that flag and make it possible for you today to get $10,000 a year. [Applause.] The battle flag of the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Regiment, New York-an Irish regiment-of which Congressman Fay was a member, and while a member lost a leg, has had to have its battle staff extended a foot and a half to put on the rings which represent the engagements in which the regiment has fought. Every time we have had a crisis the aliens have come to the front and stood up manfully.

Do not forget that the Wickersham report of only 2 or 3 years ago stated that the percentage of crime among nativeborn Americans was far greater than among aliens.

Formerly when we admitted the alien liberty, justice, and equality we gave to them. The right to worship God untrammeled and unrestrained we insured to them. But now you push them into the dirt and the Congress of the United States, through crackpot legislation, will force them into communism, fascism, and nazi-ism, and make them people who hate and despise the institution they desire to embrace and love. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the O'Toole amendment may be read in my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'Toole: Page 17, beginning in line 23, strike out lines 24 and 25, and on page 18, lines 1 to 10, and amend section 1 to read as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person connected in any capacity with the Army, Navy, or the Coast Guard of the United States shall be prohibited from reading any newspaper, book, magazine, or other publication, including the Bible and Congressional Record, while in said service."

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment just offered by the gentleman from the Eighth Congressional District of New York, who resides in the city of Brooklyn [Mr.

O'Toole], would put into this bill, one of the main purposes of which is to rid this country of criminal aliens, a provision that those serving in the Army and the Navy of the United States should not be permitted to read the Bible.

The applause which greeted the reading of his amendment, and later his argument, came from those who belong to a small group—a group which so often, when any legislation is proposed which would restrict un-American activities, which would hinder, delay, or render abortive the activities of the Communists, of those who by force would overthrow this Government, makes an appeal to this Congress to be careful that it does not deny the right of free speech, a free press, or curtail the constitutional liberties of some group which many think is engaged in subversive activities. We believe in all of those guaranties of civil liberty contained in the Federal Constitution.

But many of us can see no reason why there should be such great concern exhibited when the Congress attempts to protect, maintain, and keep as it is this Government of ours. When the Congress seeks to prevent subversive activities by those small minorities, which, not satisfied with our form of government, insist upon remaining here, enjoying the prosperity and the liberty, the freedom of speech and of activity which our Constitution grants to them and which our Government protects them in exercising and yet continuously condemning it and seeking to overthrow it, this small group becomes fearful that some alien is not being protected by that Constitution which he would destroy.

Some of us expected that those few Members of the House who rushed to the defense of John L. Lewis, of his C. I. O., even when he exercised the power to deprive men and women of an opportunity to earn a livelihood, who either remained silent or condoned his activities in the sit-down strikes, would applaud the offering of this amendment and the argument following, which was made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'Toole].

In this Government of ours, where free speech is a cardinal principle; where a free press is at the command of all, none can, none should, deny to the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'Toole], nor to those who applauded him, the right to spread upon the Congressional Record, where all may read, the proposition that men serving in our Army and Navy shall, as a matter of law, be denied the right to read the word of God.

John L. Lewis, whom so many of them applaud in thousands of instances, has denied to men the right to work. It is but another step, a no greater violation of civil liberty, though undoubtedly a greater moral offense to deny to the men of the Army and the Navy the right to worship the God of their choice. It is perhaps well that such a question was raised on the floor of the Congress for it may bring home to a shocked public a realization of the movement which is on foot in this country to destroy us as a Christian Nation.

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I will not.

Mr. O'TOOLE. I did not think so.

Mr. HOFFMAN. So that you may get a fair understanding of the magnitude of this movement and of some of those who have accepted its support without condemnation, let me once more, as I have previously, call your attention to a political circular which was put out by the Communists in Michigan during a recent campaign.

In Michigan in the 1938 election the Communists supported Governor Murphy openly and enthusiastically. In the city of Detroit at a municipal election Maurice Sugar was one of their candidates. Sugar has been twice convicted on his plea of guilty; once of draft evasion and once of circulating seditious literature. At present he is one of the principal attorneys representing the C. I. O. affiliates in its labor controversies in Michigan. In support of him as its candidate the Communists made this appeal:

To all who hate the smug priests of the Catholic Church; and the slimy hypocritical ministers of the Protestant Churches * * * To all who are opposed by this damnable Government, we address this message. Vote for our candidate (Maurice Sugar).

Close the churches and make those buildings into shelters for homeless men and women. Down with religion, which is opium which the ruling class feeds you to keep you satisfied with the miserable existence which you lead. There is no God.

This Nation of ours is a Christian nation. Our people believe in morality; in honesty; in temperance; in religion, and few, if any, in this House, unless they be Communists, would take from our people that hope of a hereafter, which is the loadstone which carries us at the end of each day cheerfully, hopefully, courageously to the tasks of tomorrow.

When women and men no longer can read the Bible; when children, yes, and grown women and men no longer are permitted to kneel, repeat the Lord's prayer or the ever-familiar words of "Now I lay me down to sleep" may God have mercy on our Nation!

We will have a vote on this amendment and it is my regret that the Record will not show how many, if any, remain in their seats when the amendment is voted down. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I shall ask for a division of the Committee on this amendment which would prevent the members of the Military and Naval Establishments from reading the Holy Bible. Let the people of the country know how many Members of Congress will stand up and vote in favor of such an amendment.

This amendment fully conforms to the principles and philosophies of the Communists and their united-front associates, who have been directing a propaganda barrage on Congress demanding the defeat of the pending bill. As far as I am concerned, for 22 months overseas I followed the red, white, and blue and the principles of government for which she stands, and I will follow it again. I shall not directly or indirectly give aid or comfort to the bloody-red Communist butchers in Moscow who have repealed the Ten Commandments of the Lord Almighty and who have repudiated God the Father, God the Son, and the Holy Bible.

We want no alien form of autocracy to supplant our democracy. We care not whether it be Nazi, Fascist, Communist or any other brand. [Appleuse] munist, or any other brand. [Applause.]

it in Moscow. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, we should with an almost unanimous vote reject this amendment, and send word back to the bloody red, ungodly, unchristian Communist butchers in Moscow that we still read the Holy Bible in America, although they would put you before a firing squad for reading or quoting

Mr. Chairman, much of the opposition to this bill is against the provision which requires that aliens who come to America in the future be fingerprinted. I and 5,000,000 of my comrades who served in the World War registered our fingerprints. Mr. Chairman, can it be said that it is proper to compel millions of our service men to register their fingerprints in the archives of our Government, and that it is improper to require aliens who come within our shores in the future shall do likewise? All people in foreign lands who think they should receive more consideration than American service men and be exempted from fingerprinting, can obtain that exemption if they so desire. They can stay without the confines of America.

Mr. Chairman, I sincerely hope that when we have a division on this amendment, we can send the word to the country that only one or two Members of this body will rise and support an amendment which is approved by the bloody red, ungodly, unchristian Communist butchers in Moscow, who would like to prohibit the reading of the Holy Bible in America as they do in Soviet Russia. [Applause.]

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I do not take the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'Toole] very seriously. There is only one thing in his proposed amendment that I could subscribe to and that is the part of the amendment which would tend to prohibit the reading of the Congressional Record. [Laughter.] I would want to limit this to prohibit any person from reading that portion of the Congressional Record that will be printed disclosing the gentleman's amendment [applause], because in this body that is costing millions of dollars to operate, gentlemen who are paid, as he says, $10,000 per year, and take up the time of the Congress and spend the people's money to print such puerile, asinine amendments and proposals, should be known by the people, and I think they ought to express their condemnation in no uncertain terms with respect to such idle and asinine proceedings.

Why in the name of conscience should this be done, and when will the time ever come that Members of Congress can read a bill as intelligent men, free from bias and prejudice, and confine their discussions to the facts.

There was not a word in the argument of the gentleman from New York that has any application whatever to the pending section that has been read. There is not a line or a syllable in this bill that proposes to interfere with the rights of those God-fearing aliens who came over here and have made their splendid contributions to the building of this Nation. We welcome those aliens now as we have in the past. We welcome them because they come to this country as God-fearing people seeking liberty and determined to make their contribution in accordance with our laws and our democracy; but we do say in this bill to those aliens that you shed so many tears about, who come here from nations inspired with the idea of destroying this Nation and the things we love, we are going to stop you at the gate and you are not going to come in; and we say to those whom we have been magnanimous enough to allow to come in, unless you declare your citizenship and amalgamate yourselves with the principles of America, we are going to throw you out if you persist in preaching doctrines that are inimical to the rights of the people of America. [Applause.]

I believe this bill stands for what the people of America want, and I for one am going to support it, not with any idea that it is inimical to the rights of any alien, but that it is going to serve to protect the citizens of the United States who are entitled to protection from the dope peddlers, from the carriers of machine guns, from the purveyors of prostitution, from the panderers, from the marihuana peddlers, and from all that tribe who come over here and violate our laws. [Applause.] I do not want them. You gentlemen from New York and from other places who sing your praises of the aliens generally, you can have them if you want them, but the people I represent do not want them. [Applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. If the bill did what the gentleman stated just now it should do, it would be different, but the gentleman cannot read what he has stated into the language on page 27.

Mr. KEEFE. Oh, yes; I can.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. No; you cannot.

Mr. KEEFE. Yes; I can.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Then you are either not qualified or you are not reading the language on page 27.

Mr. KEEFE. I can read the language on page 27; and if you are a lawyer, as I think you are, and you will study title III, as you should——

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. I have studied it.

Mr. KEEFE. Just a moment. You have asked the question. If you will read title III in its entirety, as a lawyer should, you cannot come to any such conclusion or any such absurd conclusion as you have tried to put before this House. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto do now close. The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Schafer of Wisconsin and Mr. Robsion of Kentucky), there were—ayes 1, noes 117.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I ask the attention of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs], in charge of the bill, to ask a question. On page 18, section 2, we have the following language:

Any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing of the character described in section 1 of this act may be taken from any house or other place in which it may be found, or from any person in whose possession it may be.

According to the amendment just adopted by the House, members of the Reserve forces of the United States are subject to this bill. I ask the gentleman in charge of the bill what would happen in these circumstances. It so happens that I am a member of the Reserve. It also happens, as every Member of Congress knows, that we receive a constant flow of propaganda, scurrilous attacks on the President of the United States, advocating his impeachment. Undoubtedly the President is the commanding officer of the Army and the Navy. Am I to understand that my office, my mail, is to be constantly scrutinized to see whether I am subjected to propaganda urging that I disobey the commands of my superior officers? What would be the effect of this bill in those circumstances? Undoubtedly the gentleman realizes, because he has received that type of literature constantly, the seriousness of my inquiry. Am I to be held responsible for having that in my possession which comes entirely unsolicited?

Mr. HOBBS. Only if the gentleman has intent to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or discipline of the personnel of the Army or the Navy or the Coast Guard, and as we have now added, the Reserve.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is why I asked the question.

Mr. HOBBS. Unless the gentleman has that contraband printed matter in his possession with that intent, he does not come within the purview of this section at all. I also call attention to the fact that this is strictly subject to the constitutional guaranty against unreasonable search and seizure and, therefore, we require that all searches for contraband printed matter can only be made under due and legal search warrant.

Mr. FERGUSON. Would the gentleman say then that the search could not be instituted until the intent was proven?

Mr. HOBBS. By affidavit which seems good and sufficient to the judge passing on the issuance of the search warrant, certainly, but the gentleman has the shoe on the wrong foot, if he will pardon me, not meaning any disrespect at all. This bill is being passed to protect him from just that poisonous matter, and until he has an intent to employ such matter wrongfully, this does not touch him at all or any other member of the Reserves.

Mr. FERGUSON. But it undoubtedly sets up some one as a judge of what I am capable of reading, who passes on the intent. I cannot quite conceive how the intent and the contents of the article can be separated, and I cannot conceive how you protect a man who receives this scurrilous material as we all do. I file most of this propaganda in the waste basket, but should I desire to read or keep this material certainly I want to retain the right to do so—I doubt if this bill protects this right.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hobbs: Page 18, line 1, before the words "to advise", insert "or on documented vessels of the United States which have been warranted to fly the flag of the United States Naval Reserve"; and after the words "United States", page 18, line 8, insert "or any member of the crew of a documented vessel of the United States which has been warranted to fly the flag of the United States which has been warranted to fly the flag of the United States Naval Reserve."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman explain whether or not this is limited only to the Naval Reserve?

Mr. HOBBS. This amendment is limited to eight vessels, three of which are now in service, which are not covered by the general committee amendment.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Is it not similar to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

Mr. CELLER. No; I withdrew that. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. Any book, pamphlet, paper, print, article, letter, or other writing of the character described in section 1 of this act may be taken from any house or other place in which it may be found, or taken from any house or other place in which it may be found, or from any person in whose possession it may be, under a search warrant issued pursuant to the provisions of title XI of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 228; U. S. C., title 18, ch. 18).

SEC. 3. The term "member of the Army" as used herein shall include all members of the Army of the United States as defined in section 1 of the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended (48 Stat. 153; U. S. C., title 10, sec. 2), when in active Federal service.

SEC. 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to attempt to commit or to conspire to commit any of the acts prohibited by any provisions of this title.

SEC. 5. Any person who violates any of the provisions of this title shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 10 years or by a fine of not more than $10,000, or both, and, in addition thereto, any alien who violates any of the provisions of this title shall be forthwith deported in the manner provided by existing law immediately upon his release from the custody of the court in which he is tried. No person who violates any provision of this title shall be eligible for employment by the United States Government or by any corporation the stock of which is wholly owned by the United States Government for a period of 5 years after his conviction.

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STARNES of Alabama: On page 19, strike out lines 7 to 10, inclusive, and insert the following: "of this title shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not more than 10 years or by a fine of not more than $10,000, or both, and, in addition thereto, any allen who violates any of the provisions of this title shall, upon conviction thereof, forthwith be deported in the."

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to perfect the language of the bill and to make it more easily and properly administered by the proper officials of our Government, and to make it clear that the fine or imprisonment for violation is to be imposed only after conviction, and to make the violators deportable only after conviction by the courts.

I can see no objection to this amendment. It certainly makes it clear that the bill is aimed only at violators of the law. Those of us who have read this bill carefully, those of us who are interested in this problem, know that there is no Member of this Congress, regardless of the section from which he comes, who is interested in persecution, or has any personal feelings against a law-abiding alien who comes to this country to become a good citizen. He is welcomed, provided he comes here legally, and a good alien will come in no other way. This amendment is to remove all doubt that it is intended to strike at anyone except an alien who violates

I agree with what has been said heretofore, that there is no place in this country for those who come here for an unlawful or an illegal purpose. Every safeguard in the world should be placed around those who come here lawfully, for good purposes, or to become good citizens. But no mercy, no helping hand should be extended to one who comes here otherwise.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. I yield. Mr. CELLER. I will say to the gentleman that it was the intention of the committee to have the deportation based on a conviction in a court. I think the gentleman's amendment is a sound amendment and clarifies the situation.

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

I would to God that more of the legislation passed in this Congress during the last 2 or 3 years would have required court action before penalties were imposed, or at least gave United States citizens the right to be heard in the courts. [Applause.]

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. I yield.

Mr. BROOKS. Will the gentleman's amendment affect the situation as to whether or not an alien should serve the time after sentence, before being deported or not?

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. No; it does not. It requires the court to impose the fine or imprisonment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which is on the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Izac: Strike out all of title I.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Chairman, this title might well be termed the "Army and Navy wet-nurse bill of 1939."

Have we reached the point in this country when we can no longer depend on the boys you and I send to the Naval Academy and the Military Academy and to the training stations of this country and to the camps in the Army? As a matter of fact, there is considerable conflict in both the War Department and the Navy Department about the advisability of ever enacting legislation of this type. If we have to admit that we have reached such a stage in this country that the very youth is subversive, then we had better look to the foundations of the Republic and try to take care of the economic conditions which bring about such a condition. It is an absolute disgrace and insult to the type of young men we are bringing into the armed forces of this country today. They are the highest type, in my opinion, that we have ever had. You give them a fine training. They come from high schools and colleges and you say to them when they come in, "We trust you to be soldiers and sailors, but we cannot trust you to be loyal Americans." It is so ridiculous on the face of it.

I will tell you what I would like to see this Congress enact. That is some kind of legislation against the espionage that is going on on the west coast and in the Canal Zone by our yellow friends from across the water. [Applause.] That is the type of thing I would like to see stopped in this country. They are not tampering with the young boys on board ship or the young boys in the Army posts. They are getting the secrets that they think will enable them, when the time comes, to defeat this Nation and gain the supremacy that they are endeavoring now to wreak on the whole Orient.

I do not take seriously the complaint of some of our intelligence officers that there is this danger because of some pamphlets that are being handed out when a boy goes on leave. After he has passed the gangway he is on shore; they can reach him and they can turn him against democratic institutions, you say. Why, it is an insult to his intelligence.

I believe we can best correct any evil condition that may result from the type of subversive activity that is likely to cause the downfall of democratic institutions by going to the heart of the trouble, as my colleague from California has pointed out, and correcting intolerable economic conditions; because, today, reports from all the rest of the world are to the effect that war is very imminent, that people are fatalistic, nobody smiles any more; and that is a condition that will be brought into this country if our naval and armed forces are not loyal.

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. IZAC. I yield.

Mr. PATRICK. The gentleman was in the Navy for how

Mr. IZAC. Oh, very few; 10 years.

Mr. PATRICK. As I understand the gentleman's discussion with respect to title I of the bill which makes it unlawful for anyone to interfere with, impair, or influence the loyalty, morale, or discipline of the personnel of the Army, Navy, or Coast Guard, and so on, the gentleman is speaking of the men whom we send to West Point and

Oh, no; the enlisted men as well. Mr. IZAC.

Mr. PATRICK. As I understand title I of the bill, which the gentleman would have us strike out, it seeks to protect the men in the armed forces from that sort of thing.

Mr. IZAC. That is correct; but if they need protecting, then we are in a very bad way. [Applause.]

Mr. PATRICK. Well, it is an annoyance and that sort of thing.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the

Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from California seeks to strike out title I of this bill under which we hope to protect the armed forces of the United States from being exposed to those who engage in spreading subversive doctrines. Anyone who has even the slightest acquaintance with our Army and Navy knows that the members of these forces are not at all times under the control of the officers of these branches of the service; and, most certainly, any man who has ever had the slightest acquaintance with an Army post knows there are detrimental influences near those posts which are working at all times. Every man knows that around every Army post is gathered a settlement of interests that work to the detriment of the morale of the men of the Army and over which interests the officers of the Army have no control, because they are outside their jurisdiction. The same thing is true of naval stations. Able as the officer personnel of the Army and Navy is, high as is the character of the personnel of the Army and the Navy, nevertheless we, the Congress who are charged with the national defense of the United States and with the government of the Army and the Navy, should protect them from being subjected to the influence of those who spread these subversive doctrines.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. We have laws aimed at the robber, and other laws designed to protect society that are aimed at criminals. This law is aimed at those who entertain a criminal intent toward our Government and who would overthrow it if they had the opportunity.

Mr. FADDIS. Exactly. To hear some of the opponents of this measure speak one would think this law in its entirety were aimed only at the alien with good intentions, but as I read the law, and I believe I am able to read the English language, it is aimed only at those who desire to break our laws, it is aimed only at the criminal. There is no need for anyone to stand up here and shed crocodile tears about the poor, innocent alien. This does not catch the innocent alien. [Applause.] As for me, I believe it is time we were giving the United States of America a break and forgot the "poor alien." [Applause.]

Now, replying to the gentleman from California on the matter of the espionage of his yellow friends, as he called them, I will name them—the Japs. I say to the gentleman from California that while the Japs may be the bugaboo of the west coast, we on the east coast have influences just as detrimental as the Japanese are on the west coast.

Mr. KELLER. What are they? Mr. FADDIS. What are they? The Communists. The Communists in our large metropolitan centers that are working all the time to destroy our form of government. They maintain that the Bill of Rights should protect them in their activities to destroy this Government in order that they may replace it with a government of another type, but should their efforts succeed, the Bill of Rights would not last overnight in their hands.

I say for the sake of the Army and the Navy, and for the sake of the general morale of the United States, the amendment of the gentleman from California should be voted down.

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. PATRICK. Does the gentleman think that Nazis and the Pelleyites are not just as aggravating as the Commu-

Mr. FADDIS. They are all alike-un-American and undesirable. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the motion.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a good deal of interest, and I confess with a good deal more of amusement, to the speeches in support of this measure, especially those who stand up here and advocate that a Congressman must not smile; that he does not dare to laugh; and if he does either he does not earn $10,000 a year. He must keep a long face and look as serious as possible and be so darned dignified that nobody will dare to speak to him except another Congressman of the same type. To my mind it is about the best piece of clowning I have seen in

Mr. Chairman, this bill strikes me about as follows: We have already all the laws, in my judgment, that we need to protect our country against the inroads referred to in the pending bill. I do not quite understand how any man who has been a soldier or a sailor, or who has had the training of one, can be so terribly wrought up over the necessity of protecting the morals of the boys in khaki. I really do not get it. I understand perfectly well that we ought to do what we can to support the morale of the Army and Navy, but the Army and Navy, as I understand it, have been able to take care of themselves, as a rule. At least that has been my observation.

I am sorry that we have come to the point where we find it necessary to protect the officers and privates of the Army and the sergeants in the Army and the other boys in the Army and Navy. I think they are still able to take care of themselves and I think they ought to be permitted

Mr. Chairman, I shall certainly vote against any bill of this character because it goes far beyond the mark that I understand is Americanism. I would not be able to forgive myself if I lent support to it.

I want to call your attention again to what one of the gentlemen said here with reference to what we have received from foreigners, who were aliens when they came to this country. For the benefit of those who may be afraid that I am going to adversely affect the morals of the House, those who are afraid that I may laugh a little once in a while, I am going to state this to those whose ancestors came here some little while ago; that my ancestors on my mother's side came here a long time ago.

They came to the old Tar Heel State about 1634 or 1635, as I remember it. They lived there a couple of hundred years, then some of them went out to Illinois and have lived there ever since. They carried their guns in the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, and other wars of this country. On my paternal side, my old German-born grandfather came across to this country because he failed to make a republic in his own country. He gave his life for the maintenance of the Union. He took his five sons out with him into the Army, the youngest one 13 years old, who also died with his uniform on. They were a part of the 400,000 Union soldiers born in Germany and Austria who saved the Union under Abe Lincoln. I only state that for the reason I did not want the Members to get the idea that I just came over, since some of them seem to think that a crime. I have been over here long enough that I can read and understand something of what the Declaration of Independence means and what the Bill of Rights provides. When we come to the point that we make something a crime for a foreigner that is not also a crime for an American citizen, we are going much too far, and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves if we do so.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, personally I regret that this great deliberative body has to take a whole day to pass upon a measure of this sort. It is entirely unnecessary. I think there are plenty of statutes on the books now which are amply able to take care of any propaganda which may have any effect on the armed forces of this country. The passage of this bill, in my opinion, is a confession on the part of the Congress that we do not have any confidence or any faith in the armed forces of our country, and in the personnel of those forces. It is a confession on the part of this Congress that we believe the boys in the Army and Navy are so weak that they will fall for any propaganda that may be presented to them.

It seems to me that the passage of this act is a step away from our reliance on the Constitution of the United States and our own belief in the principles of democracy.

I want to now go to a subject that has been brought up by the gentleman from Oklahoma, with reference to the second section of the bill which refers to pamphlets and letters which a person may have in his or her possession. The second section says that a search warrant may be issued to recover from any person or any place any paper or pamphlet which the person may have in his or her possession of the character described in section 1. As was stated by the gentleman from Oklahoma, a Congressman receives a lot of letters. I am a member of the Organized Reserves of the United States Army. Now, suppose a constituent who has no faith in the President of the United States, the Commander in Chief of the Army, really believed that the President was trying to force this country into war, as has been charged on the floor of the House, and he wrote me that I should immediately resign from the Organized Reserves for that reason. In other words, he would be advocating that I should be disloyal to my oath as a Reserve officer. In that instance would the gentleman suggest that I would be violating this particular section of the bill if I did not immediately destroy that letter? Because under the terms of this bill a search warrant would certainly lie to search my office and search my person in order to get possession of that particular letter.

I do not see why it would not, because the intent of the person that wrote that letter was to influence me to do a disloyal act, and that paper is recoverable by a search warant. Will the gentleman answer me on that?

Mr. HOBBS. I would be happy to answer, if the gentleman will allow me.

This bill is aimed at the one who sought to make the gentleman disloyal. It is aimed at the instigator rather than the recipient of that printed matter. The search-warrant provision applies only to him, and not to the gentleman

Mr. EBERHARTER. The search-warrant provision would certainly be for the recovery of any of these papers, letters, or pamphlets. Suppose that letter, or letters of that sort, were in my possession; you would not issue a search warrant against the person who wrote the letter to me; the search warrant would be directed against me or my office, so that the letter could be recovered from my files.

Mr. HOBBS. No.

Mr. EBERHARTER. That is the meaning of the section. I do not believe that if the gentleman has any other interpretation of that he will be sustained, because the section says that any book, pamphlet, or paper may be taken from any house or other place in which it may be found. It may be found in my files in my office, and naturally the search warrant must be directed against me.

Mr. HOBBS. The gentleman asked me a question and I shall be pleased to answer.

I do not consider that the interpretation the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, great lawyer that he is, seems to put upon this section is tenable. This provision is aimed at the headquarters of such a propaganda organization, that sends out tons and tons of such literature and pumps it into the Army, the Navy, and the Marine Corps today. It is not aimed at the gentleman and it cannot be used against him. It never would be used against the gentleman or any other Member of Congress or any other honest-to-God American citizen.

Mr. EBERHARTER. The gentleman will admit that under the wording of section 2 of this act a search warrant would lie against me if I had in my possession any letters of that sort? The gentleman certainly will not deny that, will he?

Mr. HOBBS. I certainly will deny that any judge on earth would issue a search warrant against the gentleman or anybody like him.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from California to strike out section 1 of this bill. This is the last country in the world to maintain democratic institutions. It is the one country, to my knowledge, that anticipates a genuine, bona fide election in 1940 which will determine its representative government for the next 4 years. This is the one Nation in the world that still is able to raise its armed forces by the volunteer method. Even England had to make military service compulsory. This country is still maintaining its defenses by volunteers. Every man in the Navy and every man in the Army, every man in the Coast Guard and every man in the Reserves, is in the armed service because he wants to be there. If he is in that armed service, that is enough assurance to me of his patriotism, his courage, and his desire to protect this country. To me that is a certificate of his patriotism to the extent that he does not need to have his mail censored or sifted so that he shall be given what he is capable of understanding or capable of digesting. He does not need any service; he does not need any censorship. He will be able to draw his own conclusions.

Mr. SOUTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas. Mr. SOUTH. The gentleman knows, does he not, that there have been many instances of men volunteering in the Army in order to get secrets and to interfere with the manufacture of airplanes and ammunition?

Mr. FERGUSON. Certainly. The Army or the Navy can expel and punish such persons without any legislation of this sort.

Mr. SOUTH. But the gentleman said the mere fact that they volunteered to join the Army was all the guarantee he would want as to their loyalty.

Mr. FERGUSON. They soon are discovered if they are joining for that purpose. We certainly have some well-educated officers in our service. I can well imagine under a very narrow interpretation of this bill that an officer's quarters might be searched and the officer be very severely embarrassed because he had a copy of Karl Marx's book on Capital in his library. It could be easily carried that far and it has been carried that far in times of hysteria in all countries. I can easily imagine that it might be criminal to have books on communism in his possession and that his quarters might be searched and that material seized.
